Yet, women should not be forced into the closet. They should have the right of safety in their homes and in public, day and night. Women need not be in a constant state of paranoia because of a few male mishaps.

MS magazine says Golda Meir was quoted as saying "Once in a Cabinet, we had to deal with the fact that there had been an outbreak of assaults on women at night. One minister suggested a curfew; women should stay home after dark. I said 'But it's the men who are attacking the women. If there's to be a curfew, let the men stay home, not the women.'" In order to protect women's rights, we must curfew the offenders. They must be prosecuted.

To prosecute, as much evidence as possible regarding the rape must be retained. Prosecution is not successfully won on hearsay alone. It must be corroborated with evidence.

When a woman is assaulted, she should contact the police immediately, and a hospital. The hospital will provide medical services as birth control, in addition to tests determining force and penetration.

Test on semen and other secretions can identify the blood type of the offender. It's important that clothes, the condition of the victim, and the rape site be kept intact for police observation.

In court, this evidence is valuable proof of rape. Therefore, it is important the police be quickly notified.

In Burlington, the police are sympathetic and helpful to the victim. She is assured confidentiality, and assisted in finding psychological and physical aid.

Captain Abare encourages women to report assaults, be they rape or anything more mild, such as exposure. He and the department understand that a woman recently assaulted will be in an emotional turmoil. She may feel ashamed, embarrassed, guilty, fearful, and confused. The department assures she will be treated as a person.

Although other police stations may treat women disrespectfully, insulting her, accusing her, making her out to be the criminal, the Burlington police department takes pride in its ability to help women respectfully and efficiently. This kind of service is an important criterion in rebalancing the emotions of a rape victim.

Hopefully, our society will try to prevent rape. Women should be careful not to walk alone in dark places.

If she should have to, a woman should carry protective device, such as a tear gas pen, a can of mace, or a key secured firmly in her hand. A magazine rolled tightly can yield an effective jab just under the ribs. These are just a few precautionary measures.

Although these measures are good, they should not have to be taken in the first place. Rape is a psycho-sexual crime. Men in our society are conditioned to be aggressive and dominant, particularly over women.

This attitude has got to change, if rapes are expected to stop. As women are largely responsible for raising children, they are a factor in their conditioning.

Boys should not be conditioned to be aggressive. Rather, both sexes should be taught to be strong, aware, and compassionate to one another.

For some rapists, underlying rape motives are wanting to get back at dominant women in his life. He wants to make her fearful, to make her subject to him.

Often rapes have been prevented by the victim refusing to appear fearful, telling the rapist she won't fight, but doesn't consent.

Captain Abare suggested that if a situation arose, a woman might try saying "You wouldn't do this to your sister, would you?" or talking about something unrelated. Hopefully, this might deter him, or get his mind off rape.

When attacked, a woman may try to resist, especially if the offender is unarmed. Often she can escape, but there is a time when her life will be threatened. To use violence would procure more violence.

A woman then must decide what is worse, rape or death. Although horrifying, it is better to succumb.

Women have got to band together to destroy this social disease which threatens all of us. Women have got to be strong, secure their rights for themselves and for all sisters.

Without the help of all of us to publicize rape hotline numbers, see that lighting is put in dark places, to try and undo some of the social conditioning, and take other measures against rape, we can't expect to eliminate the fear of rape. (In case of rape, call 863-1386, Vermont Women's Health Center for help and valuable assistance).

Vermont Election Results

by Margo Howland

In a stunning upset, Chittenden County States' Attorney Patrick Leahy edged Republican Congressman Richard Mallary by a margin of two percentage points in the U.S. Senate Race. Leahy becomes the first Democratic Senator from Vermont to go to Washington. He will succeed retiring veteran Senator George D. Aiken. Leahy had 49 per cent to Mallary's 47 per cent with four per cent going to Liberty Union candidate Bernard Sanders.

Mallary, ahead in the polls after the primaries, had been expected to win in a tight race. By election day, however, the race was labeled "too close to call." The candidates' leads wavered back and forth throughout the evening, then deadlocked 48-48 before Leahy finally won. Mallary conceded late Tuesday evening.

Vermont's other Senator is Republican Robert Stafford. Rumor has it that Salmon is considering a bid against Stafford when the latter's term expires in 1976. Salmon, the incumbent Democrat in the governor's seat, kept it Tuesday, easily outdistanced his Republican rival Walter "Peanut" Kennedy, Speaker of the House. Salmon had 56 per cent, Kennedy 39 per cent and Abbott, Liberty Union, picked up five per cent. Kennedy intends to ask for a recount.

GOP Congressional candidate James Jeffords trounced Democrat Francis Cain, by a count of 54 per cent. Liberty Unionite Michael Parenti made a very strong third party showing of 7 per cent.

The Liberty Union, having garnered over five per cent of the overall vote is now eligible to run a primary in 1976. Four Liberty Union candidates were instrumental in throwing four state-wide constitutional elections into the House of Representatives. The victor must get a majority.

In the race for Lieutenant Governor, Democrat Brian Burns was leading Republican T. Garry Buckley by 47 per cent to 46 per cent. Liberty Unionite Arthur Deloy had five per cent.

In the race for Attorney General, Democrat M. Jerome Diamond edged Republican

(continued on page eleven)

Featured This Week

The Doctor's Bag Returns ...p.11

Chess Column...p.8

VPIRG Strikes ...p.9

Table Of Contents

Arts & Entertainment p.6
Calendar/Announcements p.2
Doctor's Bag . . . . . p. 11
Editorial . . . . . p. 4
Op. Ed . . . . . p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 14

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

SCAS Civil Engineers Hold Final Meeting

On Wednesday, November 13, 1974, the Student Chapter of the ASCE will hold its final business meeting of the fall semester. The meeting will start at 7:30 pm, in Room 209 Votey Building. The meeting will consist of a brief business meeting where we will discuss student projects, make plans for the concrete canoe race in Maine, discuss next semester's programs, and the possibility of a Christmas party. The business meeting will be followed by a speaker, Lee G. Akins, President of Akins Associates, Consulting Engineers, of Canton New York. Mr. Akins will speak on the vital role of the civil engineer in a small consulting firm. This is certain to be a very interesting presentation, and all civil engineering students and faculty should plan to attend this final meeting of the semester. Refreshments will follow the speaker.

Placement Office Announcements

EMPLOYERS

Nov. 20 - Central Vermont Public Service. Seeks Bachelors: CE, ME, EE for engineering positions.

Nov. 20 - National Security Agency. Seeks BS, MS, Ph.D. ME, EE, Math, Comp. Science, Ind'l Engrg. Near Eastern, Asian & Slavic Languages. Citizenship required.

Nov. 21 - N.H. Dept. Public Works and Highways. Seeks BS/CE for highway design, bridge design, road & bridge construction, highway planning.

Nov. 22 - Burroughs Welcome. Seeks Science & Business Majors for Pharmaceutical Sales.

Nov. 22 - Hamilton Standard. Seeks Bachelors, Masters: ME, EE for Mech Design-Components & Systems, Elec. Design, Prod Test & Devel. Engrg. Analysts. Citizenship required.

Nov. 26 - Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. Seeks Bachelors, Masters Acctg MBA Citizenship required.

GRADUATE SCHOOLS

Nov. 19 - Suffolk Law School. Sign ups will be scheduled for 1:30 - 4:00 p.m.

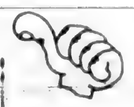
Nov. 25 - Tulane University Graduate School of Business, New Orleans. All majors.

Nov. 26 - Washington & Lee University Law School. Graduate Law Programs. All majors.

VPIRG Conducts Drug Survey

VPIRG plans to conduct its third annual prescription drug survey in the coming months. Last year's survey gave conclusive evidence that great price fluctuations still exist in drug stores all across the state for the same drug. To determine if last year's survey was effective, prescription prices in fifty Burlington drug stores will again be investigated. Volunteers are needed to help conduct this survey. Please contact Sharyn Cook 862-1137 or the VPIRG office for more information.

SAVE YOUR SOLES WITH A THUMB-ALONG HITCHHIKER'S KIT



Put out our big, fat happy thumb and ride on! Thumb Along Hitchhiker's Kit of FIVE large (14 x 18) signs in bright safety colors. Easy to Read! Reusable. Just fill in your destination and Go!

Get your kit for only $2.50 (allow two weeks for delivery). Mail check or money order to

TRIDENT STUDIO
P.O. Box 12 Sturbridge MA 01566

A wide range of mini-course begins at the Church Street Center for Community Education, and other displays, in addition to the two from Canada, include "curcurbits" in Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. lobby, and a photo exhibit at Billings Center, Nov. 4-8, sponsored by the sociology department.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7

Starting day of Church Street Center courses on winter birds, transactional analysis, Chinese cooking, magic with cards, Greek etymology, armchair mountaineering, alcohol and alcoholism, and urban planning in Burlington. Call 656-4221 for further information and to register. The urban planning session is free, and is set for 7:30 p.m. at the Center.

Mathematical sciences seminar, Prof. Paul Brock, mathematics, "matrices as a tool in order-analysis of sequences," 3 p.m., B-104 Cook Bldg.

Informal discussion at Area and International Studies Bldg. with visiting scholar Serge Kryzytski, 3 p.m.

English colloquium, Prof. J. W. Flannery, theatre and visual arts department, University of Ottawa, "Yeats and the Idea of Theatre," 4:15 p.m., Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

6:45 p.m. The Unitarian Church of Burlington will hold an Ananda Marga introductory Meditating Class, free of charge. For more information, call 862-1802 (after 7:30 p.m.) Due to class limit of 15, no newcomers will be accepted after the first class.

SA Films presents "Oklahoma!" at 7:30 p.m., 101 Votey Bldg.

"Play Strindberg," by Durrenmatt, opens at 8 p.m. in Billings Center Apse, sponsored by the Billings Center Governing Board. The play will run nightly through Nov. 10.

Formal opening and reception at Fleming Museum with M. Jean-Louis Delisle, C. Canadian Consul General in Boston, in honor of the new display of contemporary Eskimo sculpture and prints at the Museum sponsored by the UVM Canadian Studies Program with the support of the William Donner Foundation. The show will remain on view through Nov. 24, and is presented concurrently with "Living With Snow" at Billings Center. Living With Snow", another major Canadian exhibition, is also presented by the Canadian Studies Program.

The Burlington Film Co-op will present an Alexander Jodoworsky film in the Flynn Theatre, Main Street. 11:30 p.m.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8

Start of Church Street Center classes in stuffed toys, and the sounds of jazz. Learn more about Church Street Center mini-courses and activities by visiting the Center at the old firehouse, 135 Church St., or by calling 656-4221.

"Friday at Four", 4 p.m., open house at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Poetry reading at Church St. Center, 7:30 p.m., open to all.

SA Films presents "King of Hearts," 7:30 and 9:30 showings, 101 Votey.

12:30-4:30 p.m., The UVM Plant and Soil Science Society will be selling a variety of apples in the breezeway between the greenhouse and Hills Building. Part of the profits will go toward a Society Field Trip.

Lane Series presents the Orchestre de las Suisse Romande, conducted by Wolfgang Sawallisch, with Israeli pianist Iliana Vered as soloist, 8 p.m., Memorial Auditorium. Ticket reservations at 656-3418. Program includes Stravinsky's Jeudes Cartes, Schumann's Piano Concerto in A-Minor, Op. 54, and Brahms' Symphony No. 4 in E-Minor, Op. 56.

"Play Strindberg," 8 p.m., Billings Center Apse.

International folk dancing, 8 p.m., Southwick Ballroom, Redstone Campus.

11:30 p.m., The Burlington Film Co-op will present an Alexander Jodoworsky film in the Flynn Theatre on Main Street.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9

"Block Print Your Own Cards," a 9:30 to 4:30 p.m. seminar at the Church St. Center. Call 656-4221 for details and to register.

SA Films presents "Sometimes a Great Notion," 7:30 p.m., 101 Votey.

Vermont cultural program presents the UVM Folk Dance Club, whose members will demonstrate New England area dances and give instructions, at 8 p.m., 115 Commons, Living-Learning.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 10

Music department presents Handel's oratoria, "Israel in Egypt," 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Cathedral, with the University Choral Union and the University Choir. Tickets are free, but must be reserved as space is limited. Call the Cathedral at 864-0471. The concert will be repeated Monday, Nov. 11, at 8 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel, and tickets won't be required at this performance.

The concluding performance of "Play Strindberg" at 8 p.m., Billings.

Through Nov. 24, a display of contemporary Eskimo culture and prints can be seen in the Front Gallery of the Fleming Museum. Sponsored by the Canadian Studies Program at UVM.

Though Jan. 1 a display of Indian art of the Northwest Coast will be shown in the Lounge Gallery of the Fleming Museum.

Advising continues through the week in preparation for pre-enrollment for the Spring Semester.

Graduate Student Pre-registration continues through Nov. 22.

A display entitled "Living With Snow" will be shown at Billings through Nov. 24 in conjunction with the UVM Canadian Studies Program gallery of Eskimo art presented at the Fleming Museum.

Tickets are now on sale for the SA Concert presentation of The Beach Boys on Nov. 20 at the UVM Bookstore and Bailey's.

Tickets are also on sale for the Lane Series' presentation of "The Sunshine Boys" on Nov. 12 and the George Shearing Quintet on Nov. 18. Call ext. 3418 for ticket information.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11

4:10 p.m., Botany-Cell Biology Seminar in Room 105 of Marsh Life Sciences. Dr. James Allen of Harvard's biology department will speak on on the "Nuclear Origin of Dinoflagellates: Genetic and Biochemical Data". Coffee served in Room 107 at 3:50 p.m.

5 p.m., VPIRG's weekly meeting, Conference Room C, Billings, all are welcome.

7 p.m., UVM Modern Dance Workshop in Southwick Ballroom. Call Ext. 3240 for further information.

7 p.m., Joyce Slayton Mitchell, author and educator, discusses whether "A Man Can Love a Money-Making Woman" Held in Billings' Marsh Lounge, coordinated by the UVM Women's Caucus, Career Planning and Placement Office and sponsored by the Student Association. See story in this issue.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "The Shop on Main Street" in 103 Rowell. Admission is free.

8 p.m., The Music Dept. sponsors the presentation of Handel's oratorio "Israel in Egypt", performed by the University Choral Union and University Choir at the Ira Allen Chapel. Admission is free.

8 p.m., Dr. H. Lawrence McCrorey, Associate Vice President on Academic Affairs, will speak on "Competence and Minority Identity" as a part of Living-Learning's Cross Cultural Program. Place: Commons 115 L/L.

8:30 p.m., WRUV's "Open Circuit", an informative half hour dealing with issues of local concern. Moderated by Deborah Janone, a graduate student in UVM's Dept. of Communication.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 12

9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Pottery Sale at Billings through Thursday, Nov. 14.

12-3:30 p.m., The College of Education and Social Services is sponsoring a Careers Fair in an effort to help students find answers to questions they may have about their futures, and to show the alternatives which are open in Education and Human Services. The "Careers Fair" will be held on the fifth floor of Waterman.

12-noon to 4 p.m., A new counseling service is available at Billings every Tuesday. See Rob Rios and Calvin Chappel in Conference Room C or call Ext. 3340.

12:15 p.m., the Music Dept. sponsors an informal student recital at Ira Allen Chapel.

3 p.m., Home Economics' seminar on current consumer problems. Featured are the F.T.C. and F.D.A. and Consumer Products Safety Commission.

The seminar will be conducted at B-106 Cook. Open to all interested.

6:30 p.m., Christian Scientists and any interested persons are welcome to attend an inspirational and testimonial meeting. The meeting, held every Tuesday evening by the Christian Science College Organization at UVM, will be held in the Harris Rec Room, near the main desk.

7:30 p.m., SA Senate meeting, Marsh Lounge, Billings.

7:30 p.m., "Ramparts of Clay", part of the East Asian Cultural Exchange's Asia Film Festival shown in L/L's Fireplace Lounge.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Lamplighters, a Pentecostal fellowship group, in MAT Lounge. All are welcome to come and worship the Lord in song and word. More information can be acquired from Sue Kukla at ext. 2952.

7:30 p.m., "Altered States of Consciousness" will be discussed by John Wilson in Patterson Lounge, a program sponsored by the Counseling and Testing Center.

8 p.m., the Lane Series presents "The Sunshine Boys" in Memorial Auditorium. For ticket information, phone ext. 3418.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 13

12 noon to 1 p.m., Nancy Koch leads a workshop in "An Hour of Relaxation, Meditation and Centering" in Billings' Marsh Lounge. No fee. Call ext. 3340 for additional information. Sponsored by the Center for Counseling and Testing.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch Film Series, sponsored by the Church St. Center for Community Education, held today and every Wednesday. No fee.

1 to 3 p.m., Tickets on sale at Billings for special showings at Merril's Showcase.

3 to 4 p.m., Meeting of the Council for Exceptional Children in Billings' basement Round Room, instead of the scheduled Marsh Lounge.

3:15 to 5:30 p.m., College of Arts and Sciences sponsors a fall symposium entitled "Subjectivity-Objectivity", featuring discussion and lecture by professors of sociology, history, and philosophy. Memorial Lounge, Waterman. Refreshments offered.

3:30 to 5 p.m., Coffee hour of the International Club of UVM at the Area and International Studies Center, 479 Main St. Everyone welcome.

4 p.m., "Tertulia" is an informal gathering of anyone who is interested in speaking Spanish or meeting the Spanish professors. Building D, Suite 350, Living-Learning Center. Call Marion Carow at ext. 4263 for further information.

4:30-7 p.m., a panel of the profession of planning, presented by graduate students, Resource Economics Dept., with William Beardsley, Green Mountain Power Co., Rodney Griffin, Northeast Vermont Planning and Development Commission, and Lawrence Mitchell, City Planner, South Burlington. RSVP-Dr. Hugo John's office. Ext. 4280 for panel and buffet.

7:30 p.m., Today begins the Church St. Center's workshop entitled "Dreams; Messages From Ourselves." David Sokol leads instruction.

7:30 p.m., The Church St. Center's workshop entitled "Commercial Photography for the Small Businessperson" begins today.

8 p.m., The Living-Learning Interdisciplinary Science Program presents: Dr. Robert C. Woodworth on "Red Blood, Tired Blood, and all That: The Wanderings of an Iron Atom." The program will be held in Living-Learning B-161.

8 p.m., Meeting of the Outing Club in 305 Votey, where a slide show entitled "Kayaking White Water.. will be presented. Open to all.

Year Abroad Offered

Students intrested in spending a year in Austria studying at Salzburg University are invited to attend an informal meeting (with refreshments) on November 14th at 8:30 p.m. in the German House of the Living/Learning Center, B200.

Further information about this meeting or the program itself can be obtained from the Department of German and Russian.

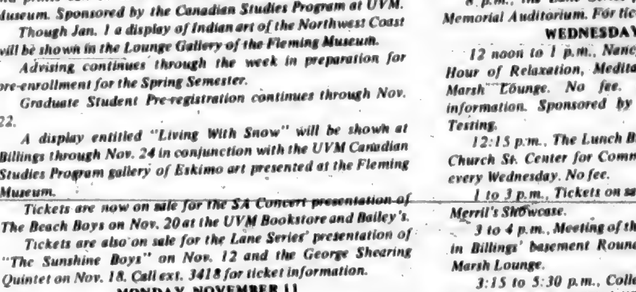
Wall to wall sound.

Bose 901® Series II speakers are not only directional, they're reflective as well. Which means your walls take an active part in reproducing the sound around you—just as it's heard in the concert hall.

We like the Bose 901's well enough to feature them as the heart of our "best value" balanced sound system. We recommend driving them with a Sony Model 7055 AM/FM receiver, coupled with a MIRICORD — 650 turntable . . . all for the package price of only $890. For our money (and maybe yours), it's the best system you can buy for the bread anywhere.

LAFAYETTE®
157 Pearl St. Essex Jct.

karate 864-0414



Becoming a physician is a tremendous satisfaction.
Let us give you the job satisfaction that should go with it.

Whether you're still in medical school with the rigors of three to five years of graduate medical education still to be faced, or are already a practicing physician, it's our opinion that the Air Force can offer both professional and personal satisfaction hard to duplicate in civilian life.

An overstatement? Not if you consider the specifics.

Take the problem of graduate medical education. It's a period of your life the Air Force can make considerably easier with comfortable salary and living conditions.

Greater comforts aside, the Air Force offers professional advantages. Besides receiving training in your own specialty, you'd be in contact with physicians in all of the medical specialties. You'd function in an environment which is mentally and professionally challenging.

Most all physicians pursue post residency fellowships. But if you are interested, the Air Force conducts its own in-house and accredited institutions.

The physician already in practice can look forward to other things. If you enter training in the practice of the medicine of your choice, you'll find it in the Air Force. For example, there's emphasis on group practice and preventive medicine, and the growing specialty of "family physician." Whatever your interest, there are few specialties which are not being practiced in today's Air Force.

The physician starting his practice in civilian life has to take into account the cost of setting up an office. The physician commencing his practice in the Air Force does not. He finds his office established for him. Supplies and equipment readily available. He has many options available to him when treating patients. For example, he can consult with Air Force specialists. He also has referral to other Air Force facilities via aeromedical evacuation. Last, but not least, are the satisfactions that come with having the opportunity for regular follow-ups, and a missed appointment rate that is practically nil.

Whether you are already a physician, or soon to become one, you might find it extremely interesting to find out what the Air Force has to offer. We think it could be a real eye-opener. If you'll mail us the coupon, we'd be happy to send you detailed information.

C-CM-114

Please send me information on the Air Force Physician Program. I understand there is no obligation.

Name (Please Print) Age (M) (F)
Address
City
State Zip Phone
Soc. Sec. # Date of Birth

Health Care at its best.
Air Force.

Sunday Night At The Movies

The Sunday night movie at Living Learning turns to the theme of love. This Sunday, November 10, in Living Learning Commons-Room 115, the movie feature is Elvira Madigan, acclaimed as one of the most beautiful love stories in film history. The movie will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 pm. Admission is $1.00.

Special Collections Hours Extended

Hours of the Special Collections section of the Guy W. Library have been extended. In addition to the regular hours, 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., and 9:00 a.m. to Noon Saturday, this room is open from 6:30 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Books that are not in the room itself must be obtained before 5:00 p.m.

Dr. Hoyt To Discuss Sail

The UVM Sailing Club has invited Dr. Norris Hoyt for his third year of slides. His show this year is "Getting There and Going Around Together," pictures and talk about the 1974 Bermuda Race and the 1974 America's Cup Races. This will be on Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in B106 Cook. Free.

Dr. Hoyt started the summer of 1974 by navigating Jerry Trimingham's Quest of Paper to The Island. The ship took silver in her class (barely) and was Bermuda's highest scorer in the Onion Patch Trophy Races. Then, while the wealthy, the young, and the unemployed reveled in The Island's fleshpots, Dr. Hoyt flew hastily home and began a summer of intense industry - visiting the docks and going out on different yachts or tenders every day, broadcasting twice a day, writing a 2,500 word daily article, and working in a few dinner parties, dances, prizegivings, receptions, and other distractions.

The America's Cup Races had come to Newport again, and the town was crowded with reporters from all over the sailing world, photographers, the full crews and support groups of six 12 meter yachts, and the officials of the New York Yacht Club, the Royal Thames Yacht Club, the Royal Perth Yacht Club, and the International Technical Committee. Alan Bond brought the Australian challenge, the

Student Photography Cont With Theme

BURBANK, CA. - A student photography contest, with cash prizes to be awarded both student winners and college photography programs has been announced by Warner Bros. and Bell & Howell, in conjunction with Petersen's PhotoGraphic Magazine, which will publish a portfolio of the winning pictures.

The theme of the contest, "Prisoners," is based on the comedy concepts of "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," a Warner Bros. release starring Jack Lemmon and Anne Bancroft. The film, which was written by Neil Simon from his Broadway play, will be released next Easter.

All full-time graduate and undergraduate students of accredited four- year colleges and universities are eligible to enter the contest. Grand Prize is $1,000 cash, a Mamiya/Sekor DSX 1000 camera with f/1.8 lens, camera case, 200mm f/3.5 telephoto lens, and a Bell & Howell 991Z Slide Cube Projector. Second Prize is $500 cash and a Mamiya/Sekor DSX 500 with f/1.8 lens and camera case. Third Prize is $250 cash and a Bell & Howell 991Z Slide Cube Projector.

Five Honorable Mention winners will have their choice of complete sets of Petersen's PhotoGraphic How-To Library or Petersen's Masters of Contemporary Photography series.

All contestants will receive a special money-saving introductory subscription to PhotoGraphic.

All cash prizes will be matched by Warner Bros. with equal grants to the winners' schools. In the event the campus has no photography department or program, prize money will be given to the school library for the purchase of books of their choice.

Since "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" is a comedy, content of contest entries must have humorous overtones and be campus oriented. "Prisoners" could be those

New Agency To Protect

While many people regard animals with care and affection, many more fail to realize the importance of taking care of the animals we have for pets and those without a home. A new organization called "Friends of Animals" has started to look into these matters more closely.

The main objectives of the organization are to: 1) help inform the public of the care needed by the animals they keep as pets; 2) clean up department stores and pet shops where it may be necessary; 3) help enforce laws already in effect regarding cruelty to animals by watching for and reporting instances of mistreatment; 4) work for improved legislation; and

Cunningham -Newma

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m., 9:00 and 11:30 a.m.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday 3:30 p.m.; Tuesday 4:15 p.m. and 10:00 p.m.; Wednesday, Thursday, Friday 4:15 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and anytime by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: Weekdays at 7:30 a.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: For the 4:15 Sunday Mass Choir - 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday.

"SOMETHING TO LIVE FOR": Series on Basic Catholicism. Every Monday at 7:15 p.m.

JUSTICE AND PEACE: Study-Action Group meets on Monday evenings at 9:00 p.m.

"A NEW LOOK AT AN OLD BOOK": Scripture study with emphasis on the Old Testament. Tuesday evenings from 7 to 8 p.m.

TWILIGHT RETREATS: A series of evening retreats for high school students is being planned by students and staff from the Newman Center. If you are interested in being on the team for one or more of these retreats, or if you would like to help with music, A-V presentations or talks, please contact Fr. Holland.

"LEAP": A program providing a weekend experience of spiritual renewal and Christian community for young adults 18 to 25. For further information, please contact Sr. Lindora.

ALABAMA PROJECT: This is a Newman Center-sponsored trip to Alabama for 10 days of volunteer work during Semester Break. If interested in joining the group, please contact Fr. Holland.

HOLY YEAR CELEBRATION: In an effort to join in the Holy Year Celebration, there will be an Inter-College Service of Reconciliation at 10:00 p.m. on Tuesday, November 12, with participation from UVM, St. Michael's, Champlain and Trinity. Please join us.

PRE-CANA: The second presentation in the marriage preparation series will be held on Sunday, Nov. 10 at 1 Inter-Parish Center in S Anthony's Parish. Dr. John Murray will speak on "Sexuality in Marriage." In the third session, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doppman will speak on "Finance" (Nov. 17). Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stronach will speak on "The Theology of Marriage" the last session - Nov. 24.

Hillel House

Sunday November 10, there will be a Brunch starting 11:3 Following the brunch there will be a short discussion about program for next semester.

Tuesdays 4:30 there is study group of Jewish Custo and Ceremonies. It meets in Waterman, all interested peo are invited.

A Sea

Glen

Ski Glen

Dr. Hoyt To Discuss Sailing Races

The UVM Sailing Club has invited Dr. Norris Hoyt for his third year of slides. His show this year is "Getting There and Going Around Together," pictures and talk about the 1974 Bermuda Race and the 1974 America's Cup Races. This will be on Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in B106 Cook. Free.

Dr. Hoyt started the summer of 1974 by navigating Jerry Trimingham's Quest of Puget to The Island. The ship took silver in her class (barely) and was Bermuda's highest scorer in the Onion Patch Trophy Races. Then, while the wealthy, the young, and the unemployed reveled in The Island's fleshpots, Dr. Hoyt flew hastily home and began a summer of intense industry — visiting the docks and going out on different yachts or tenders every day, broadcasting twice a day, writing a 2,500 word daily article, and working in a few dinner parties, dances, pressgivings, receptions, and other distractions.

The America's Cup Races had come to Newport again, and the town was crowded with reporters from all over the sailing world, photographers, the full crews and support groups of six 12 meter yachts, and the officials of the New York Yacht Club, the Royal Thames Yacht Club, the Royal Perth Yacht Club, and the International Technical Committee. Alan Bond brought the Australian challenge, the most awesomely mounted effort ever to take away The Cup — $6,000,000 worth of yachts, equipment, sailmakers, engineers, designers, managers, and a French chef. Had the races been sailed when Bond arrived, Southern Cross would have been a quick winner. But Intrepid was redesigned by Olin Stephens, and Courageous was built new to his designs. Between them, after Mariner and Valiant were eliminated, the most dramatic development of sails and techniques in years took place, and the 4 - 0 victory of the Americans on Courageous became victory — the 22nd in a row for the "auld mug." Remember! B106 Cook, Nov. 14, 7:30 pm.

College Of Education And Social Services To Offer Careers Fair

In an effort to help students find answers to questions they may have about their futures, and to show the alternatives which are open in Education and Human Services, a Careers Fair will be held on November 12, from 12-3:30 pm on the fifth floor of Waterman Building. The College of Education and Social Services is coordinating this presentation, with contributions being made from other Human Service departments.

Included in the Careers Fair will be exhibits, slide shows and short films concerning many different career possibilities. These will include such areas as Environmental Education, Early Childhood Education, Teaching Careers in Alternative Environments, and graduate programs in education. Exhibits will also be present from areas such as Nursing, Home Economics, Communications Science, and Medical Technology. Nearly thirty different specialties will be represented.

This promises to be a varied and interesting fair, of interest to many but especially to those who are interested in Human Service careers, and to those who are undecided about a major area of concentration. Representatives from each of the participating areas will be present to answer such questions as present course requirements and course offerings at UVM, number of openings on the job market, and to describe jobs and careers in more detail to interested students. That's Tuesday, November 12, from 12-3:30 pm on the fifth floor of Waterman — see you there!!

Church Street Offers Unusual Courses

The Church Street Center for Community Education has just printed its list of mini-courses and activities for the period of November 4th to December 15th. The courses, which have doubled in number since the last session, range in content from the practical and physical to the occult. In keeping with the growing interest in music and in crafts, the center will offer courses in some of the more unusual areas, including Bookbinding, Platinum printing, Bluegrass Banjo, and Jazz. For practical skill development, the Center offers Improving Reading Effectiveness, Investing Stocks and Bonds, and Commerical Photography. Those interested in self and group understanding may select from Dreams, Conflict Resolution, or Transactional Analysis. Other special topics include Fencing, Winter Birds, Toy Making, Armchair Mountaineering, Chinese Cooking, and Magic with Cards.

One of the Center's functions is to relate education to critical issues in the community. Vermont's Public Utilities, Planning in Burlington, Modern Trends in Education, and Alcohol and Alcoholism will be the focus of study groups beginning the week of November 4th.

The Center's classes are taught by community and University resources with experience and knowledge in their fields. Some of the instructors, like Charles Carter for Platinum Printing and Thierry de Dreyer for Buddhist Philosophy are new to Burlington and bring very unusual experiences to their subject matter. Others, like Dr. Sproston, who will teach the Biology of Survival, or Ken Wheeling and other lecturers for Antique Housewares are familiar faces and names in the Burlington area. Tinker Greene, well know for his coordination of the monthly poetry readings, will lead a course on Poetry Reading and Writing.

An affiliate of University of Vermont Division of Continuing Education, the Church Street Center is open to the public. Its courses are set up in response to community requests and concerns and are free to senior citizens. For information, courses descriptions, and registration call 656-4221 or visit the Center at 135 Church Street in downtown Burlington.

Mini-Courses, Workshops, and Special Activities

November 4 - December 18

BLUEGRASS BANJO Nov. 4 - Dec. 9 Mondays 7:00-8:00 p.m. 6 sessions $12.00 Mike Pitman

VERMONT'S PUBLIC UTILITIES Steve Hedger Nov. 4 - Dec. 9 Mondays 7:30-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $18.00

INCREASING YOUR READING EFFECTIVENESS Karen S. McKinney Nov. 4 - Dec. 9 Mondays 7:30-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $18.00

ASTROLOGY Brad Summers Nov. 25 - Dec. 16 Mondays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 4 sessions $16.00

THE BIOLOGY OF SURVIVAL Thomas Sproston Nov. 4 - Dec. 9 Mondays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

BATIK Barbara Fialkoff Nov. 5 - Dec. 10 Tuesdays 1:00-3:00 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

MODERN TRENDS IN EDUCATION Frank J. Watson Nov. 5 - Dec. 10 Tuesdays 7:30-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $18.00

ASIAN COOKING II: BASIC CHINESE COOKING Margaret Tong Berninghausen Nov. 5 - Dec. 10 Tuesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $36.00

RESOLVING CONFLICTS FAIRLY Nov. 5 -19 Tuesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 3 sessions $12.00

FUNDAMENTALS OF INVESTING: STOCKS AND BONDS Lewis Gordon, Jr. Nov. 5-Dec. 10 Tuesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

HOUSEWARES OF THE AMERICAN HOME: 1650-1900 Nov. 5 - Dec. 10 Tuesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

CREATIVE WRITING - POETRY R. Tinker Green Nov. 5- Dec. 10 Tuesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

SIMPLE BOOKBINDING Geoffrey Burnham Nov. 5 - Dec. 10 Tuesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $30.00

BASICS OF PLATINUM PRINTING Charles Carter Nov. 5 - Dec. 10 Tuesdays

(continued on page eight)

Student Photography Contest With Theme 'Prisoners'

BURBANK, CA — A student photography contest, with cash prizes to be awarded both student winners and college photography programs has been announced by Warner Bros. and Bell & Howell, in conjunction with Petersen's PhotoGraphic Magazine, which will publish a portfolio of the winning pictures.

The theme of the contest, "Prisoners," is based on the comedy concepts of "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," a Warner Bros. release starring Jack Lemmon and Anne Bancroft. The film, which was written by Neil Simon from his Broadway play, will be released next Easter.

All full-time graduate and undergraduate students of accredited four year colleges and universities are eligible to enter the contest. Grand Prize is $1000 cash, a Mamiya/Sekor DSX 1000 camera with f/1.8 lens, camera case, 200mm f/3.5 telephoto lens, and a Bell & Howell 991Z Slide Cube Projector. Second Prize is $500 cash and a Mamiya/Sekor DSX 500 with f/1.8 lens and camera case. Third Prize is $250 cash and a Bell & Howell 991Z Slide Cube Projector.

Five Honorable Mention winners will have their choice of complete sets of Petersen's PhotoGraphic How-To Library or Petersen's Masters of Contemporary Photography series.

All contestants will receive a special money-saving introductory subscription to PhotoGraphic.

All cash prizes will be matched by Warner Bros. with equal grants to the winners' schools. In the event the campus has no photography department or program, prize money will be given to the school library for the purchase of books of their choice.

Since "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" is a comedy, content of contest entries must have humorous overtones and be campus oriented. "Prisoners" could be those subjected to the rigors of academic pressure, work schedules, family demands, fraternity and sorority hierarchies, athletic programs and the like, or any appropriate similar subject.

Entrants may submit two 8"x10" black and white prints. No color entries will be accepted. On the back of each print should be the student's name, address, phone number, school, and year of graduation. All photos become the property of Warner Bros.

Judges of the contest are George Simkowski, vice-president of Bell & Howell, Mort Lickter, still photo editor of Warner Bros., and Paul Farber, editorial director of PhotoGraphic.

Entries should be mailed to "Prisoners Photo Contest," P.O. Box 24589, Los Angeles, CA 90024. Deadline for receipt of entries is January 1, 1975. Winners will be notified by February 1.

Israeli Pianist To Be Soloist With Orchestre De La Romande

Israeli pianist Hana Vered will be soloist with the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande Friday (November 8) in a University of Vermont Lane Series performance at 8 p.m. in Burlington's Memorial Auditorium. The program will include works by Stravinsky and Brahms, and the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, op. 54, played by Ms. Vered, under the baton of the Geneva-based orchestra's artistic director-general and chief conductor, Wolfgang Sawallisch. Tickets are available from the Lane Office, Waterman Building at UVM, telephone 656-3418.

Love And Moneymaking

Can a man love a money-making woman?

That's the topic to be discussed by author-educator Joyce Slayton Mitchell in a November 11 presentation starting at 7 p.m. at Marsh Room, Billings Center.

The event has been arranged by the Career Planning and Placement Office and the UVM Women's Caucus, and is sponsored by Student Association.

The program will include three major areas — career development for women, career information for college graduates, and equal partnership relationships and marriages.

Books by Joyce Slayton Mitchell include The Guide to College Life, The Guide to Canadian Universities, Other Choices for Becoming a Woman, and most recently, I can be Anything.

Dr. Wood Knows His Stuff

Dr. Glen M. Wood, associate professor of plant and soil science, proved he knows his subject recently by winning the annual pumpkin-growing contest at the University of Vermont.

Eleven entered the competition last spring, six lugged entries to the University of Vermont campus for the judging, and Wood easily won the event with his 141½ pound entry.

He received the pumpkin trophy, awarded annually by the Plant and Soil Science Club, an undergraduate organization in the College of Agriculture that sponsors the event.

Dr. M. W. Perrine Will Talk About Alcoholism

The Society of Manufacturing Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and the Society of the Sigma XI would like to invite you to a program on "Alcoholism and Behavior".

The program, to be held Thursday, Nov. 7, at the Given Cafeteria, Given Medical Building, UVM, will include a 6 p.m. social hour, a complete dinner (roast beef at $7 and roast chicken at $6.50), and the main part of the program initiates at 8 p.m.

After heart disease and cancer, alcoholism is our country's biggest health problem. 95 million Americans drink, ten percent of these excessively either creating or causing problems. Since "alcoholism and behavior" should be of urgent interest to all scientists and engineers, SME, ASME, and Sigma XI feel it particularly appropriate to co-sponsor this program on a topic of general social concern.

The speaker will be Dr. M.W. Perrine, professor of psychology at the university. Perrine is the internationally renowned leader in his field, particularly at a recent conference in Paris relating to drinking and driving. He is a member of the National Safety Council's Committee on Alcohol and Drugs.

Guests and public may attend following the dinner. For reservations, call 656-3320 or 864-7414.

WE HAVE DESIGNS ON YOUR GIFT LIST SEE US FOR CUSTOM FRAMING AND DESIGN AND SAVE 10% BEFORE THANKSGIVING. A CUSTOM FRAMED PRINT MAKES A VERY PERSONAL AND MUCH APPRECIATED GIFT. WE INVITE YOUR PERUSAL OF OUR LARGE AND VARIED SELECTION. TILTING AT WINDMILLS GALLERY, 109 DORSET STREET, SOUTH BURLINGTON, 862-6100.

New Agency To Protect Animals

While many people regard animals with care and affection, many more fail to realize the importance of taking care of the animals we have for pets and those without a home. A new organization called "Friends of Animals" has started to look into these matters more closely.

The main objectives of the organization are to: 1) help inform the public of the care needed by the animals they keep as pets; 2) clean up department stores and pet shops where it may be necessary; 3) help enforce laws already in effect regarding cruelty to animals by watching for and reporting instances of mistreatment; 4) work for improved legislation; and 5) investigate the possibilities of helping sick, injured or young wild animals.

But "Friends of Animals" needs more interested people to help them out. If you are interested in animals and can spare a little time each week, please contact Carol A. Krieg, 222 East Converse Hall, at 656-2284 (weekends: 893-2551.)

Radiologic Program Accredited

University officials were recently notified by the accrediting agency, the Joint Review Committee on Education in Radiologic Technology, that the Radiation Therapy Technology Program at the University of Vermont has received its preliminary accreditation.

This UVM program involves 24 months of study, leads to the associate in science degree and prepares persons for careers in operating high energy radiation for the treatment of cancer. The program has been operating since 1969 and is affiliated with the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont, and Mary Hitchcock Medical Center in Hanover, N.H.

The program is one of 31 approved programs in the United States. Louis M. Izzo heads the department of radiologic technology which also offers programs in radiography and nuclear medicine technology. The program director is Charles Marschke and Dr. G. Stephen Brown is medical consultant to the program.

Cunningham -Newman Center

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m., 9:00 and 11:30 a.m.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday 3:30 p.m.; Tuesday 4:15 p.m. and 10:00 p.m.; Wednesday, Thursday, Friday 4:15 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and anytime by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: Weekdays at 7:30 a.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: For the 4:15 Sunday Mass Choir — 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday.

"SOMETHING TO LIVE FOR": Series on Basic Catholicism. Every Monday at 7:15 p.m.

JUSTICE AND PEACE: Study-Action Group meets on Monday evenings at 9:00 p.m.

"A NEW LOOK AT AN OLD BOOK": Scripture study with emphasis on the Old Testament. Tuesday evenings from 7 to 8 p.m.

TWILIGHT RETREATS: A series of evening retreats for high school students is being planned by students and staff from the Newman Center. If you are interested in being on the team for one or more of these retreats, or if you would like to help with music, A-V presentations or talks, please contact Fr. Holland.

"LEAP": A program providing a weekend experience of spiritual renewal and Christian community for young adults 18 to 25. For further information, please contact Sr. Lindora.

ALABAMA PROJECT: This is a Newman Center-sponsored trip to Alabama for 10 days of volunteer work during Semester Break. If interested in joining the group, please contact Fr. Holland.

HOLY YEAR CELEBRATION: In an effort to join in the Holy Year Celebration, there will be an Inter-College Service of Reconciliation at 10:00 p.m. on Tuesday, November 12, with participation from UVM, St. Michael's, Champlain and Trinity. Please join us.

PRE-CANA: The second presentation in the marriage preparation series will be held on Sunday, Nov. 10 at the Inter-Parish Center in St. Anthony's Parish. Dr. John J. Murray will speak on "Sexuality in Marriage." In the third session, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doppman will speak on "Finance" (Nov. 17). Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stronach will speak on "The Theology of Marriage" in the last session — Nov. 24.

BAKE SALE: At the Center for the benefit of the Alabama Project, Nov. 16 and 17. If you would like to help in this, please call 862-8403.

CRAFTS FAIR: For the benefit of the Newman Center and held every weekend. If you sew, make candles, do macrame or other handcrafts and would like to help, please call the Center (862-8403).

Hillel House

Sunday November 10, there will be a Brunch starting 11:30. Following the brunch there will be a short discussion about a program for next semester.

Tuesdays 4:30 there is a study group of Jewish Customs and Ceremonies. It meets in 420 Waterman, all interested people are invited.

WINTER STORAGE
BICYCLES OR MOTORCYCLES
PINE STREET, BURLINGTON
FOR INFORMATION CALL 864-0779 ANYTIME

THE RETURN OF THE $1 LIFT TICKET
A Season of Weekday Skiing for $60 Ski Glen Ellen This Year

Glen Ellen... where there is more to skiing... now offers the $60 weekday season pass for college students.

This special season pass is good any weekday of the year except from December 23, 1974 thru January 3, 1975.

Opening Thanksgiving... that leaves over 60 days of fantastic skiing at Glen Ellen... where skiing is what it should be.

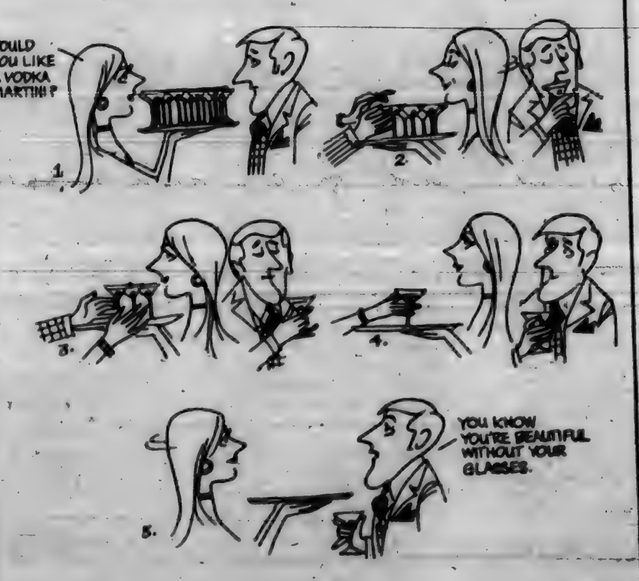
36 trails, five lifts, no lift lines, 50 miles of skiing fun.

WRITE OR CALL TODAY... we can only hold this special skiing package until November 15.

Glen Ellen
Ski Glen Ellen Inc.

Ski Glen Ellen, Inc.
Box 111
Waitsfield, Vt. 05673
(802) 496-2000

WOLFSCHMIDT SCHMILE #317-THE COCKTAIL PARTY



Start something with Wolfschmidt.

A martini, a bloody mary, a screwdriver. Or anything else you have in mind.

Wolfschmidt Genuine Vodka
$3.40
FIFTH SIZE—CODE #6122

VODKA • DISTILLED FROM GRAIN • 80 AND 100 PROOF • SEAGRAM DISTILLERS CO., NEW YORK, N.Y.

PLANTASIA
INDOOR PLANT SPECIALISTS
LANDSCAPING
107 ST PAUL STREET BURLINGTON VERMONT 05401
(802) 863-4466

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Barbara Frankel '75, Editor-in-Chief
Rick Isenberg '75, Assistant Editor
Wyatt Kash '77, Managing Editor
Sandy Jaxtimer '77, News Editor
Margo Rowland '75, Features Editor
Lissa Charles '75, Arts Editor
Peter Campbell '75, Assistant Arts Editor
Mike Schwartz '75, Sports Editor
Kathy Stannard '77, Copy Editor
Debbie Powell, '76, Advertising Manager

Editorial

Blackmail !

The recent Faculty Senate proposal to have UVM return to the status of a private school with equalized tuition, state funding of the Medical College and State subsidies for Vermont students through VSAC is pure, unadulterated blackmail.

First of all, no one in their right mind can possibly expect the legislature to pass such a bill. The Governor would surely veto it.

How can Professor Daniels expect the legislature to appropriate $13 million dollars (the sum he has in mind) for funding the Colleges of Medicine and Agriculture and for subsidizing Vermont students, when the Governor feels he has to cut $300,000 from an appropriation of $11,500,000? The state simply can't afford that extra money.

Why should the state subsidize a private school? Their business is with a state university. UVM is not exactly a state university but it is certainly not a private school. What is it there for: decoration?

The interest of the state and of the University of Vermont is to provide a quality education for Vermonters, as Dr. Alfred Rollins tells us.

Out-of-state students are important, granted; but it is her own children that Vermont must provide for first.

Professor Daniels' remark that if the proposal is not acceptable, "one of the possibilities to relieve UVM's financial crisis is to reduce the number of Vermont students," is not even a thinly-veiled threat! It is out-and-out blackmail!

Change the charter or we'll not educate your sons and daughters. (We'd just hate to have to resort to that.) Change the charter so Vermont can become another Middlebury, full of well-to-do Vermonters and out-of-staters, and maybe some scholarship people, so it will look good.

How many low-income Vermonters is the state, via Vermont Student Assistance Corporation, going to be able to subsidize?

How many middle-income Vermonters are going to be eligible for financial aid?

How many Vermonters are going to take their scholarships and go elsewhere? They could, you know. The scholarships aren't restricted to UVM. How many would come back?

It's a scandal that hundreds of Vermont students won't be able to afford to go to their own state university. Because it won't be a state university, or an instrumentality of the state, anymore.

We certainly hope the Administration will reject this proposal as it now stands.

M.M.H.

The Socialist Worker's Party

by Gordon Vale

(IF) Its glorious days were America's nightmare; bread lines and soup kitchens, bonus marchers and bank failures. The American consciousness, so long rooted in Calvinistic piety and Horatio Alger novels, showed signs of giving way to the "isms" of Marx and Lenin. No doubt about it, there was trouble ahead.

Still, even at the height of its power, the Socialist Workers Party was hard pressed. No matter what they said, monopoly was just another Parker Brothers game and America loved it.

What threat existed during the Depression soon gave way to FDR's New Deal. War brought full employment and confidence in the system was restored.

Yet in 1945, when the threat of leftist revolution had passed, the federal government began a systematic program of electronic surveillance that continued through 1963 and the chain of repressive actions against the SWP began. Recent government admissions indicate that it has not stopped. Why?

The party itself has hardly flourished despite the political turmoil of the anti-war movement in the 1960's. In the gaggle of Leftist organizations that came to life over Vietnam, the SWP remained largely obscure and generally pacific. Students for a Democratic Society grabbed the headlines while the Weathermen took heat for the violence. Government toppling was left to the Democratic Party, which brought down Lyndon Johnson.

Somehow, all this was lost on the government. Even with the sophisticated intelligence programs, our crisis managers overlooked the fact that the SWP not only denounced Weathermen violence, but formally split with them prior to the Chicago Days of Rage in 1969. While gangs of radicals were tearing up plush nightclubs on the Gold Coast, members of the SWP were leading peaceful marches on International Harvestor located in the rugged Southside of Chicago.

Nevertheless, the federal government admitted last January that from 1961 to 1969, the FBI instituted a program to disrupt the party.

Subsequently, the same tactics were used in a similar plan to disrupt the activities of even a broader range of New Left organizations. The outlines of that plan surfaced earlier this year, when the Justice Department was forced to release an FBI memo as a result of a suit filed by NBC newsman Carl Stern.

The memorandum, circulated in 1968 to all FBI offices, explained that "the purpose of this program is to expose, disrupt and otherwise neutralize the activities of the New Left."

"It is imperative that the activities of these groups be followed on a continuous basis so we may take advantage of all opportunities for counterintelligence and also inspire action where circumstances warrant."

In the case of the Socialists, the program resulted in wiretaps, monitoring of mail, break-ins and its listing as a subversive organization.

In the case of Lori Paton, a 16-year-old high school student from New Jersey, it became a nightmare. The government admitted last year, again as a result of a suit, that the FBI had conducted a criminal investigation into Ms. Patton's activities because she had corresponded with SWP headquarters in New York while researching a project for her social studies class. As a result of the investigation, she was listed as a subversive.

Knowledge of her correspondence, the government admitted, came from government mail tampering ordered by L. Patrick Gray III, acting director of the FBI and later a participant in the Watergate coverup.

Despite the disclosure of these and other excesses, party members contend that they are still being harassed. Many instances of official harrassment will be submitted to federal courts in connection with a $27 million civil suit the SWP has already filed.

A suit to be filed in Denver involves a request for an exemption from state campaign disclosure laws. SWP contends that contributor lists will be used by law enforcement agencies to discover party members who will then be black listed, interrogated and perhaps watched.

Much to the surprise of local party leaders, the proposed legal action has received widespread publicity in the local media, inspiring a new sense of mission.

Nevertheless, the government continues to brand them as the beloved system's most insidious enemy. But having created neither of the two greatest internal traumas of this century—Watergate and the Depression—it seems like a bum rap. Rather it's the system that at times can be its own worst enemy.

And that, fellow Americans, is what the SWP has been saying all along.

Economic Problems

by Steve Levine

(IF) That excellent photograph of the experts at the economic seminar bowing their heads in prayer at the beginning of the session might perhaps indicate the seriousness with which those erstwhile thinkers view our current situation.

There was a time once before in recent history where cartel generated inflation brought on a world wide depression, when there was instability in every government in the west, when the stock market spiraled downward this fast, when there were widespread labor problems, when there were major international bank failures, when there was a dustbowl in Oklahoma.

The administration's consistent reassurances that there will be no recession notwithstanding, the last time these constellations were in the sky, which was in the thirties, the situation turned out to be very serious indeed.

Though it does not seem likely that the major economies of the west are prepared to let themselves get dumped, only measures more drastic than anything thus far proposed can prevent eventual collapse. When conditions become sufficiently uncomfortable for large segments of the population to demand those measures, by then so much damage will have been inflicted on the social fabric of western society that it will be left permanently crippled.

As World economics operate on a De Milleian level. Cleaning our plates and breaking our credit cards will affect the total picture pitifully little.

******

Once again there is large scale bloodshed in Northern Ireland. The American press continues to categorize the conflict there as religious when in fact it is political, and will persist until there is some social equality between the Catholic and Protestant communities in the Six Counties.

And this will not be accomplished while the British Army is there conducting a reign of terror against the Catholic population.

Those wonderfully civilized British, in order to hang on to this last colonial possession, are now holding more than 15,000 political prisoners without trial, often under appalling conditions.

It is past time that the UN was given the power to arbitrate this dispute.

****

Lately one notices much mention of the effect of oil prices on the famine stricken "Developing Nations," a hopeful appellation. It looks as if the Arabs are going to take the rap for the famine.

As we all know, Americans undertake wars only for humanitarian reasons.

****

A friend of mine from New York pointed out that the Arabs may soon begin loaning out money to the third world whether they want to or not, because certain large American banks are refusing to grant the Arabs short term high interest depositing. There are limits to what one can do with forty billion dollars, absurd as that sounds.

An incidental effect of the diffusion of Arab bucks could be the lowering of interest rates in this country. They could drop to half of their current prime.

****

There is a rumor around that should the Republican party suck wind at the polls around the country next month, come 1976 there will be a third party ticket featuring Wallace and Reagan.

Should these two be elected this author will be filing from Switzerland thereafter.

Letters To The Editor

Nuclear Power Plants

To the Editor:

The nuclear plant at Vernon, Vermont is shut down again, this time for a fuel change. But be of good cheer, the spent fuel may not be a hazard on its way to being reprocessed as there is, at present, no functioning reprocessing plant in this country to send it to. The policy, as I understand it, is to have these high-level wastes retained at the power plants until some better procedure turns up.

Of course we do not have to worry about these wastes blowing up and coming down as fallout years hence. Rather, if escaping they would spread out penetrating our land, air and water. Hundreds of thousands of gallons of radioactive wastes have already leaked from well-monitored Atomic Energy Storage tanks.

But no one can see the smallest bit of plutonium which, if inhaled or ingested, can cause cancer, so why worry? Why be concerned about quantities of radioactive material equivalent to 500 times that produced by the Hiroshima bomb? Material which contains plutonium. Who cares that their wastes are subject to acts of violence, accidents or their own heating and corrosive action? Who cares enough to do anything about it?

Professor William Heronemus cares. He has engineering plans for off-shore windmills that could supply clean economical power for all of New England. "I'll never forget Dr. Jesse Denton's first comment on the telephone," Heronemus says evenly. "He said: 'If that proposal had been submitted by Cal Tech or MIT, we would have funded it to the hilt. But who the hell are you?'"

Who is Heronemus? See the Country Journal, Nov. 1974, from which this quotation came. (address 139 Maine St., Brattleboro 05301)

Don't we care too? Let's not have any more nuclear power plants in Vermont. Let's not have any nuclear power plants. Who are we voting for Nov. 5 and what are they going to do about this?

Gladys Lodge
Legistive Co-chairman
Federated Garden Clubs of Vermont
Legislative Chairman
Vermont Natural Food and Farming Association

The Muller Mansion

To The Editor:

One small incident that illustrates the blatent arrogance of the bureaucracy that runs Living/Learning. Trivial though it might be, it is indicative of daily attitudes and events. One day last week SAGA (bless their little hearts) served a very good meal, which consisted of spare ribs. This is all well and good, except that SAGA ran out of the ribs, and began serving their infamous ham steaks. The following scenario ensued: at ten minutes before the Living Learning dining hall was to close, Nick Muller and party arrived. Although students had been served ham steak, in lieu of the supposedly depleted spare ribs, Muller's party was conspicuously given spare ribs. This dinner was paid for with "blue Tickets", which this writer has been led to believe are only supposed to be used for visiting dignitaries to the L/L center.

Subsequently, this writer inquired of Living/Learning dining hall manager, Walter May, as to why students were not served the same dinner that Muller received. May replied that Muller had telephoned and requested that special provision be made to save some of the spare ribs. Asked if this was in line with SAGA policy, May stated to the effect that he didn't question the whim of Muller's office. My question is: Does anyone at all question the whim of the administration here at the Muller Mansion? And just who is Muller accountable to?

Sig Wysolmerski

Visitation Rules At Trinity

To the Editor:

I am expressing concern for the University of Vermont girls residing at Mother McAuley Hall on the Trinity College campus. Since we are UVM students, we should be given the privileges entitled to us. However, while living at Trinity we have been asked to follow their rules and regulations. One such regulation of major concern is the restriction of visiting hours. The hours as they stand now are from noon to 12:45 a.m. on weekdays, and from noon to 1:45 a.m. on weekends. The overwhelming majority of UVM girls at McAuley Hall believe that this restriction is extremely unfair. As college students, we are mature enough to make our own decisions, and feel as though we are mistrusted when subjected to these rules.

While circulating a petition to revise the visitation rules, we found that a number of Trinity girls feel the same way about this issue. In fact, they have also tried to change the rule in the past. But they are Trinity students and have no other choice but to live by Trinity's regulations.

It is a different story for us. We as students of the University of Vermont, believe we should be given 24 hour visitation rights, which was a privilege entitled to us when we became students of this University.

Sincerely,
Linda Allen

Third World Power

To the Editor:

They are trying to keep us people of the Third World paranoid, ignorant and unaware. It is their goal to turn us against ourselves while they bust us, molest us and kill more and more Brothers and Sisters with their drugs and legalized murder.

Our strength is a lot more powerful than theirs. After all, we have the struggling and the sacrificing it takes to deal with the painful reality of Life. To be railroaded through our court system for something we did wrong according to the rules prescribed by them. To be locked up like livestock for as long as they judge. To be treated like lepers then released on their say so with a probation noose around our necks. Their behavior modification programs is one part of the plan to make us paranoid, ignorant and unaware.

You accept we have lost the battle which we never fought. We play with toys... handballs, basketballs, footballs, and movies... which replace our identities. You accept the thought that your Brother will mistake you for his enemy and stab you in the back.

We single out one person or one group. We think they are talking about us.. they have our cards... they think they are better than we are... they have free time to do or some trivial bullshit that is just as unimportant. ONE THING IS IMPORTANT. Brothers and Sisters we know and understand who locked us up and why. We (the oppressed) are on one side, they (the oppressors) are on another.

Why should you hate a Brother or a Sister when it is the oppressor who has locked you up. Why hate each other because they have denied you of your rights. We together should go to the power and stop them in what they are trying to do.

A few of them are given unlimited power over us. Minute by minute they tell us what to do and exactly which way to do it. They are so confident of their control over us that they try and regulate how we think, act and behave. They may even have you thinking that they like you cause they may do you a favor, like mail out a special letter to your family, who you could talk to if you were not in jail.

All I can say, Brothers and Sisters of the Third World, we must unite and stop this brainwashing and destruction of ourselves. You should not feel just because you are locked up that you should lay back and let things happen to other Brothers and Sisters. We are all one who are trying for change in our prisons. Open your eyes. There are smiles that make us happy and there are smiles that make us sick.

Robert Rouchet

The Cynic welcomes letters and columns from students, faculty or any other readers. Material for publication must be signed, but names will be withheld upon request.

The Telephone Monopoly

To the Editor:

The telephone company is ripping us off. A typical monopolistic company is following the pattern of our major U.S. conglomerations, i.e. oil companies, IBM, General Motors etc.

Here in Vermont the phone company is attempting to strangle the resistance of the consumer. Last year a rate hike increase was turned down by the Public Service Board. Recently, a State Supreme Court ruling overturned the rate increase denial, and Vermonters began paying 23 percent more for their phone service.

New England Telephone has since filed another request for a rate increase, and an attempt to have this request denied; due to the phone company's failure to provide true cost studies that would justify the increase. Now a guerrilla war has been opened. It goes like this: 1) A consumer wishes to get a phone installed. First it will cost an absurd fee, second, this person will have to wait at least a month for service. 2) A consumer wishes to have his already-in-place phone connected. At least a two week wait.

In the case of the second example, how long does it take a professional phone man to set the telephone's number code and open the connection? Are there that many new telephones to be hooked up? Two years ago one had service within a couple of days.

Granted, inflation has cut into the budget and profit of our dear phone company. But do they really have to insult and beat the consumer over the head? Especially when the instrument they are using is our own stupidity and inaction.

In a time when "belt-tightening" is a necessity for us all, why is it that corporations such as New England Telephone (a part of AT&T) are exempted?

David W. Hubbard
UVM student

Beach Boys Tickets

To the Editor:

Monday morning at UVM, in the cold, damp drizzle, I trecked from Commuter Hill to my 9 o'clock class. As I rounded the front of the library, I couldn't help but notice a line apparently small at first, extending out the front doors of the bookstore. Approaching, I could see that it extended in an s-curve all the way to Morrill Hall. Students waiting like hungry wolves for the Beach Boys concert tickets to go on sale.

Are you assured a ticket by standing in line? The SA Concert Bureau must make available enough tickets for each student to buy one. And these tickets are on sale to the students one week before the general public. I believe there will be enough to go around.

But for reasons unknown to me, the students stood in line for hours, on a rainy, cold, miserable, November Monday, to purchase a concert ticket (for the slightly inflated price of $5, where does our student activity fee go?). With a little patience, rational thought, and timing, tickets could be purchased with virtually no line. I know it's hard for students from the metropolitan areas to slow their systems down to a pace that will reflect their environment. Yet, the entire scene at the bookstore is totally negative to the atmosphere of Vermont.

And now, for you next bunch of over-anxious concert goers, who get to Patrick Gym at 4 p.m., Nov. 20, and sit down front to insure a good view of the Beach Boys, don't bother to yell "Sit down" at me, because it ain't gonna do no good.

Sincerely,
009-42-1987
145-48-2907

Student Representation

To the Editor:

Currently, the University of Vermont is facing a financial crisis. In dealing with this problem, a group of concerned students have formed a student task force on economic affairs. This force includes: one SA senator, one IRA representative and several representatives of the student body at large. This effort on the part of the students marks one of the first times we will have input in administrative decision-making. But will we be listened to?

In the past, students have expressed their animosity towards the building of a half-million dollar pedestrian tunnel between main campus and the Living-Learning Center. However, student opinion has fallen upon deaf ears. The University is facing a financial crisis, the state of Vermont is facing a financial crisis, but still the tunnel will be built!

Whatever the administration's proposed budget cuts are, the people who will be affected the most will be the students. We will be the most affected and we should have the most say about budget cuts! But will we?

It is our hope that the administration will listen to OUR proposals through OUR student task force.

President Andrews, Open Your Ears!

Frank Cioffi
David Schwartz

Bill H-441

To the Editor:

Last spring a bill, H-441, was introduced in Montpelier (that's the state capital, if you hadn't heard by now) which would have given the Legislature the power to approve any new nuclear power plants built in the state. Right now a much smaller group — the Public Service Board and a few utility executives — makes the atomic energy decisions that affect our health and pocketbooks.

In the Legislature, the general public would have more impact — through letters, petitions, and other means — on some vital decisions. Hopefully another fiasco such as the Vernon plant, with its high power costs, breakdowns, and leaks, would not be repeated on Lake Champlain or anywhere else in Vermont.

What can you do? Plenty! Get moving and shake off your apathy. Write letters. Organize. Circulate petitions. Make phone calls. Vote for candidates who are concerned about the impact of nuclear power.

Help VPIRG (Vermont Public Interest Research Group, the people who use your $3 per semester fee for legislative and other projects in the public interest) get started in its effort to get H-441 passed in 1975. Nuclear power is a vital issue; it should concern you to the marrow of your radioactive bones.

Tom Jodin

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arlen, George Georgakis, Andy Meros, Audrey Rothstein
FEATURE: Paul Ajamain, Carol Dufult, Amy-Catherine Fischer, Pam Hogarth
ARTS: Sari Rodi, Robert Deaths, Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Joe Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Prior, Martha Woletz
COLUMNISTS: Debbie Adler, Tom McCormick, Scott McKay
Steve Rice, Elliott Freeman
SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Grace, Rick Katz, Norm Robinson
PRODUCTION: Joan Fornith, Karen Hill, Beth LeVine, Mark Valle, Daniel Mead ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowen, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Gennery, Debbie Powell
BUSINESS MANAGER: Pam Cannon

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 656-4011. Deadline for copy is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

On Athletic

EDITOR'S NOTE— This column is written by Barry Cohen, a member of the UVM basketball team. Cohen, a nonscholarship player, has written in the past for the Cynic through "The Insider." Though recruited to UVM, he has not received financial support. This is his senior year on the team. The article will be featured in two parts.

I feel that institutions of higher education should not provide athletic scholarships. There are many capable high school students who are denied an education because of poor socio-economic backgrounds. While at the same time, due to the priority placed on athlete recruitment, student-athletes, who are not necessarily underprivileged, receive money to attend college (scholarships) that would be essential to poor and capable students in receiving a higher education. I believe scholarships should be based on financial need.

Let me start with a response to a pro position of this question. It is often argued that athletic scholarships give athletes, who in many cases could not afford to obtain an education, a chance to learn and obtain a college degree. My research indicates that this opportunity to get a degree, that college scholarships offer athletes is highly overrated in its value.

In Dave Meggysey's book Out Of Their League, Meggysey writes, "Syracuse had a special remedial program, ostensibly designed to help freshmen entering with academic deficiencies. But the coaching staff encouraged me and the other freshmen football players to enroll in this program because it lasted through the whole year and consisted mainly of Mickey Mouse courses requiring little work." In other words, the time taken up by football as well as the general concern of the coaches for their scholarship players to be concerned with only football, (not burdened down with anything more than the simplest courses) prevents the scholarship players from getting a good education and most often a meaningful degree.

This feeling of football being the main concern for the scholarship athlete is present at most big colleges where big arenas and stadiums provide large incomes for the university. The athletes are virtually forced to concentrate solely on their sport and are basically denied the freedom to choose their own courses according to their interests and future career aspirations. Meggysey tells in his book of the end coach at Syracuse at the time, Joe Syombathy, who was also in charge of the athletic tutoring program. "Syombathy would take the football players' class cards and simply fill out the courses he would want them to take. Not only would Syombathy enroll most of them in the remedial program, but he would decide on their courses with the main criterion being whether or not they interfered with afternoon football practice." Meggysey, in attempting to take meaningful courses, searches through the course catalogue for classes he wanted, and then filled out his own course card and presented it to the coach. Syombathy was furious and reprimanded Meggysey stating vehemently that Syracuse wanted him to be eligible next season. Meggysey had a tough argument with the coach but finally got his courses.

Not only are most big-time colleges virtually restrictive in allowing scholarship athletes to choose courses, but most institutions recruite top football players regardless of their academic ability. The school, in conjunction with the athletic department then attempts to keep the athletes in school through some subtle and not so subtle means.

For example, at examinations the football players were given answers to mid-terms and finals. Dave Meggysey writes of his fellow athletes, "They had neither the ability or interest to do college work; I don't know what kind of tutoring or help they got, but it kept them eligible for four years." There were even some less subtle techniques than this. Meggysey tells of his brother Dennis, also on scholarship at Syracuse. Dennis needed six units of A grades when he left school in the spring. He was supposed to do this in summer school. Dennis didn't go at all in the summer but when he arrived at school in the fall, his transcripts showed he had achieved the needed grades to be eligible that semester.

Meggysey goes further in citing the jobs of the brain coach at the University of Texas and Academic Coordinator at Berkely. These people "get athletes by". They keep athletes eligible by getting their work done for them. What is the athlete learning? What kind of education is this providing? And how will this help an athlete on a scholarship once his career is over? If he is not doing the work himself, what is he learning? The minute the scholarship athletes's eligibility runs out, his tutoring stops, the athletic department loses its concern for him and the athlete is faced with a flock of different classes which somebody has put

The Myth About Greeks

by P.M. Bentley

Here it is election week, a time just dripping with worldly pragmatic issues, and here I am writing about UVM's fraternities and sororities. Pertinent? Well, that depends on your point of view; which is, by the way, the first thing I want to discuss.

There exists on this campus a popular myth that "Greek" houses are filled with people who wish to spend four (or more) years at Camp Catamount and never experience a sober night. This simply is a myth, and the anti-Greek reader should keep in mind that hasty generalizations are always dangerous. Campus-wide fraternity parties tend to receive more publicity than other Greek activities for obvious reasons, but for one to base his or her entire conception of Greek life on Saturday night at Sigma Nu is ridiculous. The purpose of this column, then, will be to emphasize the many constructive aspects of Greek life on this campus.

This week past saw the Halloween holiday celebrated jointly by six Greek houses with children from the Sara Holbrook Center in Burlington as special guests. Sigma Phi Epsilon frat and Pi Beta Phi sorority hosted one party at which the children were given candy treats and then taken into rooms to be "scared" by black-lighted skeletons. A good time was had by all.

Alpha Chi Omega sorority and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity hosted another group of Holbrook children and treated them to a memorable evening. The children bobbed for apples, pinned the nose on the witch, hunted for hidden candy, and generally celebrated a "fun" Halloween.

Sigma Phi frat and Alpha Delta Pi sorority joined for another of their annual Halloween parties for underprivileged children. With more Holbrook kids as their guests, these houses presented a "Great Pumpkin" skit in addition to taking the children trick-or-treating from room to room, and playing Halloween games with them.

The sisters of Alpha Delta Pi have also participated in this year's UNICEF drive by placing the familiar orange UNICEF cartons in different locations around Burlington.

In an event unrelated to Halloween, Sigma Nu fraternity on Friday allowed free use of its dining room to the Lilliput Children's Program for a fund-raising performance by the Marlboro Theatre Company of Marlboro, Vermont and Boston. The Lilliput Program sponsors a sort of children's Peace Corps which each year consists of four performances, and also an in-school theater program for northeastern Vermont elementary schools. These activities obviously require funds in order to operate, and I am happy to report that the Lilliput Program fund raiser at Sigma Nu was a financial success.

But enough talk about the Greek system! Let's all go back to our discussions about hourlies, football, the opposite sex, and who won Tuesday's elections. See you later.....much.

On Athletic Scholorships

EDITOR'S NOTE— This column is written by Barry Cohen, a member of the UVM basketball team. Cohen, a nonscholarship player, has written in the past for the Cynic through "The Insider." Though recruited to UVM, he has not received financial support. This is his senior year on the team. The article will be featured in two parts.

I feel that institutions of higher education should not provide athletic scholarships. There are many capable high school students who are denied an education because of poor socio-economic backgrounds. While at the same time, due to the priority placed on athlete recruitment, student-athletes, who are not necessarily underprivileged, receive money to attend college (scholarships) that would be essential to poor and capable students in receiving a higher education. I believe scholarships should be based on financial need.

Let me start with a response to a pro position of this question. It is often argued that athletic scholarships give athletes, who in many cases could not afford to obtain an education, a chance to learn and obtain a college degree. My research indicates that this opportunity to get a degree, that college scholarships offer athletes is highly overrated in its value. In Dave Meggyesy's book Out Of Their League, Meggyesy writes, "Syracuse had a special remedial program, ostensibly designed to help freshmen entering with academic deficiencies. But the coaching staff encouraged me and the other freshmen football players to enroll in this program because it lasted through the whole year and consisted mainly of Mickey Mouse courses requiring little work." In other words, the time taken up by football as well as the general concern of the coaches for their scholarship players to be concerned with only football, (not burdened down with anything more than the simplest courses) prevents the scholarship players from getting a good education and most often a meaningful degree.

This feeling of football being the main concern for the scholarship athlete is present at most big colleges where big arenas and stadiums provide large incomes for the university. The athletes are virtually forced to concentrate solely on their sport and are basically denied the freedom to choose their own courses according to their interests and future career aspirations. Meggyesy tells in his book of the end coach at Syracuse at the time, Joe Syombathy, who was also in charge of the athletic tutoring program. "Syombathy would take the football players' class cards and simply fill out the courses he would want them to take. Not only would Syombathy enroll most of them in the remedial program, but he would decide on their courses with the main criterion being whether or not they interfered with afternoon football practice." Meggyesy, in attempting to take meaningful courses, searches through the course catalogue for classes he wanted, and then filled out his own course card and presented it to the coach. Syombathy was furious and reprimanded Meggyesy stating vehemently that Syracuse wanted him to be eligible next season. Meggyesy had a tough argument with the coach but finally got his courses.

Not only are most big-time colleges virtually restrictive in allowing scholarship athletes to choose courses, but most institutions recruite top football players regardless of their academic ability. The school, in conjunction with the athletic department then attempts to keep the athletes in school through some subtle and not so subtle means.

For example, at examinations the football players were given answers to mid-terms and finals. Dave Meggyesy writes of his fellow athletes, "They had neither the ability or interest to do college work; I don't know what kind of tutoring or help they got, but it kept them eligible for four years." There were even some less subtle techniques than this. Meggyesy tells of his brother Dennis, also on scholarship at Syracuse. Dennis needed six units of A grades when he left school in the spring. He was supposed to do this in summer school. Dennis didn't go at all in the summer but when he arrived at school in the fall, his transcripts showed he had achieved the needed grades to be eligible that semester.

Meggyesy goes further in citing the jobs of the brain coach at the University of Texas and Academic Coordinator at Berkely. These people "get athletes by". They keep athletes eligible by getting their work done for them. What is the athlete learning? What kind of education is this providing? And how will this help an athlete on a scholarship once his career is over? If he is not doing the work himself, what is he learning? The minute the scholarship athletes's eligibility runs out, his tutoring stops, the athletic department loses its concern for him and the athlete is faced with a flock of different classes which somebody has put off to keep him eligible. Meggyesy writes, "Of the 26 athletes who got scholarships in my freshman year, only John Mackey, Gene Francis, and myself graduated with our class." In what sense is the scholarship athlete provided a "normal" education at a higher educational institution?

In Shaw's book, Meat in the Hoof the author tells how athletes on scholarships who were not good enough to be of help to the team, were brutally treated and actually forced to leave school, because they would have to relinquish their scholarship money. What kind of education do those scholarships provide that are terminated due solely to athletic performance? I feel the student-athlete should be protected against this "meat market" treatment and be spared the confusion and anxiety concerning his education. But in practice most scholarships for athletics, especially at "Big time" colleges, but not uncommonly at small schools, emphasize sports and show little concern, as I have suggested, for the education of the student athlete.

Frank Scott provides an excellent example of higher educational institutions lack of concern for the scholarship athletes' education when he states that only fifty per cent of the college athletic stars who make it to the pros, bring degrees with them. Yet most of the colleges keep these athletes eligible for four years. At the University at El Paso, Scott says, "officials see nothing unusual about the fact that the five starters on their 1966 NCAA basketball championship team never graduated. (Sport, July, 1970.) Then of course there are the well known cases of James Street and Pete Maravich, which reveal how college administrators work hand in glove with athletic departments to keep athletes eligible even when they aren't attending classes. After the Cotton Bowl, Street dropped all his courses without penalty, six days before final exams. Maravich, who had not attended class all year, was suspended from school, after the basketball season had ended. In an article in the San Francisco Chronicle (January 20, 1970), nightly speaking engagements were incompatable with the normal student activity of attending classes and studying for exams. What kind of education did Maravich and Street obtain at their schools?

An even better question to ask is, did Pete Maravich and James Street even desire an education? And if they did not, is it fair to give them the seats in a classroom that some aspiring and underprivileged boy would give his right arm for? The question must also be asked, are most athletes on athletic scholarships "needy"? The dissent in regard to intercollegiate athletics has come from an idealistic generation of youth who will not stand for situations where high school students are denied an education on a higher level, and are positioned behind athletes who are not nearly as qualified or motivated towards education. It is my feeling that scholarships should be based on need and determined by academic desire and achievement. In this way poor and wanting youngsters would not be deprived of an education. The rationality behind athletic scholarships is that they will afford the team and school prestige, and material benefit to aid the academic programs. However, in practice, according to Homar Babbidge, president of the University of Connecticut, "the funds raised from the athletic events are re-invested into the sports program." Continues Babbidge, "Today's generation of college students asks, what is so greatt about athletics? What are the values they hold that warrant the expenditures of institutional resources?"

Speed Dips—What Really Happened

by Paul Ajamian

It was two summers ago, when the traffic on the road from Gutterson to WDW got way out of hand, that the idea of speed – and traffic-controls first occurred to UVM officials. According to a survey done that summer, over thirteen hundred vehicles were using the above mentioned road each day, eleven hundred of which were non-university. There were simply too many outsiders seeking a short cut on a roadway that was meant only for this university.

It was at this point that UVM Security began looking for solutions, turning to the UVM Traffic Commission and several knowledgeable faculty persons. The Traffic Commission is the governing board responsible for setting the university traffic laws, costs of parking violations, permits, etc. This board is made up of several administrators and faculty people, an undergraduate, graduate, and commuter students, and various other members.

Of the alternatives discussed, speed bumps were ruled out, as snowplows in winter would eventually level them. Speed dips were decided upon, and were set at a depth such that, at five miles per hour, no damage to the car would be incurred. A total of ten dips were planned, with two sets of doubles and a single adjacent to both WDW and Gutterson fieldhouse. The reasoning behind the double depressions was that both the front and rear wheels of cement trucks and other heavy vehicles would sink into them simultaneously acting as a further deterrent to this type of traffic. The cost of the project was six hundred dollars, and was extremely successful in reducing the number and speed of through vehicles.

Upon completion of the dips, numerous complaints were received on a continual basis by the security office, primarily from irritated students concerned with car damage and the extreme inconvenience An SA proposal was made to remove the dips, but no substantial action was taken until mid-September of this year. It was at this time that two people, the former SA Senate Chairperson Steve Rollins and Acting Chief of Security F. Scott Smith, sought the Traffic Commision's approval in getting some of the dips filled in.

Steve Rollins formulated and submitted three proposals. One of these dealt with installing speed "ripples" in place of the current controls. Another suggested filling in the dips in four places only, thus allowing cars to avoid the trap if they correctly (and slowly) navigated over the tire-wide pathways.

The most important proposal was the one that was eventually modified and acted upon. This was one of strategic elimination, calling for the complete removal of five of the dips (the center three by Gutterson and two by WDW), and a partial filling in of the remainder.

The above suggestions by Rollins and those by Chief F. Scott Smith were instrumental in bringing about change. On September 19, the Traffic Commission approved the complete fill-in of four dips, two each at WDW and Gutterson, and the partial fill-in (to two inches below road level) of the remaining six. Chief Smith began action to implement the rulings, but the UVM Grounds Department wouldn't cooperate. They set a price of one thousand dollars for the job – 400 above the original cost of construction.

Obviously unable to meet such an exorbant price, Chief Smith waited until on the Thursday before homecoming when some extra tar was available from a UVM contracted asphalt company. The company agreed to fill in the specified dips at no charge, but somehow signals got crossed and every dip was covered over. The fact that this happened just prior to homecoming was purely coincidental, and was not done for parents as was widely speculated.

The following week, the Grounds Department attempted to partially dig out the six dips that were originally planned at two inches below road level. They fouled up also, digging them out completely instead of as directed. This brings us to the present condition of the road, with four dips completely filled and six completely dug out.

As for the pre-homecoming mistake, Chief F. Scott Smith commented, "we couldn't raise hell because they (the asphalt company) were doing it for nothing." The only money that the university spent on the fiasco was the salaries of the Grounds Crew assigned to dig out the dips, which should clear up any erroneous information in previous Cynic articles.

These dips will be filled to the two inch mark as soon as extra tar is available on campus. Chief Smith hopes this will be in the near future, and with it the end of the great speed dip controversy.

WALKING THE YARD

Walking alone in the yard
No one else around.
The snow is coming down hard
It's already covered the ground.

Here comes another inmate
Would you care to walk?.
It's not very late
We've plenty of time to talk.

We shuffle our feet
As we tread through the snow
Leaving a trail of pain
Behind us as we go.

Pain in ourselves and in the snow
Aroused from its sleep
Being crushed by the blows
Of our treading feet.

Sorry snow we know
How it feels
We've also been crushed by blows
Of society's wheels.

Robert Rauschel
Vermont State Correctional Facility – Windsor, Vt.

Wildlife In Vermont

by Paul Cain

Now wildlife shows itself. Loss of natural cover opens to the hiker and hunter secret lives of the woods. Leaves that have blazed out the colors of autumn are now withered and blown away in the foreboding winds of early winter. The hiker sees the woods seized up in the cold stillness of November. As he walks his boots crunch over frozen ground, his breath puffs out white and if hunting, his rifle barrel stings the fingers.

The woods are clearer now. Wildlife can be seen sprinting from the walker's approach. Even the most graceful of deer cannot help but crash about in the dead leaves. In a dying world animals are seen searching feeding areas, trying to obtain layers of fat to see them through the lean months of winter.

On the lake lines of migratory fowl are seen making their way south. At dusk the birds can be seen landing to rest and feed, and if one is ambitious enough to meet the first redness of dawn they are seen forming their lines again, their wings flapping frantically as they resume the southward flight.

Early winter gives us the clearest view of wildlife.

Wildlife in Vermont is holding its own with some noticeable shifts in populations. Reintroduction of some species and the migration of others has given new character to our outdoor scene. The more traditionally native species continue to thrive, though some, such as the black bear, need attention.

The re-introduction of the fisher and the turkey in Vermont are welcomed additions.

A hitch-hiker about the Pawlet area might be lucky enough to flush out a few wild turkeys. It is said to be quite a sight as their colorful bronze bodies fight for elevation in a slow, greased flight.

The wild turkey was brought back into Vermont during the winter of 1968-69. From this initial stocking of 31 birds a flock of 800-1000 has established itself. Limited hunting seasons are held in the spring of each year without detriment to the population. Hunting wild turkey requires skill and patience, the hunter having to call the wary bird into shotgun range.

The fisher disappeared from Vermont in the 1920's due to changes of habitat and over-trapping. Stockings during the years 1957-67 has produced a present stable population.

A small, agile relative of the mink and weasel, the fisher has the singular and welcomed ability to kill porcupines. The wood chewing porcupine can be quite a pest, causing damage to houses and trees. A fisher attacks by either knocking the porcupine from high branches or deftly flipping the animal over and slashing with their sharp claws at the exposed midsection.

There are coyotes in Vermont. Increased sighting over recent years caused speculation over what exactly the animal was. Names such as "coy-dog" and "coy-wolf" were used, but now researchers have pronounced it a genuine sub-species of the coyote.

The coyotes of Vermont (Canis latrans thamnos) are heavier than the western breed and have more wolf/dog characteristics. Their bodies are grayish, they have large pointed ears and the bushy tail has a characteristic black tip.

Coyotes are seldom predators of deer, feeding mostly on small rodents, plant material and carrion it happens upon. Their eerie melodies of yipping and barking may be heard across some winter night. The purpose is to confuse and frighten prey species, an effect that can be easily understood.

Stalwarts of Vermont's big game, the deer and bear are showing differing shifts in populations.

An instinct of wariness and strong senses of smelling and hearing make the black bear a once in a lifetime sight. Throughout Vermont there are approximately 1,2000 black bears and the yearly hunting take is about 200.

The black bear is a species that could suffer from over hunting. Not reaching sexual maturity until 3 years of age, and then only producing litters of two every other year make the bear susceptible to population decline. The 1974 hunting season has been shortened in order to allow the breeding population to re-establish itself.

White tail deer. The mention of this animal brings visions of graceful beauty. They are on the edge of a snow patched field, nosing the ground for food. Their head and long necks pop up, the alerted eyes of one stares at you, the nose is raised, snorts, and they're bounding off and dodging through the woods. Their white tails flare about the trees and they're gone.

To hunters, the deer offers sport of the highest quality. Searching for an animal of superior sight, smell, hearing and speed a hunter finds himself straining and testing his own natural abilities. His ears prick at each sound heard and his eyes search the contexts and shades of the woods. There are deer there– somewhere.

Once an uncommon sight, deer have flourished since the 1940's. The mild winters of recent should give an increase to the herd this year and many experts believe deer ranges are becoming over-populated.

Uncontrolled populations results in an overall unhealthiness of the deer herd and high winter mortalities. Lack of adequate food in the winter months not only cause many deer to starve, but also leads to disease and poor antler development. The Fish and Game Department of Vermont advocated liberalization of hunting regulations in order to keep the deer population down.

When colder weather sets in and the northern waters freeze, the migration of waterfowl will hit its peak. That is when the Canada geese will be seen flying across the horizon of Lake Champlain.

The sight of a V of Canada geese will hold a viewer's attention until the last bit of honking can be heard and the thin black line finally disappears into the sky. Unfortunately, prevailing northerly winds allow most flocks of geese to span Vermont non-stop.

Winter is a time of death. Every migration leaves behind so many birds. Each spring the ground receives the carcasses of animals that could not find food and shelter. To a hiker or a hunter early winter is the unique time when wildlife is exposed in their struggle for life.

Gay Student Union At UVM

When the Student Association Senate voted formal recognition for the UVM Gay Student Union on Tuesday, October 29th, UVM belatedly joined the many other major universities and colleges that have active gay student organizations.

The purpose is two-fold – to serve the gay student community and also those who consider themselves non-gay. To be sure, the group will attempt to provide the gay community on campus – both men and women, bi-sexual and gay – with a sense of identity and shared common goals. UVM, admittedly one of the straightest schools, surely can benefit from a greater openness of gay activities on campus. But certainly as important, the union invites the support of others on campus as well; it would indeed be sad if only those visiting the office were homosexuals.

The union hopes to provide many services for people who do not consider themselves as gay; recognizing the usually suppressed gay community on campus; breaking down stereotypical images of gays; replacing such stereotypes with a perspective on sexual roles; understanding gay life-styles, thoughts, behavior, literature; and tolerating those individuals choosing to be open about their sexual preference.

Officers for the group are John Krowka, President; Fritz Hewitt, Treasurer; and Ken Seid, a teacher in the English department, will serve as faculty advisor.

The union hopes to sponsor several important activities on campus:

(1) Plans are now under way to set up a permanent office in Billings Center which will serve as a drop-in information center on homosexuality for the entire student body. A referral service will put those interested in contact with the several men's and women's gay consciousness-raising groups presently meeting in the Burlington area. The office will also house a library of gay and related sexual literature including books, periodicals, reports, statistics, and also fiction, poetry, and drama.

(2) The union will provide free counselling by peers for gay, bi-, and straight persons.

(3) The gay switchboard will be operated two evenings a week for counselling, questions, comments, and referrals.

(4) The union will sponsor the Burlington After Dark radio show on WRUV-FM every other Sunday evening from 7-8 p.m. The show deals with gay consciousness and features music, raps, interviews, poetry and fiction readings, and discusses issues of human interest to the community. The next show will be aired Sunday, November 17th, and will deal with the gay women's movement.

(5) The group will appear before psychology, sociology, and medical school classes on campus in an attempt to discuss more openly this sensitive and long-avoided topic.

(6) The group hopes to sponsor a gay dance on campus early next semester.

We earnestly enlist the support of fellow students in this important endeavor. We hope to be able to transcend such labels as gay, bi-, or straight, masculine or feminine, and unite in the human effort of making human beings more comfortable with one another.

Those interested in helping or obtaining information may phone 658-3830.

The Myth About Greeks

by P.M. Bentley

Here it is election week, a time just dripping with worldly, pragmatic issues, and here I am writing about UVM's fraternities and sororities. Pertinent? Well, that depends on your point of view; which is, by the way, the first thing I want to discuss.

There exists on this campus a popular myth that "Greek" houses are filled with people who wish to spend four (or more) years at Camp Catamount and never experience a sober night. This simply is a myth, and the anti-Greek reader should keep in mind that hasty generalizations are always dangerous. Campus-wide fraternity parties tend to receive more publicity than other Greek activities for obvious reasons, but for one to base his or her entire conception of Greek life on Saturday night at Sigma Nu is ridiculous. The purpose of this column, then, will be to emphasize the many constructive aspects of Greek life on this campus.

This week past saw the Halloween holiday celebrated jointly by six Greek houses with children from the Sara Holbrook Center in Burlington as special guests. Sigma Phi Epsilon frat and Pi Beta Phi sorority hosted one party at which the children were given candy treats and then taken into rooms to be "scared" by black-lighted skeletons. A good time was had by all.

Alpha Chi Omega sorority and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity hosted another group of Holbrook children and treated them to a memorable evening. The children bobbed for apples, pinned the nose on the witch, hunted for hidden candy, and generally celebrated a "fun" Halloween.

Sigma Phi frat and Alpha Delta Pi sorority joined for another of their annual Halloween parties for underprivileged children. With more Holbrook kids as their guests, these houses presented a "Great Pumpkin" skit in addition to taking the children trick-or-treating from room to room, and playing Halloween games with them.

The sisters of Alpha Delta Pi have also participated in this year's UNICEF drive by placing the familiar orange UNICEF cartons in different locations around Burlington.

In an event unrelated to Halloween, Sigma Nu fraternity last Friday allowed free use of its dining room to the Lilliput Children's Program for a fund-raising performance by the Marlboro Theatre Company of Marlboro, Vermont and Boston. The Lilliput Program sponsors a sort of children's Lane Series, which each year consists of four performances, and also an in-school theater program for northeastern Vermont elementary schools. These activities obviously require funds in order to operate, and I am happy to report that the Lilliput Program's fund raiser at Sigma Nu was a financial success.

But enough talk about the Greek system! Let's all go back to our discussions about hoarlies, football, the opposite sex, and who won Tuesday's elections. See you later.....much.

Oil Spill

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Cleo Laine Gives Unique Performance

by Ginny Gold

On Saturday night, The Lane Series brought to Burlington one of Britain's most acclaimed singers, Cleo Laine, in concert with her husband John Dankworth and his ensemble, here a totally unique performance. Laine and Dankworth proved to be a perfect complement to each other in their musical abilities and styles.

Cleo Laine is relatively new to America, having started her first U.S. tour in 1973, but she has received wide recognition. In the 1974 Down Beat Magazine Critics Jazz Poll, she placed highly in two categories, being cited both as an established talent and a talent deserving wider recognition. Since 1973, she and Dankworth have performed numerous concerts, appeared on several television shows, and received extensive national press coverage.

On the current tour Dankworth's ensemble was composed of Paul Hart on piano and electric piano and two Americans, Bryan Taff on bass and electric bass, and Rudy Cousins on drums. They have not played together as a group for very long, but their music gave no indication of this. They appeared to be tremendously versatile, ranging from the precise and sensitive jazz rhythyms to mellow blues tunes. One number in the second set with Hart playing violin defied categorization; it was, simply, an excellent combination of musical styles.

Cleo Laine's voice is an experience in itself. The power of her voice was obvious when she first came on stage and started singing unaccompanied. Her range is practically unequalled. She can cover four octaves with seemingly effortless power. She covers a vast variety of types of music: blues, jazz, and Dankworth's originals. Laine and her husband do some amazing exchanges between voice and saxophone. "Perdido" and Dankworth's "Birdsong" were wonderfully suited for this. As Henry Edwards says on the cover notes for "Cleo Laine Live At Carnegie Hall": "Cleo and John exchange instrumental acrobatics that challenge the listener to determine where the voice ends and the saxophone begins."

Laine and the band clearly showed that they enjoyed the music that they played. At the same time, they tried hard to please their audience. This was evident in the "Request Medley" a combination of favorite songs including "Bill," "Music," and "Gimme a Piggoat." Dankworth's music for Cleo's favorite pieces of poetry set the varied lyrics off perfectly. Again it was appealing music for both audience and performers.

The versatility and variety

(continued on page nine)

Cast of the Sunshine Boys

"The Sunshine Boys" To Smile November 12

Neil Simon's hilarious new comedy, "The Sunshine Boys," will be performed on the stage of Memorial Auditorium next Tuesday, November 12, at 8 p.m., in the Lane Series.

Starring in the author's thirteenth comedy smash are Robert Alda and Arny Freeman, two well-known performers of stage, films, TV, radio and supper clubs.

"The Sunshine Boys," which Clive Barnes of the New York Times called "Simon's best play yet" and Ted Kalem of Time Magazine acclaimed as "two unbridled hours of laughter," is only one of a number of long-run hit plays which the fabulously successful author has contributed to the American stage.

Having achieved 538 performances on Broadway, which these days is considered a long run, The Sunshine Boys thus joins several other Simon smashes: Barefoot in the Park (1530 Broadway performances), The Odd Couple (964), Plaza Suite (1097), Last of the Red Hot Lovers (706) The Prisoner of Second Avenue (788), Promises, Promises (1281), and Sweet Charity (608).

The Sunshine Boys patterned after the old-time vaudevillians Smith and Dale, is actually a fictionalized version in which the two men are portrayed as having become enemies after being a team for 43 years and not speaking for 11 years after the act broke up.

An abortive attempt to reunite the two through a television special is finally succeeded by a continuation of the love-hate syndrome at a reunion at the famous Actors' Fund Home. During the entire relationship of the two comedians, the famous Simon quips and gags fly thick and fast, with a dash of sex when the "boys" go through their doctor's office routine.

Robert Alda and Arny Freeman make an ideal team to portray Willie Clark and Al Lewis, the legendary vaudeville team. Alda is known to millions for his portrayal of Sky Masterson in the original Guys and Dolls" musical and for his sensitive delineation of George Gershwin in the Rhapsody In Blue" film.

Arny Freeman, a veteran stage star, played the Latin Lothario in Cactus Flower opposite Lauren Bacall for three years on Broadway; he was last seen in Joseph Pappo' Broadway musical "Much Ado Abouteat Nothing". Both Alda and Freeman know vaudeville like the back of their hands.

Most people who can never remember a name will certainly be familiar with Mr. Freeman's face, which has been associated with a large number of television commercials, notably the award- winning Myrrh-on-the-Rocks.

Director of The Sunshine Boys is Alan Arkin, one of the brightest prospects for stage and film stardom before he turned to direction. He has starred in Murray Schisgal's mad comedy Luv and also in the films The Russians Are Coming, the Russians Are Coming, Wait Until Dark, The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter and Catch 22.

"The most delightful play Mr. Simon has written for several seasons," wrote Richard Watts of the New York Post. And Clive Barnes said that The Sunshine Boys is "a lovely play, extraordinarily funny, extraordinarily loving. A joy. This is a super clever and very humane comedy."

Tickets for The Sunshine Boys are $3, $5 and $6, and may be obtained in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations telephone 656-3418.

The next Lane concert is the George Shearing Quintet, with George Shearing himself, Nov. 18. A few tickets still remain.

The Caseys Give Original Show

Billings Center Governing Board presents Donna and Kent Casey on November 15th, Saturday night, at 8:30 p.m. If you're looking for meaning and depth from contemporary music, you'll enjoy the Casey's.

They play all original songs. Donna writes and sings with an inborn intensity, yet with the fragileness of a child. She plays acoustic guitar and recorder. Kent's guitar work radiates energy and delicacy. Together they blend all the colors and human emotion into sensitive, comfortable music. The Casey's have been centered in New Hampshire, and have performed concerts in colleges, coffeehouses, bars in Boston, and on the radio. Come and listen to this oriental and occidental music in front of the fireplace in Billings for free.

How Do Outer Mongolians Eat?

Sheep eyeball soup may be a delicious dinner to the Navajo, but you may only like it for breakfast, or maybe only with croutons. How do the outer Mongolians survive without Big Macs for lunch or SAGA food for supper?

The Anthropology Club is holding its annual Ethnic Dinner Sunday November 10th at 6:00 p.m. in room 120 Commons, Living Learning to help expose you to the gastronomical wonders of the universe.

If your palate draws you on, bring friends, wear your "ethnic" clothes and any Folk music you might have. Admission is an intriguing dish of food or wine.

This year as in the past there will be a speaker, Pol Ndu from the Cross Cultural Program will be speaking on Nigeria. We also hope to have some folk dancing to aid the digestion after the meal.

They have to know what food and friends you will bring so please call Carol, 862-4519 or

Players Present Collage Of Past Productions

The Royall Tyler will make its contribution to the nostalgia craze tomorrow at 4 p.m. as it looks back on the past three years of theater at UVM. In celebration of the reinstatement of FRIDAY AT FOUR, the University Players will present a collage of past productions. Excerpts running the gamut from The Time Of Your Life, which opened in September" to the most recent Under Milkwood, will be performed (for the most part) by students in the original roles and costumes. The cavalcade will include, along with Time Of Your Life and Milkwood, scenes or songs from Playtimer Tour's The Lucky Penny, Covenant, The Three Sisters, The Lady's Not For Burning, The Contrast, Murder In The Cathedral and Fumed Oak, with "Coffee and Conversation" following in the upper lobby. Admission is free and open to the public.

TONIGHT
TRY "THE TRICKY DICK"
(Pardon Me)

FAMOUS SINCE 1974

or one of the 90 other unbeliebable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT Live Entertainment Nightly,
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

10¢ DRAFTS
MONDAY, NOV. 11
RETURN A MUG NIGHT
For Each Borrowed Mug
Returned Get A 10¢ Draft

147 MAIN ST.

Vermont Cynic
STUDENT DISCOUNT CARDS

PLAZA I & II
DORSET ST
Groove Tube
Odessa File

Merrill's Showcase 1 & 2
Williston Road
I King of Hearts
II Starts Fri.
Alice in Wonderland

State Theatre
Bank Street
Life & Times of Xavier Hollander

Essex Twin Cinema
Pearl Street
Essex Jct.
Vanishing Wilderness
California Split

Cinema 1 & 2
Burlington Plaza
Shelburne Road
Lucky Luciano
The Longest Yard

Flynn Theatre
Main Street
Little Big Man — A Man Called Horse

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

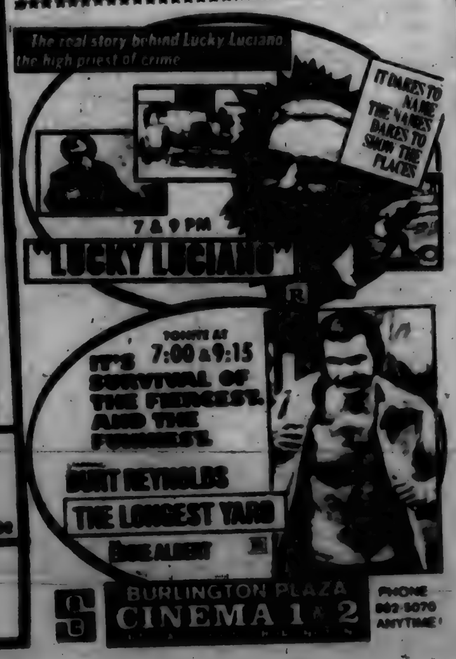
SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7
OKLAHOMA (1955) – Gordon MacRae
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8
KING OF HEARTS (1967) – Alan Bates
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – $1.00

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9
SOMETIMES A GREAT NOTION (1971) – Paul Newman
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11
THE SHOP ON MAIN STREET (1966) – Jose F. Kroner, Ida Kaminska
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free



BEACH BOYS
Student Tickets are
SOLD OUT
A limited number of $6 General Admission Tickets will go on sale Monday Nov. 11 at the Bookstore & Bailey's

DOLLAR SHOWING
Thurs. at 4:00 PM
Odessa File
Shown at Plaza I & II
on Dorset Street

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.

1ST time in Vermont.. 2 nights only!
EL TOPO
An Alexandro Jodorowski film
FLYNN THEATRE
Nov. 8 & 9 11:30 P.M.
Burlington Film Coop.
a zen western

We Want You To Join Our Church As An
Ordained Minister
And Have The Rank Of
Doctor of Divinity

Charles Towers, Sarah Brooke, and Strindberg opening tonight at 8:00 p.m. run through Sunday, November 10. Tic lobby, Billings Center. Student admission

by Mark Seralnick

One of the most exciting aspects of UVM's campus is surely its grand architecture. The College Row is an architect's delight possessing a noble mark of distinction. Although many students each day use these buildings, most are probably unaware of the history and style that are important in gaining a better understanding of the architecture.

The first building constructed on College Row is Old Mill. Although the plaque in the front indicates that General Lafayette laid the groundstone for the building in 1825, the structure we see now bears little resemblance to what it was in the nineteenth century. In 1805, the original Old Mill was finished and was located where the middle of the Old Mill is now. However, in 1824, a fire erupted and completely destroyed the building. Next, the university rebuilt the Old Mill, this time in three sections for reasons of fire safety and then in 1825 Lafayette laid the cornerstone. In 1846, the three separate structures were joined together and made the Mill one building. The original structure had a bell tower but this was replaced when V.P. Howard had the roof redone. The loss of the bell was lamented.

The name the "Old Mill" was probably used because original structure was a ty that was used for mills in early nineteenth century. In 1800's the Old Mill served as complete building for University housing, classroo and administrative offices all found there. architectural formula of structure relates to the En architect Sir Christopher Wi wide use of a cupola and Project divings attached to central structure (an century style).

The Old Mill we see to largely the result of Howard, who donated money so that his wishes f building would be rea Hence, the Mill was giv Victorian look. The level floors was raised, the o dome and bell tower removed and the roof pit increased. Also the fron renovated with a different stone which inside it aggressive but the backsi left alone. Finally stained was placed in the chapel, now serves as the John Lounge.

In 1896, Dr. William alumni of UVM donate necessary funds for a building. He had seen structures in Philadelph

REDUCED
MEN'S SLEEVELESS SWEATERS
WERE 5.99
NOW 3.99
VALUES TO $8.99
FAMOUS BRANDS
MANY COLORS
SIZES S-M-L-X
SHOP FIRST AT THE ...
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 Main St.
OPEN DAILY 9-9, SATURDAY 9-5

COM
new a Intimate Atmo
a choice of sp
STILL THE STILL NEXT
COME IN,

Charles Towers, Sarah Brooks, and Peter Kurth in Friedrich Durrenmatt's Play Strindberg opening tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the round room at Billings. Play Strindberg will run through Sunday, November 10. Tickets are available at the door or daily in the main lobby, Billings Center. Student admission is $1.00.

Lyric Theatre To Perform "Gypsy"

Of the two hundred people who auditioned for the Burlington Lyric Theater production of "Gypsy," twenty were selected to perform this musical next week at the Flynn Theatre.

Directed by Dr. Thomas Geno (a faculty member of UVM's Romance Language department), this group of children, teens and adults will present the biography of the famed queen of burlesque, Gypsy Rose Lee. The plot of the musical revolves around two main characters, Rose, a divorcee who attempts to make her two daughters vaudeville stars, and Louise, the daughter who later becomes known as Gypsy.

Jennifer Miller, who plays Louise, commented on the professional and emotional friction between Rose and her daughter.

"In the play you can tell that Rose always wanted to be a star. But she never made it, so she pushed her two daughters into show business at a very early age. She, the children, and some other little girls travel around the country performing in vaudeville houses. It is exhausting and sometimes depressing, and at first, Louise doesn't want to have anything to do with it," Jennifer explained.

Louise's career is partly due to coincidence, and again to her mother's dominating force. One evening, the "Hollywood Blondes" (the name of Rose's vaudeville group) is accidentally booked into a burlesque house where one of the leading strippers is ill. Rose, of course, immediately volunteers Louise's talent, and subsequently watches her daughter become a queen of burlesque.

"The climax of the musical is when Rose performs a number entitled "Rose's Turn", Jennifer continued. "She starts to realize her daughter's success, and reflects upon her role as a mother."

There are many subplots reinforcing the continuity suggested in the main theme: Rose's unhappy love affair with Herby, the group's manager, the competition between Louise and her sister June, and the professional conflict between Rose and June.

Jennifer, a graduate of Appalachian State University in North Carolina, has studied dance for about eight years, and taught for two years in Birmingham, Michigan. Her role in "Gypsy" however is the second speaking part she has played in theatre. Jennifer's husband is a graduate student in the consulting teacher program at UVM.

The part of Rose, which is double-cast, is played by Nancy Smith and Joan Rinaud. Bee Ball plays the role of June, and Herby is played by Mike Strong.

"There are children ranging in ages from 10 to 14. It's amazing how many people are involved in this production. Everything is going smoothly and I'm really pleased with rehearsals. Not only is it a great theatre experience, but a fun way to meet people," Jennifer added.

In addition to having community-made costumes and sets, the Lyric Theatre will be accompanied by a group of local musicians directed by Steve Plumb, an employee for IBM. Gypsy is the second production to be presented by Burlington's Lyric Theatre. The first, How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying was presented last year in May.

Performances for Gypsy will be Thursday through Sunday, November 13-16 at 8 p.m. with a Saturday matinee at 2 p.m. Tickets cost $3, $4 and $5, except for opening night, which costs $7.50. This price includes champagne and hors d'oeuvres to be served after the performance. Tickets may be purchased at the Flynn Theatre box office or at Billings Center today and Friday.

And Architects —

by Mark Seralnick

One of the most exciting aspects of UVM's campus is surely its grand architecture. The College Row is an architect's delight possessing a noble mark of distinction. Although many students each day use these buildings, most are probably unaware of the history and style that are important in gaining a better understanding of the architecture.

The first building constructed on College Row is Old Mill. Although the plaque in the front indicates that General Lafayette laid the groundstone for the building in 1825, the structure we see now bears little resemblance to what it was in the nineteenth century. In 1805, the original Old Mill was finished and was located where the middle of the Old Mill is now. However, in 1824, a fire erupted and completely destroyed the building. Next, the university rebuilt the Old Mill, this time in three sections for reasons of fire safety and then in 1825 Lafayette laid the cornerstone. In 1846, the three separate structures were joined together and made the Mill one building. The original structure had a bell tower but this was replaced when V.P. Howard had the roof redone. The loss of the bell was lamented.

The name the "Old Mill" was probably used because the original structure was a type that was used for mills in the early nineteenth century. In the 1800's the Old Mill served as the complete building for the University housing, classrooms, and administrative offices were all found there. The architectural formula of the structure relates to the English architect Sir Christopher Wren's wide use of a cupola and two Project divings attached to the central structure (an 18th century style).

The Old Mill we see today is largely the result of J.P. Howard, who donated much money so that his wishes for the building would be realized. Hence, the Mill was given its Victorian look. The level of the floors was raised, the original dome and bell tower were removed and the roof pitch was increased. Also the front was renovated with a different color stone which made it more aggressive but the backside was left alone. Finally stained glass was placed in the chapel, which now serves as the John Dewey Lounge.

In 1896, Dr. Williams, an alumni of UVM donated the necessary funds for a science building. He had seen similar structures in Philadelphia and wanted that type of structure to be built with his money. The Philadelphia firm Williams Brothers were contracted for the job. A format was selected that was similar to the Old Mill in that one central base and two wings would be used. The consistent and strong effect of the science hall was achieved by using a special brick and framing the windows in terra cotta by a special firm from New Britain, Connecticut. The continous window arcades present a style of the Medieval precedent which requires great skill in brick craftsmanship. The top is finished in copper spires and a slate roof with gables providing the Medieval effect.

As for the interior, it was very advanced for its time. Reinforced concrete floors were used and wood was used sparingly to create a fireproof building.

Converse Hall was built in the late 1800's and if you can imagine the campus without the Shoeboxes and science buildings, Converse appeared very isolated and noble sitting on the hill, away from the main campus. The style relates to the Dutch Reanaissance 17th century with its strongly silhouetted gables. The use of grey stone also provided a contrast with the Old Mill with its brown brick obnstruction.

The elaborate curves of the gables at Converse make it a very fun building to view.

The construction of the Ira Allen Chapel, Waterman building, and the Robert Hull Fleming Museum mark the return to the classical campus. These buildings were begun after the 1900's and relate to the Early Republican Style (a neo-classical concern using Columns, cornices and other Roman architectural motifs.)

Many will agree that probably the greatest architectural delight at UVM is Billings Center. Originally conceived as a library, the present purpose of Billings is as a student center. Billings Library was built in 1883-86 and named for its donor Fredrick Billings, a native Vermonter from Woodstock and UVM graduate of the class of 1844. The story of why Billings was built the way it was is fascinating. Billings went West and made a fortune in the railroad business. By funding the building of a distinctive architectural landmark for his alma mater, Billings made a very demanding client for H.H. Richardson, the famous Boston architect, who found inspiration in Romanesque styles of 12th century France. His styles became so important that critics described his work as Richardsonian Romanesque.

Nearly $150,000 was spent in building Billings in 1883-86. Every penny was worth it. The indestructable solidity and romantic vision it has is a tribute to the great architect who designed it. Although squabbles between Billings and Richardson prevented the building from having a facade of monumental heights, the direct play of three linked spaces, each shaped for a particular function, was successful. Especially pleasing is the lofty, open-timbered, hannemer beamed ceiling and the monumental fireplaces carved in oak.

The exterior is made impressive through the use of gargoyles, carved capitals, rolls and soffits, and mosaics in geometric floral patterns done in stones of "Potomac red" in the entrance arch.

One disturbing factor about Billings is that Richardson died before its completion. Hence, the appearance of the Marsh Room is Richardsonian, but it lacks the grandeur the rest of the building maintains. Another disturbing point was raised in 1908 by the Cynic. The fact was

(continued on page nine)

THE SILVER KEG

★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★

MONDAY - LADIES NITE
UNESCORTED FEMALES FREE
TUESDAY - ½ PRICE NITE ALL NITE
WEDNESDAY
NO COVER CHARGE ALL NITE
THURSDAY - ½ PRICE ALL NITE
★ FEATURING ★
NOV. 4-9 HARPY
MON. NOV. 11-16
KNICKERS DOWN
MON. NOV. 18-23
DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE
NOV. 25-27 FRANK
NOV. 28-30 SECRET SAM
MON. DEC. 2 GREASE
DEC. 3-DEC. 7 BOLD EXPRESSIONS

RED DOG SALOON

Lower Church St.- 8649524
A Traditional Beverage and Entertainment Emporium Since 1965

This Week
DREAM MACHINE
Next Week
ORPHEULUS
Sunday Night
50¢ Cover
25¢ Mugs
Featuring
DOWNPOUR

COME SEE WHAT'S NEW
SIZZLING STEAK

new atmosphere new salad bar
new menu items

Intimate Atmosphere for a quiet drink and a delicious meal. We now have a choice of appetizers, fish specialties, fried chicken, and new juicier steaks.

STILL THE MOST REASONABLE DINNER PRICES IN TOWN
STILL NEXT TO MERRIL'S SHOWCASE I I&II
COME IN, SIT BACK AND RELAX TO A FINE MEAL FOR ALL!

SIZZLING STEAK
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

REDUCED
MEN'S SLEEVELESS SWEATERS
WERE 5.99
NOW 3.99
VALUES TO $8.99
FAMOUS BRANDS
MANY COLORS
SIZES S-M-L-X
SHOP FIRST AT THE ...
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 Main St.
OPEN DAILY 9-9, SATURDAY 9-5

durham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.

We Want You To Join Our Church As An
Ordained Minister
And Have The Rank Of
Doctor of Divinity

Kochalka Recruiting For Sierra Nevada Expedition

by Stephen W. Tanner

"Yes, my pack is an old Wrapper Nelson,' the kind they used in the war I bought it at a garage sale for $1. It works pretty well; we carry loads from 75 to 100 pounds.

"We start from the jeep trail at 2300 feet above sea level. We travel 30 miles in from there... 30 rugged miles. Base camp is at 12,500 feet. 30 miles in and 16,200 feet up carrying 75 to 100 pound packs.

"Yes, the kind of people I take with me are ..." he stops talking and a boy walks through the stairwell, the odds, "are crazy." He repeats his sentence, "Yes the kind of people I take with me are crazy."

Thus spoke "Crazy John" Kochalka who is now organizing his third annual expedition from the University of Vermont to the highest coastal mountains in the world, the Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta in Colombia, South America.

After that rigorous 30 mile hike, Kochalka makes his base camp on a plateau in the center of the range. Here, his group of 5 to 10 hikers store extra food and supplies. From this point, they will climb a variety of peaks, ranging from 14 to 18,378 feet.

Kochalka not only "collects peaks" in this fashion, but he has an ulterior motive as well for climbing on each of his expeditions. "Crazy John" collects spiders. He is working now, in preparation for his master's degree on zoology, on High Altitude Ecological studies planning a specialty in spider taxonomy. Tarantulas, as well as fabulous mountain landscapes in South America attract Mr. Kochalka.

During the dry season on his last expedition he sat on a mountaintop and watched a jungle valley that was clouded for seven days. He's going during the wet season this year and wants to do a little exploring in that jungle for tropical spiders. He says this trip will be a compromise between high peaks and rain forests.

Kochalka is a veteran UVM Outing Club stalwart and a graduate of NOLS (National Outdoor Leadership School). He has climbed in Wyoming, Montana, and Washington, in addition to everywhere in the east. When he had just returned from climbing Mount Popocatepetal in Mexico, he read about the Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta. It was then he decided to climb the highest coastal mountains in the world.

Climbing and spider collecting are not the only attractions the South American mountains hold. While hiking through the mountains his expeditions have encountered the Gogi Indian villages. Last year, Kochalka and company helped these Indians build a road.

"The men," Kochalka said, "chew cocaine and drink a good deal, while the women really know what's going on." During their visit one of the men had to be tied up because he was constantly fighting. Kochalka, after he returned to Vermont, came across an article in National Geographic with a picture of the same man in it, still tied up.

Traveling in South America has its dangers. One night Kochalka and a friend were jumped by a group of bandits while sleeping on a beach. Both managed to flee but only after the friend's thumb was cut by a robber's switchblade. In another incident, Kochalka had to escape a troupe of bandits armed with harpoons.

The trip will leave around March 1st and return near Aug. 1. But those who wish to go between times can arrange to be met in Colombia and then join the group in the mountains. The cost, depending on how long wishes to stay will be from $300-$600 (round-trip plane fare from Miami via Aerocondor Airlines and food included). Kochalka can be reached at his home on 172 Summer St. in Springfield, Vt., 05156, or after Mar. 1 in the Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta mountain range in Colombia, South America, via postal express.

Pre-Law Committee SPC Photo: Lew Comeau

Chess Column Makes Its Move

This is the beginning of a weekly chess column. Every week we will publish results of games played by Student Chess Association members. We will also include chess news, both local and national. The column will feature chess theory and answer any chess questions that readers may have. Send questions to: Chess Column c/o Student Chess Association, Box 99 Billings.

Today's games are taken from two different events that I've played in during the past year. I've put them together because as Black, I played an unusual defense against the Red (1N-KB3, P-KQ4 or N-KB3, N-KB 3). It is interesting to see how two different players of very different caliber handled the same defense. In both games I played 1... P-KB4 in response to 1...N-KB 3. This is the Dutch Defense which usually comes in response to 1. P-K4.

The first game is taken from the Vermont Winter Open played back in February. My opponent was Bill McGrath, a fairly strong class C player with a rating of 1480. I was in class E with a rating of 1469 but playing more like a Class D player at the time.

With this move, I'm hoping that he will play 9) PxQN3P, and I can play PxP, hitting with the backward pawn on K3.

I didn't want to lock the center with 14) PxP, 15) PxP. Instead I aimed to continue to kingside attack that is so characteristic of the Dutch Defense.

White – Bill McGrath	Black – Polly Peterson
1) N-KB3	1) P-KB4
2) P-KN3	2) N-KB3
3) B-N2	3) P-K3
4) 0-0	4) B-K2
5) P-Q3	5) 0-0
6) QN-Q2	6) P-Q4
7) R-K1	7) QN-Q2
8) P-K4	8) N-N5
9) P-K5	9) P-B4
10) P-KR3	10) N-R3
11) N-R2	11) P-KN4
12) QN-B3	12) N-B2
13) P-B3	13) P-N5
14) P-Q4	14) K-R1

It does avoid the problems of 18) P-KB 5 19) PxP, PxP; 20) BxP, QxB mate.

However, it does cause more problems as the text indicates:

15) B-K3	15) KR-N1
16) R-KB1	16) Q-B1
17) R-B1	17) Q-N2

The reasoning behind the sacrifice is clear. Had I played 18) B-R 3, he can block with 19) N-Q3. Having sacrificed the pawn, I was to break open his king side and now 21) N-Q3 is impossible because of 21) BXB mate.

18) N-K1	18) P-KB5
19) PxP	19) PxP
20) BxP	20) B-R3
21) B-N3	21) BxR
22) NxB

(continued on page eleven)

Albee Reappointed As Psych Consultant

Dr. George W. Albee, professor of psychology at the University of Vermont, has been reappointed as consultant in psychology to the Surgeon General of the Department of the Army.

Dr. Albee was notified of the appointment by Lt. Col. Richard E. Hartzell, psychology consultant, Department of the Army.

A member of the University faculty since 1971, Dr. Albee is a past president of the American Psychological Association and has published extensively.

He is a graduate of Bethany College and earned the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in psychology from the University of Pittsburgh. Bethany College has awarded him the honorary Sc. D. degree. In 1953-54 he served as Fulbright professor of Helsinki University in Finland. He was at Case Western Reserve University for 18 years as a professor of psychology before joining the UVM faculty.

UVM Pre-Law Committee Counsels Students

Five University of Vermont graduates now following careers in law counselled pre-law students at the University in two sessions on Monday, November 4.

The lawyers made a formal presentation at 4 p.m. in the Marsh Room of Billings Center, and were available for consultation at 7:45 p.m. in John Dewey Lounge of the Old Mill.

Gregory Mertz, president of the Student Pre-Law Association, said that organization and Dr. Lyman S. Gould of the political science department arranged the program to assist the more than 200 pre-law students at UVM.

Aim was to evaluate the undergraduate work of the students, and to give them an idea of what to expect both in law school and in careers following graduation.

Dr. Gould presided at the formal session. The speakers included Jerold E. Jacobson, a 1962 UVM graduate, of New York City; Paul D. Jarvis, '69, of Burlington; Ellen J. Musinsky, '72 of Boston, a student at the Northeastern University School of Law; Robert I. Richter, '69, a law clerk with Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun of the U.S. Supreme Court; Marilyn Austern Sloane, '65, of Hempstead, N.Y.

Church Street Offers Unusual Courses

(continued from page three)

7:30-10:00 p.m. 6 sessions $30.00

FENCING Bernard C. Desautels Nov. 6 - Dec. 13 Wed. & Fri. 5:30-7:00 p.m. 12 sessions $37.00

HATHA YOGA Karen M. Kovacs Nov. 6 - Dec. 11 Wednesdays 7:30-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $18.00

WAYS WITH WINES John A. Henning Nov. 6 - Dec. 11 Wednesdays 7:30-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $18.00

DREAMS: MESSAGES FROM OURSELVES David Sokel Nov. 13 - Dec. 11 Wednesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 5 sessions $20.00

INTODUCTION TO THE SPIRIT OF BUDDHISM AND INDIAN PHILOSOPHY Thierry de Dreyer Nov. 6 - Dec. 11 Wednesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY FOR THE SMALL BUSINESSPERSON: I. TECHNICAL ASPECTS Fred Hill Nov. 13 - 27 Wednesdays 7:30-10:00 p.m. 3 sessions $16.00

COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY FOR THE SMALL BUSINESSPERSON: II Visual Aspects Fred Hill Dec. 4 - 18 Wednesdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 3 sessions $13.00

WINTER BIRDS Fred Howe Nov. 7 - 21 Thursdays 9:30-11:00 a.m. 3 sessions $9.00

INTRODUCTION TO TRANSACTIONAL ANALYSIS Nancy and Ed Gurowitz Nov. 7 - Dec 12 Thursdays 7:00-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

GOURMET CHINESE COOKING Margaret Tong Berninghausen Nov. 7-Dec. 12 Thursdays 7:00-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $40.00

THE GREEKS HAD A WORD FOR IT (GREEK ETYMOLOGY) Robin R. Schlunk Nov.7-Dec. 12 Thursdays 7:30-8:30 p.m. 6 sessions $12.00

ARMCHAIR MOUNTAINEERING Daniel Laskin Nov. 7-Dec. 12 Thursdays 7:30-9:00 p.m. 6 sessions $18.00

ALCOHOL AND ALCOHOLISM: AN OVERVIEW Betsy Gentile Nov. 7-Dec. 12 Thursdays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

MAGIC WITH CARDS Ted Tiger Nov. 7 - 21 Thursdays 7:00-8:30 p.m. 3 sessions $9.00

STUFFED TOYS AND OTHER SOFT 3-D OBJECTS Beverly Red Nov. 8 - Dec. 13 Fridays 9:30-11:30 a.m. 6 sessions $24.00

THE SOUNDS OF JAZZ Ed Bemis Nov. 8 - Dec. 13 Fridays 7:30-9:30 p.m. 6 sessions $24.00

WORKSHOPS AND SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

Please register in advance for workshops by phone or in person.

URBAN PLANNING IN BURLINGTON: THE NOW AND THE MAYBE – 1st meeting, Thursday, Nov. 7, 7:30 – 9:30 p.m.

OPEN POETRY READINGS – R. Tinker Greene, Poets Mimeo Cooperative, Nov. 8 & Dec. 6 – Fridays, 7:30 – 10:30 p.m., No charge.

BLOCK PRINT YOUR OWN CARDS – Jim Cullins, Saturday, November 9, 9:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m., $9.00 (includes $3.00 lab fee for cost of materials).

THE ROLE OF CRAFTS IN THE BUILT ENVIRONMENT – Saturday, November 16, 9:30 a.m. – 4:15 p.m., $3.50

QUILTING WORKSHOP Kay Berger, Saturday November 23, 9:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m., $6.00.

LUNCH BUNCH FILM SERIES – Nov. 6 – Dec. 11 Wednesdays, 12:15 p.m., 6 films, No charge.

CORRECTION

The bottle redemption center at the Dental Hygiene Building listed previously in the Cynic were incorrect. They should be as follows:

Monday: 2 - 6 p.m.
Wednesday: 11 a.m. - 3p.m.
Friday: 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

UNIVERSITY STORE
GIANT BOOK SALE!
A FINE SELECTION OF PAPERBACK BOOKS
AT DRASTICALLY REDUCED PRICES
CLOTHBOUND BOOKS
STILL AT HALF PRICE
WHILE THEY LAST
UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

ELECTRONIC COMPONENTS
Be a lucky winner of a door prize. No purchase required.
PHOTOGRAPHY SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT
SAVE UP TP 50%
RAY SUPPLY INC.
PHOTOGRAPHY DEPT
GRAND OPENING SPECIALS
WEEK OF NOV. 11th-16th
RAP WITH THE HONEYWELL FACTORY SALES REPRESENTATIVE
FRIDAY NOV. 15th-11AM TO 9PM
VIS Visit With The Kodak Factory Sales Representative
Saturday Nov. 16th 10AM- 4PM
RAY SUPPLY INC.
204 Main St.
Burlington
DARKROOM PROCESSING
STEREO

Rising Earth Books
81 Main Street
Burlington, Vermont
05401
(Above The Ski Rack)

Vermont Yankee Threate

reprinted from the North Country Star

To say that the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Plant has problems is a gross understatement. Even Charles R. Ross, former Federal Power Commissioner and supporter of nuclear energy has stated that the Atomic Energy commission (AEC) should shut down Yankee and attempt to find out what is wrong with it. Yankee has gained national publicity as one of the two nuclear plants given a large fine for violation of federal safety rules.

Control rods are one of the prime safety factors. They are a combination ignition switch, accelerator and braking system – if any one of these failed in a car one would be in trouble, but in a nuclear power plant the results would be disastrous. These control rods have been a major headache for would be

The control rods contain a material made of boron carbide which absorbs neutrons - this helps stop or slow down the nuclear reaction. The boron carbide is held apart by spacers which in turn are held apart by crimps in the rod. It seems that one of the problems with the control rods, supplied by GE, has been that some are assembled backwards.

A spokesman for GE said that in as many as 10 nuclear plants, some of the control rods may be assembled backwards because "both ends look pretty much the same." He said "After all, it's hard to tell which way is right unless you label them." GE is a major supplier of nuclear fuel and plants!

This is not the only problem Yankee has had with parts supplied by GE. The first problem was with "hydration." The fuel pellets contained too much moisture which at high temperatures vaporized and ate through the lining of the fuel rods. This radioactive vapor then escaped into the atmosphere.

Another problem with the fuel rods that closed the plant all of last October and most of November is "densification." This problem, that is plaguing plants all over the country is not fully understood.

It seems that the fuel becomes more concentrated in certain areas causing "hot spots" in the core. Yankee has recently received fuel rods of a new design. Hopefully the plant won't encounter as many problems with these rods.

Yankee's reliability also seems to be a problem. After all, its purpose is to provide electricity, but it seems to spend a large part of its time shut down. The national average for useful time for a nuclear power plant is only around 54 per cent.

In the first 19 months of operation, Yankee had 17 major shutdowns. Two of the shutdowns were for tests of the plant and the plant's operators. The rest of the shutdowns were a result of accidents, faulty parts, corrections of dangerous or illegal conditions, and once because the plant was struck by lightning.

Yankee's safety also seems to be questionable. Federal law requires nuclear power plants to file reports of abnormal occurances when they are violations of technical or safety specifications.

In 1973, Yankee filed 35 such reports. One such report noted that the valve 10-25A, part of the low-pressure cooling system, failed for the third time.

If the reactor had been overheating at the time, the result might have been the first actual test of the Emergency Core Cooling System (ECCS).

Perhaps one of the most critical times came on the evening of November 7, 1973.

Workmen, while installing a security surveillance TV, unknowingly cut the power to a key safety device. Then a control rod was withdrawn next to one that was already partially withdrawn. This caused the nuclear reaction to speed up drastically. After two seconds the computerized controls signalled for a reactor shutdown. This even caused a severe outcry from the AEC and cost Yankee a $15,000 fine, only the second levied by the agency.

...Art

(continued from page seven)

that the library was already too small. However, adaptations were made and another fifty years were squeezed out of the Billings Library before Bailey Library was completed. Clearly, Billings is the key building on campus as far as being architecturally interesting. Just roam through the various sections: the apse, reading room, and entrance hall all hold a treasure of Richardsonian motifs as well as the Romanesque exterior.

The final scheme of UVM's architecture was decidedly broken with the appearance of the new buildings. Many of the new buildings have impinged on the older buildings but still College Row and the Green have retained much of their pleasing qualities. However, the dynamic plan for the Bailey Library and Cook Physical Science Building to create a mall with the buildings stressing an inner mall-type focus was a failure. By turning the library around, the scheme was denied because the vast body of student traffic directed to the backside Cook, not the front. This has resulted in little student traffic in the quadrangle.

Finally, the univers

AU
560 X 15 Sn FITS MOST VW
Includes: 8 new brake linings, 4 drums, rebuilt 4 cylinders.

P&G FOR DECO
P86 has a full line of metal CABINETS & WARDROBES including a bar with electrical connections & wood finish top.
PRICED FROM $29.8
WOOD BURNING STOVES or EXCELLENC PORTABLE ELECTRIC DRYERS values to $100– YOUR CHOICE $49.88
110 vol
5 lb capa
3 hour burning FIREPLACE LOG
REMEMBER P&G FOR: Paint, bicycles, clothespin, tool insulation, lumber. all sorts of thin
All prices are Cash & Carry – BankAmericard & Master Charge
OPEN FRIDAY 9:00 AM-9 PM, SATURDAY 8:30-5:0

Vermont Yankee Threatens Region

reprinted from the North Country Star

To say that the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Plant has problems is a gross understatement. Even Charles R. Ross, former Federal Power Commissioner and supporter of nuclear energy has stated that the Atomic Energy commission (AEC) should shut down Yankee and attempt to find out what is wrong with it. Yankee has gained national publicity as one of the two nuclear plants given a large fine for violation of federal safety rules.

Control rods are one of the prime safety factors. They are a combination ignition switch, accelerator and braking system — if any one of these failed in a car one would be in trouble, but in a nuclear power plant the results would be disastrous. These control rods have been a major headache for would be

The control rods contain a material made of boron carbide which absorbs neutrons - this helps stop or slow down the nuclear reaction. The boron carbide is held apart by spacers which in turn are held apart by crimps in the rod. It seems that one of the problems with the control rods, supplied by GE, has been that some are assembled backwards.

A spokesman for GE said that in as many as 10 nuclear plants, some of the control rods may be assembled backwards because "both ends look pretty much the same." He said "After all, it's hard to tell which way is right unless you label them." GE is a major supplier of nuclear fuel and plants!

This is not the only problem Yankee has had with parts supplied by GE. The first problem was with "hydration." The fuel pellets contained too much moisture which at high temperatures vaporized and ate through the lining of the fuel rods. This radioactive vapor then escaped into the atmosphere.

Another problem with the fuel rods that closed the plant all of last October and most of November is "densification." This problem, that is plaguing plants all over the country is not fully understood.

It seems that the fuel becomes more concentrated in certain areas causing "hot spots" in the core. Yankee has recently received fuel rods of a new design. Hopefully the plant won't encounter as many problems with these rods.

Yankee's reliability also seems to be a problem. After all, its purpose is to provide electricity, but it seems to spend a large part of its time shut down. The national average for useful time for a nuclear power plant is only around 54 per cent.

In the first 19 months of operation, Yankee had 12 major shutdowns. Two of the shutdowns were for tests of the plant and the plant's operators. The rest of the shutdowns were a result of accidents, faulty parts, corrections of dangerous or illegal conditions, and once because the plant was struck by lightning.

Yankee's safety also seems to be questionable. Federal law requires nuclear power plants to file reports of abnormal occurances when they are violations of technical or safety specifications.

In 1973, Yankee filed 35 such reports. One such report noted that the valve 10-25A, part of the low-pressure cooling system, failed for the third time.

If the reactor had been overheating at the time, the result might have been the first actual test of the Emergency Core Cooling System (ECCS).

Perhaps one of the most critical times came on the morning of November 7, 1973.

Workmen, while installing a security surveillance TV, unknowingly cut the power to a key safety device. Then a control rod was withdrawn next to one that was already partially withdrawn. This caused the nuclear reaction to speed up drastically. After two seconds the computerized controls signalled for a reactor shutdown. This even caused a severe outcry from the AEC and cost Yankee a $15,000 fine, only the second levied by the agency.

These are only some of the more obvious problems with Yankee. The word "lemon" has been used more than once in connection with it. A nuclear power plant is basically a big tea kettle. It consists of a large container in which the nuclear reaction causes intense heat, turning the water in the cooling system into steam.

The steam then drives the turbines which generate the electricity. Considering the hazards and problems with nuclear power plants, isn't this an environmentally economically expensive way to boil water?

For more information, or if you want to help in the effort to stop the construction of more nuclear power plants, contact VPIRG, 49 North Prospect, Burlington – 863-3435.

VPIRG Challenges New England Telephone Company

VPIRG Press Release

As a result of a State Supreme Court ruling which overturned an earlier ruling by the Public Service Board, Vermonters began paying 23 per cent more for their phone service.

The court, issuing its decision without explanation, threw out the PSB ruling which prevented the New England Telephone Company from putting its full rate increase into effect under bond.

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group has challenged the phone company's requested rate increases. VPIRG attorney Caroline Nickerson was instrumental in the PSB's decision last year which threw out the phone company's request for a rate hike. That case involved the phone company's failure to provide information explaining the relative costs of servicing different classes of customers.

New England Telephone Company has since filed another request for a rate increase. VPIRG is arguing in this case that the phone company has still failed to provide true cost studies that the PSB must have in order to set the telephone rates.

One provision that Nickerson is fighting is the proposed increase in the installation costs from $12 to $32.50. VPIRG feels that this increase in the installation costs would work a particular hardship on students and low income persons.

Some of the issues that VPIRG will raise before the Public Service Board include asking that Western Electric not be allowed to pass on costs to Vermonters which include profits set at a higher rate than the PSB allows the New England Telephone Company.

Western electric, although nominally a separate company, is owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company which also owns 85 per cent of the stock in NET.

VPIRG argues that since the companies are so closely interrelated profits by Western Electric in Vermont should not exceed what the PSB allows NET.

VPIRG will also ask that the telephone company provide low cost service based on the number of calls made. This service would allow elderly people who otherwise cannot afford a phone to keep in contact with needed services.

The PSB has granted the motion of VPIRG, Vermont Welfare Rights Organization and the Vermont Low Income Advocacy Council to hold public night hearings around the state so that consumers can testify concerning the rate increase.

VPIRG believes that there are many low income Vermonters who will be forced to give up their telephone service if the 23 per cent increase is allowed to become permanent.

In addition, the increase in installation fees from $12 to $32.50 would prevent many people from obtaining telephone service.

VPIRG hopes that many people will come to the state phone case hearings and let the PSB know how they feel about the rate increase.

...Art Wainwright on Architecture

(continued from page seven)

that the library was already too small. However, adaptations were made and another fifty years were squeezed out of the Billings Library before Bailey Library was completed. Clearly, Billings is the key building on campus as far as being architecturally interesting. Just roam through the various sections: the apse, reading room, and entrance hall all hold a treasure of Richardsonian motifs as well as the Romanesque exterior.

The final scheme of UVM's architecture was decidedly broken with the appearance of the new buildings. Many of the new buildings have impinged on the older buildings but still College Row and the Green have retained much of their pleasing qualities. However, the dynamic plan for the Bailey Library and Cook Physical Science Building to create a mall with the buildings stressing an inner, mall-type focus was a failure. By turning the library around, the scheme was denied because the vast bddy of student traffic is directed to the backside of Cook, not the front. This has resulted in little student traffic in the quadrangle.

Finally, the university spoofed in its renovation of the Royall Tyler Theatre. The economizing measure of using fake cobblestone and laying it horizontally will probably cost the school more in the long run for repairs. First, the cobblestone should have been laid closer together and in a circular manner. It is impossible to walk in the cobblestones with high heels due to the present spacing. This will also result in difficult snow removal in the winter and probably many cobbles will be chipped or broken by shovels. Economizing through cheap materials and lesser techniques is not the best method in the long run.

Hopefully, I've briefly stated what are the main architectural features of UVM. Unfortunately, I've left out some important buildings which bare description but the previously mentioned buildings give the reader a fair description of UVM's architecture. I am deeply in debt to Dr. Richard H. Jansen, Director of the Fleming Museum and Chairman of the Art History Department, who provided me with important information and insights to UVM's architecture.

(continued from page nine)

HEARTS and hand him right over to a young tightrope walker. When they see the two armies clash in their midst, they are charmed by the overacting. And soon Bates has a choise to make: whether to go loyally back to his regiment or throw in his lot with the loonies. Judith Crist said the movie is "a delightfully subtle satire."

Sometimes a Great Notion, starring Paul Newman, Henry Fonda, Lee Remick and Michael Sarrazin and directed by Paul Newman, is the Saturday night film. It will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30. This color film is a fast-moving modern adventure drama dealing with one of the lumberjack families in Oregon's timbrands who refused to succumb to the wishes of the local townspeople and join them in a strike.

On Monday at 7:30 in 103 Rowell the Czechoslovakia film The Shop on Main Street will be shown. This is a haunting film of an old Jewish woman living in occupied territory during the Second World War.

IRA Representatives Discuss SAGA Questionnaire

by Becky Bloch
and Margo Shapiro

The meeting opened at 7:15 p.m. in the conference room at Harris-Millis on Monday November 4th. Rich Warner, treasurer, representing SAGA said SAGA would be sending a questionnaire to all students living in residence halls regarding the billing system of additional coupon books for next semester. Each student will be allowed the opportunity to decide in advance how many coupons he wished to purchase for the semester. It was also announced that next semester unused whole coupon books may be redeemed for $27.50, which is only a $.50 loss as compared to the $3.00 loss this semester. Hopefully, this will encourage students to make better use of the advantages of the SAGA coupon system.

Ann Casavant, vice-president of IRA, is involved in contacting Resident Advisors regarding items donated by IRA for the use by a specific residence hall. They reported discovery of several pairs of snowshoes at Converse and a rumor of more snowshoes at Wright Hall.

A motion from the previous week was passed reimbursing the Living-Learning Center for losses incurred in the all-campus bike race.

IRA, SA, Pan-Hell, and Fraternity Forum will be involved in organizing campus activities for Winter Week. IRA hopes to sponsor a cross-country (actually cross-campus) ski race at night, the route to be lit with torches. IRA also hopes to repeat the successful Klondike Race.

This week, residence hall bathrooms will be decorated with the first issue of a weekly IRA newsletter. The idea behind this is to keep the student informed of IRA activities and activities occurring in residence halls throughout campus. To inaugurate the first issue, a contest is being run to find a title for the weekly publication.

A representative of the Bread and Law Task Force came to the meeting, to inform IRA of the reinstatement of the Breakfast program for needy children in local elementary schools. Many kids come to school hungry and the breakfast program is the only way they can have breakfast in the morning. SAGA has agreed to cooperate by having a special 6 coupon dinner once a month in a designated dining hall, the sixth coupon to be given to the program. A motion was made for IRA endorsement and was tabled until next week.

A committee was formed to look into a possible revision of the IRA Constitution which many representatives feel is too bulky and not relevant to the needs and operation of IRA.

The last item on the agenda was discussion of energy conservation during the fast approaching winter months. A representative of the energy commission asked for IRA endorsement of two requests to be made of residence hall students. He asked that students be reminded that lights not being used should be turned off and when the heat is on, windows should be closed. A motion was made that IRA support the energy commission and was tabled until next week's meeting.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:45 p.m.

Bake Sale

The senior class is looking for volunteers to donate food to our bake sale. Money made from this sale will be used for entertainment during senior week, the week between finals and graduation. So far, the senior class has very little money, we hope this bake sale will be one of the many successful fund raising events. Your help is needed. Anyone interested please call 656-3890 and ask for Judy, Sara, or Kim of the concert was a welcome change for the audience who had a hard time letting Cleo and the band leave. As a much appreciated encore, Cleo sang a selection of her favorite musical mistakes. This proved to be a delightful ending to the concert. She left the audience absolutely amazed as she walked off the stage singing clearly and strongly without the use of a microphone.

...Cleo Laine

(continued from page six)

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
Route 2, Williston, Vt. 862-7686
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 95 and 96's
24.95 inc. FET & mounting
VW BRAKE JOB $49.95
Includes: 8 new brake linings, 4 turn drums, rebuilt 4 wheel cylinders.
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

IT'S GET READY TO SKI TIME!
SKI TUNE-UPS $5.98
CROSS COUNTRY SKI TUNE UP!
Remove all excess wax & tar from skis
Sand Bottoms Smooth
Pine Tar botttoms (burning deep into pores)
Binding Check YOUR CHOICE
DOWNHILL SKI TUNE UP!
Edges Sharpened
Bottoms Flat Filed
Gouges, Scratches Filled
Edges Deburred
Bottoms Waxed
Binding Maintenance Check
THRU SATURDAY ONLY SALE!!!

	REG	SALE
Short Duroplast-KNEISSL	$135.00	$79.00
Short Magic-KNEISSL	$155.00	$89.00
RED STAR-KNEISSL	$185.00	$110.00
Racing team-KNEISSL	$210.00	$125.00
GK03 HEAD	$120.00	$60.00
HRP HEAD	$155.00	$99.00
HRP Comp HEAD	$205.00	$125.00
K2 THREE	$160.00	$99.00

ALL BASS CROSS COUNTRY EQUIPMENT 40% off
2 GREAT CROSS COUNTRY SKI PACKAGES
PACK I
Cross country skis-boots -poles-bindings & mount
REG. RETAIL VALUE $93.50
REG. Package PRICE $55.95
THIS WEEK $47.50
PACK II
Cross Country skis with Lignostone edges- boots- poles-bindings & mounts
REG. VALUE $104.50
REG. Package Price $74.95
THIS WEEK $67.50
Swiss Chalet
Open Daily 9 A.M.-9 P.M.
9-6 Sat.
878-8901

P&G FOR DECORATING DORM OR APARTMENT
P86 has a full line of metal CABINETS & WARDROBES including a bar with electrical connections & wood finish top.
PRICED FROM $29.88
MAPLE PREFINISHED DOOR BLANKS
Great for shelves, room dividers, desk tops, layout tables, 100's of uses!
Variety of sizes at reasonable prices
PRICED FROM $4.88
WOOD BURNING STOVES or EXCELLENCE PORTABLE ELECTRIC DRYERS
values to $100— YOUR CHOICE $49.88
110 volt, 5 lb capacity
TERRIFIC VARIETY OF FAMOUS NAME BRAND CARPET
All types, varieties, styles and prices!
★★ REMNANTS ★★ INSTALLED OR DO IT YOURSELF
3 hour burning FIREPLACE LOGS
REMEMBER P&G FOR:— Paint, bicycles, clothespin, tools, insulation, lumber- all sorts of things!!!!!
OPEN FRIDAY 9:00 AM-9 PM, SATURDAY 8:30-5:00
PLANT & GRIFFITH P&G

Ski lift
You planned this snow weekend with your friends ages ago. And nothing could make you change your plans.
Too bad your period couldn't have happened some other weekend. But you're not worried. You brought along Tampax tampons.
You won't have to give up one precious moment in that deep powder. You feel confident protected by Tampax tampons. They're softly compressed for the best possible absorbency. Worn internally, so Tampax tampons are comfortable and discreet. They give you protection you can depend on, whether on skis or toboggan.
Friends are waiting for you on the slopes. You won't have to disappoint them when you have Tampax tampons tucked discreetly into the pocket of your parka.

...Future Of Vermont Debated By Dartmouth Professor Meadows

(continued from page one)

seriously damage the quality of the state's environment. With this dilemma in mind, she envisioned for the audience from a managerial to a labor intensive economy so that only people who are willing to work hard are attracted to Vermont. Government is decentralized so that communities again control their own operation. Relying on "Yankee ingenuity," small towns move to a practice of regional self-sufficiency.

Meadows stressed the need to cut our reigns on the world's resources. "The U.S. consumes 8 times as much food as any other developed country and 20 times as much as any underdeveloped country," she added.

Dr. Meadows praised Vermont's state leaders as "the best of any state." Citing Land Use Planning, Act 250, the Bottle Ban, and the Capital Gains Tax as the most progressive environmental laws in the country, Meadows implied that Vermont has the resources and the potential to serve as a model to the U.S. of what a state can do for itself to cope with the economic crisis that now hurts it.

Meadows said "Vermonters are 'Common Sense' people" and if the had to choose any group to figure out how to deal with impending resource shortages, "this is the 500,000 I would choose," she declared.

Panel discussion followed Meadows' prepared statement. The panel consisted of local environmentally concerned individuals including Armand Beliveau, member, Executive Committee, Chittenden County Regional Planning Commission; Dr. Singe Betsinger, Director, School of Home Economics, UVM; Murray Bookchin, former director, Goddard College Social Ecology Program; Patti O'Brien, Chairperson, VPIRG Board of Trustees; and Robert Snyder, President Green Mountain Meadows (an ecologically oriented Development Corporation). Each panelist gave brief remarks.

Armand Beliveau, Burlington Planner, spoke with emphasis on the fact that any planning done for the future has to accomodate the present day situation. "No growth is impossible," he said. "Private Enterprise is around. Private Property is around." He believed that "smallness is beautiful" and wants to encourage growth (through private enterprise) in small nodes around the state." He pointed to the Transfer of Development Rights (TDR) which is a legal mechanism that allows private and public landowners to swap land holdings to provide better locations for such things as shopping centers and parking lots. This means, he said, has been the most effective tool in city planning.

Dr. Betsinger favored the advancement of creative education to provide an environmental consciousness for youth. Stressing the need for small decentralized governments involving community members in their processes. They should aim for regional self-sufficiency. She noted that she no longer needs to buy anything in a supermarket except milk, but that she is getting a cow.

Dr. Meadows

SPS Photo: Sherry Russell

On an ambivalent note the program ended. No real formal conclusions were reached, but the idea exchange session proved stimulating for the 200 participants. The program was sponsored by Planned Parenthood and the Environmental Program at UVM.

several possible futures for Vermont.

Meadows automatically ruled out two possibilities. "Vermont will not become a paradise," she said, "nor will it remain the same as it is now." She believed that "if any people can have a hand in the future of their own state, Vermonters can. It remains up to the state to determine what Vermont will look like in the year 2000."

For the purpose of discussion Dr. Meadows outlined four possibilities for the future of Vermont. They were briefly --

New Jerseyfication. This scenario envisions Vermont moving to an industry-oriented economy. Emphasis would be on productivity and contributing to the GNP. Possible industries would produce nuclear reactors and exploit Vermont's natural resources for production. This plan would make Vermont "unattractive," and reduce future immigration at the expense, however, of declining environmental quality.

Bar Harborization. In this plan Vermont would become the playground of rich Bostonians and New Yorkers. Second homes and recreational industries would dominate economic activity. Environmental quality would remain high, but would lose the diversity in its population because the state would be virtually financially inaccessable to middle and low income groups.

The North Dakota Plan. This vision depicts a Vermont buffeted by outside forces: Depression and rising oil prices make living difficult and undesirable in the Northeast. Vermont environmental quality would remain high because not much immigration would occur.

A Utopian Plan. Oil prices rise and depression occurs slowly over the next 20 years, but Vermonters form small independent companies utilizing Vermont's resources and marketing goods locally in the state. Vermont develops alternative energy sources and begins to grow its own food again. The economy switches greater communication between the academic community and local schools on environmental topics, he noted soberly that perhaps the "Ivy on our Ivory Tower is dying."

Murray Bookshin called out for a change in the attitudes people hold toward other people and their environment. He specified that the world we live in must be a more qualitative one. "We have to realize that women are personalities, not factories." He orated that "we should try to create an environment not for a treasure chest full of children but for our few treasured children." He declaimed the food we eat as "paper-mache garbage." On the subject of land use planning he believed "we can no longer regard the land as property to be bought and sold. We must regard it as sacred as the American Indian did before we stole it from him."

Patti O'Brien approached the problem from the point of view of manpower to effect change. "How do we involve more people?" she added. She declared this was the function of VPIRG. She referred to VPIRG's efforts in the fields of utilities, health care, housing, and availability of loans. She appealed for people to get involved and meet these problems on the practical level.

Robert Snyder, developer, emphasized the here and now as well. He said "we have a responsibility to provide housing at a reasonable cost and jobs for people who need work."

In the long question and answer period which followed the opening statements a noticeable diversion appeared in the panel members. Snyder and Beliveau had to defend themselves against the attacks of numerous audience members and Dr. Meadows, strongly flanked by the fiery Murray Boorchin.

Beliveau had said that "it takes a community crisis to get people involved in planning." Bookchin hammered at city politicians who he said "tell the public they don't take an interest in community planning and when they do become involved turn a deaf ear to their constituencies."

Bookchin concluded that change could not come about happily through the present system. Instead he said the system had to change entirely. "Government has to be disassembled and handed back to the people so they can become a part of it again, and no longer feel intimidated by confusing laws and politicians who blow in the breeze."

Dr. Meadows agreed with Bookchin. She proposed the way for true change to be inacted was for "millions of Americans to decouple from society." She suggested the formation of food co-ops and

Students Elected To Board Of Trustees

by Mary Gilbertson

Seven students were elected as representatives to the Board of Trustees by a roll-call vote at the Tuesday, November 5 meeting of the Student Association --Don Adler, Dan Haslam, Jim Hope, Fred Lux, Artie Miller, Jeryl Parade, and Eric Tabas.

These representatives have no vote in the various trustee committees by state law, but as Artie Miller put it "the more we make ourselves heard, the longer they will have to listen."

Jeryl Parade was the only female elected. She wished to be a representative because of academic concerns, i.e. the "Philosophy Four."

Dan Haslam was a representative on the Development Committee last year.

Fred Lux and Jim Hope are not S.A. Senators, but interested students who feel qualified to fill representative positions.

Don Adler and Eric Tabas have both been active in the S.A. and other student organizations in the past.

Secretary of Communications, Jim Breece, reported on the suggestion boxes-- "The Exchange" which have been place in buildings around campus. There has been some response and Breece is forming a committee to review all suggestions and present them to the S.A. Senate.

"The Exchange" is divided into five categories of interest: Residence halls and SAGA, Academic concerns, Administration, Student activities, and General comments and complaints.

"Exchange" boxes are located in Billings, Waterman, Harris-Millis, Wright, MAT, Simpson, and Christie. The boxes are there for a reason, use them; Counseling and Testing urges.

The Panhellenic Council was recognized (8-9) by S.A. after the representative reported that the Panhel constitution has been changed to abolish mandatory dues. Their stated purpose is "to maintain on a high plane fraternity life and interfraternity relations within our university; to further fine intellectual accomplishments and sound scholarship; to cooperate with the University Administration in the maintenance of high social standards; to be a forum for discussion or questions of interest to the university and fraternity world; and to compile regulations and standards governing rush, pledging and initiation on this campus."

S-16, an amended motion that enables certain officers (president, treasurer, secretary of communications, secretary of elections, secretary of student activities) to "submit motions to the Senate that are pertinent to their position" was passed.

THE DOCTOR'S
by Ar

QUESTION: I've been to my doctor for a lump in my breast. He confirms that it is there, but says "it's nothing to worry about." How does a doctor decide when to do a biopsy or if the lump is something to worry about? My doctor's statement "it's nothing to worry about" worries me.

ANSWER: Lumps in breasts are frightening, conjuring up immediate images of cancer. Yet, the overwhelming majority of breast lumps are not due to cancer but are due instead to benign accumulations of tissue, fluid (cysts), inflammations, injuries and normal anatomy.

A physician makes a decision about a lump based on a number of factors including whether the lump is in one breast or both and whether there is one lump or many lumps. The doctor also decides whether the mass is easily moved or whether it is fixed to tissue underlying it, the quality of the mass (soft, firm, fluid-filled) and where in the breast it is located. Factors such as a history of breast cancer in the family and changes in the appearance of the lump at different times during the menstrual cycle also guide the physician in determining the importance of the lump.

The age of the patient is also significant, breast cancer being unusual in women under thirty. A biopsy (surgical removal of a piece of tissue) is done whenever there is a slight possibility that the finding could be malignant.

The best protection against having an undetected breast malignancy is self examination. While malignancies are unusual in younger women, it is wise to begin to examine breasts on a monthly basis in late adolescence or early adulthood. In this way, the woman can become familiar with her normal breasts and form the habit of regular examination. Examination by a physician is also indicated on a regular basis and should be part of a routine check-up. The best way to learn how to examine one's breast is to have it demonstrated by a physician at the time of examination. Some guidelines follow.

The best time of examination is one week after menstruation begins. At this time the breasts are not swollen from hormonal influences and are generally not tender. The breasts should be observed in a mirror, first with arms at the sides then with arms above the head. Although one breast is usually slightly larger that the other (the left one) they should, by and large, be symmetrical and not have any puckering of the skin. While in a shower or bath, when the skin is slippery, the breasts should be felt all over with the flat fingers.

Following the wet exam, the woman should lie down and place one hand behind her head. With the other hand, the fingers and palm still flattened, she should feel the opposite breast moving her hand in a spiral direction swinging outward on the upper part of the breast and inward on the lower part of the breast. The other breast is then checked in a similar fashion. Checking while lying down with the arm tucked behind the head, the breast is flattened against the chest wall and lumps are more easily detected. The procedure should be repeated with the woman sitting. This makes it possible to be more accurate in checking the lower part of the breast. Any new lumps should be brought to the attention of a physician immediately.

QUESTION: I have a very serious but embarrassing question to ask. I would like to know if the penis can be enlarged by some form of plastic or reconstructive surgery or silicon injection without any after effects. I have heard that such work had been done on deformed penises but I want to know if it can be performed on an average sized penis and how much would such surgery cost?

ANSWER: I know of no reputable plastic surgeon or other type

REILLY TIRE COMPANY
FROM RECAPS TO RADIALS
WE HAVE IT
BE PSYCHED AND SET FOR THE SNOW!
Inverno etna
PIRELLI
Mohawk Storm Trac
ACCESSIBLE TO UVM
31 San Remo Drive
So. Burlington
(Behind Burlington Rent-All)
ACCOMPANIED BY A COPY OF THIS AD
Install and Balance Your Snowtires--$5.00

Enjoy our fabulous
CLAMBAKE
Special Nightly $5.95
Together Special
SURF n' TURF
$11.90 PER COUPLE
The Black Cat
160 BANK ST. ,864-9723

FREE BEAUTY LESSON.
Consultation & Demonstration on the care of SKIN & SCALP by a European Specialist.
Monday & Thursday evenings
Call 658-2770
for more information

"I'm Heading For Valuga Sports 2nd Anniversary Party"...!!
WED.-THURS.-FRI.-SAT.
Nov. 6 - Nov. 7 - Nov. 8 - Nov. 9
FREE $15.00 GIFT CERTIFICATES
WITH EVERY $100.00 PURCHASE
FREE BINDING INST
SPECIAL — JET STI
LIVE EQUIPMENT EXP WILL BE
★ Peter Clifford — For K-2 S
★ Hugh Henley — For Rossig
★ Gale Shaw — For Nordica
FREE X-COUNTRY POLES purchase of either X-C Skis or X-C
Valuga Sports
OPEN 9 to

The CORNER BOOKSTORE
BOOKWORM
... the bookend that adjusts automatically
Bookworm is an award winning one-piece spring steel bookend that easily holds up to 22" of books and adjusts automatically as books are added or removed. As good looking as it is practical, it is the perfect solution for bedside reading, cookbooks, desk reference books or wherever books are used. Available in several colors and styles and priced from only $5.95.
Church and College Sts.
Downtown Burlington
658-4554
the corner bookstore
"One-stop shopping for books, stationery and art supplies"

put a smile on your ass
An Introductory Special.....
All Jeans cords denims cabs
$9.99
'till Nov 11
J. Rickers
117 Bank St
(near Pine)

We're making sure that caring isn't just a memory. And every taste of Beechwood Aged Budweiser says so... And always will.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG
by Arnold Werner M. D.

QUESTION: I've been to my doctor for a lump in my breast. He confirms that it is there, but says "it's nothing to worry about." How does a doctor decide when to do a biopsy or if the lump is something to worry about? My doctor's statement "it's nothing to worry about" worries me.

ANSWER: Lumps in breasts are frightening, conjuring up immediate images of cancer. Yet, the overwhelming majority of breast lumps are not due to cancer but are due instead to benign accumulations of tissue, fluid (cysts), inflammations, injuries and normal anatomy.

A physician makes a decision about a lump based on a number of factors including whether the lump is in one breast or both and whether there is one lump or many lumps. The doctor also decides whether the mass is easily moved or whether it is fixed to tissue underlying it, the quality of the mass(soft, firm, fluid-filled) and where in the breast it is located. Factors such as a history of breast cancer in the family and changes in the appearance of the lump at different times during the menstrual cycle also guide the physician in determining the importance of the lump.

The age of the patient is also significant, breast cancer being unusual in women under thirty. A biopsy (surgical removal of a piece of tissue) is done whenever there is a slight possibility that the finding could be malignant.

The best protection against having an undetected breast malignancy is self examination. While malignancies are unusual in younger women, it is wise to begin to examine breasts on a monthly basis in late adolescence or early adulthood. In this way, the woman can become familiar with her normal breasts and form the habit of regular examination. Examination by a physician is also indicated on a regular basis and should be part of a routine check-up. The best way to learn how to examine one's breast is to have it demonstrated by a physician at the time of examination. Some guidelines follow.

The best time of examination is one week after menstruation begins. At this time the breasts are not swollen from hormonal influences and are generally not tender. The breasts should be observed in a mirror, first with arms at the sides then with arms above the head. Although one breast is usually slightly larger that the other (the left one) they should, by and large, be symmetrical and not have any puckering of the skin. While in a shower or bath, when the skin is slippery, the breasts should be felt all over with the flat fingers.

Following the wet exam, the woman should lie down and place one hand behind her head. With the other hand, the fingers and palm still flattened, she should feel the opposite breast moving her hand in a spiral direction swinging outward on the upper part of the breast and inward on the lower part of the breast. The other breast is then checked in a similar fashion. Checking while lying down with the arm tucked behind the head, the breast is flattened against the chest wall and lumps are more easily detected. The procedure should be repeated with the woman sitting. This makes it possible to be more accurate in checking the lower part of the breast. Any new lumps should be brought to the attention of a physician immediately.

QUESTION: I have a very serious but embarrassing question to ask. I would like to know if the penis can be enlarged by some form of plastic or reconstructive surgery or silicon injection without any after effects. I have heard that such work had been done on deformed penises but I want to know if it can be performed on an average sized penis and how much would such surgery cost?

ANSWER: I know of no reputable plastic surgeon or other type of physician who would undertake the job of enlarging a penis. No method I have heard of would result in an undamaged organ. I quite regularly receive letters from men concerned about penis size. Many men, regardless of penis size, would like to see it larger.

On checking my records, I have not received a single letter from a woman complaining about a man with a small penis. I am still firmly convinced that the vast majority of women are much more influenced sexually by issues that relate to the personality of the man than they are by the size or shape of his penis.

QUESTION: Could you please tell me the consequences of discontinuing the use of thyroid medication a year after having half of my thyroid removed surgically. What could happen physically, emotionally, and intellectually because of discontinuing the medicine and what is the least of the consequences of discontinuing the medicine?

ANSWER: Although the problem you described is certainly not common, it reflects a large series of letters I have received indicating substantial confusion about medical conditions or treatment that was prescribed. One of the basic tasks of the physician is to make sure that the patient understands what he or she is doing and understands the use of any medications or treatments that are prescribed. In other words, a large part of a physician's work involves getting patients to engage in particular behaviors or to modify their behaviors for the sake of restoring or maintaining health. We are often very weak in this area of our work.

Thyroid medication is prescribed because of a deficiency in the amount of thyroid hormone produced by the person. In cases where the thyroid is removed surgically or its function impaired chemically, the person is often given thyroid medication to make up for this induced deficiency. Therefore, this is not a medication that a person stops taking when they feel better; this is medication which replaces something that is missing.

The consequences of stopping the medicine will be decreased energy, slowed thinking, possible depression, roughening of the skin and thickening of the hairs, increased weight, discomfort in cold weather and a variety of other symptoms reflecting the changes in metabolism that occurs with hypothyroidism.

QUESTION: I have an overly sensitive penis. I get an erection by just thinking the wrong thoughts or looking at a picture of a nude girl, no matter where I am. All I have to do is hold hands with my girlfriend and up it goes. It's very embarrassing for me and makes my girlfriend very uneasy.

Is there anything I can do about it? Do female hormones help?

ANSWER: This is a complex psychophysiologic question. The problem is not that your thinking the "wrong thoughts" but that you think the thoughts you have are wrong. Part of the nature of "wrong thoughts" is that they have a persistent and compelling quality. It is perfectly normal to be sexually aroused by arousing thoughts or pictures.

Some men are much more sensitive to psychological and physical stimulation than others and younger men are much more sensitive than older men. The situation you describe does have the potential for being embarrassing even though normal, and it is something that has been experienced by the majority of men. In fact, there are many men who would be happy to exchange their lack of responsiveness for your over-responsiveness.

.....Chess Column

(continued from page eight)

22) KxB is safer since it frees all of his pieces from the indirect pins. It also provides his kings with escape via K2.		22) QR-K
	23) Q-R4	23) R-Q1
	24) QxP	24) P-R4
	25) Q-R6	25) P-R5
	26) B-B4	26) B-H6
	27) B-K3	27) BxB
	28) NxB	28) N-N4
	29) N-H4	29) KR-B1
	30) Q-K2	30) R-B2
	31) N-Q5	31) P-B6

Taking time to seal off the queenside, and preventing a counter play there.

	32) N-N4	32) R/1-KB1
	33) R-KB1	33) N-B6ch.
	34) BxN	34) RxB
	35) K-N2	35) Q-N4
	36) N-B2	36) R/1-B6
	37) N-K1??	37) RxN ch.

Pressed for time, he overlooks my sacrifice. At first glance it looks like he wins back his rook and goes into a favorable end game two pawns up. 37) N-K3 holds the position because then 37) RxxNch. doesn't work.

	38) PxR	38) QxP ch.
	39) K-R2	39) R-R6 mate.

There is no way to refute the sacrifice 39) KxR doesn't work because of Q-B5 mate.

The UVM Chess Club held an USCF Rated Tournament Sat. and Sun. Oct. 26 and 27. The purpose of this tournament was to determine who will go to Kentucky as the UVM Chess Team if we can get the money through fund raising or S.A.

Don't forget Student Chess Association meetings are every Monday night at 7:30 in B132 Living/Learning. Everyone is welcome to play. S.C.A. dues are only fifty cents for the year.

...Student Reps To Board Of Trustees

Women's Caucus

The motion to allocate $218 to the Women's Caucus was passed. This money will go towards supplies and operating expenses. The Women's Caucus is planning to bring a continuous series of speakers to campus who would be of particular relevance to women's lifestyles today.

New Business and Announcements

Larry Abel moved to allocate $856 to keep Billings Center open on Saturdays.

Pat Black moved that the new policy on Student Organizations be accepted.

The Gymnastics Club was allocated $875 of their requested $1,290 on recommendation of the Finance Committee. The money is to go towards purchasing equipment and uniforms and judging fees.

Discussion of this allocation centered around whether or not it was the S.A.'s responsibility to fund athletic clubs for equipment and etc. The Gymnastics Club has tried several times to become recognized as a varsity sport by the Athletic Department and the Board of Trustees.

Peter MacAusland, S.A. President, speaking for the Student Coalition is looking for help in organizing a book co-op and exchange in Billings Center.

S.A. meetings are held every Tuesday night at 7:30 in North Lounge at Billings Center. Student attendance is welcomed.

The request by the LaCrosse Club, made by Sheldon Roesch, for an additional $300 was denied. The Finance Committee recommended loaning them the money to kick off their fund drive.

...Election Results

incumbent Kimberly Cheney by a margin of 1 per cent. Diamond had 48 per cent, Cheney 47 per cent and Liberty Unionite Nancy Kaufman had 5 per cent.

In the race for Auditor of Accounts, Incumbent Alexander Acebo is the only Republican holding a lead out of the four contested offices. Acebo had 49 per cent, Democrat Fred Rankin had 45 per cent and Liberty Unionite James Roach had 6 per cent.

The race for Treasurer has Democrat Stella Hackel edging incumbent Republican, Frank Davis by 49 per cent to Davis' 46 per cent. Liberty Union candidate Ron MacNeil had five per cent.

All four of these contests will be decided by the Vermont House of Representatives, Deputy Attorney General Benson Scotch said.

SNOW TIRES!!!

Complete line of SNOW TIRES -new and retreads.

All UVM students and Faculty get 10% discount with this ad.

E&E TIRE CO., INC.
152 RIVERSIDE AVE.
864-7759

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Route 7 South
LARGEST SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

"I'm Heading For Valuga Sports 2nd Anniversary Party"...!!
WED.-THURS.-FRI.-SAT.
Nov. 6 - Nov. 7 - Nov. 8 - Nov. 9

FREE $15.00 GIFT CERTIFICATES WITH EVERY $100.00 PURCHASE

FREE LIFT PASSES
BOLTON VALLEY, GLEN ELLEN, SMUGGLER'S NOTCH SKI AREA.

FREE BINDING INSTALLATION
On any skis purchased during ANNIVERSARY DAYS.

SPECIAL — JET STICKS $5.00 Reduced from $13.00. As Long As Supply Lasts.

LIVE EQUIPMENT EXPERTS & REPRESENTATIVES WILL BE HERE ON FRIDAY
★ Peter Clifford — For K-2 Skis, Boots & Poles — Marker Bindings.
★ Hugh Harley — For Rossignol Skis, Kerma Poles, Trappeur Boots.
★ Gale Shaw — For Nordica Boots, Volkl Skis, Look Bindings.

FREE X-COUNTRY POLES — 1 pair of aluminum poles with any purchase of either X-C Skis or X-C Ski Boots (Sole Boots & Skis excepted). (while They Last)

DOOR PRIZES
• Rossignol Swiss made ski-wrist watch — from Rossignol Ski Co., Williston, Vt.
• Rossignol Ski Bag • Rossignol Gloves
• Ski tune-up given away to 3 lucky winners.
Valuga Sports refinishing expert Pete Ball makes old ski bottoms look & feel like new in filling gouges with P-tex, flat filing bottoms, sharpen edges and buffing in wax.
• SKI WEEK PACKAGE AT GLEN ELLEN - Includes 1½ Hour Ski Lessons Per Day — $50.00 Value.
Sale Skis & Ski Packages Excluded.

Valuga Sports
1350 South Willard St.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-6561

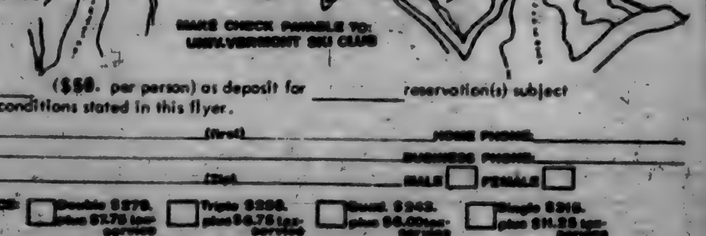
OPEN 9 to 9 during Anniversary Days • Bank Americard • Master Charge

$259.*
UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT
SKIS
ASPEN
JANUARY 4th-11th

—Round trip charter via TWA 707 to Denver
—Charter bus transfers to and from Aspen.
—7Nights accomodations at the Continental Inn... located in the heart of Aspen within 2 minute walk to major lift... Heated Pool... Saunas...
—Wine and Cheese Picinic on the mountain
—Professionally supervised ski races for your group.

Lift Ticket Option:(all area) $60.
6 DAYS. Be smart. Use your ski lift ticket each day. Don't throw away your ticket. Do it now and we will issue your ticket at your hotel upon your arrival.

$278.Two to a room
$258.Three to a room
$243.Four to a room
$315.Single



Robert Kornfield
343 College St.
Burlington, Vt. 05401
862-6119

MAKE CHECK PAYABLE TO: UNIV.VERMONT SKI CLUB

Enclosed is $ _____ ($50. per person) as deposit for _____ reservation(s) subject to the terms and conditions stated in this flyer.
NAME: (last) (first) HOME PHONE:
ADDRESS: BUSINESS PHONE:
(City) (Zip) MALE ☐ FEMALE ☐
ROOM PREFERENCE: ☐ Double $278. plus $1.75 per person/day ☐ Triple $258. plus $4.75 per person/day ☐ Quad. $243. plus $6.00 per person/day ☐ Single $315. plus $11.25 per person/day
☐ I desire to purchase in advance a 6 day all area lift ticket $60.
$50. per person deposit is due no later than Nov. 11, 1974. Reservations are taken on a first-come, first-serve basis. After allotment is filled all reservations are on a wait-list basis. To ensure a reservation we suggest deposit be sent immediately.
Full refunds will be made on cancellations received on or before Dec. 3, 1974
No refunds will be permitted on cancellations received after Dec. 3, 1974.. unless applicant can find a qualified replacement
Signature

CONTACT: Rob Kornfield-862-6119 343 College St. Burlington, Vt. 05401
Ed Sall 656-4394 E-151 Living & Learning Center U.V.M.

S.A. Films Presents:

The selection of films for this week begins Thursday, November 7, with Oklahoma starring Gordon MacRae, Shirley Jones, Rod Steiger, Eddie Albert and James Whitmore. The film will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30. This is the great Rodgers and Hammerstein musical classic which created such a sensation on the Broadway stage and looms even larger and lovelier on the screen. The great dream ballet, the rollicking, rousering "Farmer and the Cowboy" production, "Kansas City" and "Many a New Day" are the dance-and-music extravaganzas that set a new high and a new style in musical numbers. The color, the photography, the music, the ballets -- the great charm, warmth and humor of the story -- have made this a theatrical landmark and a great theatre and film classic of all time! The film is 2½ hours.

Friday night brings to UVM the film many people have been waiting to see all semester. This film was scheduled for earlier in the semester but was cancelled because it was opening in a local theater. But finally King of Hearts comes to UVM for $1.00. It will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 9:30. King of Hearts is a color film, made in 1967, a French film with English titles. The cast includes Alan Bates, Genevieve Bujold and Micheline Presle. It is near the end of World War I, and logic is not what it once was. Sent into a small French village with a box of explosives and a cage of carefully trained carrier pigeons, Private Alan Bates is somewhat surprised by what he finds. The citizens have fled and unlocked the gates of the local insane asylum before they went. Now the inmates, unconscious of anything but their own imaginations, are having a fine time dressing up, parading and generally doing all the things sane people are much too busy to enjoy. When they see Bates, they dub him their KING OF

(continued on page nine)

Ali Beats Foreman

by Gregory Katz

The moon was beaming down with a strange intensity as the fight crowd gathered outside Flynn Theatre for their connection to the African continent and the new installment of the continuing saga of Muhammed Ali. In the full moon night and the anticipation and pre-fight chatter lay Muhammad's mystery. Bouncer-suited middle-agers gulped Scotch in B. T. McGuire's wondering if Muhammad would get his head cracked in the first round. The flannel crowd at Millard Fillmore drank pitcher after pitcher trying to picture the crazy mid-evening moon across the world in Zaire. And I was in the middle, hoping against hope that Ali had one more surprise in his soul, another night of awesome power and playfulness. Yet it seemed too much to ask, ten years since he felled Sonny Liston, three years since his first defeat, and at least that long since he had really punched anyone with his magic piston jab.

Finally the last drink was down and I went to the theatre alone. The Flynn was packed to the rafters; paunchy businessmen, ex-Golden Gloves champs from Winooski, young black men, scruffy Ali freaks, everyone blowing their dough joyfully. Up front a scientific marvel looking like a squat little rocket, actually the closed circuit connection to Zaire. People are talking and eating and everyone's tense. Ali enters the ring and the Flynn explodes in cheers.

The fight starts. Ali looks slow at first... Foreman a tower of strength, crowd tense fearing Ali will be clobbered, but wait... two minutes into round one comes the jab... straight and true and blindingly fast... Foreman surprised and the round ends... round two a repeat: Foreman strong at first, seems to menace Ali with huge swinging flats, but before the end comes Ali's jab... just two or three but each one snaps Foreman... the pattern is set... each round finds Foreman cornering Ali on the ropes... pounding him in the body... the crowd silent and fearful that Foreman will land his famous one-punch knockout ... Ali will spend two minutes absorbing these blows but then he comes off the ropes and throws onetwothree quick punishing jabs and I find myself leaping in the aisles... the Flynn is a madhouse at the sight of Ali coming off the ropes looking so strong and loose and indestructible... it becomes evident that Foreman is stunned and losing control... in the fifth he punches Ali wildly for two and a half minutes and then Ali is after him with frightening speed and power... after this, it is clear that Ali is not only hurting Foreman with his fists but is completely blowing his mind... Foreman is hitting the man at will yet doing no harm... in the sixth and seventh rounds Foreman looks wild and manic while Ali remains poised.? in the eighth Foreman is clobbering Ali on the ropes for the whole round, but wait... with ten seconds to go, Ali explodes, a left jab quick another and right one more left and Foreman just floats to the canvas... it took eight seconds and the Flynn is ecstatic-aisles filled with jumping lunatics screaming Ali! Ali! Ali! and the ring fills with madmen eight thousand miles away.

The sense of release is incredible. Grown men jump up and down in the aisles. I sit awed in front of the screen with my heart pounding watching a replay of the knockout. Ali wasted no motion or effort, just quick short punches. And the strange joking Black Muslim wildman egotistical saint has won the crown white America stripped from him back in the sixties. And Burlington is filled with dazed disciples who walk away from the fight near tears at the skill and purpose Muhammed showed us that night.

News From The Slopes:A Preview

by Jeff Green

As October draws to a close, the UVM Ski Team enters its last month of a continuous fall training program. Anticipation is growing, and the team is shooting to at least match, if not better, last year's performance of the third best college team in the nation. This year our chances of winning it all are better than ever.

To aid the team this year we have several new factors. Perhaps most notable is the return of Mickey Cochran as Alpine coach. He took last year off to coach the U.S. National Team. Certainly he has got to rank as one of the best Alpine coaches anywhere, and everybody concerned will benefit from his years of experience and know-how. Coaching the women's team will be his daughter Barbara. She has been a member of the U.S. team for many years and has scored many great achievements for herself and for her team. Mickey's other children, Bobby (recently turned pro-skier), Marilyn (retired U.S. Team member) and Lindy, who is still currently on the Team, are excellent examples of his abilities as a coach. All are either part or full time students at UVM, depending on the year.

Helping him as assistant Alpine Coach will be Dave Hubbard. Dave was a top skier for many years and has a lot to offer, thus rounding off the coaching staff quite well.

In the last few years our strongest event has been jumping (although we are developing more depth this year than any one previous in all three). Once again this will be spearheaded by Petter Kongsli. Conservatively rated as one of the top 20 in the world, he has won 23 out of his last 27 competitions in the U.S. Anyone who has not seen him jump is missing quite a thrill; although our jump in Williston has been hampered by poor snow the last few years. Backing up Kongsli will be Trygve Roiseth, another winner, Tommy Lance, Tom Oddy and Joey Lamb.

Returning to the cross-country team will be Arne Lien after a year off. He was consistently winning most of the races he was in two years ago and certainly ranks in the same class as Kongsli. Most of last year's team will be skiing along with him including Trygve Kjoseth, Morten Gaarrd, U.S. Team member Stan Dunkley, and Joey Lamb. New runners will include Dave Lavoie and Grant Donovan. Cross-country is considered the most gruelling for the run an average of 9 miles every race. Needless to say it requires great dedication.

Lastly, there is the Alpine team consisting of slalom, giant slalom, and downhill. In this category we have developed great depth, including some of the best in the east and a few working the Can-Am level. All of last year's team will be returning, consisting of Co-captain Dick Erdman, Chris Braun, Kirk Dice, Bill Rathbone, and Brian Semlin. New skiers to the team this year will be "Auda" Bruce, Brooks Dodge, Jeff Darrow, Peter Teasdale and Greg Bartlett. Many are Can-Am veterans and have the capability of winning any given race. There are many more fine new skiers but space is short and it is too early to speculate on any "hot" new stars.

This article would not be complete without thanking the generous support given by the "Friends of UVM Skiing." They are doing their best in the public relations and fund raising department and it is greatly appreciated.

If the team can avoid many of last year's problems (injuries, faulty equipment, poor snow and mononucleosis) they will be a team to be reckoned with, not for the division II championships, but the number 1 team in the nation. So keep your ears and eyes open and give them some support when you can.

They are also running a raffle with some amazing prizes. Tickets are available from team members or at Patrick Gym. And don't forget their annual ski movies Nov. 12.

PFG-Schedule

Weekend of Nov. 8, 9, 10

FRIDAY, Nov. 8
GYM – Fac. – Staff Recreation, 7 – 10 p.m.
POOL – Fac. – Staff Recreation, 7 – 10:30 p.m. (7 – 8 under 15)
RINK – Fac. – Staff Recreation, ice not ready.
TRACK – Fac. – Staff Recreation, 7 – 10:30 p.m.
SATURDAY, Nov. 9
GYM – Student Recreation, 1 – 5 and 7 – 10 p.m.
POOL – Student Recreation, 1 – 5 and 7 – 10 p.m.
RINK – Student Recreation, ice not ready.
TRACK – Student Recreation, 1 – 5 and 7 – 10 p.m.
SUNDAY, Nov. 10
GYM – Varsity B.B. 2:30 – 4:30 p.m., Student Recreation, 1 court, 1 – 5 p.m.
POOL – Student Recreation, 1 – 5 p.m.
RINK – Student Recreation, ice not ready.
TRACK – Student Recreation, 1 – 5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 3069.
MONDAY through FRIDAY
POOL – 8:30 – 10:30 p.m. Students.
OTHER FACILITIES – 8 – 9 p.m. Students
These periods may be superseded by varisty activities or special events.

Schwartz On Sports

(continued from page fourteen)

the running game has lacked consistency. McCallister's biggest game has been 56 yards and many times Bateman is the leading ball carrier.

As the Cats start to look to the future the keys to success are evident. They need more meat on defense to stop the running game and more depth in the offensive backfield. A big, fast runner should be a recruting priority. Even one runner like that would effectively augment the Bateman passing abilities. Eventually, the rebuilding process must end because it seems that UVM has been rebuilding for five years. The coaches must count on the talent they have and let the freshmen and sophomores gain experience.

Finally, one team that does not make headlines but had the best record was the cross country team. They finished second in the Codfish Bowl race and the Yankee Conference championships.

The Cross Country team has been led by the running of Mike Berry and Bob Graves. In dual meets, they lost but two, and continually placed four or five runners in the top seven of each meet.

In Yankee Conference meets they proved their talents as in the defeat of the UConn harriers. Their second place finish this past weekend was a further indication of their capabilities. From here the Cats head to the New England finals against the best teams in the Northeast such as Providence and Springfield.

And as we reflect on these past performances the future will usher in the basketball and hockey seasons. The hockey team will play an exhibition game against Sir George Williams of Canada on Saturday at Gutterson and then open the real season against RPI in a few weeks. Their 0-4 record out West is no indication of what the team can do.

The basketball team has started intrasquad scrimmages around the state and will open their season too. They suffered a big blow when swing man Bernie Palmer hurt his hand. He will be out for four to six weeks. But, Coach Salzberg will be able to find out how much depth his squad really has if it can replace an experienced player like Palmer.

As with all sports at any time of the season, a little hindsight, prognostication, and overall analysis, lets us see just what the teams are up to. And at UVM there are many teams with which to gaze at through a crystal ball. Hopefully, I have added a little common sense and expertise to the gazing.

Bandanas
HANDKERCHIEFS
NECKERCHIEFS
& KERCHIEFS
You've seen 'em in RED & BLUE... Now get colors!! 24" square 100% cotton-printed both sides ...in an assortment of: TAN MAROON-YELLOW-ORANGE & OLD TIME RED & BLUE
½ Doz. $4.95, Dozen $8.95 POSTAGE INCLUDED
FACES OF EARTH
MAIL ORDER, INC.
150 N. PLEASANT ST./AMHERST, MASS. 01002
Our Price
No Explanations Necessary (Im...)

M.
12 TPH
science and language majors
At NSA, our success depends on yours.

ICE-NINE
Leather Shop
&
Craft Parlor
Route 2 Jonesville, Vt
(3 miles past Richmond on Williston Rd)
Hours Noon - 7:30 Sun-Thurs at the Farmer's Market Fri-Sat 9-6
Custom Leatherwork, Moccasins, Leatherclothing, Bags, Belts, etc., plus batik, Pottery, Photography, wooden toys, Needlepoint, Knitting, Woodwork, Jewelry

Don't ask WHY be an Edmundite Priest or Brother, ask WHY NOT be an Edmundite!
For free information write:
Edmundite Admissions Office
Enders Island
Mystic, Connecticut 06355

Want to give your dorm or apartment some WARMTH?
Come see the plants and decorative planters at Plants Plus
23 Park St.
Essex Jct.
10% DISCOUNT TO UVM STUDENTS
(Please bring your ID's)
Indoor Foliage in all shapes & sizes.
Terrariums and all it takes to plant your own.
Pots from clay to copper crocks, baskets, gazebos, dried flowers
PLUS MUCH MORE!!!!
Hours: Mon-Thurs. 9:30-6:00
Fri. 9:30-7:00
Sat. 10:00-5:00 TEL. 879-7434

The Rugby teams line up. UVM is in the stripes and not the guys with their eyes closed in the middle of the picture.
SPS Photo R. R. Lee

Irish Beat Rugby Cats

The University of Vermont Rugby team was defeated Saturday by the Montreal Irish, 9-3 at Archie Post Field. The Irish, who are consistently one of Quebec's leading rugby teams, were able to dominate most of the first half with a superior passing and kicking game.

The Irish scored midway in the half when their backs were able to break through Vermont's centers and scored on a four point try. The two point conversion was also successful.

UVM was later able to attack into the Irish end of the field. The Vermont squad was awarded a penalty from 12 yards in front of the goal. They declined a three point penalty kick and attempted to run the ball across for four points. Vermont failed on the attempt. This proved costly as the Irish regained possession and were able to again attack into UVM territory.

With one minute remaining in the half, the Irish were awarded a penalty kick that was converted to make the score at halftime, Irish 9, UVM 0.

The second half saw Vermont play much more aggressively. The forwards attacked much more strongly. Ten minutes into the half, UVM tallied their only score when Marcel Bergeron kicked a 28 yard drop goal. Vermont had various other opportunities to score but lost momentum with numerous penalties for offside play.

While UVM did lose the game it possibly won some satisfaction from the fact that they were able to play well against a team that had beaten Vermont in the past by substantial margins. UVM demonstrated improvement in its ability to play against strong competition.

Ski Movies To Be

On Tuesday November 12 at 8:00 p.m. the University of Vermont Ski Team will be presenting four ski films. These will be shown in Patrick Gym. Admission is $1.00 and there will be four door prizes. The movies are Go For It, A Day of Glory, Spider and the Frenchman, and K-2 Shorty. Go For It just received 1st prize at the New York Film Festival. A Day of Glory is a newly released film on the '74 World Championships in St. Moritz, Switzerland. It shows dynamic

Tilting At Windmills

GIANT 40% "PRE-CHRISTMAS" SALE
UNORTHODOX? -
SURE, BUT WHY NOT?
EVERYONE HAS A FEW "SPECIAL" PEOPLE ON THEIR GIFT LIST, AND WE'RE FRANKLY OVERSTOCKED WITH SOME VERY "SPECIAL" CUSTOM FRAMED GALLERY POSTERS.
YOU CAN HELP US REDUCE THIS INVENTORY, AND FILL YOUR LIST AT A WHOPPING 40% SAVING.
A VERY PERSONAL GIFT THAT SAYS "I CARE"
ONE WEEK ONLY
NOVEMBER 11 THROUGH 16
100 DORSET STREET
SOUTH BURLINGTON 862-6100

The Rugby teams line up. UVM is in the stripes and not the guys with their eyes closed in the middle of the picture.
SPS Photo: R. R. Law

Irish Beat Rugby Cats

The University of Vermont Rugby team was defeated Saturday by the Montreal Irish, 9-3 at Archie Post Field. The Irish, who are consistently one of Quebec's leading rugby teams, were able to dominate most of the first half with a superior passing and kicking game.

The Irish scored midway in the half when their backs were able to break through Vermont's centers and scored on a four point try. The two point conversion was also successful.

UVM was later able to attack into the Irish end of the field. The Vermont squad was awarded a penalty from 12 yards in front of the goal. They declined a three point penalty kick and attempted to run the ball across for four points. Vermont failed on the attempt. This proved costly as the Irish regained possession and were able to again attack into UVM territory.

With one minute remaining in the half, the Irish were awarded a penalty kick that was converted to make the score at halftime, Irish 9, UVM 0.

The second half saw Vermont play much more aggressively. The forwards attacked much more strongly. Ten minutes into the half, UVM tallied their only score when Marcel Bergeron kicked a 28 yard drop goal. Vermont had various other opportunities to score but lost momentum with numerous penalties for offside play.

While UVM did lose the game it possibly won some satisfaction from the fact that they were able to play well against a team that had beaten Vermont in the past by substantial margins. UVM demonstrated improvement in its ability to play against strong competition.

Vermont Loses Two Games To Billikens Out West

The University of Vermont hockey team headed West again to renew battle with the Billikens of St. Louis University. In the first game, the Cats gave up two third period goals and went down to defeat by a 3-2 score.

Last year, the Catamounts made national headlines with a split of two Christmas games with St. Louis. In the third game between the two schools, one goal again was the difference between victory and defeat.

In the first period soggy ice and a flying St. Louis squad gave the Billikens a 1-0 advantage. UVM goalie, Tom McNamara made 14 saves to but 6 for his counterpart, Brian O'Connell.

The St. Louis goal came when John Glynns was off the ice for tripping. The goal was scored by Jean Bourdon on assists by Charlie Label and Bruce Hamel.

However, in the second period, the Cats grabbed the lead on two goals by Bill Koch. With 3:59 gone, the big line of Koch, Mallette, and O'Connell went to work. Koch took a pass from O'Connell in stride and beat Brian O'Connell. Mallette got the initial assist.

The second goal was of the power play variety. Koch converted the goal with assists by Andy Rickard and Tom Colby.

The lead only lasted for a short while as St. Louis came through with the third period scores. At 2:45, Wayne Ormon scored on an assist from Gary Murphy.

Then with a little less than 10 minutes left to play Mike Belanger put the puck past McNamara with assists to Dan Tsubourci and Label.

The Cats still had a chance to gain a tie and send the game into overtime. But a tripping penalty to Michel LeBeau with five minutes left took away momentum. McNamara was pulled in the waning moments but it was to no avail.

For the game McNamara had 29 saves and O'Connell stopped 23 shots. On Sunday, the Cats then attempted to gain their first victory of the young season.

****

Midwestern hockey continued its spell over the Cats Sunday night as Vermont again fell prey to the St. Louis Billikens, 7 to 4 in front of 8128 fans at the St. Louis Arena.

Though Vermont played poorly only in the first period, the home team took advantage of the errors and promptly pumped in four goals. The game could have easily become a rout, but UVM stormed back and carried the play to the Billikens in much of the contest.

St. Louis opened the scoring in the first period when Vermont goalie Tom McNamara attempted to slide a loose puck from the goal mouth and accidently put in into the nets. Rich Kennedy, who registered a hat-trick and received the number-one star award in the game was credited with the goal.

With just over six minutes gone by in the first period, Vermont's Roger Mallette sailed by the St. Louis defense and blasted the puck past netminder Lin Middlebrook to tie the game at one a piece.

Moments later the Billikens roared back with three unanswered goals by Dan Tsubouchi, Kennedy, and Charlie Label and Vermont skated off the ice after one period, behind at 4 to 1.

St. Louis struck for their fourth straight goal of the contest at 2:23 of the second period when Wayne Ormson caught the Cat power play napping; Vermont trailed 5-1.

Freshman standout Bill Reber sparked Vermont's surge scoring with a pretty goal with 12:46 gone in the second period. He was assisted by defenseman John Glynns. At 13:51 senior Bill Koch, playing one of the best games of his college career, lit the lamp with his third goal of the series to bring Vermont within two, 5-3.

In the third period, Kennedy wasted little time and iced the game for St. Louis with his third goal of the evening. The score stood: St. Louis 6, Vermont 3. At 5:51 of the final period, just 30 seconds after Kennedy's goal, Vermont's Michael Lebeau countered with a score assisted by Reber and Andy Halford. Label closed out the high-scoring affair with his second goal of the game with just over five minutes left.

Vermont goalie Tom McNamara turned in another strong performance with 19 saves while his counterpart, Lindsay Middlebrook had 24. Vermont outshot the Billikens in the game 28-26.

Ski Movies To Be Shown At Patrick Next Tuesday

On Tuesday November 12 at 8:00 p.m. the University of Vermont Ski Team will be presenting four ski films. These will be shown in Patrick Gym. Admission is $1.00 and there will be four door prizes. The movies are Go For It, A Day of Glory, Spider and the Frenchman, and K-2 Shorty. Go For It just received 1st prize at the New York Film Festival. A Day of Glory is a newly released film on the '74 World Championships in St. Moritz, Switzerland. It shows dynamic explosive action.

The door prizes are one pair of K-2 ski boots, one Barrecrafter ski rack, one Rossignol ski bag, and one pair of Barrecrafter ski poles.

Between the movies there will be the Friends of UVM Ski Team raffle drawing. Raffle tickets will still be available in the lobby before the start of the movies for the lump sum of $1.00.

The raffle prizes are: four Green and Gold season passes, one pair of Rossignol Strato 105 (Alpine Shop – Rossignol), one pair of Nordica GT ski boots (Smuggler's Notch ski shop – Reconta), and a ski week at Sugarbush Ski Area. The season passes will open the ski slopes of Smuggler's Notch, Stowe, Bolton Valley, and Man River Glen.

The UVM Women's Ski Team will be having a bake sale in the lobby. Before the movies a slide show of the mountains of Switzerland and the North Cascades (state of Washington) will be shown.

Intramural Results

COED TENNIS:

Mary Dee '77 (DAVIS) and Craig Iverson '77 (WILKES) defeated Sarah Craver (L/L) and Jeff Kuller '77 (L/L) for the UVM COED TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP. MATCH SCORE was 8-6.

MEN'S TENNIS SINGLES: CHAMPIONS:

"A" TOURNAMENT: Paul Weber (ADAMS) defeated Bruce Smith (MED '76). MATCH score, 6-1, 6-0.

"B" TOURNAMENT: Bob Harner '76 (WASTED) defeated Craig Iverson '77 (WILKS)

"C" TOURNAMENT: Barry Gustin '76 (WASTED) defeated Rudi Rugler (L/L) MATCH SCORE, 8-6

ALL-CAMPUS CHAMPS TENNIS (SINGLES) MEN: first- WASTED; second- WILKS; third- ADAMS.

WOMEN'S TENNIS SINGLES: CHAMPION

"A" TOURNAMENT: Mary Dee '77 (DAVIS) defeated Pat Duff '77 (Alpha Chi Omega). Match Score, 8-6.

Howdy Russell tries to overtake a UConn runner in the Yankee Conference Championships.
SPS Photo: Don Green

Harriers Second In Conference Meet

by David Raneri

On Saturday, November 4, the University of Vermont hosted the annual Yankee Conference Cross Country Championships. UMass, the favored team, won decisively, placing their first five runners in the top ten.

The first place finisher in the race, was George Reed of New Hampshire with a winning time of 24:37.5. This is a new course record for the five mile run.

The first UVM runner in the 49 man field was Bob Graves who placed seventh with an excellent time of 24:51. Next for the Cats was captain Mike Berry placing twelfth. Lynn Capon, Dave Milligan, and Peter Weith finished 17, 19, and 20 respectively.

The start of the race was very impressive. Going through the mile mark, UConn's Bruce Clark led the runners with a 4.29 time. At the two mile mark the front runners were timed in 9:20.

Coach Bill Nedde was satisfied with the UVM team performance. He commented that everyone ran a good race. The squad is now looking forward to running in the New England Cross Country Championships on November 11 at Franklin Park in Boston.

The final team scores in the Yankee Conference meet were UMass 24, UVM 75, UConn 91, Maine 108, UNH 120, URI 127, and Boston U 199.

The hockey scrimmage scheduled for this Saturday between Sir George Williams and UVM has been cancelled due to lack of ice. Anyone who has purchased tickets may get a refund at the ticket office in Patrick Gymnasium.

Soccer Victories...

(continued from page fourteen)

Koerner. Low assisted Whidden who shot the ball into the net from 10 feet out.

Jim Taft started and played goal most of the time in both games. His combined save total was 16 while substitute, Jeff Jonas had two saves. UVM dominated shots on net in both games with 20 on Wednesday to the opponent's 12 and an 18-10 advantage over UMass.

These final victories gave Vermont a 7-3-3 season record, and 3-2-1 in the Yankee Conference. It marked a turnaround from the disappointing losing season the year before.

MEXICO NORTH
at the 5 corners Essex Jct., Vt.
Largest Selection of American Indian Turquoise & Silver in Vermont
Afghani, Indian & Mexican clothing, leather goods, jewelery, tapestries, antlerpipes, furniture, stained glass, & lots more
Open 9 to 9 Mon-Fri 9 to 5:30 Sat.
10% off any purchase to UVM Students with this ad

Tilting At Windmills
GIANT 40% "PRE-CHRISTMAS" SALE
UNORTHODOX? - SURE, BUT WHY NOT?
EVERYONE HAS A FEW "SPECIAL" PEOPLE ON THEIR GIFT LIST, AND WE'RE FRANKLY OVERSTOCKED WITH SOME VERY "SPECIAL" CUSTOM FRAMED GALLERY POSTERS.
YOU CAN HELP US REDUCE THIS INVENTORY, AND FILL YOUR LIST AT A WHOPPING 40% SAVING.
A VERY PERSONAL GIFT THAT SAYS "I CARE"
ONE WEEK ONLY
NOVEMBER 11 THROUGH 16
100 DORSET STREET
SOUTH BURLINGTON 862-6100

WELCOME TO THE SKI RACK
(WE'VE MOVED)
DOWN PARKAS
PRIME NOTHERN GOOSE DOWN PARKAS
BY ALPINE DESIGN AND MPC FROM $37.50- $75.00
Layaway Now
X-C PACKAGES
SKIS, BOOTS, POLES, BINDING, HEEL PLATE, MOUNTING
EIGER PACKAGE $52.50
ATOMIC PACKAGE $86.50
ODYSSEY PACKAGE $84.50
Layaway Now
X-C WAXING CLINIC FREE
STARTS WEEKLY
1-15-74
NOW IN STOCK
SKI COOK LOCK & PLEASURE BOOK
BIKE OVERHAUL WITH FREE STORAFE PROGRAM
Park St. Paul Bus Station Pine MAIN STREET What Ayles You Street Street SKI RACK
the Ski Rack
658-3313
81-85 Main St.
A Block Below The Howard Bank
Open Daily 9:30-6
Fridays till 9P.M
Saturday 9-5
Bank Americard
Master Charge
Diners Club

Maine Defeats Vermont 31-27

The University of Maine won their fourth straight Yankee Conference game by defeating the Vermont Catamounts 31-27 last Saturday at Orono, Maine. While Maine evened their record at 4-4, the UVM squad fell to 3-5. The Cats cop still salvage a .500 record with victories over A.I.C. and Northeastern in their last two games.

Mark DiGregorio proved the biggest nemesis for the Cats. He ran for 97 yards on 22 carries and scored three touchdowns. Overall, the Cats gave up 362 yards on the ground -- too much to win any football game.

For the Cats, Bob Bateman continued to excel as he threw his 12th touchdown pass, a UVM season record. However, what could have been number 13 was deflected in the end zone with a minute left to play. Mike McCallister was the leading rusher with 56 yards on 12 carries.

Maine jumped to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter at chilly and windy Maine field. Taking a UVM punt, the Bears drove to the UVM 28. Jack Leggett, former South Burlington star, connected on a 38 yard field goal. He would later add all four extra points.

The Cats were stopped on downs after the ensuing kickoff and Maine took over at the UVM 45. They drove down field in nine plays with Jim Dumont taking the ball over from the one.

The Cats finally hit the scoreboard with a second period touchdown. Fred Fournier recovered a fumble at the Maine 42. Bateman passed to Sam Blood on the one and McAllister lugged the ball over. The extra point made it 10-7.

After a short Leggett field goal, Rocky Thompson raced 25 yards on a pitchout but fumbled the ball. Maine recovered and drove for another score. DeGrisgorio scored his first of three straight touchdowns.

The Cats came right back with Bateman passing to Rob Gilligan for 42 yards at the Maine 25. Two passes to Blood put the ball on the 4 and McCallister ran the rest of the way. Bateman ran for the two point conversion and at halftime the Cats trailed 17-15.

No scoring took place in the third segment but it did end with Maine at the Vermont 10. On the first play of quarter number four, Maine quarterback Jack Cosgrove threw to DiGregorio to make it 24-15.

Following the Maine kickoff the Catamounts drove right back with Bateman running 10 yards for the score. Brunst missed the extra point and it was 24-21.

Jed Palmacci returned the next kickoff to the UVM 48. DeGregorio scored from two yards as Maine once again ran down the field. The Leggett kick upped the score to 31-21.

Bateman came right back and hit Paul Jarry on a 16 yard post pattern. The two point pass failed and the Cats were down by four.

But Nick Gakos recovered an onside kick at the Maine 46 and the Cats were in business again. Sam Blood ran to the 34. After three unsuccessful plays, Bateman passed to Billy Looker in the end zone but Steve Vance, a 5-6" safety, leaped in the air and batted the ball away. Maine took over on downs and ran out the clock.

In the end, Maine's ability to grind it out, led by DiGrigorio spelled doom for the Cats. Once again, the defense lacked the ability to stop big third down plays.

For the game, Bateman was 12 for 24 for 128 yards and one touchdown. He only could hope that Looker would have caught a second one.

The Cats now return home for the Centennial Field finale against Northeastern. They then hit the road a last time when they visit American International College on November 16.

SCHWARTZ ON SPORTS

by Mike Schwartz

The sports seasons at Vermont are now in transition. The fall sports squads are finishing up or have now finished their schedules. Winter sports will now take over by the end of the month. So as the fan starts to orient himself to different sports, it is time to analyze some of the results this fall.

On Friday past, the soccer team completed a successful season. They finished with a 7-3-3 record and 3-3-1 in the Yankee Conference. The team's losses were to Bridgeport, a perennial power, UConn, one of the stronger teams in the East this year, and Boston University.

The team was basically built around freshmen. John Koerner, Dick Whidden, and Carl Christenson all turned in fine performances. But this is also a team where the only senior is the co-captain, and one of the three juniors is also a co-captain. One wonders how this team is organized. Does the successful J.V. program feed players to the varsity or is it a place for upper classmen in disfavor with the coach? Indeed, a 7-3-3 season is nothing to criticize but certain rumors make it sound as if the UVM soccer team had the potential to be even better. I hope to answer some of these rumors during the rest of this semester.

●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●●

The football team has now completed eight games with a 3-5 record. The team would probably be better as far as wins and losses are concerned if the defense performed better. This past weekend rushing defense gave up close to 300 yards. Had the defense played a bit better, the Bob Bateman passing and rushing that had continually torn apart opponents would have had a much easier time.

The Cats have also lacked overall team depth. When Coach Carl Favilene tried to chore up the defensive front four, there just wasn't enough experience and depth to call on. Likewise, when George Brunst hurt his foot, the Cats lacked a capable placekicking replacement.

The basic strong point is the passing game which returns next year (at least Bob Bateman will and that is cause for optimism). Charlie Casella has proven to be a very good tight end and Billy Looker has come into his own. Rob Gilligan has emerged as perhaps the only second string player to come through in the clutch.

Except for Larry Lockwood's ability to run back kickoffs,

(continued on page twelve)

UVM SPORTS

Action in the UMass — UVM game this past Friday at the Archie Post field. SPS Photo: R. R. Law

Soccer Team Wins Two As Season Ends

by Gary Brooks

The University of Vermont soccer team played their final game of the season last Friday and it was an impressive performance. The Catamounts defeated the University of Massachusetts minutemen 5-2. It was Vermont's second win of the week as they had beat St. Michael's on Wednesday by a score of 3-0.

Leading the Cats against UMass was freshman lineman, Dick Whidden, who scored two goals and had an assist. Earlier, in the St. Mike's game, John Koerner scored two goals, giving him a total of six goals in the two games played between those teams this season.

The initial goal against UMass came after 38 minutes of play in the first half. Whidden lifted a nice corner kick in front of the goal and Tim Beal outjumped the Minuteman goalie. Four minutes later, UMass tied the score when Bill Belcher dribbled in on UVM goalie Jim Taft and beat him to the left side.

In the second half, UVM's Rick Taylor had one of his shots deflect off of a UMass player into the net for Vermont's second goal. Whidden then got his first score of the day which turned out to be the clincher. As he charged to the net he received a cross field pass from Gil Low. Whidden drove the ball in to make the score 3-1.

Mark Heidrich scored the fourth goal when he kicked the ball in after a blocked shot got away from goalie Carl Varcelone. Whidden then closed out the scoring with his second goal on a pass from Carl Christensen. Whidden dribbled down the right sideline and fired the ball home for the final tally in the 5-2 game.

In the St. Michael's contest John Koerner scored his first goal after 41 minutes of play in the first half. Christensen tallied the assist on his lofted shot that Koerner headed in.

Then at 2:30 of the second half, Koerner got his second tally which resulted from luck more than skill. Tim Beal connected a corner kick to the right of St. Mike's goalie Jeff McGill. As the ball headed towards the net, Koerner stuck his foot out to try to trap the ball. The low flying ball deflected off his foot and into the net.

Whidden scored the final goal after he had replaced

(continued on page thirteen)

HORNY BULLS LOVE GORY MOVIES.

The Montezuma Horny Bull:
1 oz. Montezuma Tequila.
5 oz. CONCENTRATED ORANGE BREAKFAST DRINK. Over ice.
It's sensational, and that's no bull.

Montezuma TEQUILA

©1974 80 Proof Tequila Barton Distillers Import Co., New York, New York

AMERICAN INDIAN
Turquise & Silver
JEWELRY SALE
20%-30%
OFF RETAIL on HANDMADE NAVIJO & ZUNI
rings, earrings, necklaces, bracelets, squash blossoms, fetishes, heschebeads, watchbands, old pawn & signed pieces too.
at the HOLIDAY INN
Williston Rd. So. Burl.
Friday Nov. 8 12 til 9 Saturday Nov. 9 til 9
GREEN MOUNTAIN TRADERS
P.O. Box 199 Richford, Vt. 05477

CLASSIFIED

FOR SALE: KLH Model Eleven portable stereo. Garrard 4 speed turntable, KLH acoustic suspension speakers and 30 watt KLH amp. Perfect. $100. 864-7990. Richard.

FOR SALE: Two white dog brand goose down filled sleeping bags. Blue ripstock nylon with yellow piping. Thick and warm. $40 each. 864-7990. Richard.

FOR SALE: Two 8x10 Tahitian tapas cloths of light bark with native prints. Rare and valuable exotic tapestries. 864-7990. Richard.

LOST! Gold-wire rimmed glasses, gray tinted, lenses in black case, last around Oct. 22. If found, please contact Maureen Bird, 862-3403.

FOR SALE: One pair Humanix plastic ski boots, size 9½ medium. Excellent condition. $25. Call Don at 863-2486.

EARN TOP MONEY. Seeking campus representatives to promote student travel programs. Vagabond Tours, 360 East 44th Street, Suite 1001, N.Y., N.Y., 10017 — (212) 661-1330 or (800) 223-5367 outside of N.Y.

FOR SALE: 1971 VW van with built in for camping, snowtires, $1100. Stephanie Cole, 656-2003. Or call 482-3349 after 6 p.m. on weekends.

FOR SALE: 1962 VW bug, brand new rebuilt engine (50 miles on it), new shock and brakes, needs some electrical work but runs good. $175. Bill Spina, 862-5051 or Box 385, at Med School.

FOR SALE: 1 Slalom Ski Parka. Never been worn. Men's Large. Was $65, will sell for $45. Call Don at 863-2486 after 5:30.

DH Skis For Sale: 3 pairs of Atomic 220cm with/without Salomon Bindings, 1 pair Kneissl 220 cm, with Salomon bindings, some new, some used. Contact Bill Doble at 864-7007, and discuss prices.

ROOM FOR RENT: $60 plus utilities. Large House with kitchen privileges. Available Nov. 21. 10 minutes to campus. Call Gordon, 863-3374.

FOR SALE: Datsun 2000 Sports Car. New Top, Snow Tires, runs pretty good, needs body work. $300 or best offer. Call Dale Goldwater at 4060 or 864-4847.

WANTS TO BUY: Cheap nylon string guitar, 863-4487.

FOR SALE: 2 7.35x14 Retread Snow Tires. $15 a pair. 2 14-inch rims for Tempest Nova or other GM intermediate. $5 each. Will sell tires and rims separately. Contact 863-3668.

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage. Delivery time is 1 to 2 days!
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD. SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493
Our research material is sold for research assistance only.

VOLUME XCII
NUMBER 25
NOVEMBER 14, 1974

VER

International Worke
To Speak On Econon

Fred Newman, chairman of the International Workers Party will be giving a lecture at UVM on Thursday, Nov 21 at B106 St 7:30 PM. Newman is expected to speak on the ferment of this historic period in face of cataclysmic economic disaster.

The IWP is an international socialist organization for the unification of the working class around the world. Newman recently addressed a conference on Power and Powerlessness at the Delaware Valley Mental Health Foundation which was attended by notable educators and organizers such as Erving Goffman, William Kunstler, and Jonathan Kozol. In his speech, "Socialism or Facism: The Only Question a Human Being Can Talk About," he says the American Democratic society had been dead for a long time and the dead Capitalism that we are in now will become social Fascism if the workers do not organize for the creation of a Socialist state.

The IWP has Candidates for President and Vice President for the 1976 election. Sema Foxx, the Presidential candidate and Lew Hart, the Vice Presidential candidate believe that the U.S. working class must organize to "lead the international working class to internatio socialism." They have set several programs direc towards alleviating some of t problems caused by the ca capitalist state. These include socialist food program, ene program, and health progra These programs are designed benefit the working class pe and the "petty bourgoisie".

Fred Newman has a Ph. D Philosophy from Stanford

Andrews, Patterson Roll
Causes Of UVM,s Fina

by Randy Jensen

President Edward Andrews, Vice-President Wayne Patterson, and Vice - President Alfred Rollins discussed UVM's financial situation with David Leonard of WRUV and Bruce Maddern of the Cynic, last Wednesday.

Leonard gave a brief introduction, commenting on student views and opinions. He wanted to find out answers to the students' questions, many of whom are confused with the financial workings. Basically, Leonard wanted to discover why UVM is in the predicament it is in now and what programs are being initiated to curb the problem. A major concern of Leonard was the tuition hikes next year.

Dr. Andrews remarked that the $95 in-state and $215 out-of - state tuition increases are the minimum amount tuition would be increased. "Hopefully they will not be more than that," but he added, "At the moment no decision has been made."

The major causes of UVM's financial crunch according to Andrews are varied. Primarily, Vermont has only 450,000 people supporting a univ with an expensive Me School. With a low per c income and high per c taxes, Vermonters are una adequately support university, says Dr. And Added on to this is the lo state revenues due to a lar

S.A. Se
Academ

by D.B. Hadam '76

A relatively attendance characterize Nov. 12 Student Assoc meeting which concentrat efforts on preparing fo University's plans to cut million dollars fro FY76 budget.

Dr. John Moore, As Vice-President for Aca Affairs, addressed the Sen explain the plans whic Administration has devi order to circumvent budget slashing. Dr. assured the Student Sena it would play an integral

VOLUME XCII
NUMBER 25
NOVEMBER 14, 1974

VERMONT CYNIC

This Privilege to Live in Vermont

International Workers Leader To Speak On Economic Disaster

Fred Newman, chairman of the International Workers Party will be giving a lecture at UVM on Thursday, Nov 21 at B106 at 7:30 PM. Newman is expected to speak on the ferment of this historic period in face of catachysmic economic disaster.

The IWP is an international socialist organization for the unification of the working class around the world. Newman recently addressed a conference on Power and Powerlessness at the Delaware Valley Mental Health Foundation which was attended by notable educators and organizers such as Erving Goffman, William Kunstler, and Jonathan Kozol. In his speech, "Socialism or Facism: The Only Question a Human Being Can Talk About," he says the American Democratic society had been dead for a long time and the dead Capitalism that we are in now will become social Facism if the workers do not organize for the creation of a Socialist state.

The IWP has Candidates for President and Vice President for the 1976 election. Sema Foxx, the Presidential candidate and Lew Hart, the Vice Presidential candidate believe that the U.S. working class must organize to "lead the international working class to international socialism." They have set up several programs directed towards alleviating some of the problems caused by the dying capitalist state. These include a socialist food program, energy program, and health program. These programs are designed to benefit the working class people and the "petty bourgoisie".

Fred Newman

Fred Newman has a Ph.D. in Philosophy from Stanford and has taught at several schools including Antioch College and Stanford. He founded and chaired the Centers for Change, Inc., a New York based collective of educators and health workers to provide free and low cost services to people. He is the author of two recent books, Power and Authority and A Manifesto on Method. The event is being sponsored by SA Speakers.

Over $1.5 Million Budget Cuts Proposed By Administration

BURLINGTON, VT., Nov. 14 — Proposed budget cuts totalling more than $1.5 million dollars effecting each of the University's four undergraduate colleges, three of the four UVM undergraduate schools, the Graduate and Medical Colleges, the athletic programs and the administration were revealed by UVM President Edward C. Andrews, Jr., at a meeting of the Faculty Senate here today.

The recommendations, which include termination of the varsity football program, the two-year nursing program, the Experimental Program of the College of Arts and Sciences, the two Ph.D. and six Master's degree programs as well as substantial cuts in administrative support services will be made to a Dec. 6 meeting of the University's Board of Trustees.

Dr. Andrews presentation to the Senate followed what he described as "agonizing appraisal" by deans, program directors, and administrators during the weeks since the October meeting of the Board of Trustees agreed that significant cuts would be needed if the fiscal 1975-76 budget is to have any chance of avoiding a major deficit.

"The University" said President Andrews "is facing the kind of problem which other colleges are also facing or will face very soon. I believe we have the opportunity through careful consideration to choose our options now and emerge a better and stronger University, reducing our scope but retaining quality."

Dr. Andrews noted that faculty, students, staff, and alumni committees and trustees have been kept abreast of the process and department chairmen brought into it when affected. There has been an extensive effort to involve the appropriate individuals and groups in the decision-making process.

Dr. Andrews invited those affected by the cuts as well as others concerned to make their views known before the proposals are put into final form for consideration by the University's trustees at the special Dec. 6 meeting and the regular meeting to follow on December 13-14.

Even as President Andrews sketched out the $1.5 million drop in UVM's operating level, which this year is over $50 million (with state support accounting for about 20 per cent of the total), he warned that escalating expenses reflecting national inflationary patterns could overtake the savings.

The cuts were described as the minimum that would have to be made in the face of deficits ahead, and Dr. Andrews said that further program reductions would be required if the state cannot meeet UVM's appropriations requests for the next two years and if trustees are unwilling to push tuition rates sharply upward.

Not all savings represented by the cuts could be realized at once, since phase-out time in some instances would be unavoidable.

As many as 60 academic positions and 65 administrative positions would be eliminated if Trustees accept the recommendations revealed today. Some of the positons are now vacant; some are filled by staff due to retire or leave at the end of the current fiscal year; and some of the positions are held by persons whose contracts in better times would probably be renewed.

For most personnel affected, notice must be given within the next six weeks, and Dr. Andrews said that "the human element of this has given me more sleepless nights" than any other decision since he took office five years ago.

All major units of the University are affected by the proposals, but not equally, since individual programs "stand up unequally" to the criteria for determining priorities, which Dr. Andrews said include societal, state and student needs; quality of facilities, tudents, and staff; relative cost; and economy of scale.

The range is from $10,000 for the School of Natural Resources to more than $250,000 for the College of Arts and Sciences, the largest academic division of the University, which teaches more than half the credit hours at UVM.

The list of cuts also included about $260,000 more in administrative areas. Dr. Wayne Patterson in referring to the administrative budget noted that the recommended cuts include 65 administrative positions as well as reductions in operating budgets. Details of these recommendations will be presented to the administrative policy and financial policy committees of the Faculty Senate and the Non-Academic Employees Council and the Student Task Force on Financial Affairs for their review and advice before final recommendations will be made to the Board of Trustees.

"Every effort will be made by the University" Dr. Patterson noted, "to give the individuals affected as much notice as possible and to give them priority in filling future vacancies." Details of the administrative cuts will be announced following the committee sessions and notification of individuals affected.

In the review given to the Faculty Senate, Academic Vice President Alfred B. Rollins, Jr., who had met individually with academic deans and directors in almost "round-the-clock" budget reviews, summarized each of the budget reduction proposals.

"In view of the long-term fiscal problem of the University," he said, "shrinking state support, and explosive inflation, the UVM administration has been forced to conclude that it is offering too many programs and too many courses for its base of economic support."

"Attempts to balance the budget through further expansion could lead only to unmanageable capital costs for libraries, laboratories, and residence halls. Attempts to cut already limited operating budgets or to defer salary increases needed annually to keep the University relatively competitive seem both undesirable and counter productive."

"It is clear," Dr. Rollins said, "the University must contract the scope of its offerings in order to maintain the quality of its programs. We will suffer less from a decrease in the variety of educational opportunities than from a general erosion of quality."

Dr. Rollins' comments on individual program recommendations, which have been discussed with the Faculty Senate steering committee, follow:

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE, program reductions in excess of $120,000: Elimination of the program in laboratory animal technology and changes in the training of pre-veterinary students; operating and personnel cuts in the College's administrative offices; tightened loads in botany and plant and soil science; restricting the research investment in botany.

Laboratory animal technology was suspended in the spring of 1974 because significant expense was forecast and neither the need for programs nor the market for students could be well established.

Pre-veterinary students desiring to prepare for graduate work still may be accomodated in much the same way as pre-medical students via available programs which include solid training in the sciences.

Botany loads are now considered light at upper division levels, and the retirement of three senior faculty makes it possible to reconsider options. Loads will be tightened while the department is placed under review to determine its long-range course.

COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES, program reductions in excess of $250,000: Physics: One position is being cut; others should be eliminated as they become vacant to bring the department to an appropriate size for a quality undergraduate program. Some teaching loads are light, and for some time it has been impossible to fund the Ph. D. program adequately from University resources, while federal funds have fallen off. Placement of graduate students have been difficult and the number of applicants has been falling off. Consequently the Ph. D. program in Physics is being eliminated.

Sociology: While there has been pressure to institute a special type of doctoral degree to serve state needs in this excellent and recently built-up department, this program would be expensive in library, staff, and research facilities and must be delayed.

Music: the proposal is to phase out the MA program, and it seems clear the department's efforts must be to emphasize continued development of a quality undergraduate program, with priority attention to the music teachers' curriculum.

Philosophy: It is proposed that the MA program be phased out with emphasis on strengthening the undergraduate offering.

Economics: It is proposed that the MA program be phased out.

Romance Language: It is proposed that the MA program in Spanish be dropped.

Anthropology: While the department has for some time urged an M. A. T. program to train teachers, addition to the staff is impossible at this time.

Experimental Program: It is proposed to phase out this program which, for some years, has served several important functions as a pioneer in residence-based instruction, in a variety of new kind of courses, and in the modern management of residence hall living. Many of the innovations tried here have been generally adopted; it does not appear to represent compelling new trends; and its special costs can no longer be defended on an experimental basis. The Living-Learning Center is now performing similar functions, and reform energies should be addressed to the mainstream of the Arts and Sciences effort.

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES, Program reductions of about $78,000: This college has an essential graduate and service role for schools of the state, and a good undegraduate program in teacher education is desirable and a necessary base for this role. However, it is proposed that enrollment be phased down by about 30% in elementary education. At the same time, loads should be tightened at the under-graduate level in physical education, and at the graduate level in special education, administration, and counseling and other human resources specialty areas.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING, MATHEMATICS AND BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION, Program reductions of about $20,000: This college was cut heavily three years ago and remarkable leadership is being shown in readjusting efforts to meet growth needs. It is proposed that the Ph. D. program in mathematics be dropped; and that graduate programs and the scope of offerings in the department of mechanical engineering be reexamined.

COLLEGE OF MEDICINE, Program cuts in excess of $200,000: The nature of the college's program makes it difficult to separate teaching, research, and service. Nevertheless, faculty and staff reductions are proposed that would have the following consequences: Increased teaching loads in anatomy, biochemistry, medicine, medical microbiology, orthopedic surgery, pharmacology, and physiology, substantial tightening of administrative loads and elimination of some administrative services; some decrease in continuing education, improvement in instruction, and classroom audio-visual aid production.

SCHOOL OF HOME ECONOMICS, Program reductions of about $15,000: It is proposed that graduate work be dropped except in foods and nutrition; and that the number of courses in home management and consumer economics be reduced.

SCHOOL OF NATURAL RESOURCES, program reductions of about $10,000.

SCHOOL OF NURSING, program reductions of about $200,000: It is proposed that the two-year nursing program be phased out, a very difficult recommendation to make, because it is a quality program, meets the needs of Vermonters, and its students are being placed. But it is the one of the health sciences programs that the University is free to leave without violating commitments to federal granting agencies. There are similar two-year programs serving Vermonters at Castleton State College and Vermont College.

ATHLETICS, program reduction of $400,000 in fiscal 1975-76 and $100,000 in 1976-77: A general cut in athletics would cripple all athletic programs and the conclusion really has to be to suspend intercollegiate football because it is relatively high in cost, involves the participation of relatively small numbers, and is the only area where significant savings can be made without badly damaging the physical education program and a wide variety of participation

(continued on page two)

Andrews, Patterson Rollins, Discuss Causes Of UVM,s Financial Crunch

by Randy Jansen

President Edward Andrews, Vice-President Wayne Patterson, and Vice - President Alfred Rollins discussed UVM's financial situation with David Leonard of WRUV and Bruce Maddern of the Cynic, last Wednesday.

Leonard gave a brief introduction, commenting on student views and opinions. He wanted to find out answers to the students' questions, many of whom are confused with the financial workings. Basically, Leonard wanted to discover why UVM is in the predicament it is in now and what programs are being initiated to curb the problem. A major concern of Leonard was the tuition hikes next year.

Dr. Andrews remarked that the $95 in-state and $215 out-of-state tuition increases are the minimum amount tuition would be increased. "Hopefully they will not be more than that," but he added, "At the moment no decision has been made."

The major causes of UVM's financial crunch according to Andrews are varied. Primarily, Vermont has only 450,000 people supporting a university with an expensive Medical School. With a low per capita income and high per capita taxes, Vermonters are unable to adequately support the university, says Dr. Andrews. Added on to this is the loss of state revenues due to a lean part to the last two poor skiing seasons.

Another major cause is the fact that expenditures have risen dramatically due to inflation.

Andrews is especially worried about state appropriations. Governor

(continued on page ten)

S.A. Senate Braces Itself For Academic And Financial Cuts

by D.B. Haslam '76

A relatively sparse attendance characterized the Nov. 12 Student Association meeting which concentrated its efforts on preparing for the University's plans to cut over [illegible] million dollars from its FY76 budget.

Dr. John Moore, Assistant Vice-President for Academic Affairs, addressed the Senate to explain the plans which the Administration has devised in order to circumvent future budget slashing. Dr. Moore assured the Student Senate that it would play an integral part in planning towards the goals and decisions of the University. He announced that a survey will be distributed early next semester to sample about 500 students' opinions on University policies. He also suggested that planning meetings to discuss what type of future UVM should have will be held next March or April. Dr. Moore seemed optomistic about an intensive and far reaching approach to problem solving at UVM, but cautioned that "the way the economy is going planning may not make a damn lot of difference."

Bruce Maddern, Chairperson of the Student Advisory Group which has been commissioned by Dr. Andrews to examine the budget cutting process also addressed the Senate and answered questions concerning the effectiveness of his group. He told the Senators that as a group the students "were told what was going to happen," but that they did have some opportunity to express their ideas over policy. Maddern feels that the Administration has reacted reasonably in the belt-tightening process. He commented, "I don't think it's going to amount to a drastic loss in academic quality."

In other business, there were three proposals, one to allocate $100 for the American Society of Civil Engineers, another to provide an additional $850 to keep Billings Center open on Saturdays, and a third to accept guidelines drawn up for the affairs of the Student Activities Committee. In the absence of Pat Black, S.A. Activities Chairman, the first and last proposals were tabled, but the S.A. did agree to provide funds for keeping Billings open all day Saturday. Student Activities Director, Bill Root, reported that due to a rise in the minimum wage, the additional funds were needed to staff the information desk and that he did not have the money in his budget to provide this compensation.

President Peter MacAusland announced that the S.A. owns two typewriters which may be used by students, as well as a motor van, which may be signed out by S.A. members. People should contact the S.A. office for information on the use of this equipment.

Cynic Elections

On December 5, the Cynic will be electing a new editorial board. Editorial positions run from January to January. Any undergraduate student may apply for a post. Positions available are: Editor-In-Chief, Assistant Editor, Managing Editor, News Editor, Assistant News Editor, Feature Editor, Arts and Entertainment Editor, and Sports Editor.

If you are interested in applying, you must submit your name, intended position, and qualifications by Tuesday, November 26 at noon to the Cynic office, lower Billings Center.

You may apply for more than one position but you can only be elected to one. If there are any questions, call 658-4911.

This Paper Is Recyclable Contact Robinson Hall 3084

University Kicks Off Drive For Aiken Lectures

A statewide drive for a $250,000 endowment fund to finance the Aiken Lectures at the University of Vermont was kicked off at a luncheon at the University, Wednesday, November 6.

This is an opportunity for all Vermonters to join in paying tribute to Senator George D. Aiken, who is retiring this year after serving in the U.S. Senate since 1941. This is a non-partisan effort to establish a fund so that each year, in Senator Aiken's name, a leader of national or international fame will speak on the University of Vermont campus," said Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr., President of UVM.

Mrs. Barbara Snelling, UVM vice president for Development and External Affairs, said a special gifts committee had worked in advance of the general campaign and the results were "very good, very encouraging."

She said the public campaign will continue through December 6. "While organizations and corporations are promising us assistance," she said, "it is our hope that all Vermonters who have admired his work over the years will join in contributing funds."

She explained that the list of all donors will be published in a book, to be presented to Senator and Mrs. Aiken.

Featured This Week:

J D Salinger Speaks...p.7
Open Season....p.5
What Ski Racing Is About...p.11

Table of Contents

Arts & Entertainment p.6
Calendar/Announcements . . . p.2
Doctor's Ring p.9
Editorial . . . . . p. 4
Op. Ed. . . . . p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 12

NOVEMBER 7, 1974
RTS
[image]
Frost Field. SPS Photo: R. R. Low on Ends
fourth goal when he kicked the ball in after a blocked shot got away from goalie Carl Varcelona. Whidden then closed out the scoring with his second goal on a pass from Carl Christensen. Whidden dribbled down the right sideline and fired the ball home for the final tally in the 5-2 game.
In the St. Michael's contest John Koerner scored his first goal after 41 minutes of play in the first half. Christensen tallied the assist on his lofted shot that Koerner headed in.
Then at 2:30 of the second half, Koerner got his second tally which resulted from luck more than skill. Tim Beal connected a corner kick to the right of St. Mike's goalie Jeff McGill. As the ball headed towards the net, Koerner stuck his foot out to try to trap the ball. The low flying ball deflected off his foot and into the net.
Whidden scored the final goal after he had replaced
(continued on page thirteen)
BULLS MOVIES.
[image]
Montezuma
TEQUILA
N INDIAN
e & Silver
RY SALE
-30%
RETAIL on MADE & ZUNI earrings,
e, squash blossoms,
nds, watchbands,
gned pieces too.
INN
So. Burl.
Saturday Nov. 9 til 9
OUNTAIN
DERS
Richmond, Vt. 05477

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

..$1.5 Million Budget Cut

(continued from page one)

spots. We have long been feeding football inadequately, and it seems impossible to fund it well. If we were to keep it, we would be compelled to dismiss an additional 20 academic instructors, as well as to cut quality significantly in some academic programs.

COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SERVICE reductions of $97,000 in staff, travel and publications.

(End of Dr. Rollins' comments on recommended program reductions.)

In recapitulating, UVM President Andrews again said, "unfortunately there is something here to make everyone unhappy," and he called for "thoughtful participation" in the "next steps leading up the Trustees' review and action in December."

"I certainly do not expect everyone to agree, to understand, or even to sympathize with all these recommendations."

Casey Couple To Give Free Performance

Casey is Kent and Donna's! On November 15th, Saturday night at 8:30 PM Casey will perform in front of the fireplace for free sponsored by Billings Center Governing Board. The combination of Kent's delicate but energetic guitar work and Donna's playing of acoustic guitar and recorder, like the fragility of a child, create a comfortable informal atmosphere. They play an original songs, and demonstrate a unique blending of oriental and occidental music. Come and listen to Casey.

Outdoor Recreation Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Outdoor Recreation Management Society for all majors and other interested persons on Thursday, Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. at 234 Hills Building.

The meeting should be highlighted by A. H. Gilbert, who may speak on the National Recreation and Park Association Conference he recently attended in Denver, Colorado.

Bake And Rummage Sale

There will be a Bake Sale and Rummage Sale on Saturday, November 16, from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Both sales will be sponsored by Gamma Phi Beta, at 381 Main St. All are welcome.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

S.E. Asia Symposium

On Nov. 20, high school students from Rice, Champlain Valley, and Burlington High Schools will join with students from UVM and members of the Burlington community for a day long symposium on American involvement in S.E. Asia. The title of the symposium, taken from a film about the Vietnamese people, reflects the two goals of the symposium. The first is to further understanding of the Asian people, and secondly to experience as a community our own relationship to America's foreign diplomacy. In the morning, Nicola Geiger, a longtime activist in Korea and Japan, will share her knowledge of "The Korean Resistance Movement". At 1:00 PM a panel of different views will be presented. 2:00 PM - Workshops and 3:00 PM - Reconvene for questions and discussion. Members of the panel are as follows:

John Berningshause
Chinese lang. UVM -
"Anti-communism and the Role of the Expert"
Mark Stoler - Military Hist, UVM
"The Vision of Omnipotence: Escalation 1964-1968."
U.S. State Department
David Ross - Vietnam Veterans Against the War - Winter Soldier Org.
"Vietnam: Rhetoric and Reality - the Role of the GI."
Russell Johnson - American Friends Service Comm.
"The Vietnam War: America's Moral Dilemma"

The symposium will be held in 115 Commons Living - Learning.

Coach Cross To Discuss Division I Season

Varsity hockey coach, Jim Cross, will be discussing the upcoming Division I season and will be sharing some of his experiences and reactions to the recent St. Louis and Wisconsin games to all interested persons. The discussion will be held in the M. A. T. Lounge on Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

Political Science Party

The Annual Semester Political Science Party will commence at 4:30 PM on Friday, Nov. 15 at St. Anselms's Chapel. All faculty, majors, intended majors and interested persons are invited. Refreshments and a Pot Luck Supper will be served. We would appreciate it if you would give your dollar contribution to Helen in the Political Science Department Office (Old Mill Bldg.)

There will be a list for people to sign with regard to the culinary masterpiece they plan to contribute optional.

In addition, there is a sign up list in the department office for students interested in being candidates for 2 openings among the student representatives. Election will be held during the latter portion of this semester.

Gymnastics First Meet

This season's first men's gymnastics meet will be held Saturday Nov. 16 at 1:00 PM at the Patrick Gym with Plattsburgh State College.

Wall to wall sound.

Bose 901® Series II speakers are not only directional, they're reflective as well. Which means your walls take an active part in reproducing the sound around you—just as it's heard in the concert hall.

We like the Bose 901's well enough to feature them as the heart of our "best value" balanced sound system. We recommend driving them with a Sony Model 7055 AM/FM receiver, coupled with a MIRICORD — 650 turntable . . . all for the package price of only $890. For our money (and maybe yours), it's the best system you can buy for the bread anywhere.

LAFAYETTE®
157 Pearl St. Essex Jct.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14

7:30 p.m. The UVM Sailing Club is pleased to present Dr. Norris Hoyt. Dr. Hoyt, who has raced in the Bermuda and the American Cup Races will be giving a slide presentation on his travels and the races. A must for sailing enthusiasts. B-106 Cook.

Fourth in a series of faculty symposia presented by the Medieval/ Renaissance Studies Program, John Engoff, "The Transmission of Arab Text into Latin in the Middle Ages." 7:30 p.m., A-180 Living/Learning Center.

SA Films presents "A Star is Born", 7:30 p.m., 101 Votey Bldg.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15

12:30-4:30 p.m., The UVM Plant and Soil Science Society will be selling a variety of apples in the breezeway between the greenhouse and Hills Building. Part of the profits will go toward a Society Field Trip.

Physiology and biophysics seminar, Dr. Eugene Morkin, Arizona Medical Center cardiology division, "Chemical mechanisms in the hormonal regulation of myocardial contractility," 4 p.m., C-219 Given Medical Bldg.

"Friday at Four" open house, 4 p.m., Royall Tyler Theatre.

Lane Series presents 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. showings of the Truffaut classic film, "Shoot the Piano Player," Benedict Auditorium, Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. This concludes the series on Truffaut. Tickets from 656-3418.

SA Films presents a double feature – "Duck Soup" and "The Little Rascals," 7:30 and 9:30 p.m., 101 Votey Bldg.

Cluster B of the Living/Learning Center sponsors the Unity Players, who will perform the play "Touchpoint," 8 p.m., 115 Commons Bldg.

International folk dancing, 8-11 p.m., Southwick. All are welcome.

Billings Center Governing Board presents the folk-singing duo "Casey", 8:30 p.m. Billings Center main lobby. Free.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16

Church Street Center workshop on "The Role of Crafts in the Built Environment" starts at 9:30 a.m. Call 656-4221 for more information.

SA Films presents "Harper," 7:30 p.m., at 101 Votey Bldg. The film stars Paul Newman.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 17

No calendar events listed.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 18

9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Pre-enrollment for spring semester in Billings' Marsh Lounge! Turn your green card in before Friday, Nov. 22.

12 noon, Physiology and Biophysics seminar featuring Dr. Michael Czech of Brown University who will speak on "Fat Cell Membrane and Glucose Transport". Given C-219.

5 p.m., VPIRG board meeting in Conference Room C of Billings. All are welcome.

6:30 p.m., Tupperware lovers! Gamma Phi is holding a Tupperware party at the Gamma Phi Beta House at 381 Main St. For more info, call 864-4343.

7 p.m., UVM Modern Dance workshop at Southwick Ballroom. Call Ext. 3240 for further information.

7 p.m, UVM Modern Dance workshop at Southwick Ballroom. Call 3240.

7 p.m. Greek Coordinating Council Committee meeting at Gamma Phi concerning public awareness. All welcome

7 to 9 p.m., "Emergency Medical Care Techniques for the Lay Person", the first in a series of five sessions. Held at 226A Smith-Patrick Hub, Mary Fletcher Unit, MCHV. Register at first session or call Jacques Marquis at 2173 for more information.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Bridge on the River Kwai" in 103 Rowell. Free admission. Worth seeing for the last scene alone.

8 p.m., Meeting of the Greek Coordinating Council, Acadia.

8 p.m., Dr. Robert Gussner, Assistant Prof. of Religion at UVM, will speak on "The Inner Logic of the Asian and Western Contexts of Meaning" in Commons, 115, L/L as part of the Cross Cultural Program.

8 p.m., The Lane Series presents the George Shearing Quintet at Ira Allen Chapel, NOT Memorial Auditorium. Call Ext. 3418 for ticket information.

8:30 p.m., WRUV-FM's "Open Circuit", a half hour concern. Moderated by Deborah Janone.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 19

12 noon to 4 p.m., A new counseling service is available in Billings' Conference Room C. Student advisors Roberto Rios and Orbin Chappel will counsel. Call 3346 for more information.

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Robinson Hall, designated for students of Environmental Studies, has a table at Billings Center.

6:30 p.m., VPIRG meeting discussing problematics re the transportation hearing. Round Room at Billings.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization meets at Harris Hall's recreation room. All welcome.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Pentecostal fellowship group, the Lamplighters, in MAT Lounge. All are invited to attend this period of prayer and worship of the Lord. More information from Sue Kuiha at 3952.

7 p.m., Home Economics 25 seminar presents Frank Engels, director of products development department of Crown Textiles Manufacturing Corporation, who will speak on "Fusible Textiles." B 112 Cook.

7:30 p.m., Weekly SA meeting, Marsh Lounge, Billings.

8 p.m., Edna O'Brien, an Irish Writer, will give a public reading at Old Mill. More information can be obtained from Margaret Edwards, 3056.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20

10a.m. to 4 p.m., East Asia Symposium entitled "Tell Them We Are People" involving local high schools, 115 Commons, L/L.

12 noon to 1 p.m., Nancy Kock will lead a workshop in an "Hour of Relaxation, Centering and Meditation". Note: the location of this meeting has been moved to the Counseling and Testing Center at 146 South Williams St.

1 to 3 p.m., Tickets are on sale at Billings for $1. for special showings at Merrill's Showcase Cinema.

2 p.m., Greek Coordinating Council Committee meeting concerning social and community services. At Billings' Marsh Lounge.

3 to 6 p.m., and 7 to 9 p.m., Everyone's Gallery, a graphic sale of works by Richard Smith in 105 Commons, L/L, continuing through Nov. 24. Smith designed last summer's Shakespeare Festival poster.

3:15 to 5:30 p.m., College of Arts and Sciences Fall Symposium, entitled "Subjectivity-Objectivity", featuring professors of Physics, Zoology, and Psychology. Memorial Lounge, Waterman.

3:30 to 5 p.m., Meeting of the International Club of UVM at 479 Main St. Everyone welcome.

4 p.m., "Tertulia", an informal gathering of anyone who is interested in meeting the Spanish professors or speaking Spanish. Building D, Suite 350, L/L.

6 to 7 p.m., the UVM Military Studies Program presents Major Marion Davis, Headquarters, First ROTC Region, of Ft. Bragg, North Caroline, who will speak on the role of women in the Army. Room 301, Williams Science Hall.

6:30 p.m., Greek Coordinating Council Committe meeting concerning intra-system communication. All welcome at Sigma Phi.

7:30 p.m., Asia films, "Meditation Crystallized" and "The Sacred Art of Tibet". Sponsored by the East Asian Cultural Exchange in Commons, 115, L/L.

7:30 p.m., Karen Aschenbach will speak in Mason Lounge of the Counseling and Testing Center on the subject of "Some Toys and Tools of Improvisation" as part of the Center's program of meditation and relaxation.

8 p.m., UVM Outing Club meets in 302 Votey. Slides of local climbing will be shown. Another slide show on Friday at 8 p.m., depicting alpine climbing.

8 p.m., The meeting of the Women of UVM Book Discussion Group originally scheduled for this date has been postponed to Dec. 4.

8 p.m., "Room for One More" is a group of people interested in adoption. Tonight they present Joseph Handy, Commissioner of Social and Rehabilitation Services who will discuss adoption in Vermont. The location has been moved from Room 413 Waterman to Waterman's Memorial Lounge. Open to all. Call Clinton Erb for more information at 3356 or 863-2264.

8 p.m., Opening night of "West Side Story", directed by Professor Ed Feidner and including UVM student and faculty actors. Tickets cost $3.00 for the general public and $1.00 for students. Call 2094 for reservations.

9 p.m., SA Concert Bureau presents "The Beach Boys" at Patrick Gym. This concert is sold out.

MEXICO NORTH
at the 5 corners Essex Jct., Vt.
Largest Selection of American Indian Turquoise & Silver in Vermont
Afghani, Indian & Mexican clothing, leather goods, jewelery, tapestries, antlerpipes, furniture, stained glass, & lots more
Open 9 to 9 Mon-Fri 9 to 5:30 Sat.
10% off any purchase to UVM Students with this ad

Primitive Literature

The Living Literature Program will present a workshop on "Primitive Literature" on Monday, November 18 at 7:30 p.m. This is a repeat of the October 7 workshop held in 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center. The workshop will be presented for the Experimental College at Coolidge dormitory on Redstone Campus, next to Southwick Gym. All are invited. Admission free.

THE RETURN OF THE $1 LIFT TICKET
A Season of Weekday Skiing for $60 Ski Glen Ellen This Year

Glen Ellen... where there is more to skiing... now offers the $60 weekday season pass for college students.

This special season pass is good any weekday of the year except from December 23, 1974 thru January 3, 1975.

Opening Thanksgiving... that leaves over 60 days of fantastic skiing at Glen Ellen... where skiing is what it should be.

28 trails, five lifts, no lift lines, 50 miles of skiing fun.

WRITE OR CALL TODAY... we can only hold this special skiing package until November 15.

Glen Ellen
Ski Glen Ellen Inc.
Ski Glen Ellen, Inc.
Box 111
Waitsfield, Vt. 05673
(802) 496-2900

Dr. Hoyt Discusses Sailing

The UVM Sailing Club has invited Dr. Norris Hoyt for his third year of slides. His show this year is "Getting There and Going Around Together," pictures and talk about the 1974 Bermuda Race and the 1974 America's Cup Races. This will be on Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in B106 Cook. Free.

Dr. Hoyt started the summer of 1974 by navigating Jerry Trimingham's Quest of Paget to the Island. The ship took silver in her class (barely) and was Bermuda's highest scorer in the Onion Patch Trophy Races. Then, while the wealthy, the young, and the unemployed reveled in The Island's fleshpots, Dr. Hoyt flew hastily home and began summer of intense industry visiting the docks and going out on different yachts or tender every day, broadcasting (twice day, writing a 2,500 word dail article, and working in a fe dinner parties, dances, pri givings, receptions, and othe distractions.

The America's Cup Race had come to Newport again, an the town was crowded wit reporters from all over th smiling world, photographer the full crews and suppo groups of six 12 meter yacht and the officials of the Ne York Yacht Club, the Roy Thames Yacht Club, the Roy Perth Yacht Club, and th International Technic Committee. Alan Bond broug

Minolta Contest: Euro For Two

Want to hit Europe next summer, with a friend, and have $5000 in cash to spend?

This dream two months vacation can be all yours. No puzzles to figure out, either. Just take a picture which, in the opinion of judges, is worthy of publication in the Minolta College Gallery and is the best of all entries, and you'll be on your way.

Minolta's photo competition is exclusively for college students. Grad students, too. Male and female.

The big camera company has come up with a big idea: The Minolta College Gallery, a special section to appear periodically in College Magazine and containing at least ten prize winning photos taken by students attending a college or university in the United States.

The top prize will be a two months vacation in Europe n summer for the winner an friend. The company w provide all air transportat and in addition give the winner $5,000 in cash to pay all lodgings, food, grou transportation and ot expenses. Additionally, the travelers will each rece Minolta SR-T 102, 35 reflex cameras.

Contestants, whose pict are published in the Col Gallery, will each receive $ in cash.

Minolta has selected categories for the Col Gallery: sports, still life, s commentary, human inte abstracts, environment, hu or news. Visual effective and technical ability will high. Also, to be considere

Cunningham -Newma

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday: 3:30 p.m.; Tuesday: 4:15 and 10:00 p.m.; Wednesday and Thursday: 4:15 p.m.; Friday: 1:00 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m.; 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and any time by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: Every weekday at 7:30 a.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: for the 4:15 Sunday Mass Group – at 7:30 every Tuesday night.

BASIC CATHOLICISM: Presentation-discussion series on Catholic belief and pra led by Sr. Jeannine and Holland – Monday evenin 7:15.

SCRIPTURE STUDY: emphasis on the Old Testa every Tuesday from 7: 8:00 p.m. Fr. Crowley lea study group.

Hillel House

This Sunday, Nov. 17, will be a Hillel Brunch, st at 7:30 a.m. Following brunch directly will discussion of next s programs planned recent the interested students of

Mobile Homeowner's Bill Of Rights

VPIRG needs volunteers to distribute the Mobile Homeowner's Bill of Rights pamphlet to mobile homes throughout the state. A interested should contac VPIRG office, 49 No. Pro St. 863-3435.

If you are planning to have Santa Claus deliver your Engagement Diamond, now is the right time to make your selection.

YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

Dr. Hoyt Discusses Sailing's Cup Races

The UVM Sailing Club has invited Dr. Morris Hoyt for his third year of slides. His show this year is "Getting There and Going Around, Together," pictures and talk about the 1974 Bermuda Race and the 1974 America's Cup Races. This will be on Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in B106 Cook. Free.

Dr. Hoyt started the summer of 1974 by navigating Jerry Trimingham's Quest of Paget to the Island. The ship took silver in her class (barely) and was Bermuda's highest scorer in the Onion Patch Trophy Races. Then, while the wealthy, the young, and the unemployed reveled in The Island's fleshpots, Dr. Hoyt flew hastily home and began a summer of intense industry – visiting the docks and going out on different yachts or tenders every day, broadcasting twice a day, writing a 2,500 word daily article, and working in a few dinner parties, dances, prize givings, receptions, and other distractions.

The America's Cup Races had come to Newport again, and the town was crowded with reporters from all over the sailing world, photographers, the fast crews and support groups of six 12 meter yachts, and the officials of the New York Yacht Club, the Royal Thames Yacht Club, the Royal Perth Yacht Club, and the International Technical Committee. Alan Bond brought the Australian challenge, the most awesomely mounted effort ever to take away The Cup – $6,000,000 worth of yachts, equipment, sailmakers, engineers, designers, managers, and a French chef. Had the 60ft been sailed when Bond arrived, Southern Cross would have been a quick winner. But Intrepid was redesigned by Olin Stephens, and Courageous was built new to his designs. Between them, after Mariner and Valiant were eliminated, the most dramatic development of sails and techniques in years took place, and the 4-0 victory of the Americans on Courageous became victory – the 22nd in a row for the "auld mug." Remember! B106 Cook, Nov. 14, 7:30 p.m.

Minolta Contest: Europe For Two & $50000

Want to hit Europe next summer, with a friend, and have $5000 in cash to spend?

This dream two months vacation can be all yours. No puzzles to figure out, either. Just take a picture which, in the opinion of judges, is worthy of publication in the Minolta College Gallery and is the best of all entries, and you'll be on your way.

Minolta's photo competition is exclusively for college students. Grad students, too. Male and female.

The big camera company has come up with a big idea: The Minolta College Gallery, a special section to appear periodically in College Magazine and containing at least ten prize winning photos taken by students attending a college or university in the United States.

The top prize will be a two months vacation in Europe next summer for the winner and a friend. The company will provide all air transportation and in addition give the big winner $5,000 in cash to pay for all lodgings, food, ground transportation and other expenses. Additionally, the two travelers will each receive Minolta SR-T 102, 35 mm reflex cameras.

Contestants, whose pictures are published in the College Gallery, will each receive $100 in cash.

Minolta has selected eight categories for the College Gallery: sports, still lifes, social commentary, human interest, abstracts, environment, humor or news. Visual effectiveness and technical ability will rate high. Also, to be considered in the judging will be the appropriateness of the subject matter to a specified category. Judging will be done by an independent organization.

Students can enter as many photos as they wish, but each must have an official entry form. Forms can be obtained at the Vermont Cynic's office and Minolta's advertising department at 101 Williams Drive, Ramsey, N. J., 07446. Entries must be postmarked by January 20, 1975, and received by January 31, 1975.

A Minolta spokesman said that the contest for college students has no connection with any other contest the company might be running simultaneously.

So get that camera loaded with film. And start shooting. We want one of us to win!

Utah Phillips Makes Rare Appearence

Question: What do all of the following have in common? A professor of poetry, a college drop-out, a continuing student of ancient Chinese dynasties, assistant to an Episcopal Missionary to the Navaho, a master-fencer, a founder of both the Utah Science Fiction League and International Rocket Society, a high-school physics class lecturer, a Korean War veteran, Senatorial candidate, IWW agitator, balloonist duck rancher, sheep fornificator, hobo, preacher, and philosopher. Answer: They're one and the same – U. Utah Phillips.

The Golden Voice of the Great Southwest will be making a rare performing appearance next Tuesday night (November 19) at the Simpson Hall Coffee House. Capacity is limited, so plan to arrive early for the 8:30 folk concert. Admission for this special attraction of the coffeehouse will be one dollar.

U. Utah Phillips is a combination of Mark Twain, Will Rodgers, Thomas Wolfe, P. T. Barnum and Woody Guthrie. He's similar to the new generation of songwriters (Steve Goodman, John Prine, Kris Kristofferson, Willie Nelson, Merle Haggard and Jim Croce) in communicating with straight-forward language, and in employing seemingly simple, familiar sounding, and singable tunes. No fancy pseudo-poetry, no semi-mystical symbolism, no long-winded self-indulgence, no unending contemplation of one's own navel, no ego trips and no onanism. They are all similar in that they give us really good songs about things that really count, songs that make listeners become singers rather than passive auditor's for someone else's performance.

The similarity ends there, for Bruce "Utah" Phillips has managed to get his songs known to music lovers who are members of regional folksong societies, attend festivals, frequent coffee houses and folk clubs – and all without the benefit of high-powered managers, agents, record producers, publishing houses, and all the rest of the talent, and flesh-peddling rip-off artists who comprise the music industry.

Stereo/Amplifier Clinic

The only thing worse than dumping a Schlitz on the top of your stereo amp Saturday night while putting on Steely Dan, trying not to burn your fingers with the joint someone has passed you, is having your amp go on Sunday afternoon when you're trying hard to forget about the exam you're having on Monday. Watering down your amp is one thing, you know what is exactly wrong with it, every tube, transistor, and wire has been soaked, shorted, or otherwise messed up.

When your amp begins to act funny for no apparent reason you know you're in trouble. You'll have to take it down to a shop, where they'll have you sign away your car, your first born son, and probably your key to the back door of Gamma Phi. Simply put, it's going to cost you to get your amp fixed when you don't know what's wrong with it.

To let you know just how your amp is performing, and if it's not why, the good people at Tech HiFi and the Ed-Rec members of the LL Center are having an Amplifier Clinic on Monday, Nov. 25, from 7 to 11 p.m. in the Living Learning Center Commons. Anyone that wants their amplifier checked out can bring it over and guys from Tech HiFi will test it out with their special equipment.

If you don't have a stereo to be tested come on over anyways and hear some of the really big stereo systems on the market today. You'll be able to and hear some of those systems you've always heard about but never had a chance to examine first-hand.

Unity Players To Perform "Touchpoint"

"It gives you a feeling of what it's like to be free."

The Unity Players, a women's theatre group from Burlington, will be performing Touchpoint Friday night, November 15th at 8 p.m. in Room 115 Commons in the Living/Learning Center.

"The Education Cluster B program is sponsoring the performance, so admission is free.

Touchpoint is a 90 minute piece created from our lives. It explores and celebrates human relationships with dialogue, music and group motion. There will be a workshop following the performance, so come dressed comfortably.

Ten Year Transportation Plan For Final Public Hearing

The Transportation Advisory Board (TAB), charged with writing a ten year transportation plan for Vermont, will hold a public hearing on Tuesday, November 19 at 7:30 in Memorial Lounge in Waterman Building. Prior to the hearing, Carl Bohlen, the highway co-ordinator for the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG), will hold a meeting in the Round Room of Billings at 6:30 to answer any questions or fill people in on the TAB's actions.

This is the third round of public hearings held by the TAB in writing the plan. However, it is the first time the public gets to examine and comment on the construction plans – air, railroad, and highway, and it is the construction plans that determine how tax dollars are spent.

The highway plan as adopted by the TAB was trimmed of projects that could not have been built in the ten year period due to lack of money. However, the projects in the plan are on new location requiring major reconstruction. This is a direct contradiction of one of the policy statements in the draft ten-year plan.

The adopted policy puts priority on spot improvements of highways rather than major reconstruction or relocation. Spot improvements allow more highway mileage to be upgraded using the same amount of money.

Attend the public hearings to express your satisfaction or dissatisfaction with the construction plans or the draft ten year plan. The VPIRG meeting will also help provide some background.

IRA Proposes Increased Fee

The meeting of the Inter-Residence Association began at 7:15 p.m. at the Harris-Millis Conference Room on Monday, November 11 with a presentation from Dr. Richard Powers, Associate Executive Vice President. Powers informed IRA of the reorganization of academic offices in the Waterman Building for the purpose of educating IRA representatives concerning the upcoming planning process.

Later the Bylaws for IRA were handed out so that they may be reviewed and altered if need be.

Rick Warner then gave the treasurer's report. Since there is little money to work with there was discussion of a $1 raise in the IRA fee for the following academic year. This would make a total of a $4 ID fee; $2 going to every dorm and $2 to IRA for campus activities. This $1 raise could greatly affect IRA's potentialities.

Next, Ann Cassavant, vice-president, stated that the IRA office, in lower Harris-Millis, now contains the History of IRA notes from Orientations since 1958, and the minutes of meetings of the precursors of IRA, such as Women's Student Government Association.

Ann is reading through these to come up with ideas for further projects. Karen Fleisher, vice-president for Programs, reported on a meeting of the Student Task Force. A motion was passed to endorse the IRA Breakfast Program, which will be for the benefit of hungry children who are unable to eat breakfast before going to school.

There will be a special six coupon dinner in a specified dining hall to benefit the Breakfast Program before Christmas. One coupon of the six coupons will be donated to the IRA Breakfast Program.

There was some discussion of having a bank next to the Coupon Bank in Waterman or at the Store in MAT where students can donate coupons for the Breakfast Program at the end of the semester.

Will Coolidge from the Energy Commission, spoke about the possibilities for fuel conservation during the winter for next semester. He welcomes any suggestions of fuel conservation. New business: Simpson is sponsoring an all-campus Simpson Casino Night on Friday, November 15. There will be gambling, etc. and a ski pass ticket will be first prize. Simpson is also sponsoring a coffeehouse on Tuesday, November 19, featuring Utah Phillips, a folksinger. At the end of the IRA meeting, Kandy, our secretary read off the IRA newsletter names. The prize for the best title will be a dinner at the Sirloin Saloon for two.

Ken Bartlett, IRA President, discussed the possibility of sponsoring a child. The meeting was adjourned at 8:50 p.m.

Cunningham -Newman Center

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday: 3:30 p.m.; Tuesday: 4:15 and 10:00 p.m.; Wednesday and Thursday: 4:15 p.m.; Friday: 1:00 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m.; 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and any time by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: Every weekday at 7:30 a.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: for the 4:15 Sunday Mass Group – at 7:30 every Tuesday night.

BASIC CATHOLICISM: Presentation-discussion series on Catholic belief and practice, led by Sr. Jeannine and Fr. Holland – Monday evenings at 7:15.

SCRIPTURE STUDY: with emphasis on the Old Testament, every Tuesday from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. Fr. Crowley leads the study group.

PRE–CANA SERIES: This marriage preparation series is being held at St. Anthony's parish in the Inter-Parish Center. The last two presentations of the four-part series are as follows: "Finance" with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doppman on November 17; "Theology of Marriage" with Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stronach on Nov. 24.

DAY OF AWARENESS: This Thursday, Nov. 14, Fr. Bryan Hehir will be speaking on Justice and Peace issues at Trinity College. Discussions and other talks will be held as well.

Hillel House

This Sunday, Nov. 17, there will be a Hillel Brunch, starting at 7:30 a.m. Following the brunch directly will be a discussion of next semester's programs planned recently by the interested students of Hillel.

Mobile Homeowner's Bill Of Rights

VPIRG needs volunteers to distribute the Mobile Homeowner's Bill of Rights pamphlet to mobile homes throughout the state. Anyone interested should contact the VPIRG office, 49 No. Prospect St. 863-3435.

Primitive Literature

The Living Literature program will present a workshop on "Primitive Literature" on Monday, November 18 at 7:30 p.m. This is a repeat of the October 7 workshop held in 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center. The workshop will be presented for the Experimental College at Coolidge dormitory on Redstone Campus, next to Southwick Gym. All are invited. Admission free.

If you are planning to have Santa Claus deliver your Engagement Diamond, now is the right time to make your selection.

YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

WE WILL FILL YOUR PRESCRIPTIONS FOR LESS

Grandway Pharmacy
Grandway Shopping Center
Shelburne Road
864-6869

DOMINO'S PIZZA
FREE DELIVERY
Fri. & Sat. till 2.00am
Sunday till 12 midnight

864-7444 WILLISTON ROAD
658-3333 N. WINOOSKI AVE

SUPPER SPECIAL! Mon.-Sun. 4.30-8.00 pm.
$1.00 off a LARGE PIZZA except large pizza

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
PHONE _____

REILLY TIRE COMPANY
FROM RECAPS TO RADIALS
WE HAVE IT

BE PSYCHED AND SET FOR THE SNOW !

Inverno etna

PIRELLI

A remarkable snow tire. Its distinctive tread bites into mud, slush, soft or crusted snow. Plunged sidewalls push snow into a firm supporting track to prevent lateral sliding. Step on the accelerator, change gears, take a curve or hit the brakes – Pirelli Inverno grip . . . and hold.

Mohawk Storm Trac

- 4 ply nylon - 78 series
- Exclusive Zero-Flex tread – remains soft at below-zero temperatures.
- Dual white sidewalls
- Tough, deep tread
- Plowed—ready for sled application

ACCESSIBLE TO UVM
31 San Remo Drive
So. Burlington
(Behind Burlington Rent-All)

ACCOMPANIED BY A COPY OF THIS AD
Install and Balance Your Snowtires—$5.00

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Barbara Frankel '75, Editor-in-Chief
Rick Greenberg '75, Associate Editor
Wyatt Reed '77, Managing Editor
Randy Jensen '77, News Editor
Margo Rowland '75, Features Editor
Lissa Charles '75, Arts Editor
Peter Campbell '75, Assistant Arts Editor
Mike Schwartz '75, Sports Editor
Kathy Shumsky '77, Copy Editor
Debbie Powell, '76, Advertising Manager

Editorial

The Professorial Purge

The University of Vermont, once again, is undergoing a purge. Each year, it seems, the Administration attempts to clear its house of anyone and everyone who could possibly say anything unique.

Last year, however, the hatchet men were obvious. When three philosophy professors were shockingly dismissed, at least we knew why and could register our insufficient protests. This time, they've come up with a new approach. Everything is clouded in a veil of bureaucratic secrecy. No one knows who, when, or, most importantly, why. All we know now is that the Administration is planning some drastic cutbacks, including the firing of many professors.

The probability exists that tenured professors will also be fired and some departments may be entirely eliminated. One professor recently suggested that if the University is forced to eliminate certain positions, they have the decency to retrain and partially compensate the unemployed. This seems like a fair suggestion.

Last spring, the Administration announced that those professors up for reappointment or tenure would be informed of their status in September. Most of them are still waiting to hear. With each passing day, the certainty of a professorial purge grows. At least give them a chance to find another job.

This is not merely a faculty issue. If the Administration continues to rid itself of its faculty, new faculty members will not want to come to the University of Vermont.

A university is supposed to be a learning and teaching community. UVM is quickly becoming a haven for mealy-mouthed bureaucrats who publish frequently. The students are the real victims. If there is no diversified learning experience, we may all end up in the Administration.

B.F.

Back To The Nunnery ?

by Linda Cayton

(IF) The few male students at a predominantly female college are organizing a security force ostensibly designed to protect women students, but which has the potential to jettison the school back to the Victorian age.

Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Virginia existed for many years as the women's half of the all-male University of Virginia. When, a federal court found the university to be following a pattern of sexual discrimination and ordered it to admit women, MWC followed suit and opened its doors to men. As a women's college, MWC maintained many social rules which were slow to break down. For years, only men whose names appeared on an administration approved list could visit students on campus; dances were open only to guests invited by the dean of students, women were not allowed in certain isolated areas of campus with dates; men could only be entertained in public places.

But through years of effort, MWC women gradually took control of their lives. By the time men arrived on campus as students, almost no social regulations governed the student body. To those used to the concept of the old-style girls' school, MWC had become known as "the bordello of the south."

After attempted assaults on two MWC women recently, the 47 male students organized a squad to patrol the campus and to protect the women from harm.

"All the guys are pretty uptight about this. We are a pretty close knit community here," remarked one male student. "We are going to kick ass this weekend. We are out for blood. Instead of waiting around for something to happen, we are going to prevent trouble if we can."

The men suggested that women instruct their male friends to meet them inside the dorm parlor or in the snack bar, otherwise, "if she tells a guy to meet her on the steps of a dorm, we may already have kicked him off campus by the time she comes out. If nothing else we can get them for loitering."

To the women on campus now and the women before them who fought to liberalize the social rules at MWC, the plan suggested by the male protectors is ironic and dangerous. All the social rules which were so unacceptable when they were being handed down from a male chancellor are no more acceptable when they are mandated by 47 fellow students. The issue is still the same. Women deserve to control their lives. Aid is sometimes welcomed but can never be mandated. It will be very sad if the struggle for self-determination has to be repeated, this time with other students.

The women at MWC have had problems with assaults before. Women on most campuses have.

I suspect that the vigilantes at MWC have more in common with the attacker than they would care to admit.

The problem is the way in which men envision women. Make no mistake, the vigilantes at MWC are not as concerned with protecting the women on campus as they are with extending their influence in a machismo fight over property rights – in this case the property being women.

It reminds me of the movies about Cossacks raiding, plundering and raping while the lords of the manor gather all the women and children behind the castle walls as they wade into battle against the intruder.

Frankly, we defended ourselves pretty well before the men came to MWC, and don't care to trade the freedoms we have won for assistance on that end.

The men at Mary Washington advocate, for the sake of safety, that the women get themselves back to the proverbial nunnery. But MWC women have tasted the fruits of their freedom and will just as likely turn their rage on their protectors as on their attackers.

Greek Involvement

by P.M. Bartley

Welcome back my friends, to the show that never ends! The annual Sigma Nu "Hawaiian party" is once again history, and as the thoughts of we at Groovy-UV turn to turkey and cranberry relish, the spectre of what we all know and hate, final exams, begins to loom ever more ominously over our horizons. The wisdom of Waterman with respect to finals has been the subject of much heated debate, the nature of which is inappropriate for this column.

What I do deem appropriate is to put final exams in the proper perspective, for although finals are unquestionably a great source of misery and unhappiness for UVM students, outside this campus there exists a real world in which misery and unhappiness are facts of life for millions of people. The Greek houses at UVM are working to make the world a little better, and to their efforts I now turn.

All UVM sororities are currently involved in the Emergency Food Shelf program, their efforts being coordinated by the Panhellenic Council. This program, which is sponsored by the Burlington Ecumenical Action Ministry, (BEAM), involves the dispensation of food to local disaster victims and to welfare recipients who cannot stretch their food budgets far enough. Contributions of food and/or money are accepted on a monthly basis by BEAM, and to this end each of the six UVM sororities has been assigned a given month in which they are to make a contribution. November is Alpha Chi Omega's month, more on their work later.

Pi Beta Phi sorority is currently involved in collecting money for the Arthritis Foundation of America. The sisters of Pi Phi have distributed collection containers to public places throughout the community, the results of this effort will be reported at a future date.

Sigma Phi fraternity is in the process of putting together a Thanksgiving food basket to be presented to a needy Burlington family. This annual project now costs the brothers upwards of 70 dollars to put together, for which they deserve more praise than they are likely to receive.

Somewhat belatedly, I would like to report on a fund-raising dance held jointly by Delta Psi first and Kappa Alpha Theta sorority after the UVM-UNH football game. The dance benefitted the UVM Day-Care Center, and was by all standards a success.

Well kids, as the sun sets in the west and dinner settles in my tummy, it becomes time for me to leave and hope for what we all know as THE social center at UVM-the library. See you later... much.

Letters To The Editor

Skimpy Review

To the Editor:

The scene at the Cynic office day before deadline. Confrontation between "arts editor" and "editor in chief".

Barbara Frankel: What do you mean nobody covered the Bonnie Raitt Benefit Concert?

Lissa Charles: Now don't panic Barbara. We can easily make up an article and stick it in. Nobody will notice. I've listened to one of her albums and am sort of familiar with her music.

Barbara: Maybe you're right. If we stick it into the back, no one will notice, I'm sure. And besides, I've heard that everyone at the concert was so high they couldn't remember much of it anyway! But who is going to take the responsibility for this article? Lissa: I never thought of that. Maybe we should make up a common pseudonym and let it go at that.

Barbara: All right. How does Helen sound? We don't have any Helens on our staff.

Lissa: We don't have any beds either(yawn...!) Let's use one.

Was this how it was ladies? We can use our imaginations, too. We were there, and feel there's much more to say than what your skimpy, poorly written article covered. Was the crowd so tightly packed that you couldn't manage to get a photographer up to the stage? This must be one of the most successful benefit concerts in Burlington's history. Why was the Liberty Union Party not mentioned? No word about how much money was made, although the concert was sold out. No mention of Bonnie's latest album "Streetlights," much less any attempt to describe previous albums or her unique musical style.

Also, get your names straight! Her encore was "Guilty," not "Don't You Give It Up." As a matter of fact, Bonnie doesn't even perform a song entitled "Don't You Give It Up."

Since Bonnie Raitt was the "best concert Burlington has seen for a long time," why wasn't it covered properly? Get your shit together!!

Marie Ames
Nancy Parenteau
Ann Dingerson
Gayle Gamble

Beach Boys Concert

To The Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to clear up a few misunderstandings about the upcoming Beach Boys Concert and specifically to respond to a letter in last week's Cynic.

First of all, it would be impossible to make available enough tickets for every student to buy one. The Patrick gymnasium only holds 5000 people, while there are about 6000 undergraduates. We did our best to spread out the tickets by limiting the sale to two per ID.

As far as the price of the ticket is concerned, our total expenses amount to $23,000. If we did set the student ticket at $4.50, we would not pull in enough money to cover our expenses. Unlike concert bureaus at other schools which have budgets, and can afford to lose a lot of money on each concert, we have a small budget of $6000 for the year and depend on ticket sales to cover our expenses. We have to try to keep our $6000 intact in case a concert does lose money as in the case of the Souther - Hillman - Furay concert which lost about $2000.

We have looked into the possibility of selling tickets at other parts of the campus, but the bookstore is the only place equipped to handle the large sums of money that changed hands for this concert.

We would also like to bring up another point. In a review of the Souther - Hillman - Furay concert, Paul Prior called the light operators "morons" without ever investigating the situation. There was no doubt that the spot lights were aimed at the wrong performer at times but the point of the matter was that our light operators were taking orders via intercom from the light manager of the band. They were following instructions and it was S-F-F's light man that was making the mistake.

Finally, SA Concerts would like to thank the students for their support. The Beach Boys concert sold more tickets in less time than any concert in UVM's history. We hope to keep up the good, shows throughout next semester.

Sincerely,
SA Concerts

'Open Season'

To the Editor:

In reaction to "Open Season: The Burning Issue", which appeared in the Oct. 24 issue of your newspaper and was authored by Scott McKay, why can't the phenomena "there exists in this country an ever widening gulf between the people who do society's dirty work and people who live off their efforts" be explained by the Marxist economic philosophy? I contend that it can, and furthermore, the resulting educational hierarchy is a phenomenon directly resulting from economic stratification in contemporary society.

A university education in Norway is financed by the state-thus, ability and desire (a good deal of both I concede) are sufficient to acquire the coveted degree. In the states, education is by and large dependent upon one's socio-economic status and is a pillar of WASP culture. As for American Culture, is there any culture besided the upper-class culture? (The one exception to this generalization is the Black Culture, now coming into its own) Isn't the purchasing of luxuries and comforting gadgets a symbol of affluence? Don't people defend Democracy as being the system which is a veritable paradise for upward mobility? And, once we're on the top, how quickly we forget the plight of the worker. The worker who can't criticize the system (individually) as "he can be replaced" and economics -sweet economics- despite one's convictions it takes money to feed and clothe oneself and one's family.

McKay perceptively described the ultimate contradiction of our society as an economic matter "... people who derive high personal and financial benefits from society (and) do not believe in its tenets and mores at all." How Accurate! 'Tis the preamble which proclaims the equality of men yet Ford's new chief economic advisor is admittedly a supporter of Ayn Rand's objectionist philosophy. Ms. Rand contends that all men are not created equal and that ancient civilizations reached their pinnacles of greatness because slaves served and the superior thought. That, my friends, is 'Fascism' Need we add the plight of the migrant workers, factory workers, the unemployed, not to mention big business virtually buying the Prendent as their figurehead.

Workers are powerless now because of their apathy and lack of education and cohesiveness. Their lack of power by no means infers their lack of rights, intelligence or ability. They're mostly being suffocated by a price tag of course. As long as people are defined by economic terms feelings of blatant inadequacy and painful loneliness abound- giving rise to coping methods such as alcoholism, neuroses, and psychoses. Granted, these matters are vastly complex, but I believe they're fundamentally reactions to contemporary society.

Change can only be brought about by the working class (not to mention women, blacks, and all minorities striving for much needed and overdue liberation). Of course, solidarity of workers is immediately shot down as communism (Kent State) and evil to our way of life, as undermining the basic tenets of Democracy; but really haven't these tenets been twisted into Capitalism, a situation which has reached its peak in the States — a situation characterized by unquestioning people slaving under the illusion of freedom and Democracy and blindly defending their oppressor.

Sincerely,
Wendy Coons
Junior Year
Scandinavian Seminar in Norway

Inefficient University

To the Editor:

I would just like to comment on the inefficiency of this University. The experience that triggered off my anger began when I attempted to cash a check in the UVM bookstore. Because of the long ticket line for the Beach Boys Concert, the University sent me running in circles all morning. After I refused to wait an hour and a half in the line (because there was only one cashier on duty) I tried the cashiers at the registers and then the bookstore manager. He sent me to the Bursar's office where they told me that students couldn't cash checks there. They sent me back to the bookstore after assuring me that they had told the manager that there was to be two lines – one for tickets, one for cashing checks. When I returned to the bookstore, they had, in fact, two lines but both led to the same cashier. In my anger, I finally conceded to waiting 25 minutes in line to cash the check. I justify my complaint in stating that as an out-of-state student, I pay $4000 per year to attend UVM along with many others who complain of tuition hikes every year. With all the money, we furnish the University, I see no reason UVM can't pay an extra cashier $2.00 an hour to service the students! To me this is a better way to spend money, than using it to pay workers to fill the speed dips with tar for Parent's Weekend and digging them out again afterwards. This inconvenience and confusion was not necessary and should be alleviated in the future.

Gina Rayfield

The Speed Dips

To the Editor:

Negative attitudes and cynicism towards the administration of UVM are often voiced by students. It is my opinion that this is justified. Students are paying high tuition rates to attend UVM while frequently being left in confusion as to how usefully their money is being spent. One obvious example is the case of the speed dips, on which there was an enlightening article in The Cynic, November 7, 1974. Belated as it was (about 2 years), it has now clarified the issue and much animosity concerning it.

The Cynic is a student newspaper with the purpose of informing students. Let's have more articles that tell the facts about University actions and allow students to formulate intelligent opinions on the issues.

Jean I. Plumer

The Cynic welcomes letters and columns from students, faculty or any other readers. Material for publication must be signed, but names will be withheld upon request.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arlen, George Gonopolis, Andy Moore, Audrey Rothstein
FEATURE: Paul Agostin, Carol Dolph, Amy-Catherine Fischer, Pam Hogarth
ARTS: Bart Bull, Robert Dodge, Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Jon Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Price, Marsha Walter
COLUMNISTS: Debbie Adler, Tom McCormick, Scott McKay, Steve Rice, Elliot Penman
SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Green, Rick Katz, Nason Robinson
PRODUCTION: Jean Pennell, Karen Hill, Beth LeVien, Mark Valle, Daniel Magil
ADVERTISING: Ka Gordon Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grossner, Debbie Powell
BUSINESS MANAGER: Pam Gannon

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 656-0013. Deadline for material is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscriptions cost $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Gathering The News

by Steve Levine

Here is yet another disturbing little secret about the business of gathering the news.

The doings of public figures are most often boring. Those who must follow these doings on a daily basis quickly become aware of the overwhelming tedium of the endless procession of press releases and news conferences by way of which the bigger communicate with the masses. Most reporters will insist that the trouble with this line of work is low pay or capricious editing or in general the queasy miasma of suspicion in which the whole process operates. Give me any of that but please keep the boredom.

After a time one tends to develop a secret set of ratings for public figures based on entertainment value. It may be this phenomenon that creates the rather kinky streak in journalism sometimes known as sensationalism. Those who think that sensationalism results from a mad desire to sell papers are nuts. Newspapers couldn't care less about selling newspapers. It's advertising space they sell.

No, Martha Mitchell and Evel Knievel are not the products of cynical media executives but rather of bored reporters.

Each news beat had its own bunch of characters, politics having no shortage of them. Sam Ervin is a good example.

But my current favorite for political amusement is a dark horse of sorts, Attorney General Saxbe. Aha, now we find out what this is all about.

I have on several occasions made note of Mr. Saxbe's eccentric public utterances, such as his characterization of Patricia Hearst as "a common criminal," and his subsequent remarks on the subject of a national police force.

I have now become grateful for the Attorney General's odd habit of opening his mouth with the best of intentions and having the truth come out. Saxbe is, from a journalistic point of view, a rare and valuable commodity, a high official who knows nothing of circumspection.

When Saxbe made his statement about Miss Hearst he in effect let slip a hint of the government's policy toward the SLA. After that memorable press conference the violence in Los Angeles could not have been much of a surprise to anyone.

So now I find it interesting that Mr. Saxbe chose to speak as he did to police chiefs recently.

Saxbe said to thunderous applause, that the idea of rehabilitating criminals had failed, that the only answer to mounting crime problem is to put criminals out of business with eternal sentencing.

This is not a novel suggestion. It has always been an article of Republican ideology that the cause of crime is criminals.

However, for many years the technical bureaucracy that oversees the administration of justice in this country has acted in opposition to this position. Those who have studied the problem of social violence in this country, such as the Kerner Commission, have generally found that it is poverty that causes crime and that for as long as there is one there will be the other. In efforts to contain the spread of crime, courts have more and more adopted the strategy of trying to break the pattern of criminal behavior in an offender's life rather than merely breaking the offender. The economic realities of mass justice dictate this approach, the other one being simply unmanageable in a society that must by its nature continue to be a breeding ground for crime. No industrialized country can afford to lock up everybody who transgresses unless that is to be its sole occupation.

Taken in light of these realities then, Saxbe's ramblings could be dismissed as sword rattling for the benefit of the GOP's posting conservative wing.

On the other hand, maybe just because it's Saxbe, there could be something in there.

If this nation is in fact headed for big economic trouble then it follows that there will be an expansion of the unmoneyed classes. The social interpretation of crime would hold that this will bring an increase in lawbreaking. If the government is going to wage successful war against lawbreaking on a scale larger than that of the present it will either have to attack its economic policies or eliminate all public sympathy for violators. The administration may be hoping that an attitude of show-'em-no-mercy may distract public attention from the disturbing facts that the way the economy works or fails to work is driving more and more people to lives of crime.

I believe that someone has devised a name for this: unthink.

And for any connoisseur of unthink the comments of Attorney General Saxbe are a must.

ON A REMAINING HILL

On a hill, overlooking the city,
a man, hidden with whiskers and rags,
stirs the liquid in his pot,
its bottom black from the flame,
which, near and warm to him
has little meaning in the city beyond.

There are few hills left to climb,
he thinks, raising his spoon to his lips,
brown and yellow from chewing tobacco.
And herbs and dandelions are growing few,
he reminds himself, tasting the stew,
which is as bitter as black coffee.

His eyes, heavy with gray, glance upward to the sky, heavy with clouds moving in from the west, from the lake he went skinny-dipping in when a child, wild with summer adventure.
Sadly he remembers the lake is closed today,
little boys must go elsewhere to play.

Finishing his stew, he wipes the remains from his whiskers, licking his hand, like a kitten does to his paw.
He stirs the coals into ashes, leaving a single ember, to focus his mind and soul, which dies as slowly as the ember until the ashes of five,
and the lights of the city, beyond his hill.

Sup

Steven Rice

Open Seaso

by Scott McKay

Tuesday, Oct. 29, 1974 – It's almost closing time nearly deserted bar. A tall, sinewy black figure struts th the door, cracks an exuberent, toothy grin so wide he swallow a banana sideways, peers over at an alcohol lade truly and almost matter-of-factly utters, "George F coorde had a shotgun in his corner and it still wouldn't ha him any good."

.....

Muhammed Ali burst upon the American consciou decade ago with a seventh round TKO over then heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston. Ali, in c Liston against seven-to-one odds, was heralded as a b sorely needed fresh air for a declining sport, as box plummetted to its nadir in the public mind. He was cele playful poetry, pre-fight antics and ring choreography d fans and led copy hungry sportswriters to dub "Louisville Lip". Indeed, Sonny Liston, the ex-conv reputed underworld connections, known as much for h with policemen as his battles in the ring, was a capstone boxing had become. Ali's deft, dancing defeat of the provided the catharsis boxing needed, as well as the necessary for packing closed circuit television theatres Cassius Marcellus Clay then.

The morning after his triumphant bout, the new c held a press conference in Miami. Ali, confirming the suspicions of many observers, disclosed his black Musli and brashly told the shocked gathering of reporters don't have to be what you want me to be. I am free to want." The reporters fled to their typewriters to caustic columns denigrating his achievement and his The Wm. Morris Agency, which a week earlier had offe $250,000 dollar per year personal appearance-end contract, hastily withdrew the offer and even denied existence.

It was only the beginning, merely a brutal harbin torrent of repression and vilification that America would rain down upon the classiest champion in boxin Ali's tilt with Liston was over; it was only round one of battle with the dark, seamy side of the American chara

.....

Americans desire their athletes to be humble, ra Horatio Alger examples of how hard work within eventually reaps huge rewards. And boxing is the machismo sport, one of the last bastions of the Hemin hero. While it has always seemed absurd that males s to prove their manhood through essentially animal fighting and fucking – this sentiment is nonetheles venerated. For the Apollo figure of the heavywe champion is perched atop a pedestal that transcen boundaries; he is easily the most famous athlete in Even soccer stars like Pele are not widely regarde American soil, and the American sporting pantheon Mantles, Chamberlains and Orrs means little to foreig

The machismo boxing is infused with has fo replete with racial overtones. It always has been incarnation of the "fight your way up" the socia ladder shibboleth, the route from the ghetto to the lavendar Cadillac society. It cannot be denied tha black dominance of the pugilistic empire makes uneasy. Witness that the endless, futile search for a hope" has kept hacks like Jerry Quarry and Geo drawing fat paychecks long after their dubious dissipated, years after their minds and bodies had b from serving as white punching bags for superior All this makes blind adherence to the national cre crucial for any black champion.

.....

Along came our national nightmare, Vietnam Ali, reclassified to 1-A status, refused to step induction into the army. Though Ali claimed objection on the grounds of his ministerial role Muslim religion, the U.S. government nonethel prosecute, or more accurately, persecute, the ch never convicted; the Supreme Court later ex unanimously.

But the unconvicted, undefeated Ali was stripped of his crown by the boxing commis commissions are self-righteous waterheads who sodden too much with whiskey, whose collective shaped by RING magazine and the American I who wrap their wires in Old Glory before going to boxing commissions that unquestionably meted convicts, rapists and every genre of shady dege refused, in the name of protecting patriotism Motherhood and the American way of life, cleanest-living professional athlete in the nation occupation. Ali was sentenced by these xenophob to three and a half years exile, during which permitted to fight anywhere in the U.S.

It wasn't enough that the patrioteers extracted their piece of flesh from Ali. He w virtually every segment of the American Conservative gladly and all around articulate fa Buckley, wrote, "one can only hope, to put it in will succeed in knocking some sense into Clay's h done damaging the sport and the country..." Spo of whom should be relegated to covering whe nursing homes, denounced Ali's ring opponents a and lumbering fools and berated the champion

●●●●●

The Outlaw

Some say he was an outlaw, that he roamed a with a band of unschooled ruffians and few o
No one knew just where he came from or exa done, but they said it must be something bad that run.

Some say he was a poet, that he'd stand upon and his voice could calm an angry crowd or stand still, that he spoke in many parables that a few co but the people sat for hours just to listen to

Some say he was a sorcerer, a man of myster he could walk upon the water, he could mak see, that he conjured wine at weddings and did t bread that he talked of being born again and raised dead.

Some say he was a politician, who spoke-of he was followed by the masses on the shores He spoke out against corruption, and he flow and they feared his strength and power so th a tree

Some say he was the Son of God, a man abo but he came to be a servant and to set us fre and that's who I believe he is 'cause that's and I think we should get ready 'cause it's t leave.

words by Le

Season'

...Cynic's advisor is admittedly a supporter of Ayn Rand's objectionist philosophy. Ms. Rand contends that all men are not created equal and that ancient civilizations reached their pinnacles of greatness because slaves obeyed and the superior thought. That, my friends, is Fascism! Need we add the plight of the migrant workers, factory workers, the unemployed, not to mention big business virtually buying the President as their figurehead.

Workers are powerless now because of their apathy and lack of education and consciousness. Their lack of power by no means infers their lack of rights, intelligence or ability. They're mostly being suffocated by a price tag of course. As long as people are defined by economic terms feelings of blatant inadequacy and painful loneliness abound— giving rise to coping methods such as alcoholism, neuroses, and psychoses. Granted, these matters are vastly complex, but I believe they're fundamentally reactions to contemporary society.

Change can only be brought about by the working class(not to mention women, blacks, and all minorities striving for much needed and overdue liberation). Of course, solidarity of workers is immediately shot down as communism (Kent State) and evil to our way of life, as undermining the basic tenets of Democracy, but really haven't these tenets been twisted into Capitalism, a situation which has reached its peak in the States — a situation characterized by unquestioning people slaving under the illusion of freedom and Democracy and blindly defending their oppressor.

Sincerely,
Wendy Coons
Junior Year
Scandinavian Seminar in Norway

t University

...bad, in fact, two lines but both led to the same cashier. In my anger, I finally conceded to waiting 25 minutes in line to cash the check. I justify my complaint in stating that as an out-of-state student, I pay $4000 per year to attend UVM along with many others who complain of tuition hikes every year. With all the money, we furnish the University, I see no reason UVM can't pay an extra cashier $2.00 an hour to service the students! To me this is a better way to spend money, than using it to pay workers to fill the speed dips with tar for Parent's Weekend and digging them out again afterwards. This inconvenience and confusion was not necessary and should be alleviated in the future.

Gina Rayfield

ed Dips

...belated as it was (about 2 years), it has now clarified the issue and much animosity concerning it.

The Cynic is a student newspaper with the purpose of informing students. Let's have more articles that tell the facts about University actions and allow students to formulate intelligent opinions on the issues.

Jean I. Plumer

...ers and columns from students. Material for publication must be ...ld upon request.

NT CYNIC

...Steve Eric Elliott, President
SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Crane, Rick Katz, Norm Robinson
PRODUCTION: Jean Ponsetti, Karen Hill, Barb LeVine, Mark Volk, Daniel Mead ADVERTISING: Ka[illegible] Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Greaves, Debbie Powell
BUSINESS MANAGER: Pete Gannon

...editorials, cartoons, or columns of ...ually reflect the opinions of the ...Boards, or staff, or the Board of ...ntrol by the editorials do and ...opinion of the majority of the ...orial Board.

...by the college year by the students ...ont and State Agricultural College, ...offices in the Billings Center, ...elephone: 656-4031. Deadline for ...e date of publication. ...ubscriptions are $8.00 per year, single

Open Season: Muhammed Ali

by Scott McKay

Tuesday, Oct. 29, 1974 – It's almost closing time in this nearly deserted bar. A tall, sinewy black figure struts through the door, cracks an exuberant, toothy grin so wide he could swallow a banana sideways, peers over at an alcohol laden young truly and almost matter-of-factly utters, "George Foreman couldn had a shotgun in his corner and it still wouldn't have done him any good."

•••••••••

Muhammed Ali burst upon the American consciousness a decade ago with a seventh round TKO over then reigning heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston. Ali, in defeating Liston against seven-to-one odds, was heralded as a breath of sorely needed fresh air for a declining sport, as boxing had plummetted to its nadir in the public mind. He was colorful, his playful poetry, pre-fight antics and ring choreography delighted fans and led copy hungry sportswriters to dub him the "Louisville Lip". Indeed, Sonny Liston, the ex-convict with reputed underworld connections, known as much for his brawls with policemen as his battles in the ring, was a capstone of what boxing had become. Ali's deft, dancing defeat of the "Big Bear" provided the catharsis boxing needed, as well as the publicity necessary for packing closed circuit television theatres. He was Cassius Marcellus Clay then.

The morning after his triumphant bout, the new champion held a press conference in Miami. Ali, confirming the long-held suspicions of many observers, disclosed his black Muslim beliefs and brashly told the shocked gathering of reporters that, "I don't have to be what you want me to be; I am free to be who I want." The reporters fled to their typewriters to compose caustic columns denigrating his achievement and his religion. The Wm. Morris Agency, which a week earlier had offered him a $250,000 dollar per year personal appearance-endorsement contract, hastily withdrew the offer and even denied its original existence.

It was only the beginning, merely a brutal harbinger of the torrent of repression and vilification that American society would rain down upon the cleverest champion in boxing history. Ali's tilt with Liston was over; it was only round one of a ten year battle with the dark, seamy side of the American character.

••••••••••

Americans desire their athletes to be humble, rags-to-riches Horatio Alger examples of how hard work within the system eventually reaps huge rewards. And boxing is the penultimate machismo sport, one of the last bastions of the Hemingwayesque hero. While it has always seemed absurd that males should seek to prove their manhood through essentially animal pursuits – fighting and fucking – this sentiment is nonetheless universally regerated. For the Apollo figure of the heavyweight boxing champion is perched atop a pedestal that transcends national boundaries; he is easily the most famous athlete in the world. Even soccer stars like Pele are not widely regarded on North American soil, and the American sporting pantheon of Namaths, Manfies, Chamberlains and Orrs means little to foreigners.

The machismo boxing is infused with has forever been replete with racial overtones. It always has been the athletic incarnation of the "fight your way up", the social darwinian ladder shibboleth, the route from the ghetto to the glitter of the lavendar Cadillac society. It cannot be denied that the recent black dominance of the pugilistic empire makes many whites uneasy. Witness that the endless, futile search for a "great white hope" has kept hacks like Jerry Quarry and George Chuvalo drawing fat paychecks long after their dubious talents had dissipated, years after their minds and bodies had become addled from serving as white punching bags for superior black fighters. All this makes blind adherence to the national creed even more crucial for any black champion.

••••••••••••

Along came our national nightmare, Vietnam. Muhammed Ali, reclassified to 1-A status, refused to step forward for induction into the army. Though Ali claimed conscientious objection on the grounds of his ministerial role in the black Muslim religion, the U.S. government nonetheless sought to prosecute, or more accurately, persecute, the champ. He was never convicted; the Supreme Court later exonerated him unanimously.

But the unconvicted, undefeated Ali was ignominously stripped of his crown by the boxing commissions. Boxing commissions are self-righteous waterheads whose minds are sodden too much with whiskey, whose collective world-view is shaped by RING magazine and the American Legion, fellows who wrap their wires in Old Glory before going to bed. The same boxing commissions that unquestionably meted out licenses to convicts, rapists and every genre of shady degenerate extant refused, in the name of protecting patriotism, Apple pie, Motherhood and the American way of life, to allow the cleanest-living professional athlete in the nation to pursue his occupation. Ali was sentenced by these xenophobic boxing czars to three and a half years exile, during which time he wasn't permitted to fight anywhere in the U.S.

It wasn't enough that the patrioteers and politicians extracted their piece of flesh from Ali. He was hounded by virtually every segment of the American establishment. Conservative gadfly and all around articulate fascist, William F. Buckley, wrote, "one can only hope, to put it ineptly, someone will succeed in knocking some sense into Clay's head before he is done damaging the sport and the country..." Sportwriters, many of whom should be relegated to covering wheelchair races in nursing homes, denounced Ali's ring opponents as dumpers, bums and lumbering fools and berated the champion's political and religious leanings. They constantly compared him unfavorably to the champions of yore such as Dempsey, and Marciano, and rhetorically asked Ali why he couldn't be a model black champion, a la Joe Louis. Even decent sports journalists, men who should have known better, still called Muhammed "ruler of an army of beggars" and imply that he is not fit to sit on the throne of glory. Jim Murray, a well respected syndicated columnist, recently penned that "All of Ali's finest hours, except one, have been like striking out the pitcher."

But through it all, the obdurate, undaunted Ali kept his religious beliefs and fighting skills intact. All along, Ali knew he could have taken the easy, socially acceptable road out of the wilderness by rejecting his religion and entering the army, where the closest he would have come to Vietnam was with Bob Hope's Christmas troupe. But Muhammed Ali is a dedicated athlete, a man who kept training during his exile, who fought in Germany, Britain, and Canada where his anti-war stand was cheered. He broadened his horizons with world travels and received tumultuous welcomes around the globe, particularly in third-world nations; only in America was he hated. But Ali never surrendered. He told newsmen he had no "quarrel with those Vietcongs," and audaciously told a federal judge that given the choice between Christianity and Communism, he preferred neither. This heavyweight boxing champion had become a living symbol of the bitter divisions within American society, a proud black man who had incurred the unholy wrath of white America and refused to let it ruin him.

•••••••••

To most pre-fight observers, it looked as though that implacable master, father time, had finally caught up with Muhammed Ali. This time the opponent was the undefeated young brute, George Foreman. Foreman? Sounds like a guy down at the factory, not quite bright enough for a management position, a sufficiently reliable dolt who implanted his lips upon the correct rectums long enough to gain his "foreman" status. Foreman externally remembered as the flag-waver around the ring banishing the stars and stripes after his Olympic title in Mexico City.

This was the same Foreman who pummeled Joe Frazier, knocking him to the canvas six times in a mere four and a half minutes. The Foreman who decimated Ken Norton, the man who shattered Ali's jaw. This Foreman was a blistering puncher, eight years Ali's junior and the obvious heavy favorite to retain his heavy weight crown.

But in the predawn scenerio in the equatorial nation of Zaire, Muhammed Ali won back his championship. Altering his dancing style to compensate for Foreman's superior strength, Ali convincingly downed Foreman with a eight-round knockout. As the re-nascent champion[told George midway throught the fight, "the bull is stronger, but the matador is smarter." Ali was the impeccable matador in carving out his knock-out victory over Foreman. After the fight, a reporter asked him if winning the title in Africa meant a lot to him. Ali, the regnant champion, replied "I wished it happened in Madison Square Garden... 'cause that's where all the non-believers are." If there really are any left.

•••••••••

PARTING SHOTS: A quick wrap-up of the election returns illustrates the state of Vermont is changing more than most Democrats will publicly assert and far more than any Republican will want to admit. The unprecendented Democratic victory and exceptionally strong showing of Liberty Union candidates is a harbinger of more liberalism to the state... Also, unless the state GOP wants to recycle Dean Davis or George Aiken, they are faced with a virtual vacuum as far as attractive future candidates are concerned, as they hold only the State's lone House seat and Jeffords is not highly regarded by the Republican hierarchy... New Hampshire, in re-electing all-time Chuck Meldrin Thompson, has once again earned itself the sobriquet "Mississippi of the Northeast"... on a more relevant note, this writer has found a decent weekend drinking spot that is relatively uncrowded... B. T. McGuire's, which also sports two of Burlington's top bartenders, Paul "Jacques" Breslin and Jim "Butler" Ferrell.

CHEAP SHOTS: Now we certainly don't begrudge Mr. Muller his spare ribs, he deserves at least that... but I feel we could improve on his mid-winter plant purchasing junket to Florida... He should bring back some good pot this time to finance his trip and unload it on the denizens of Living-Learning, thus keeping them happy and off his back for the entire second semester.

On Athletic Scholarships

EDITOR'S NOTE– The column is written by Barry Cohen, a member of the UVM basketball team. Cohen, a nonscholarship player, has written in the past for the Cynic through "The Insider." Though recruited to UVM, he has not received financial support. This is his senior year on the team.

Part II

Jack Scott has led a whole movement of people questioning the value of providing athletic scholarship with the "meat market" type deal going on presently in most major college sports. An athlete receives a scholarship under the guise of being a student-athlete. In the classroom, an individual on an academic scholarship has freedom to choose any method of studying so long as he maintains certain academic standards. Athletes, however, are disciplined on the field and told how to train, eat, sleep, and act. In regard to personal liberty, Meggyesy was reprimanded by his head coach for "hanging around with undesirables". Jack Scott points out that sometimes by their own beliefs or from pressure by alumni, the scholarship athletes are subjected to infringement upon personal liberty by threatening the athlete to comply with authoritarian demands. An example of this was in 1969, when Dee Andros, coach of the Oregon State football team proudly proclaimed, "My policies haven't changed in twenty years." in a speech defending his dismissal of a black athlete for wearing a goatee. This type of authoritarian demand was also present in 1970 when Dave Meggard, coach of Berkely's NCAA Championship Team the year before, demanded his trackmen cut their long hair. One must wonder how long a teacher in a classroom would last if he made these infringements on average students or students on academic scholarships.

There is, in my opinion, evidence that athletic scholarships actually mean denial of scholarship opportunities for qualified underpriviledged non-athletes. Jack Scott cites the numerous good high school students he knew of in his school and many know others. These kids were denied higher education due to economic underprivilege. The primary students to go to college in these communities were athletes given scholarships. In a more affluent community the majority of these qualified students would go to college. But in a poor community only a selected few go, and the emphasis on athlete recruitment, gives athletes priority over the othe students. The socio-economic background of athletes does not have to be a poor one. Many good athletes are not in need of scholarships, but again, due to the priority placed on athletes for college sports, socio-economically rich athletes are able to gain scholarships. Thus, money which could go to poor and qualified students for a higher education, goes to athletes who are not necessarily in need of the money.

Why is it that underpriviledged and wanting youngsters in high school, with good grades, are denied an education at the expense of scholarship athletes? Why is sports on the college level given such prestige? Why is it that when most schools are in desperate need of money for their academic programs they spend it on a new swimming pool, or new athletic uniforms? At the University of California, students and faculty protested when, during the midst of an economic crisis and subsequent denial of academic facilities, the administration allotted over $300,000 for football. Why is an athletic scholarship subject to such a job-like, commodity like atmosphere? Why are athletes allowed to travel for huge amounts of time, miss classes and obtain "Mickey Mouse" degrees when other non athletes with academic ability and interest, never make it past high school?

The answer is both an economic and sociological one. Now are times of crisis for most universities in the country. For most administrators and alumni, who seek identification with their alma mater, they would like to believe that sports is still a place for discipline, greatness, order and respect for authority. Jack Scott cites that in 1968 at San Francisco State, the student body decided that teaching ghetto children and assisting an experimental college were more important than intercollegiate athletes and refused to fund the varsity program. The San Francisco State administrators, with the assistance of the college president, promptly came up with $20,000 to support the program. This incident occurred at the same time that college administrators were telling their black students they did not have the funds to meet their request for the hiring of black teachers. Another example of bureaucratic hypocricy was when the Regents of the University of California managed to give the University of California's Berkeley athletic department a $30,000 loan for the construction of a $50,000 press box at the same time they were claiming a financial crisis for the entire state college system. Supposedly one of the reasons most college athletics are so necessary is because they are propetuating the "correct values" in the eyes of the conservative alumni, administrators, etc. However, the youth of today are different than the people of the last generations, who are now these conservative alumni, etc. Youth, in my opinion, love athletics, but on the college level, want to scale down the game so that it is not as dehumanizing, authoritarian, and infringing into other necessary aspects of the college 'life.

For example, Harvard lost its star quarterback in 1969, Frank Chiampi, after the second game because football was "too mechanical, it doesn't allow for the human being...the whole concept of machine sports was just stopping me." Pennsylvania lost four starters in football who claimed "the coach was taking the fun out of the game." Steve Owens of Oklahoma said in 1969, "In high school the game was fun, here it is a business. We're supposed to fill the stands with 60,000 people and win. I still love the game but there's all this pressure, it sometimes makes me wonder." After examining big time college football in the early 1960's, Fortune magazine estimated that $400,000 is a minimum yearly outlay needed to field a big-time college team. The large scale of this enterprise is so vast that the appropriations received with the returns of this investment is so valued that college football is run like an industrial corporation. Thousands of dollars are spent on equipment, publicity, and recruiting the best players, who get athletic scholarship. At Ohio State the phone bill for recruiting is $27,000 and the University of Texas spends $50,000 recruiting "quality meat."

Today, however, college sports no longer provide major financial benefits for the University. Myles Jackson, in his article, "Football has Become a Losing Business", shows that major college football costs a school about $400,000. Including recruiting, traveling etc., most schools are in the red, due to the large cost of equipment, etc. Why then do appropriations go on for professionalized college sports? It is as I have mentioned for the prestige, identification, as well as "good" perpetuating values, these institutions financial supporters feel big-time sports provide. However, I do not feel it provides anything but egotistical satisfaction to these bureaucrats. I definitely do not feel that this should be the reason for providing supposed college athletes with scholarships and in professionalized gains. It should not be as commercialized as it is. A scholarship should be based on achievement academically and possible athletic potential, the desire to attend school, and primarily upon financial need. It is only under these conditions with subsequent lessening of scholarship and further expenditures on major college sports, that the professionalism in college sports will change. There would not be that much financial pressure on coaches or athletes. The sport would be played intensely, but in the free spirit of competition, and without authoritarianism and infringement on individual liberty. An athlete could be a bonafide and concerned student, as well as enjoying physical, mental and social experiences at an institution of higher learning.

Saga's New Experiment

by Randy Jansen

Saga, currently seeking new ways to increase their revenues and a high imaginative spirit, have come up with a brilliant idea. Saga not only can stimulate your stomach (in oh so many ways as you may have experienced), but they can now stimulate your intellectual mind. So for the first time ever, an exclusive Cynic report, we announce the heretofore secret Saga contest.

Miss Amy Fischer, an RA on fourth floor Wright, must take the credit for discovering Saga's mysterious contest. This clever woman (being a RA, what else can she be), was eating some chocolate pudding at Wright Dining Hall, last Wednesday.

She was talking to some of her friends and remarked that the pudding tasted an awful lot like cake mix. Miss Fischer confronted Jerry Sylvester, director of Wright and Simpson Halls with her interpretation of the contents of the chocolate pudding. Sylvester assured her that her story couldn't possibly be true.

Undaunted, Amy Fischer, with a few of her cohorts conducted an experiment. Confiscating some of the "pudding", she put it in a cupcake tin and baked it at 350 degrees for 28 minutes. At the end of the baking period, the alleged pudding was tasted and was remarkably similar to Saga's cake.

Well, Miss Fischer could not be stopped. She ran up the stairs, and grabbed this reporter as he was returning from the bathroom. Racing out of Wright, went Miss Fischer, closely followed by the reporter clutching his toothbrush and toothpaste. A crowd of girls soon were also closing the distance between Wright and Simpson Dining Halls.

As Jerry Sylvester was eating his dinner in the now deserted Simpson dining hall, Fischer approached with her triumphant prize of "cupcake" pudding. Confronted by Miss Fischer, Sylvester complimented the cake and conformed it was indeed Saga's cake. When asked for a comment, Sylvester replied, "I feel like an ass." (No comment on that, but rumors confirmed part of that statement.)

However, no prize was offered congratulating Miss Fischer for her ingenuity. Therefore, we must delay our announcement of a new Saga contest as we have not received confirmation from Fred Smith or other Saga managers. But, rest assured, that the Cynic readers will be the first to know if there is any change in this development.

America's Outdoor Recreation Resources

by Jack Barnes and Hugh Johnson

Do you realize that it has been alleged that on occasions our national parks have been invaded by hippies in the pursuit of love-ins and freak outs? This was passed on by a very reliable source. This same source says that there are all sorts of weirdos running around our parks and recreation areas doing all sorts of things. They're recreating. They are participating in activities which they enjoy.

Outdoor recreation participation is a major aspect of our present society. Increasing population, mobility, income, and leisure time are allowing people greater opportunities to recreate. Society is becoming increasingly complex. As a result people are turning to an outdoor recreation experience to refresh themselves, to give themselves a break. Our society encourages recreation. It is considered a positive use of time.

The pursuit of outdoor recreation requires space. There must be natural resources allocated for its use either developed or left in their wild state. The Outdoor Recreation Resource Review Commission (1962) concluded that this country's natural resources must play an increasing role in providing recreation. The Multiple Use and Sustained Yield Act (1960), has placed Outdoor Recreation on an equal priority with other demands for natural resources. One of the major recommendations in the National Outdoor Recreation Plan (1973) was to improve management and administration of recreation resource areas.

The University of Vermont has recognized the need for outdoor recreation education programs and has assumed a role in providing trained recreation resource planners and managers for the country. Research in the planning and economics of outdoor recreation began in the Department of Agricultural Economics in 1964. Beginning in 1966 undergraduate courses in outdoor recreation planning, economics, and management were taught in the Departments of Forestry and Agricultural Economics. These endeavors have developed into a Recreation Management Program administratively located in the newly formed School of Natural Resources (1974).

The purpose of the program is to develop competent outdoor recreation resource professionals. The approach it takes is an interdepartmental, interdisciplinary undergraduate program. A rather broad subject base is required recognizing that the discipline involves a great many aspects of people and resources and their relationship to one another. Subject matter includes the social and psychological needs and trends of our population, business and economic forces, natural resources, agricultural sciences, and public administration coupled with professional recreation management courses.

The Recreation Management Program is divided into two options. Emphasis may be placed on public outdoor recreation from local to federal levels of government. Students may also pursue education in the private outdoor recreation and tourism industry. Private resources include ski areas, resorts, marinas, campgrounds, hunting preserves, and other specialized recreation areas.

The product of this program is a professional recreation resource manager. It is a person who can measure and evaluate the outdoor recreation needs and desires of people, relate them to the carrying capacity of the recreation resources and thus plan them to meet human needs.

Protection of the natural resource base is given complete consideration. The Recreation Resource Management Program realizes America's natural resources are becoming increasingly scarce and professional leadership is needed in the management of our natural resources.

The Outlaw

Some say he was an outlaw, that he roamed across the land, with a band of unschooled ruffians and few old fishermen.
No one knew just where he came from or exactly what he'd done, but they said it must be something bad that kept him on the run.

Some say he was a poet, that he'd stand upon the hill, and his voice could calm an angry crowd or make the waves stand still,
that he spoke in many parables that a few could understand, but the people sat for hours just to listen to this man.

Some say he was a sorcerer, a man of mystery,
he could walk upon the water, he could make a blind man see, that he conjured wine at weddings and did tricks with fish and bread that he talked of being born again and raised people from the dead.

Some say he was a politician, who spoke of being free,
he was followed by the masses on the shores of Galilee.
He spoke out against corruption, and he bowed to no decree, still they feared his strength and power so they nailed him to a tree

Some say he was the Son of God, a man above all men, but he came to be a servant and to set us free from sin, and that's who I believe he is 'cause that's who I believe,
and I think we should get ready 'cause it's time for us to leave.

words by Larry Hermann

'Play Strindberg,' Return Of Theater In The Round

by J. Karl Stevens

With the production of Dürrenmatt's Play Strindberg, theatre in the round returned to Billings with a vengeance. Not only was the production staged completely in the round, but it was broken into twelve rounds, the performance occurred in a ring, had a plot that can only be termed circular, a vocal tempo congruent to what is musically known as a round, several sounds of round cards, & those well-rounded performances.

The play is actually an adaptation of Strindberg's "Dance of Death". It smells of aggressive plagiarism. Dürrenmatt himself has said, "Strindberg dialogue was used as the starting point of an anti-Strindberg dialogue". Even the characters are infused with this spirit, having plagiarized each others lives. Any attempt at a personal psychology is frustrated, because Dürrenmatt, having deflated and depersonalized the text, has reduced it to a series of grotesques. Alice loves/hates her old bastard of a husband Edgar and wishes he would die. He doesn't. Instead he weathers a catalogue of heart-attacks, seizures and strokes until he is paralyzed, confined to his chair and reduced to buzzing. Alice flirts, makes love, regrets, then regrets the departure of her cousin Kurt. His occupation, big businessman or petty crook. Dürrenmatt establishes no hierarchy between the real, the fantastic, and the lie. That precept applies equally to performers and audience. There is no 'true' self.

In his production notes, Dürrenmatt confides that, "out of an actor's play I made a play for acting" and the acting is superb. Charles Towers and Sarah Brooke as the symbiotic married couple Edgar and Alice bring an atonal music to the stage. Towers' Edgar is a fine comic creation. Possibly Edgar could have succeeded as merely an irascible eccentric, but Towers endows him with a gourmet personality of mannerisms, ticks and twitches. He has foreign ingenuity at getting incredible mileage out of a few props. The only problem is pitch, which makes his bravado heavy and at times intrusive.

During her four years in UVM theatre, Sarah Brooks has been 'typed' into creating a Capetian -Dynasty of 'just bitches'. The smooth succession is broken with her portrayal of Alice as an emotional chameleon whose contradictions have been intimidated. After twenty-five years of feeding intravenously off marital bile, the only emotions she can generate are fringe emotions like disgust and revenge. The grotesqueries excite her passion. When Edgar explains that her sexual revenge with Kurt was not really revenge, because he had only pretended to have a seizure, Brooke's Alice is pleased with his ingenuity, kisses his forehead and exhibits an unusual wifely-warmth. The game goes on. Her Alice is a fine combination of marital bile on one hand and saccharine attempts at relating with Kurt on the other.

The visitor, the intruder, the cousin Kurt, the very nature of the word 'visitor' or even 'cousin' is ambiguous. Lacking the emotional clarity of such words as 'husband' or even 'banker,' Kurt's status within the relationship between Edgar and Alice is vague and undefined. Then he is elevated to the status of 'the other man', and 'the marriage wrecker'. Peter Kurth wrestles with Kurt's ambiguity, but doesn't resolve it. He remains urbane and subdued in the face of Edgar's brooding and scheming. Alice seduces him. Kurth's portrayal is too nice in a play that has no room for nice people. His urbanity (the urbanity of a bank clerk who embezzled $50,000 dollars) clashes with his protestations of actually being a big businessman who accumulated his capital in the gold rush. If not lecherous and self seeking, Kurt should at least be aside.

"Play Strindberg" was a successful experiment. Put together over an intense two-week period, it had no director. Perhaps with time the characterizations might have become sharply focused. It might have become seasoned. Still it needs no apologies because it created one of the more delightfully perverse evenings I've had the good luck of spending at UVM.

Alice: Critics are all bastards.
Edgar: But not imbeciles.

The Suisse Romande Performs Magnificantly

by Robert DeNike

The Suisse Romande ensemble numbered eighty to one hundred pieces and covered Memorial Auditorium's stage. Several nights before, they had filled New York's Carnegie Hall with concertos, symphonies and ballet suites. Last Friday evening they were arranged in traditional form, the string section out-numbering and obscuring the trombones, trumpets, clarinets and flutes. The Switzerland Orchestra's musical selections demanded a strong string section and this requirement was surpassed by far by excellently practiced and polished musicians.

I could not see why the blinding house lights remained blazing after uprisal bows, belonging to violins of all sizes and sounds, began their furious stroking and Stravinsky's Jeu De Cartes ballet suite embarked on its multi-dimensional route. A quarter rest...then a sudden outburst of volume as all instrument all too well to watch the crescendo. The lights are cut just as abruptly. Musicians (male and female, ranging in age from twenty to sixty years) become silhouettes against a beige, curtained backdrop. Large reflectors, out of place in their redness, flank the orchestra to enable the balcony's last row to see. All is left behind as musical Queens of Hearts, Diamonds, Clubs and Spades begin to march and battle in the ears of the listener.

Stravinsky's suite is in three movements which the composer, in compliance with his theme, appropriately labels "games". Inspired by the game of poker, the cunning and invincibility of the Joker (unique because of his faculty to change into any card at any moment) is delightfully depicted in a playful and gay waltz. Elaborate variations of rhythm are involved. Stravinsky's rhythm patterns call for short, staccatto strokes of the violin bow tapped lightly against the strings. Plucking is frequently employed also. This modern composer's fascination with and exhaustive exploration of music's rhythm and beat is evident in his Jeu De Cartes.

The grandest grand piano I had ever seen was next wheeled on stage for the performance of Schumann's Piano Concerto in a-minor by soloist Ilana Vered. One of the few young Swiss artists, she herself was as beautiful as her music. She captured the essence of the Schuman style via her deftness and delicacy of touch exhibited in arpeggios played at lightning speed. She became the center of the solo solo occasion during which a musician turned from almost-total study of the conductor's waving hands and sheet music to devote total concentration to his instrument. Up to this point each musician, knowing his instrument all to well to watch it while playing, paid close attention to the conductor, Wolfgang Sawallisch, as a constant source of direction and leadership. Ilana's solo required her fullest attention.

Following intermission Brahm's Symphony No. 4 in e-minor served as the closing number. Techniques of varying volume characterized this piece. A note, sustained by the entire orchestra, would swell slowly, reaching a sudden peak of intensity, to be abruptly broken by a beat of silence. After, the sound again faded in and the process was repeated for several measures. The third movement took on a particularly triumphant and majestic mood because of the fluctuating volume, such that I was surprised when a fourth movement followed to round off the piece.

The conductor, facing the audience for the second time since beginning, bowed sharply and promenaded proudly off stage, returning twice to acknowledge the long-lasting applause. I clapped my hands high over my head as I would at a rock concert, anxious for the musicians to recognize, not only my own enthusiasm but that which flowed through the entire crowd. My first attendance of a live classical concert left me with an appreciation of the great masters' music that I had never before acquired from detached, distant and impersonal recordings.

Lyric Theatre's production of "Gypsy" opens tonight. The above is a rehearsal at the Flynn Theatre. The show runs through Sunday, with a matinee performance on Saturday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3, $4, and $5, and may be purchased at the Flynn Theatre. Don't miss this production with a cast of 60 and a 30-piece orchestra.

Music World Supports The Christmas Push

Merry Christmas

Here it is, November, and the big Christmas push is already under way. Expect new album product from just about everybody who's anybody, as well as few who aren't. Loggins & Messina Mother Lode, Maria Muldaur Waitress In A Donut Shop, new Stones It's Only Rock And Roll, new Todd Rundgren Utopia are among the early yule products to hit the local shops, and it certainly isn't any surprise to learn that Warner Brothers has just released on two-record reissue of old Beach Boys (much in the tradition of Endless Summer, the two disc release from Capitol that has since gone gold and is now headed for platinum sales status). Expect new product from Joni Mitchell (it's about time for her album of the year)...Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young concert set, with possible new Aerosmith, new Beatle products (one of which has already arrived...Lennon's Walls and Bridges. End of year sales usually makes or breaks standings for the year, so many labels stockpile the good stuff for year's end. As a result, the record buyer finds his/her wallet a bit emptier at this time of year, than any other (except maybe the beginning of summer.) A few words of advice: choose the records you buy carefully this year. Much of the hot product that has been released thus far is little more than lukewarm. It hasn't been an exceptional year for music, though we have had some nice moments. Depend less on names and reputations for a quality product. Read a few reviews, take a listen at your local shop, and become discriminating in what you buy. It might not only up-grade the state of the industry and your record collection...it could also save ya some bucks!

Jazz By George Shearing Quintet

The "Shearing sound," some of the smoothest music ever heard on the UVM campus, will be played in Ira Allen Chapel on Monday, November 18, when the George Shearing Quintet will be presented in the Lane Series. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Making its second appearance in the Lane Series (the first was in 1963), the celebrated Quintet will be led by the famous pianist-composer George Shearing, with Andy Simpkins on the bass, Rusty Jones on the drums, Earl Klugh on the guitar, and Larry Blackshire on the vibraphone. There will be no set program, but the compositions will be selected from such numbers as "Promises, Promises" by Bacharach - David; "Lullaby of Birdland" by Shearing; "A Foggy Day" by Gershwin; "Satin Doll" by Ellington; "Alfie" by Bacharach-David; "Superstar" by Webb-Rice; "Send in the Clowns," by Soldheim; "April in Paris" by Gershwin; "The Entertainer" by Joplin; and "Aquarius" by MacDermott-Ragay-Rado.

London-born George Shearing has created an international reputation for his musical talent as pianist, arranger, and composer. Equally at home on the classical concert stage as on the jazz night-club stand, consistently compelling with quintet or trio, with full orchestra or in solo performance, Shearing is recognized for his inventive, orchestrated jazz.

Off stage as well, Shearing is a dedicated musician. His compositions, which number better than one hundred, have produced works like "Lullaby of Birdland," which has become a jazz standard. As an educator, he has devoted many summers to teaching jazz techniques, arrangement, and ensemble playing both at the famed University of Utah Jazz Workshop and at the renowned Chautauqua Institution. As a student, George studies classical music (Mozart's a favorite), and practices, practices, practices!

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
DORSET STREET
I Groove Tube
II Odessa File

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I King of Hearts
II The Gambler

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Trial of Billy Jack

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Mon-Tues Day for Night
Death in Venice
Gypsy

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Vanishing Wilderness
II Jerimaih Johnson

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Vanishing Wilderness
II The Longest Yard

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

Student
Movie Discount Cards
are now available at the Cynic Office
They enable you to get $.50 off at any movie in our Movie Guide
WARNING: STUDENTS MUST PRESENT THE DISCOUNT CARD AND A VALID ID TO GET INTO THE MOVIES

TONITE AT 7:00 & 9:15
IT'S SURVIVAL OF THE FIERCEST, AND THE FUNNIEST.
BURT REYNOLDS
THE LONGEST YARD
EDDIE ALBERT
PG

A TRUE-LIFE ADVENTURE
Vanishing Wilderness
See other ad FILMED IN THE CANADIAN WILDS
G
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862 5070 ANYTIME

Vanishing Wilderness
"★★★! FASCINATING...IT'S EXCELLENT!"
"I WAS EXTREMELY IMPRESSED!"
"MAGNIFICENT. A FINE FILM."
"...SEE IT BEFORE CIVILIZATION SWEEPS IT AWAY..."
G
Nov. 13-19 NOW SHOWING One Week Only
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862 5070 ANYTIME
WEEKDAYS 7:00 9:00
SAT & SUN 1:00 - 3:00 - 5:00 - 7:00 - 9:00

BEACH BOYS
Student Tickets are SOLD OUT
THANKS for your support
SA Concert Bureau

DOLLAR SHOWING
Thurs. at 4:00 PM
The Gambler
Shown at Plaza I & II
on Dorset Street

TONIGHT
TRY
"THE UNIVERSITATIS VIRIDIMONTANAE"
(If it's Latin why all the Greeks)
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
or try one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Tuesday through Sunday
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14
A STAR IS BORN (1954) – Judy Garland
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15
DUCK SOUP (1933) – Marx Brothers
THE LITTLE RASCALS
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – $1
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16
HARPER (1966) – Paul Newman
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 18
THE BRIDGE ON THE RIVER KWAI
(1958) – William Holden, Alec Guinness
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free

'Phoenix Sonshine' Sings S

by Robert DeNike

Instead of joints, sticks of gum were passed around at this atypical rock concert. The crowd was diverse in appearance. There were crew-cuts as well as long locks, jeans as well as jackets and ties. Yet they all had a common interest, belief in and love of Jesus Christ. They came to hear songs of their saviour. The overwhelmingly enthusiastic applause, followed by a four-minute standing ovation given at the completion of the performance, indicated that the audience was far from disappointed.

The Arena Theatre was filled to its capacity by a crowd of nearly four hundred. A second set by the Sonshine was scheduled only when the exits and aisles filled with curious faces and late-comers were necessarily turned away for lack of seating accomodations. On leaving this early show, I was amazed to see a line of fifty or so people formed waiting to be admitted to the second performance.

It is not difficult to see why Arena is (fortunately) used infrequently now. Its walls and ceiling are covered with a hideous pigment of midnight black paint. Exposed electrical wires hand obtrusively amidst rafters of heating pipes. The lighting facilities consist of three hundred-watt flood lamps, which create an atmosphere quite dungeon-like.

Despite the deteriorated setting, the Phoenix Sonshine succeeded in making people forget their surroundings by presenting an hour of foot-stomping, hand-clapping rock music. Combining all composite styles of rock (Rhythm & Blues, Folk, Pop, Country & Western) they produced a sound reminiscent of Poco. The two male members took turns playing electric bass and electric six-string acoustic guitars. A guitarist surprised me including speedy bursts of scales played through a wah-wah device in every song. The female singer occasionally tickled the ivory keys of an electric piano and harmonized tastefully with the vocals by the guitarists.

Between songs, the group took the opportunity to elaborate and briefly expound upon their spiritual message. They explained that, as their music and lyrics are centered around experiences and emotions that strongly affected them. It's Jesus that changed them so drastically, cleansing and reforming their lives.

The historical background of the group is particularly captivating. Forming a rock band in their high school days, they played the bar-and-dance circuit (typically) throughout the Phoenix

Music Thing

by Michael Thurston

I've Got the Music in Me
The Kiki Dee Band
Rocket (MCA)

Female punk rock probably began with Nico in the foundling days of Velvet Underground. The movement has seen much proliferation in the past few months, with an increase of people turning on to Suzi Quatro, but one of purest, punkiest of those rockers has been around a few years, by the name of Kiki Dee. In some ways it's unfortunate that Kiki Dee feels compelled to be a rock star. She has such an ability for gentle, yet strong acoustical numbers, and a rousing capacity for meaty lyrics and sensitive interpretations. Yet, she does both the rambling and the raucous with equal conviction. I've Got The Music in Me leans heavily upon driving rhythms and trite, pop lyricism to catch an audience. That particular audience will probably overlook selections such as Little Frozen One and Someone To Me as stodgy, middle of the road filler. Conversely, the audience that fires up to the tunes that call upon the intellect, rather than the abdomen, will probably overlook Step by Step and the title tune as loud excuses for nothing more to say. Neither argument is completely founded.

I've Got the Music In Me suffers some severe schizoid distraction, and it will ultimately restrain any critic, whether writing for Rolling Stone or simply writing in a diary, from giving Kiki Dee a rave review. One who feels comfortable with one mode, will feel frustrated with the other. So, let's take the album out of context from the music, and deal with it in the context of Kiki Dee's career, and her attempted assault on American record buyers. I've Got the Music In Me shines as a clean, well-produced disc, accolades dealt upon producer Gus Dudgeon and his able assistant Clive Franks, both of whom are key personnel in the Elton John kingdom. Kiki's last album, her debut for Elton's Rocket Record label, Loving & Free, left nothing to chance. Her session men on that LP, including Elton's keyboard wizardry, also boosted John's complete back-up band. Her new album is designed specifically to accentuate Kiki's own talent, and her own ability to draw an audience. In both production and recording, she has some of the best guiding hands in the business, but when it comes to the bottom line, Kiki Dee stands alone. Her new back-up band contains no superstars. The closest she comes is the presence of percussionist Roger Pope, who recorded a solo album Pope Smokes Dope, on Apple Records was a new toy, rather than a business that distinction plays Dee Band no favors. formula of bass, lead, and keyboard levels to a lowest denominator. Such has been the root of demands that the quality music depend on the rather than the studio. The Music proves, question, that Kiki's cook, can be gentle, somewhere in the middle on the merit of their abilities resultant disc has produced smooth, unobtrusive from a who's

...gnificantly

...off the piece.

The conductor, facing the audience for the second time since beginning, bowed deeply and promenaded proudly off stage, returning twice to acknowledge the long-lasting applause. I clapped my hands high over my head as I would at a rock concert, anxious for the musicians to recognize, not only my own enthusiasm but that which flowed through the entire crowd. My first attendance of a live classical concert left me with an appreciation of the great masters' music that I had never before acquired from detached, distant and impersonal recording.

...t. The above is a rehearsal at the ...since performance on Saturday at ...at the Flynn Theatre. Don't miss

...ring Quintet

...ond Blackshire on the vibraphone ...ves. There will be no set the program, but the compositions led will be selected from such ...ber numbers as "Promises, ...dy Promises" by Bacharach ...ety David; "Lullaby of Birdland" ...ugh by Shearing; "A Foggy Day" by ...rity Gershwin, "Satin Doll" by Ellington; "Alfie" by Bacharach-David; "Superstar" by Webb-Rice; "Send in the Clowns," by Soldheim; "April in Paris" by Gershwin; "The Entertainer" by Joplin; and "Aquarius" by MacDermott-Ragny-Rado.

London-born George Shearing has created an international reputation for his musical talent as pianist, arranger, and composer. Equally at home on the classical concert stage as on the jazz night-club stand, consistently compelling with quintet or trio, with full orchestra or in solo performance, Shearing is recognized for his inventive, orchestrated jazz.

Off stage as well, Shearing is a dedicated musician. His compositions, which number better than one hundred, have produced works like "Lullaby of Birdland," which has become a jazz standard. As an educator, he has devoted many summers to teaching jazz techniques, arrangement, and ensemble playing both at the famed University of Utah Jazz Workshop and at the renowned Chautauqua Institution. As a student, George studies classical music (Mozart's a favorite), and practices, practices, practices!

SA FILMS PRESENTS

...OVEMBER 14
...RN (1984) – Judy Garland
...30 – Free

...VEMBER 15
...1933 – Marx Brothers
...ASCALS
...30 & 9:30 – $1

...NOVEMBER 16
...34) – Paul Newman
...:30 – Free

...OVEMBER 18
...ON THE RIVER KWAI
...m Holden, Alec Guiness
7:30 – Free

'Phoenix Sonshine' Sings Spiritual Message

by Robert Dahlke

Instead of joints, sticks of gum were passed around at this atypical rock concert. The crowd was diverse in appearance. There were crew-cuts as well as long locks, jeans as well as jackets and ties. Yet they all had a common interest, belief in and love of Jesus Christ. They came to hear songs of their saviour. The overwhelmingly enthusiastic applause, followed by a four-minute standing ovation given at the completion of the performance, indicated that the audience was far from disappointed.

The Arena Theatre was filled to its capacity by a crowd of nearly four hundred. A second set by the Sonshine was scheduled only when the exits and aisles filled with curious faces and late-comers were necessarily turned away for lack of seating accomodations. On leaving this early show, I was amazed to see a line of fifty or so people formed waiting to be admitted to the second performance.

It is not difficult to see why Arena is (fortunately) used infrequently now. Its walls and ceiling are covered with a hideous pigment of midnight black paint. Exposed electrical wires hand obtrusively amidst rafters of heating pipes. The lighting facilities consist of three hundred-watt flood lamps, which create an atmosphere quite dungeon-like.

Despite the deteriorated setting, the Phoenix Sonshine succeeded in making people forget their surroundings by presenting an hour of foot-stomping, hand-clapping rock music. Combining all composite styles of rock (Rhythm & Blues, Folk, Pop, Country & Western) they produced a sound reminiscent of Poco. The two male band members took turns playing electric bass and electrified six-string acoustic guitars. One guitarist surprised me by including speedy bursts of lead scales played through a wah-wah device in every song. The female singer occasionally tickled the ivory keys of an electric piano and harmonized tastily with the vocals by both guitarists.

Between songs, the band took the opportunity to elaborate and briefly expound upon their spiritual message. They explained that, as artists, music and lyrics are written around experiences and emotions that strongly affect them. It's Jesus that has affected them so deeply, changing, cleansing and reforming their lives.

The historical background of the group is particularly captivating. Forming a rock band in their high school days, they played the bar-and-dance circuit (typically enough) throughout the Phoenix area. The Sonshine ran in close competition with a group then known as The Spiders. This band made money by doing and re-doing Stones material and later changing their name to... (ready for this?)...Alice Cooper. The Sonshine split up for a short time and Alice made his claim to fame and fortune while the Sonshine trio individually discovered Christianity. After reuniting with a new outlook on life, they toured Southern California (including such cities as Hollywood), Reno and very recently, Scandinavia.

The concert was handled effectively, especially in its dealings with the aspect of religious rhetoric. The musicians laid down their instruments near the end of the show, before beginning to tell Biblical parables. I walked out at that point, appreciative that they had reserved the rhetoric until the close and separated the spoken spiritual message from that preached in song.

'Peace In Not Publishing'

by Stephen W. Tanner

In a phone call from his farmhouse in Cornish, New Hampshire the week of Nov. 2, J.D. Salinger, the reclusive American author who has been publicly silent for 20 years told the New York Times he denounced the publication of his early, previously uncollected stories, and hinted at posthumous publication of new work.

Saying he wanted to talk "only for a minute", Mr. Salinger spoke for nearly half an hour declaring, "There is a marvelous peace in not publishing. It's peaceful. Still publishing is a terrible invasion of my privacy. I like to write. I love to write. But I write just for myself and my own pleasure."

Salinger, the author of Catcher In The Rye 1951 and most recently 'Raise High The Roof Beams, Carpenters", and "Seymour, and Introduction", was described as "at times warm and at times wary and skittish" during the interview which is believed to be his first since 1953 when he allowed a 16-year-old girl reporter from the Cornish high-school newspaper to interview him.

Mr. Salinger broke his long silence because of the publication of The Complete Uncollected Short Stories of J.D. Salinger Vols. 1 and 2 which have heretofore been available only in magazines like The Saturday Evening Post, Colliers, and Esquire published during the 1940's. He said, "I wrote them a long time ago and never had any intention of publishing them. I wanted them to die a perfectly natural death."

Apparently during the last two months 25,000 copies of these books priced at $3 and $5 for each volume, have been sold first in San Francisco and then Chicago and New York by men who call themselves John Greenberg and say they come from Berkeley. These volumes have also been sold at a book store in Burlington. Salinger still owns the copyright and is seeking a minimum of $250,000 damages though the mysterious publisher is still at large.

"It's amazing some sort of law and order agency can't do something about this," said Mr. Salinger, "why if a dirty old mattress is stolen from your attic, they'll find it. But they're not even looking for this man."

Salinger opposes republication of the early works saying they were the fruit of a time when he was first beginning to commit himself to being a writer. In the interview he spoke of those early days in New York and then the army, of dropping out of college upon his return, of writing fevrishly and being intent on "placing his works in magazines."

When asked if he expected to publish soon, he paused and then spoke:

"I really don't know how soon," he said. There was another pause and then Mr. Salinger began talking rapidly about how much he was writing, long hours, everyday, but that he was under no contract to do another book.

"I don't necessarily intend to publish posthumously," he said, "but I do like to write for myself."

"I pay for this kind of attitude. I'm known as a strange aloof kind of man. But all I'm doing is trying to protect myself and my work."

"I just want all this to stop. It's intrusive. I've survived a lot of things," he said, "and I'll probably survive this."

Jazz By Goerge Shearing Quintet

A popular television personality also, the Shearing wit has captivated audiences on the Tonight, David Frost, Mike Douglas, Merv Griffin, Dick Cavett, Ed Sullivan, and Steve Allen shows. His gentle humor was displayed recently when an interviewer asked if he's been blind all his life. "Not yet," George thoughtfully replied!

George Albert Shearing was born on August 13, 1919, in the Battersea area of London. Congenitally blind, he was the youngest of nine children of coalman James Phillip Shearing. George discovered his piano talent when he found he could duplicate the tunes from the old crystal set on the piano. His only formal musical education consisted of four years of study at the London Lodge School for the Blind. While his talent won him a number of university scholarships, he was forced to refuse them in favor of a more financially productive position: a piano player in a neighborhood pub.

After a series of similar club dates, George joined an all-blind band in the 1930's, a short-lived project sponsored by the National Institute for the Blind. At this point George developed a friendship with the noted jazz critic Leonard Feather and through this contact he made his first appearance on BBC Radio. He also cut his first record, "Squeezing the Blues," playing accordion to Feather's piano accompaniment.

Shearing's keyboard reputation flourished through engagements in top London supper clubs and as a popular guest on the BBC. While still in his twenties, he landed a recording contract with Decca Records, and became one of the top-selling artists in Britain. In 1941 Shearing, his wife and five-year old daughter Wendy moved to America, where George spent two long years establishing his fame on this side of the Atlantic. His state-wide reputation began rolling when he was booked into New York's Birdland, to which he later penned his famous "Lullaby." In 1949, the Shearing sound was firmly entrenched when he gathered a quintet, featuring his distinctive blend of piano, bass, drums, guitar, and vibes, to record "September in the Rain" for M.G.M. The record was an overnight success. Among his favorite albums are those he recorded with Billy Eckstine, Nat King Cole, Peggy Lee, Wes Montgomery, and Nancy Wilson, whom George introduced to the record industry.

George Shearing has accumulated awards from every trade and jazz poll, including seven citations from DownBeat Magazine. An international favorite, he has made numerous concert appearances throughout Japan, Australia, Europe, South America and the West Indies. Now concentrating his energies in the United States, he regularly plays to capacity crowds, performing in such rooms as Chicago's London House, New York's St. Regis and Plaza, Los Angeles' Century Plaza and Seattle's Olympic.

In the last decade, George's passion for classical music has peaked. While he performed his first classical concert in 1952 with the Rochester Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Paul White, he has re-immersed himself in the classical form since 1963. He has appeared with the Utah, Cleveland, St. Louis and Chautauqua Symphony Orchestras. His full-bodied concerts typically feature in the first half a piano concerto with full orchestra, and in the second half Shearing's ensemble and the orchestra playing jazz.

Tickets for the George Shearing Quintet concert are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, for $3 and $5. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

Patrons are reminded that this concert will be held in Ira Allen Chapel and NOT in Memorial Auditorium.

The Lane Series concludes this semester's concerts with two marching bands, the Welsh Guards and Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, on Dec. 5 and the Hartford Ballet in Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" on Dec. 7 in a Lane Extra.

Music Thing; Severe Schizoid Distraction?

by Michael Thurston

I've Got the Music in Me
The Kiki Dee Band
Rocket (MCA)

Female punk rock probably began with Nico in the foundling days of Velvet Underground. The movement has seen much proliferation in the past few months, with an increase of people turning on to Suzi Quatro, but one of purest, punkiest of those rockers has been around a few years, by the name of Kiki Dee. In some ways it's unfortunate that Kiki Dee feels compelled to be a rock star. She has such an ability for gentle, yet strong acoustical numbers, and a rousing capacity for meaty lyrics and sensitive interpretations. Yet, she does both the rambling and the raucous with equal conviction. I've Got The Music in Me leans heavily upon driving rhythms and trite, pop lyricism to catch an audience. That particular audience will probably overlook selections such as Little Frozen One and Someone To Me as stodgy, middle of the road filler. Conversely, the audience that fires up to the tunes that call upon the intellect, rather than the abdomen, will probably overlook Step by Step and the title tune as loud excuses for nothing more to say. Neither argument is completely founded.

I've Got the Music In Me suffers some severe schizoid distraction, and it will ultimately restrain any critic, whether writing for Rolling Stone or simply writing in a diary, from giving Kiki Dee a rave review. One who feels comfortable with one mode, will feel frustrated with the other. So, let's take the album out of context from the music, and deal with it in the context of Kiki Dee's career, and her attempted assault on American record buyers. I've Got the Music In Me shines as a clean, well-produced disc, accolades dealt upon producer Gus Dudgeon and his able assistant Clive Franks, both of whom are key personnel in the Elton John kingdom. Kiki's last album, her debut for Elton's Rocket Record label, Loving & Free, left nothing to chance. Her session men on that LP, including Elton's keyboard wizardry, also boasted John's complete back-up band. Her new album is designed specifically to accentuate Kiki's own talent, and her own ability to draw an audience. In both production and recording, she has some of the best guiding hands in the business, but when it comes to the bottom line, Kiki Dee stands alone. Her new back-up band contains no superstars. The closest she comes is the presence of percussionist Roger Pope, who recorded a solo album, The Pope Smokes Dope, back when Apple Records was a new-found toy, rather than a business. Even that distinction plays The Kiki Dee Band no favors. Yet, her formula of bass, lead, drums, and keyboard levels her music to a lowest common denominator. Such a formula has been the root of rock, and demands that the quality of the music depend on the musicians, rather than the studio. I've Got The Music proves, beyond question, that Kiki's four can cook, can be gentle, can fall somewhere in the middle purely on the merit of their ability. The resultant disc has provided a smooth, unobtrusive transition from a who's who in Rocketland to a simple who? The anonymity of her members will pressure Kiki into holding her own as a performer. Lest there be any doubt, the strategy in piecing together her latest album should wipe the slate clean.

Kiki Dee has arrived in America. Her single, Supercool, drawn from Loving and Free, set the stage for the release of this new album's title tune as the follow-up. It's beginning to happen. The Kiki Dee Band is the opening act on the current Elton John American tour, which is sold out in every major city from coast to coast. That kind of exposure sells records. Kiki Dee is refreshing, and her approach to stardom is realistically based on solid ground. She has the ability to capture America in this current tour, and also has the ability to hold onto America with subsequent endeavors. She is one of the best female artists we have in 1974, and her ability for adaptation...from rocker to ballad and back again will be her lasting quality. She can outshine

(continued on page eight)

SWISS ARMY POCKET KNIVES
at
UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS
from $6.50 to $23.95
COMPARE OUR PRICES!

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

ZIGGY'S
THE LARGEST HEAD SHOP IN VERMONT
PIPES SCREENS PAPERS
INCENSE BURNERS JOKES
KEY RING CLIPS T-SHIRTS LEATHER GOODS
PIPE GIFT SETS CLOTHES BONGS ROLLERS
97½ CHURCH STREET
(Above Burlington Shoe Repair)

Enjoy our fabulous
CLAMBAKE
Special Nightly $5.95
Together Special
SURF n' TURF
$11.90 PER COUPLE
The Black Cat
160 BANK ST. .864-9723

THE SILVER KEG
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY: LADIES NITE
UNESCORTED FEMALES FREE
TUESDAY- ½ PRICE NITE ALL NITE
WEDNESDAY
NO COVER CHARGE ALL NITE
THURSDAY- ½ PRICE ALL NITE
★ FEATURING ★
MON. NOV. 11-16 KNICKERS DOWN
NOV. 18-23 DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE
NOV. 25-27 FRANA
NOV. 28-30 SECRET SAM
MON. DEC. 2 GREASE
DEC. 3-7 BOLD EXPRESSIONS

COME SEE WHAT'S NEW
SIZZLING STEAK
new atmosphere new salad bar
new menu items
Intimate Atmosphere for a quiet drink and a delicious meal. We now have a choice of appetizers, fish specialties, fried chicken, and new juicier steaks.
STILL THE MOST REASONABLE DINNER PRICES IN TOWN
STILL NEXT TO MERRIL'S SHOWCASE I I&II
COME IN, SIT BACK AND RELAX TO A FINE MEAL FOR ALL!
SIZZLING STEAK
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

S.A. Films Features Stars From Many Milieus

The schedule of SA Films for this week begins tonight with Judy Garland in A Star Is Born. This film was directed by George Cukor and also stars James Mason and Charles Bickford. It tells the story of a woman's rise to theatrical success and the effect this has on her husband and their marriage. The high point of her career, A Star Is Born revealed Judy Garland's tremendous acting talents. She stood shoulder-to-shoulder with her co-stars, and in the concluding scene, standing before a room filled with Hollywood notables, she spoke the words that left not a dry eye in any theatre: "This is Mrs. Norman Maine." New York Times said "They have really and truly gone to town in giving this Hollywood story an abundance and fullness and form... And they have musical numbers that are among the finest things in the show. A remarkable image of entertainment is developed on the screen in colors that fill the eye with excitement. It is something to see!" The film will be shown at 7:30 in 101 Votey.

On Friday night the Marx Brothers return in Duck Soup, made in 1933 and directed by Leo McCarey. This film was their climatic moment at Paramount. They shared the billing with no one and were assigned one of the top directors on the lot, a genuine genius of comedy. As Prime Minister Firefly of Freedonia, Groucho woos redhead queen Margaret Dumont's kingdom to a shambles. Harpo and Chico appear as peanut vendors who become secret agents. Zeppo rounds out the gang as Firefly's secretary and straight man. "The most surprising thing about this film is that I did not go mad... they were completely crazy," said director McCarey. This is the most highly regarded of the Marxes' pictures, and Groucho himself thinks it's the craziest. Following this will be a couple of Little Rascals shorts. Kid from Borneo and The Follies of 1938. In the first of them, Kid from Borneo, Spanky's poor-do-well uncle, who has evidently seen King Kong, comes to the gang's home town to show a wild man from Borneo, and the kids mistake the attraction for the impresario. It is one of the funniest of the 'Our Gang' comedies. The films will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in 101 Votey, and all three films will be shown at each showing. Admission is $1.

Paul Newman returns on Saturday night in Harper. This also stars Lauren Becall and Julie Harris and was directed by Jack Smight. As Lew Harper, Paul Newman stages a one-man campaign to bring legitimate melodrama back to films by playing a straight private-eye and with believability. Lew Harper is just an ordinary Joe whose success is based on brain power not trickery. His deductions are logical which permits audience identification. He's a man not superman. Movie Daily cited Harper as one of the ten best pictures of the year with Paul Newman taking top honors for a performance by a male star and Julie Harris being picked as top actress in a supporting role. The film will be shown at 7:30 in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

The award winning film, The Bridge on the River Kwai will be presented on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in 403 Rowell. This film, winner of 27 International Awards and 7 Academy Awards and acclaimed one of the greatest and most honored films ever produced, stars William Holden, Alec Guiness, Jack Hawkins, and Sessue Hayakawa.

Filmed in the teeming jungles of Ceylon, it concerns the inmates of a Japanese prison camp during the early days of World War II. The prisoners, mostly British and American, are being forced to build a railway bridge over the River Kwai. Because of the ruggedness of the surrounding terrain, the bridge is destined to be one of the most vital links in the Japanese supply lines.

Music Thing 'Continued'

(continued from page seven)

Suzi Quatro, or any other femme that comes along, simply because she stands on her own now, and can perform just about what she pleases because she does it so well.

I've Got The Music In Me, irregardless of talent, suffers a lack of continuity that will hurt total acceptance of this album. But, objectively, the album proves much more than it disproves. Its diversity will capture enough listeners to give Kiki Dee a solid establishment both on home phonographs and on the charts. Coupled with the current tour, Kiki's growing legacy should allow her third Rocket album, whenever that arrives, to be snatched eagerly by the American public. It's about time. It's been a long, hard push.

Schwartz On Sports: Review Of UVM Soccer

(continued from page eleven)

not enough funds to allow for recruiting trips by the coach or to scout potential recruits.

Related to recruiting is the scholarship question. Without the scholarships, Soderberg says it is an "ideal situation, the player and coach owe each other nothing." There is no money in between the two people. Soderberg mentions that at other schools soccer aide is increasing and admissions standards are lower. This eliminates many potential recruits from attending Vermont. The coach mentioned one such player now on the URI squad who scored two goals against Vermont in this season's encounter between the two schools.

Mr. Soderberg states that "realistically if some teams get aid, all teams should get aid." This is the "fair" way and does not mean that all teams should get equal amounts of aid. The coach believes that scholarships should be based on need.

Many people believe that the coach expresses favoritism to certain players, especially underclassmen and Vermonters. The coach emphatically denied these charges of favoritism.

He said that he doesn't necessarily like a young team but that the team he picks "is the best that I can find." Of those that tried out, the best players with the most skill made the team. Soderberg stated that two seniors tried out and one was cut. Eight juniors tried out and two or three were cut. When it came down to deciding which of two players should be the starter, performance counted and no favoritism was shown in any manner.

The fact that there were a limited amount of juniors and seniors necessitated the use of a younger squad to make up the backbone of the team. This was the best squad according to the coach.

The coach viewed his philosophy of coaching from the standpoint of a "love and appreciation for athletics." He wants a player who loves the sport as well. At a practice, he believes that nothing should be forced, a player performs because he wants to. At all times during a practice something is accomplished under these circumstances.

Soderberg believes in the importance of mental and psychological preparation for a game. A boy "will do the most he can for the game coming up." His team philosophy is to "keep it quiet and inconspicuous, to get the best performance out of a boy." He wants a significant contribution from the small squad he has chosen.

Soderberg believes that varsity sports brings together the best players for the particular situation. Since he does not believe in a large squad to provide a "cheering section" at a game, there is disappointment if a player is cut who might feel he belongs on the team.

The coach believes that victory should be enjoyed and that external signs of energy such as jumping and shouting before a game are not needed. He compares this to the quiet mental preparation before an exam, a preparation that does not involve class huddles or team cheers. The satisfaction should come after the victory or after a good grade on the exam.

These are some of the opinions and ideas of Coach Don Soderberg. Next season he hopes to form another "best Squad" to further improve the performance of the team.

Next week I shall conclude this analysis of the soccer situation from the viewpoint of the player.

"Shoot The Piano Player" Ends Truffaut Series

Charles Aznavour, the well-known French singer-actor, plays the leading role in Francois Truffaut's movie Shoot the Piano Player, to be offered on Friday night, November 15, in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

Presented by the Lane Film Society Series, Shoot the Piano Player will have two showings: 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. This is the final film in the Truffaut Classic Movies series.

Directed by Francois Truffaut in 1960, the 84-minute movie stars Aznavour as Charlie Koller, Marie Du Bois as Lena, Albert Remy as Chico, and Serge Davri as Plyne.

Shoot the Piano Player is the story of Charlie Koller, who plays the piano at Mamy's, a cafe on the Paris outskirts. His comfortable existence is shattered one night when his older brother Chico bursts into the cafe and asks for sanctuary after having executed a robbery. After helping his brother, Charlie goes with Lena, a desirable young waitress, to her apartment, where she forces him to acknowledge his past as Edward Saroyan, an internationally famous concert pianist.

When Lena persuades Charlie to make a comeback as a concert artist, the two go back to Mamy's Cafe, where Charlie accidentally kills an old admirer (Plyne) of Lena's. A timid man who had never wanted to be involved in life, Charlie is then swept up in the tragic climax of the film, the final reckoning of his past.

Film critic Pauline Kael says that "Truffaut is a free and inventive director and he fills the piano player's encounters with the world with good and bad jokes, bits from Sacha Guitry films, clowns and thugs, tough kids, songs, fantasy, snow scenes, and homage to the American gangster films."

Tickets for the Friday night movie, $1 each, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

Next spring the Lane Film Society plans to present a "W. C. Fields Festival" series.

Downhill Racing

(continued from page eleven)

bumps, sharp drop-offs compressions, little rattly bumps, steeps, and flats, and (3) air and wind resistance.

The line in turns is important, like in car racing. There is great potential to lose a lot of speed in a turn. If it is skidded and not carved, in other words if the skis leave a wide track in the snow instead of a narrow one, speed is lost. Or if more edge angle is used than necessary, that is, if the ski is rolled upon edge further than required to make the turn, slowing results. The amount of snow sprayed up by the skis in the turn is a good measure of how much speed is lost in the turn: the more snow, the more speed lost. Although a racer has made several practice runs on a downhill course before race day, he must be alert to speed changes from the training runs to the race day. Changes in snow conditions are most usually the cause of this. If his speed is different, then his line in turns will be different. The slower he goes, the tighter a line he can run, the faster, the more he has to set up.

Bumps are the biggest terrain problem. Most people like to keep their feet on the ground at 70 miles an hour. A large bump taken poorly may send you over 100 feet through the air (nearly 1.5 seconds of air time at 60 m.p.h.). The best way to take most big bumps and sharp drop-offs is to press down and forward as you go over the edge, often difficult to time at 90 feet/second. In the air the tips should be dropped to catch the air and pull the racer down. Small rattly bumps are best absorbed by the knees, and a good racer will press the downhill sides of them with the trails of his skis if there is time. When you have a choice, it is usually bettter to avoid bumps of any kind. Good downhillers pick a line where they can ride a flat ski, as a flat ski runs faster than an edged one.

The faster you go and the steeper the hill, the greater is the importance of a good aerodynamic position. The problem is, the better your tuck (that is what the aerodynamic position is called), the more you restrict the shock absorbing ability of your knees. The best downhillers may not have the lowest tucks in certain sections of a course, as they realize that they can't restrict their knee movements, as they would be sacrificing the free sliding of their skis.

The free sliding of the skis is very important. A ski slides better, as I said before, when it is flat on the snow, and when the weight of the skier is carried more on the tail, behind the place where the boots are mounted. Nothing is gained, though, if the weight is shifted so far back that the tips come off the snow. Waxing and conditioning the ski bottoms are more important in downhill than in other events.

No two runs of downhill are ever the same, even if on the same course and trail. The snow always changes, as do your skis. New ruts develop and the angle of the sun constantly changes. The good downhiller has to constantly adjust to variables.

Approach And Extra

If culture is indeed the aggregate of man's most meaningful gestures, efforts and enduring creations, then culture can profitably be studied in a universal context, with a perspective which recognizes the ultimate coherence of all substance beyond structural dichotomies at the root of things. The Cross-Cultural Program of the L/LC is, therefore, an interdisciplinary, international approach to the study and understanding of world cultures, in their inter-relatedness. Students in the program are selected from varying socio-cultural backgrounds and experiences which they are encouraged to share freely with other residents of the L/LC. These students live together in the Cross-Cultural Program suite of the L/LC to facilitate mutual exchange of ideas and values.

Participation

During one academic year in the Program, each student is expected to take at least four culturally relevant courses, including the C&T 195R, outside his major field of study. For example, a student majoring in the Physical Sciences is expected to select h cross-cultural courses from th Humanities and the Socia Sciences. A student in th Humanities may select h cross-cultural courses from th Physical Sciences and the Socia Sciences while a student of th Social Sciences may select h course from the Physic Sciences and the Humanities. In each case, it is recommende that the student, dependi upon his academic preparatio choose from the appro introductory or the advanc courses of the respecti departments. A student m satisfy the Cross-Cultu Program participati conditions and the electi requirements of his ma department simultaneous (Students do not have to ful the interdisciplinary cour requirement in the Spri Semester 1975.)

In addition to interdisciplinary cours students in the Program participate in regul scheduled seminars slide-illustrated lectures cultural relevance which help to clarify and solid classroom theories. The lectu and seminars are conducted scholars and specialists wi

«the doctor

Address letters to Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, Mi. 48823.

QUESTION: Is it true that the shape of the navel is differe women who have never been pregnant compared to women have been pregnant? I have heard that women who have been pregnant have a longitudinal navel and those who have pregnant have a round one.

ANSWER: Since I was asked this question I had plenty of to make observations and to ask some discrete questions.

To begin with, the navel (Umbilicus) is round. The ulti shape of the umbilicus is dependent upon what kind of pu and tugging goes on in the abdominal wall and for some re the sex of the belly button's owner.

Women who have never had children indeed seem to more longitudinal navels than round ones. But, women who been pregnant have had considerable stretching of abdominal wall and this seems to account for the change. If is enough time between pregnancies and the woman doe gain weight, usually the abdominal wall reverts to its o state and the umbilicus more or less does the same. Ev some women who have never been pregnant have round one

Interestingly, men do not have longitudinal navels even thin and muscular. For some reason, the pull on the umbili lateral in men and vertical in women. I suppose if there is to part of the body which will remain shrouded in mystery, t as well be the umbilicus rather than something more funct meantime, going into a pharmacy and asking the pharm about what kind of condoms he or she sells represe reasonable test of assertiveness.

QUESTION: Will you please explain why condoms ar placed upon the ordinary display shelves in drug stores inste in some drawer behind the counter? It would be nice to b to compare brands, various features of each, prices and th as one does with most other non-prescription items. More one would not need to march out a salesperson, and hop the salesperson would not giggle, make a smart remark when one inquires about condoms. Let's do away wit vestige of prudery – put condoms on the counter.

ANSWER: Some states have distinct rules regarding the condoms which indicate that they must be dispensed pharmacist and cannot be a self-service item. This also ex why condom vending machines are not found in some either. 'Tis a pity because condom vending machines cer would be more in the public interest and do more for the p health than bubble gum machines, which are found every I always thought it would be a good idea to have a public in group operate condom machine concessions in dormitories. The profits could be used to provide contraceptive services to the needy.

NEW BUDGET –PRICED

PHARMACY

★ FULL SERVICE
★ BUDGET–PRICED PRESCRIPTIONS
★ COMPLETE SELECTION OF SQUIBB NATURAL VITAMINS
★ CONVENIENTLY LOCATED

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

PHONE: 863-4597

Rising Earth Books
81 Main Street
Burlington, Vermont
05401

(Above The Ski Rack)

SA SPEAKERS
Who would you like to hear?

SA Speakers brings speakers and events to the university in an effort to help satisfy the social, educational, cultural and recreational needs of students. In order to do this, speakers and events must be chosen from varied fields of interest and disciplines. This fall alone SA Speakers has presented David Frye, The Living Theatre Collective, Congressional and Senatorial candidates debates and Kenneth O'Donnell. In the past speakers such as Ralph Nader, Elizabeth Holtzman, and Dick Gregory have appeared on campus through the efforts of SA Speakers. In planning for the remainder of this semester and for next semester, we need your suggestions. We need to know about speakers and events that you would like to see, along with your reactions to events we've already presented. Please fill out the form below and leave it at the Student Activities desk in the Main Lobby of Billings Center if you have any ideas.

SA SPEAKERS
Suggestions

Name of Speaker

Any additional information you may have, such as:

Topic of the speaking event:

The cost of the speaker:

Where the speaker can be reached:

OPTIONAL

Your Name:

Address

Phone Number:

This is the strange, wonderful shoe with the heel lower than the toe.

This shoe is different from any shoe you've ever worn. It's the EARTH® negative heel shoe. The shoe designed to work in harmony with your centre body.

The heel of the Earth® shoe is actually lower than the toe. This allows you to walk naturally. Like when you walk barefoot in sand or soft earth and your heel sinks down lower than your toes.

The entire sole of the Earth shoe is molded in a very special way. This allows you to walk in a gentle rolling motion. And to walk easily and comfortably on the hard jarring cement of our cities.

But remember, just because a shoe looks like ours doesn't mean it works like ours. So to be sure you're getting the Earth brand shoe, look on the sole for our Earth trademark and U.S. Patent #3305947.

Your body will thank you.

Shoes, sandals, safaris and boots for men and women. From $23.50 to $42.50.

"EARTH is a registered trademark of Kalsi Spotswear, Inc. ©1974 Kalsi Spotswear, Inc.

139 BANK STREET

Classified Ad: 5-6 responsible students desire furnished farmhouse within 20 miles of UVM, preferably north - for summer and school year '75. Contact Sue or Hildi - x4251.

Ride Wanted: To Hartford or New London Thurs. Evening Nov. 14 or Fri the 15th, and back Sunday. Will share expenses and driving. Call Pat 862-1238.

For Sale: '67 Chevy Nova Wagon Std., 6 Cyl. Must sell. Asking $450. 863-2082.

For Sale: Pocket Calculator Texas Inst. SR-16. New w/warranty. $65 or less? Billings Desk. Roger Wilder.

For Sale: Portable Stereo Tape Recorder used AKAI X-V with some used tapes left at Billings Center Desk for Roger Wilder.

Skis: 1973 Head 215 cm. Great for G.S. Salomon 505 Bindings. $80. 864-7703.

For Rent: Sunny 2 rm. room w/loft. Furnished. Kitchen privileges. Bathroom in common. Parking $120 mo. + utilities. Keys 863-3374, 24 Russell St.

862-4045

You tak

ruffaut Series

...aters movie, $1 each, are available in ...and the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, ...ache and "at the door. For ...design, reservations, telephone ...know the 656-3418.

...night. Next spring the Lane Film Society plans to present a "F. C. Fields Festival" series.

hill Racing

...ued from page eleven)

...compressions, little rattly bumps, steeps, ...wind resistance.

...portant, like in car racing. There is great ...speed on a turn. If it is skidded and not ...the skis leave a wide track in the snow ..., speed is lost. Or if more edge angle is ...t is, if the ski is rolled upon edge further ...e turn, slowing results. The amount of ...skis in the turn is a good measure of how ...e turn, the more snow, the more speed ...has made several practice runs on a ...race day, he must be alert to speed ...g runs to the race day. Changes in snow ...ually the cause of this. If his speed is ...n turns will be different. The slower he ...e can run, the faster, the more he has to ...

...t-terrain problem. Most people like to ...round at 70 miles an hour. A large bump ...ou over 100 feet through the air (nearly ...t 60 m.p.h.). The best way to take most ...p-offs is to press down and forward as ...en difficult to time at 90 feet/second. In ...e dropped to catch the air and pull the ...bumps are best absorbed by the knees, ...ose the downhill sides of them with the ...is time. When you have a choice, it is ...bumps of any kind. Good downhillers ...an ride a flat ski, as a flat ski runs faster ...

...d the steeper the hill, the greater is the ...rodynamic position. The problem is, the ...is what the aerodynamic position is ...trict the shock absorbing ability of your ...illers may not have the lowest tucks in ...course, as they realize that they can't ...ements, as they would be sacrificing the ...

...the skis is very important. A ski slides ...when it is flat on the snow, and when the ...rried more on the tail, behind the place ...unted. Nothing is gained, though, if the ...back that the tips come off the snow. ...g the ski bottoms are more important in ...vents. ...ownhill are ever the same, even if on the ...The snow always changes, as do your skis. ...the angle of the sun constantly changes. ...s to constantly adjust to variables.

...s the strange, ...ful shoe with the ...ver than the toe.

...heel strike slows ...slower than your ...foot.

The erosive side ...of the Earth shoe is ...moulded in a very ...special way. This ...allows you to walk ...in a gentle rolling ...motion. And to ...walk easily and ...comfortably on the ...hard jarring concrete ...of our cities.

But remember, ...just because a shoe ...looks like ours ...doesn't mean it ...smells like ours. So ...to be sure you're ...getting the Earth ...brand shoe, look on ...the sole for our ...Earth trademark ...and U.S. Patent ...#3305947.

Your body will ...thank you.

Shoes, sandals, ...sabots and boots for ...men and women. ...From $23.50 to ...$42.50.

EARTH is a registered ...trademark of Kalso ...Systems, Inc. ...©1974 Kalso ...Systems, Inc.

BANK STREET

Approach And Extra-Curricular Activities

If culture is indeed the aggregate of man's most meaningful gestures, efforts and enduring creations, then culture can, profitably be studied in a universal context, with a perspective which recognizes the ultimate coherence of all substance beyond structural dichotomies at the root of things. The Cross-Cultural Program of the L/LC is, therefore, an interdisciplinary, international approach to the study and understanding of world cultures in their inter-relatedness. Students in the program are selected from varying socio-cultural backgrounds and experiences which they are encouraged to share freely with other residents of the L/LC. These students live together in the Cross-Cultural Program suite of the L/LC to facilitate mutual exchange of ideas and values.

Participation

During one academic year in the Program, each student is expected to take at least four culturally relevant courses, including the C&T 195R, outside his major field of study. For example, a student majoring in the Physical Sciences is expected to select his cross-cultural courses from the Humanities and the Social Sciences. A student in the Humanities may select his cross-cultural courses from the Physical Sciences and the Social Sciences while a student of the Social Sciences may select his course from the Physical Sciences and the Humanities. In each case, it is recommended that the student, depending upon his academic preparation, choose from the general introductory or the advanced courses of the respective departments. A student may satisfy the Cross-Cultural Program participatory conditions and the electives requirements of his major department simultaneously. (Students do not have to fulfill the interdisciplinary courses requirement in the Spring Semester 1975.)

In addition to the interdisciplinary courses, students in the Program will participate in regularly scheduled seminars and slide-illustrated lectures of cultural relevance which will help to clarify and solidify classroom theories. The lectures and seminars are conducted by scholars and specialists within and outside the University of Vermont who are invited specifically to the Cross-Cultural Program. Prospective guest lecturers for the Spring Semester include Dean John Weiger, Linda Rodd, Allan Andrews, N.H. Muller, III., Chinua Achebe, Dean Corrigan, Steve Pastner, Molefi K. Asante (Arthur L. Smith), Professor Manchel, James Pappas, Dolores Stocker, S. Allen-Counter, Jr., David L. Evans, Ross Brewer, Jack Clemmons, etc.

Project

In keeping with the inspiration of the L/L Center, initially each student is required to write and submit his academic objectives in joining the Cross-Cultural Program. The student finally develops a project aided by the director and other resources of the Program within the framework of his objectives. This project, which may take the form of a paper, a presentation, a design or some creative demonstration, should grow out of the student's exposure to the Program and will be the ultimate demonstrable means of realizing and articulating the stated educational objectives. The students of the CCP are also required to participate in Group Sensitivity Sessions offered by the staff of the Counselling and Testing Center. The student earns the C&T 195R credit upon completion — and illustration of the project.

Activities

Students in the CCP are encouraged to organize outdoor and extra-curricular activities. These may include sports, parties, cook-outs, fishing expeditions, skiing, hiking, mountain climbing, boat-racing, etc. In addition to ensuring body fitness, the extra-curricular activities will help to ease tensions associated with the academic environment of the University.

Admission

The Cross-Cultural Program is open to all students of the University of Vermont. Any student interested in joining the Program for the Spring Semester should call x4200 or x4275, or come in person to the Commons office of the Living/Learning Center and leave his name, address, class, and objectives before December 5, 1974.

«the doctor's bag»

by Arnold Werner M.D.

Address letters to Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, Mi. 48823;

QUESTION: Is it true that the shape of the navel is different in women who have never been pregnant compared to women who have been pregnant? I have heard that women who have never been pregnant have a longitudinal navel and those who have been pregnant have a round one.

ANSWER: Since I was asked this question I had plenty of time to make observations and to ask some discrete questions.

To begin with, the navel (Umbilicus) is round. The ultimate shape of the umbilicus is dependent upon what kind of pulling and tugging goes on in the abdominal wall and for some reason, the sex of the belly button's owner.

Women who have never had children indeed seem to have more longitudinal navels than round ones. But, women who have been pregnant have had considerable stretching of the abdominal wall and this seems to account for the change. If there is enough time between pregnancies and the woman does not gain weight, usually the abdominal wall reverts to its original state and the umbilicus more or less does the same. Even so, some women who have never been pregnant have round ones.

Interestingly, men do not have longitudinal navels even when thin and muscular. For some reason, the pull on the umbilicus is lateral in men and vertical in women. I suppose if there is to be a part of the body which will remain shrouded in mystery, it may as well be the umbilicus rather than something more functional.

Meantime, going into a pharmacy and asking the pharmacist about what kind of condoms he or she sells represents a reasonable test of assertiveness.

QUESTION: Will you please explain why condoms are not placed upon the ordinary display shelves in drug stores instead of in some drawer behind the counter? It would be nice to be able to compare brands, various features of each, prices and the like as one does with most other non-prescription items. Moreover, one would not need to search out a salesperson, and hope that the salesperson would not giggle, make a smart remark, etc. when one inquires about condoms. Let's do away with this vestige of prudery — put condoms on the counter.

ANSWER: Some states have distinct rules regarding the sale of condoms which indicate that they must be dispensed by a pharmacist and cannot be a self-service item. This also explains why condom vending machines are not found in some states either. 'Tis a pity because condom vending machines certainly would be more in the public interest and do more for the public health than bubble gum machines, which are found everywhere. I always thought it would be a good idea to have a public interest group operate condom machine concessions in college dormitories. The profits could be used to provide free contraceptive services to the needy.

Ironically, contraceptive foams, jellies and applicators are on display as self service items in pharmacies, even though condoms are not. Clearly, this is a situation of anti-male sexism designed to embarrass men by making them get permission to have intercourse.

A while back I published a description of various types of condoms and a guide to their use. If the interest is high, I will be happy to provide an updated guide for consumers. In the QUESTION: What is your view of steam baths? Are they beneficial or injurious? Do they put a strain on the heart or lungs? How often (if at all) should one take them and for how long? Ditto for sauna baths.

ANSWER: Heat generally feels good after physical exertion and seems to have a positive psychological effect for some people, placing sauna and steambath use into a non specific and harmless class of activity.

Frequency and duration of use is an individual matter usually governed by time constraints rather than how well done one likes to be. Heat produces dilation of blood vessels and pooling of blood in the extremities. This makes some people dizzy if they stand up suddenly. However, the main dangerous effect remains buttock splinters.

COTTON TURTLENECKS ONLY $4.99

Sizes S-M-L-XL

Many Colors to Choose From

CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE

LOWER MAIN ST. OPEN DAILY 9-9 SAT. 9-5

Classified Ad: 5-6 responsible students desire furnished farmhouse within 20 miles of UVM, preferably north - for summer and school year '75. Contact Sue or Hildi - x4251.

Ride Wanted: To Hartford or New London Thurs. Evening Nov. 14 or Fri the 15th, and back Sunday. Will share expenses and driving. Call Pat 658-1238.

For Sale: 67 Chevy Nova Wagon 6cyl., 6 Cyl. Must sell. Asking $450. 863-3062.

For Sale: Pocket Calculator Texas Inst. SR-10. Now w/warranty. $55 or best. Billings Desk. Roger Wilder.

For Sale: Portable Stereo Tape Recorder and AKAI X-V with cross cord. Speak at Billings Center Desk for Roger Wilder.

Skis: 1973 Hexcel 215 cm. Great for G.S. Salomon 505 Bindings. 658-6947.

For Rent: Sunny 2 rm. apts. w/bath. Furnished. Kitchen privileges. Bedroom in apartment. Parking $120 mo. + utilities. Hugo 863-3374, 26 Russell St.

862-4045 152 church st.

The Bird Shop

You take care of the inside of your head... .....we'll take care of the outside

Special Shipment of REMAINDER BOOKS

JUST ARRIVED!

STARTS NOV. 18

THE AMERICAN MOVIES: A PICTORIAL ENCYCLOPEDIA HISTORY AWARDS PAUL MICHAEL

THE AMERICAN MOVIES: A Pictorial Encyclopedia. Paul Michael, Ed. in chief. A pictorial guide to over 1000 of the best and most popular sound films, as well as illustrated compilations of all the film awards from 1927 to the present. Over 1000 photos, 400 pages; 8½"x11". Pub. at $17.50 Only $6.98.

RUBAIYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM. The famous Fitzgerald translation. Illustrated in full color and line by Sarkis Katchadourian. A beautiful and delightful version of the most provocative and widely quoted poems in literature. SPECIAL Only 2

HERBS AND MEDICINAL FLOWERS. Text by Matthias Herman. Dozens of beautiful Full-color detailed illustrations accompanied by authoritative and incisive text introduce the reader to plants with curative power. Each is identified by both its Latin and English name, the names of its curients, and a concise description of its curative powers. Over 200 entries & 221 illustrations. 8"x10". Pub. at $8.95. Only 3.98.

WILD FLOWERS. Text by Matthias Hermann. An encyclopedia of over 70 varieties of wild flowers, their characteristics and where they can be found. Each flower is identified by its Latin name and the description is accompanied by a FULL-COLOR detailed drawing. Pub. at $8.95. Only 3.98.

HOW TO MAKE IT ON THE LAND: A Complete Guide to Survival in the Country. By Ray Cohen. The author wrote this all-inclusive farming source-book especially for the unskilled and ignorant city-dweller. He gives you advice and information needed to live in the country - with the only business contacts the woods, the soil and he sun. Guides you step-by-step toward total pastoral independence. Over 150 photographs and illustrations. Large 8½" x 11" format helps to tell you more about making it on the land than you know how about making it in the city. Pub. at $10.00 Only 3.98.

HERB OLSEN'S GUIDE TO WATERCOLOR LANDSCAPE. By Herb Olsen. This lavishly-illustrated book by one of America's foremost watercolorists, contains everything the artist needs to know in order to paint a successful watercolor landscape. The unusual format was devised by the author to present his comprehensive material with the utmost simplicity & clarity. Illus. throughout in beatiful Full Color and black & white. Pub. at $17.50 Only 6.98.

FUN TO READ CLASSICS. Ageless literature, ageless excitement in visually appealing format - wide margins, large type, lively illustrations plus an Afterword detailing the author, setting, or other side-lights about the story, and a handsome Full-color cover. Grades 5 - up. Pub. at +3.50 each. Only 1.00 each.

CINEMA OF THE FANTASTIC. By Chris Steinbrunner and Burt Goldblatt. Over 350 photographs guide us through a fascinating excursion into the bizarre, satanic and haunting film world of the incredible. A picture - and - text documentation of major milestones of this fabulous specialty of cinematic art. Pub. at $12.50 Only $4.98.

JAMES CAGNEY. By Andrew Bergman. 101 photographs cover Cagney's long career (ruthless gangster, cocky hero, or nimble song-and-dance man) and evaluate the over sixty films that left their indelible mark on the history of motion pictures. Indexed. Pub. at $4.95. Only $1.98.

MOVIE GREATS: A Pictorial Encyclopedia. Paul Michael, Ed. in chief. A pictorial presentation of over 700 actors and actresses, directors and producers who have made their mark in American sound film. Not only the top stars but also the character men and women who have given their talents to the medium. For each player a brief biography, for each director and Helen & Scott Nearing: LIVING THE GOOD LIFE. Intro. by Paul Goodman. Superb harvest of congenial & specific advice on harmonious rural living based upon 20 years of practical and creative experience. 20 illustrations. Pub. at 4.95. Only 1.98.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. All that Shakespeare ever wrote - a fine, complete edition (2 inches thick) following the arrangement of the First Folio of 1623 with "Pericles" the poems and sonnets appended. 1,100 Double-Column pages: ribbon bookmark. Special Value 2.98.

STAINED GLASS: A Step-by-step guide. By Walter W. Judson. Here is a complete guide to the appreciation and creation of stained glass, by an expert in the field. It is an extensive how-to manual that explains everything from drawing and cartooning to cutting the glass; and leading and soldering. Pub. at $4.95 Only 1.98.

CREATING ART FROM ANYTHING. By Dona Z. Meilach. A handbook for students, teachers and artists that explores the use of everyday objects as art materials. Concise and well illustrated with 250 black-and-white and color photographs. This is a highly attractive and useful book on the trend known as found-object art. Pub. at $17.95. Only 3.98.

I CHING BOOK OF CHANGES. Translated by James Legge. Intro. by Charles San. The standard translation of I Ching in a large, complete & unabridged edition. The new Introduction provides a clear and simplified way to consult the oracle, making this the most useable I Ching in print. Pub. at $10.00 Only 3.98.

THIRTY STRANGE STORIES By H.G. Wells. Intro. by Michael Lord. The great master of science fiction (War of the Worlds, etc.) was also a devoted writer of uncanny and macabre tales. Here are the best thirty of his imaginative stories in this genre. Pub. at $10.00 Only 2.98.

GREAT LAKES SHIPWRECKS & SURVIVALS. By William Ratigan. Story of the most spectacular shipwrecks and the most incredible survivals in the history of the Great Lakes, dramatizing the personalities of Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie, and Ontario. The tragedies on these oceans of fresh water rank second to none on the high seas, as is emphasized in this account of the memorable disasters that have littered the St. Lawrence Seaway with wrecks. Illustrated with maps and photographs. Pub. at $7.95 Only $2.98

UNIVERSITY STORE

ON THE CAMPUS

Andrews, Rollins, Patterson Discuss Financial Crunch

(continued from page one)

Salmon has impounded $900,000 this year from the university's budget, adding to the current $1.2 million debt. Andrews is prepared for level funding next year, while the university requires 1.6 million more than that to run operations. "The magnitude of our problem in FY 76 is three million," Andrews predicted.

Rollins feels that leveling the size of UVM has added to the money crisis. He believes the leveling was necessary, because of the overexpansion UVM went through in the past years. He mentioned the "unusually large number of professional programs," too many credits required for majors and small classes. Also on Rollins' list was that the College of Arts and Sciences contains "too many majors and courses in a limited area."

There seemed to be general agreement that some programs would have to go. Leonard asked what the criteria was going to be to cut programs.

President Andrews answered that a variety of criteria was going to be used. One is the importance of the program to the total society and what it means to the state of Vermont. Another is the demand of the students for a certain program. Leonard jumped in at this point, saying that demand could be misleading, in that professors could have a gut in order to increase the number of students in their classes. However, Andrews stated that not one criteria would be used, but several in deciding on the future of a program.

He continued his list of criteria, listing what is the marketplace for students after they graduate from a certain program. Another important consideration is whether other programs rely on a particular program.

Administration costs were questioned by Maddern, who wondered if any consideration was given to cutting the administration budget. Patterson emphasized that UVM has one of the lowest administrative costs in the nation. While the national average for administration costs are 13 percent, UVM's is only 8-9 percent reports Patterson. He included, "We're very very tight," referring to the budget. Primary consideration of Patterson is the student who he says, "is the paying customer." However, Patterson declared, "That is not to say we can't do better." He feels that some people can be made more productive, and that $100,000-$300,000 savings can be realized.

Leonard inquired into the policy of the ratio of out-of-state and in-state students and the $100,000 loss due to the increase in Vermont students. "I know the state goes out of its way to support the school, but is it not possible to go overboard to have too many Vermonters," questioned Leonard.

Rollins and Andrews both supported the contention that UVM will accept any qualified Vermonter. According to Andrews, this is not a state law, but a university policy. However, he added that if UVM changes its policies in regard to in-state/out-of-state balance, "serious consequences could happen in the legislature." It is up to the Department committees and not the Administration which decides on acceptance of applications.

As for the in-state/out-of-state imbalance, Rollins asserted that admissions is a gamble with 20-30 variables to deal with, especially with (the non-predictability of student "show-ups."

The trio was asked by Leonard about the Faculty Senate's approval of differential tuition rates. Rollins reacted negatively, stating that "Tuition costs don't shake out by colleges." There is some "practical difficulty", he added in figuring out differential tuition costs. He was also concerned that only the rich students could participate in the rich programs. "There are a whole series of questions that are impossible to solve."

Maddern asked the three administrators what they thought of Daniels' proposal. Professor Robert Daniels proposes that the state support professional school programs, such as the Medical School and Agricultural Services while charging the same tuition for in-state and out-of-state students for the general university. The state would then subsidize Vermont students to make up the difference in tuition costs.

Personnel is working to find jobs for people who have been cut and most people, according to Patterson, have found employment. Employees cut are on a six month callback, which means if any position becomes available they have top priority.

Andrews was not enthusiastic about the proposal.

He also feels there are many unanswered questions and problems to deal with. He wonders who would take responsibility for the $1.5 million debt service of state buildings, that the state takes care of now. He wonders if this would be taken out from tuition. Also, he feels that to sufficiently fund the general university, a $3200 tuition would have to be charged. To subsidize Vermont students at a reasonable level of $1600, VSAC would need two to three million dollars more than what they currently have. Andrews personally can see no benefits from Daniels' proposal.

President Andrews ended the interview with a vote of confidence for the future of UVM.

"We are confident that this institution is going to survive, it is going to be first class, and it is going to be stronger. The thing that disturbs all of us terribly are those few people who are going to have to be laid off. And I think that is the tragedy of the situation. But the institution, I have no concerns, no worries about it whatever. I'm very optimistic about the future of the university."

WRUV-FM will air the interview on tonight, Thursday at 6:30. David Leonard and Bruce Maddern were the interviewers.

Natural Foods A La 'Gabonzo'

by Steve Tanner

Behind the scenes at the Redstone Food Factories, buried in the stainless steel steaming jungle of cooking pots, pans and sizzling griddles, is a lone SAGA chef. Every day he is up early, devising a special menu to brew in his special cauldron to serve to the special eaters at Wright and Simpson Halls. His name is Steve "Gabonzo" Holtz. His title is the Natural Foods Chef otherwise known as the "Miso" cook.

"Miso" cook? Miso is a soybean paste used in making soups and sauces. It is also the name of the storeroom where Steve keeps all his "weeds and seeds" (lentils, raisons, currents, beans, and other delights).

"Gabonzo" Holtz? He got his nickname the first day he worked in the kitchens. He was preparing his famed "Refried Garbonzo Beans" in a steam cooker when the lid suddenly blew off and refried garbonzo beans spewed over the kitchen. Leroy, his supervisor, dubbed him "Gabonzo" on the spot.

Holtz is the first cook assigned by SAGA to cook especially for their Natural Foods Program. Wright and Simpson are the only halls which regularly serve a Natural Foods meal in addition to the regular "food." Living and Learning cafeteria does serve Natural Foods, but they are supplements to the meal scheduled.

Holtz insists that the Foods he serves be called "Natural Foods" as opposed to "Health Foods". He believes "all foods are Health Foods" in the sense that they keep us alive, but "Natural Foods are foods with the least amount of artificial ingredients." The meals he serves are all vegetarian.

Some of the "Gabonzo's" specialties are Egg Plant Parmesian, Chicken Bone Chile, Soy Spinach High Rise, Veg-All Delight, and Lentil Mushroom Supreme.

The response to the Natural Foods Program so far has been very enthusiastic - at least enthusiastic enough to warrant Holtz's presence. In the past the program was largely the work of students doing the cooking and baking in the off hours of the night. Diane Susie started the idea 4 years ago. Katie Kelly and Joan Galinas were responsible for putting the casseroles breads on the tables last year. Katie Kelly still works on making casseroles for the healthy appetites of Natural Foods Connaisseurs.

Right now, Holtz is planning on serving two solid Natural Foods meals a day, lunch at Wright Hall and dinner at Simpson. Breads, honey and granola are supplemental at breakfast now along with yoghurt at lunch and dinner. Holtz wants to be serving a soup, casserole, and a vegetable at both lunch and dinner. Plans are possible to move the entire Natural Foods Program to Living-Learning so that a dining hall open three meals a day could serve three full Natural Foods meals daily.

"Gabonzo" says he was eating SAGA food 6-8 years ago and did not like it so well. He moved into his own house and began cooking Natural Foods for himself and friends. Now he is back at SAGA and changing some of the things that his taste buds did not take to before. From his cooking experience, Holtz has seen the art of cooking die. He is trying to revitalize it by going back to essentials of foods and creating fresh new dishes for Wright and Simpson.

Steve "Gabonzo" Holtz is trying to get Natural Foods on the tables, but they are expensive and his working facilities are limited. As he himself says, "things take time," but the program is moving toward expansion.

Handicapped Children Benefit From Special Program

Children with handicaps that range from physical brain damage through a whole spectrum of elusive, hard-to-define impediments to learning, are generally referred to in educational circles as "exceptional children."

They often miss the organized activity and social intercourse that are an important part of growing up for the average youngster, and a University of Vermont education student is trying to supply that extra dimension of learning for exceptional children in the Burlington area.

Debbie Hoffman, a Huntington, Long Island junior majoring in special education at UVM, has formed the Council for Exceptional Children to provide activities - most recently, a Halloween party for 38 youngsters - and to go a step further to inform the public about exceptional children and to help students learn how to work with them.

Hoffman is a transfer student from Keene (N.H.) State College, where she was president of a similar council, and set up the UVM chapter just five weeks ago because she recognized the need and because, she says, the special education area in UVM's College of Education and Social Services "is fantastic."

The Council's goals include an informational program to acquaint the public, but especially parents of exceptional children, with agencies and programs that can help, and to dispel myths and misinformation about the problems attendant on brain damage and similar handicaps.

As part of its informational program the Council meets every other Wednesday at 3 p.m. (watch the calendar of events) to present films and speakers; recently, Dr. Dean C. Corrigan, dean of the College of Education and Social Services, and Sister Janice, Ryan, RSM, director of the Champlain Association for Retarded Citizens.

A second goal is met by offering students a chance to learn the techniques of special education through actual experience in the work. Students are matched with opportunities in agencies and projects including the Howard Mental Health Services agency, Baird Children's Center, and special education classes at Edmunds Junior High School and Ira Allen School, all in Burlington.

Giving exceptional children a chance to enjoy social activities is a third goal; the Halloween party was a success, and planned activities in the near future include sleigh rides, athletic activities, a Thanksgiving Festival and a show displaying the art work of exceptional children.

A longer-range plan is Hoffman's hope to start a recreational and therapeutic camp for exceptional children.

In the meantime, she's looking for everyone's ideas and help. She and the exceptional children need volunteers, suggestions, help. She can be reached, or get a message, at the special education office, x 2936, or, in the evening by phoning 864-6649.

GUY HAUTE COIFFURE
PRESENTS —
OUR NOVEMBER SPECIAL
to all UVM women
L'OREAL MINI VAGUE PLUS
Invisible style support adds natural-looking body to your hair
ONLY $15.00 including shampoo & style
Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday November 18, 1974 -
December 18, 1974 Call 658-2606 for more information
UVM ID CARDS AND APPOINTMENTS ARE REQUIRED

PREGNANT SHOTGUN
KA-BONG!
ONLY AT OZ
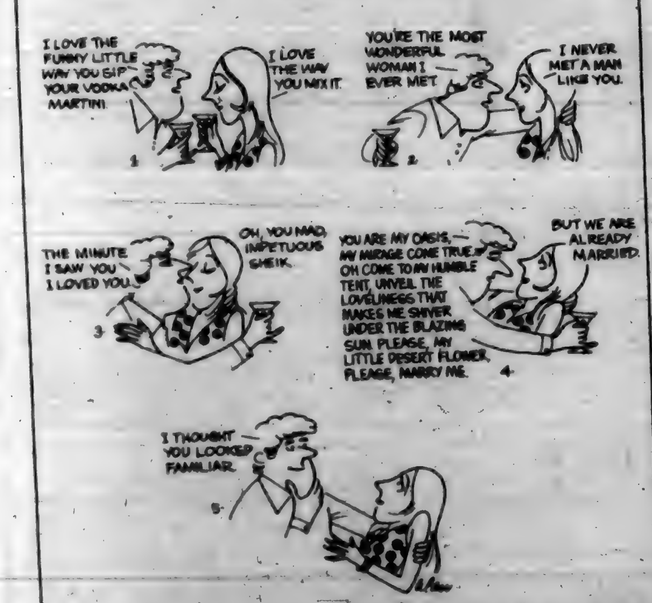
71 ST. PAUL ST.
862-4998

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS
AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

WOLFSCHMIDT SCHMILE #333—THE SHEIK



Start something with Wolfschmidt.

A martini, a bloody mary, a screwdriver. Or anything else you have in mind.
Wolfschmidt Genuine Vodka
$3.40
FIFTH SIZE—CODE #12

RAY SUPPLY INC.
ELECTRONICS DEPT.
GRAND OPENING
SPECIALS
NOV. 18th- NOV.23rd
GREAT SAVINGS ON BRAND NAME
CASSETTE TAPES STEREOS RADIOS 8 TRACK TAPES BATTERIES AND MANY OTHER SPECIALS
Be A Lucky Winner Of Our Drawing
GRAND PRIZE
Is a Man's 10 Speed Bicycle
MON.-THURS 9-5
FRI. 9-9
SAT. 10-4
RAY SUPPLY INC.
204 MAIN ST.

Rolling 201: HOW TO ROLL BETTER

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington
dunham
CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS®

3 DAY SALE
28.99
OUR REG. 34.99
men's sizes 6-13
ladies sizes 5-10
Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' sizes . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.
FREE PARKING OPEN DAILY 9 to 6 THURSDAY and FRIDAY 'til 9

SCHWARTZ ON SPORTS

The UVM soccer team reversed their losing record of 1973 and finished 1974 with a winning record of 7-3-3. After losing two of their first three to the University of Connecticut and Bridgeport, the booters won six and lost one while tieing three of the remaining ten games. Among the victories were triumphs over Yankee Conference rivals UMass and New Hampshire. The finial record in the conference was 3-2-1.

However, it has been pointed out to me that many players on the team have expressed a negative attitude towards coach Don Soderberg. Since his contract expires at the end of the year, some people would like to see that it is not renewed and that a new coach is hired.

To analyze this situation, I spoke to Mr. Soderberg about the soccer situation. The following is his assessment of the season and his coaching philosophy. I shall follow up this article with the viewpoint of members of the team.

Mr. Soderberg described the season as a "young team getting together with each other." The start of the season presented the toughest opponents, thus was the low point. But as the season progressed, the team had "more playing time together and more equal opponents." The season then culminated with the rout of UMass in the final game.

The coach expressed the view that Yankee Conference soccer is just a notch below the rest of New England (the Ivy League and major independents). The two best teams in the conference usually make the New England top ten, the rest of the conference falls below this level. Soderberg mentioned the success of UConn this season (third in the nation and best in New England) and the state of Connecticut as a hotbed of soccer talent.

The soccer team does not get scholarship aid. This led to a discussion of recruiting. In essence, how do the players from out of state become members of the UVM team? The coach stated that players and high school coaches contact the athletic department in writing. Soderberg then sends out literature on the school and the athletic program. If a player has sufficient interest, a trip to the school is the next step. However, there are four plays or so. Neither team could muster a sustained serious drive.

(continued on page eight)

Bateman Throws Three T

(continued from page twelve)

Mark Boland made a key defensive play for Vermont in the period with Northeastern threatening on UVM's 33 with a first down. Quarterback Aylward fired a pass down the middle into the alert arms of Boland for an interception at the Vermont 22. On NU's next series Vermont's strong safety Mike Snodgrass picked off another stray Aylward pass, this one at the eight yard line of Vermont. The third quarter ended with Northeastern threatening a first down inside the Vermont 40.

The Catamount defense proved a more than worthy match for Northeastern. This time, on third and eight, Aylward, having no receivers clear was forced to hang on to the football and was sacked back at the Vermont 44. On the ensuing play a fake punt by Lewis was foiled and Vermont began their first scoring drive of the second half.

This march was highlighted by a pitch to Thompson who streaked for 14 yards to the NU 37. Three plays later Bateman lofted a 34 yard TD pass to Looker who had outraced the Husky secondary and caught the ball uncontested in the end zone. The drive covered 56 yards in seven plays, the score occuring with 10:58 remaining to be played. The two-point conversion attempt failed. And the score stood Vermont 19, Northeastern 0.

In the next four and a half minutes the Huskies stormed back and found pay dirt on two consecutive drives. The first touchdown was a 29 yard pass from Aylward to tailback Foley capping a 79 yard drive. The second finished a 58 yard scoring march in eight plays, the last play being a 31 yard toss to wide receiver Art Bent for the TD. Both points after touchdowns were good and with 6:23 left to play Vermont's lead had dwindled to five points. Vermont 19, Northeastern 14.

After receiving the kickoff Vermont's offense was stopped

Mobil Snow Tire Prices
Three Types To Select From!
$23.95
Any Size Listed Below
Mobil Super Traction 78

Tire Size	Regular Price	SALE PRICE	F.E.T.
A78-13	34.61	23.95	1.78
F78-14	36.82	23.95	2.41
G78-14	37.89	23.95	2.56
600-15	35.53	23.95	1.78
G78-15	39.89	23.95	2.63

$33.95
Any Size Listed Below
Mobil Super Traction Belted

Tire Size	Regular Price	SALE PRICE	F.E.T.
A78-13	38.99	33.95	1.89
C78-13	39.95	33.95	1.90
E78-14	42.95	33.95	2.10
F78-14	46.95	33.95	2.99
G78-14	46.95	33.95	2.87
F78-15	46.95	33.95	2.99
G78-15	46.95	33.95	2.74

$49.95
Any Size Listed Below
Mobil Radial Traction

Tire Size	Regular Price	SALE PRICE	F.E.T.
FR78-14	57.95	49.95	2.81
GR78-14	59.95	49.95	2.96
HR78-14	62.95	49.95	3.16
GR78-15	61.95	49.95	3.05
HR78-15	63.95	49.95	3.28
LR78-15	67.95	49.95	3.48

SPILLANES SERVICECENTER
WILLISTON ROAD
CHECK OUR PRICES ON RECAPS

possible to move the entire tural Foods Program to ng Learning so that a dining open three meals a day ead serve three full Natural ods meals daily.
"Gobonzo" says he was
ing SAGA food 6-8 years ago
d did not like it so well. He ved into his own house and gan cooking Natural Foods r himself and friends. Now he back at SAGA and changing me of the things that his taste ds did not take to before.
im has cooking experience, olitt has seen the art of oking die. He is trying to vitalize it by going back to ientials of foods and creating sh new dishes for Wright and ewman.
Steve "Gobonzo" Holtt is ying to get Natural Foods on e tables, but they are xpensive and his working cilities are limited. As he mself says, "things take me" but the program is oving toward expansion.

cial Program

oard Children's Center, and special education classes at Edmunds Junior High School nd Ira Allen School, all in urlington.
Giving exceptional children chance to enjoy social ctivities is a third goal; the Halloween party was a success, nd planned activities in the ear future include sleigh rides, thletic activities, a Thanksgiving Festival and a how displaying the art work of xceptional children.
A longer-range plan is Hoffman's hope to start a ecreational and therapeutic amp for exceptional children.
In the meantime, she's ooking for everyone's ideas and elp. She and the exceptional hildren need volunteers, uggestions, help. She can be eached, or get a message, at the pecial education office, x 936, or in the evening by honing 864-6649.

NT
IACY

L'S store
gton

TAL
NS®
3 DAY
SALE
28.99
UR REG. 34.99
men's sizes 6-13
ladies' sizes 5-10
ng, camping,
boots n's & Ladies' to last... the all seasons.
DAY and FRIDAY 'til 9

SCHWARTZ ON SPORTS

The UVM soccer team reversed their losing record of 1973 and finished 1974 with a winning record of 7-3-3. After losing two of their first three to the University of Connecticut and Bridgeport, the booters won six and lost one while tieing three of the remaining ten games. Among the victories were triumphs over Yankee Conference rivals UMass and New Hampshire. The final record in the conference was 3-3-1.

However, it has been pointed out to me that many players on the team have expressed a negative attitude towards coach Don Soderberg. Since his contract expires at the end of the year, some people would like to see that it is not renewed and that a new coach is hired.

To analyze this situation, I spoke to Mr. Soderberg about the above situation. The following is his assessment of the season and his coaching philosophy. I shall follow up this article with the viewpoint of members of the team.

Mr. Soderberg described the season as a "young team getting together with each other." The start of the season presented the toughest opponents, thus was the low point. But as the season progressed, the team had "more playing time together and more equal opponents." The season then culminated with the rout of UMass in the final game.

The coach expressed the view that Yankee Conference soccer is just a notch below the rest of New England (the Ivy League and major independents). The two best teams in the conference usually make the New England top ten, the rest of the conference falls below this level. Soderberg mentioned the success of UConn this season (third in the nation and best in New England) and the state of Connecticut as a hotbed of soccer talent.

The soccer team does not get scholarship aid. This led to a discussion of recruiting. In essence, how do the players from out of state become members of the UVM team? The coach stated that players and high school coaches contact the athletic department in writing. Soderberg then sends out literature on the school and the athletic program. If a player has sufficient interest, a trip to the school is the next step. However, there are

(continued on page eight)

Rugby Team Ends Season At 5-5

The UVM rugby team ended its season against the Dartmouth Rugby Club in Hanover, New Hampshire last week. It ended on a losing note as Dartmouth won, 10-0.

From start to finish, the game was dominated by defense. Dartmouth jumped out to a 4-0 lead as they scored on a 25 yard try. The score remained at 4-0 in the first half.

When the second half started, the Vermont forwards forced the play and drove to the Dartmouth three where the Green were able to win a crucial line-out and kick the ball out of trouble.

Dartmouth added an insurance try near the end of the game and made the conversion to make the final score 10-0. Despite the loss, the UVM club which is young and learning, has shown it can play well against good competition. The final record for the team was 5-5.

A special note of thanks should be accorded to David Scrase, who gave the team help when he could and to Jim Pickman who really was the "Rugger" extraordinaire.

PFG-Schedule

FRIDAY, NOV. 15
GYM – Faculty-Staff 7 – 10:30 p.m.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7 – 10:30 p.m. (7 – 8 under 15 years)
RINK – Faculty-Staff – Check Friday.
TRACK – Faculty-Staff – 7 – 10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, NOV. 16
GYM – Students 7 – 10 p.m.
POOL – Students 3:30 – 5 p.m.; 7 – 10 p.m.
RINK – Students – Check Friday.
TRACK – Students 1 – 5; 7 – 10 p.m.

SUNDAY, NOV. 17
GYM – Students 1 – 2:30 p.m.; 1 court until 5 p.m.
POOL – Students 1 – 5 p.m.
RINK – Students – Check Friday.
TRACK – Students 1 – 5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL – 8:30 – 10:30 p.m.
All other facilities 7 – 8 p.m.

News From The Slopes: Downhill Racing

Editor's Note- Each week right up to the ski season, members of the UVM ski team will feature articles on their particular specialty. The ski team hopes that this will acquaint the students with the members of the team and what they really do. The writers this week have been All- Americans in past years. Next week, ski jumping will be featured in an article by Petter Knagdi.

by Chris Brown and Dave Dodge

Downhill is the king of alpine events. Slalams and giant slaloms are run on inclined planes; downhills are run on mountains. Downhill trails like the Strief at Kitzbuel for the Hannenkahn trophy or Ruthie's Run at Aspen for the Roche cup are traditions.

Before a downhill race, racers lie awake at night thinking about speeds better than seventy miles per hour and bumps that can throw you over one hundred feet through the air in less than one and a half seconds. One might also lose sleep thinking about the tragic falls that have killed two NCAA skiers in downhills in the last three years. The excitement of major downhills in Europe draws crowds of over 25,000 people at three dollars a head.

At the risk of boring the knowledgeable, let me say something about the course. The gates are wide, set far apart, open (meaning you go straight into them, rather than closed, where you may go either over or into and each side is defined by two poles about two feet apart, with a red panel stretched between them. As in the other events, a racer's feet must cross the imaginary line connecting the two sides on the gate.

Practice runs on the course before the race are required in downhill; unlike slalom and giant slalom where they are not allowed. As a result, downhills aren't run much in the East, as time and space are problems. However, in most years, the NCAA's include a downhill as one of the two alpine events. It is usually an event where the western schools do very well.

Chris Brown in tuck position in last year's Eastern Downhill Championships.

There are three kinds of obstacles confronted in downhill: (1) turns (many types) (2) terrain, which includes big rolling

(continued on page eight)

The basketball team will hold an intrasquad scrimmage on Tuesday, November 26 at Patrick Gymnasium. At 7:00 the Junior Varsity will play Rice High School of Burlington. Then at 8:30, the varsity will hold an intrasquad scrimmage. Admission is $1.00 for adults and $.50 for students.

Bateman Throws Three TD's And Defense Shines In UVM Victory

(continued from page twelve)

four plays or so. Neither team could muster a sustained serious drive.

Mark Boland made a key defensive play for Vermont in the period with Northeastern threatening on UVM's 33 with a first down. Quarterback Aylward fired a pass down the middle into the alert arms of Boland for an interception at the Vermont 22. On NU's next series Vermont's strong safety Mike Snodgrass picked off another stray Aylward pass, this one at the eight yard line of Vermont. The third quarter ended with Northeastern threatening a first down inside the Vermont 40.

The Catamount defense proved a more than worthy match for Northeastern. This time, on third and eight, Aylward, having no receivers clear was forced to hang on to the football and was sacked back at the Vermont 44. On the ensuing play a fake punt by Lewis was foiled and Vermont began their first scoring drive of the second half.

The march was highlighted by a pitch to Thompson who streaked for 14 yards to the NU 37. Three plays later Bateman lofted a 34 yard TD pass to Looker who had outraced the Husky secondary and caught the ball uncontested in the end zone. The drive covered 56 yards in seven plays, the score occuring with 10:58 remaining to be played. The two-point conversion attempt failed. And the score stood Vermont 19, Northeastern 0.

In the next four and a half minutes the Huskies stormed back and found pay dirt on two consecutive drives. The first touchdown was a 29 yard pass from Aylward to tailback Foley capping a 79 yard drive. The second finished a 59 yard scoring march in eight plays, the last play being a 31 yard toss to wide receiver Art Bent for the TD. Both points after touchdowns were good and with 6:23 left to play Vermont's lead had dwindled to five points. Vermont 19, Northeastern 14.

After receiving the kickoff Vermont's offense was stopped and the Cats were forced to punt to the red-hot Huskies from their own 31 with about five minutes left in the contest. But Looker's boot was mishandled by the single safety, Mark Nemes, and Vermont's Bob Weiler lunged at the loose football and covered up saving the game for the Catamounts. Though in great field position Vermont was unable to cross the goal line. This set the stage for kicker George Brunst, whose 25 yard field goal split the uprights and iced the victory for Vermont. Vermont won, 22-14.

Several records fell in Saturday's contest. Vermont's QB, Bob Bateman has broken Earl Olsen's 1972 record for total offense in one season. Olson had accounted for 1,755 yards but Bateman passed him Saturday and now has a total of 1,793. Wide-receiver Billy Looker established two new school marks. He eclipsed Gene Monahan's pass receiving yardage for one season. Looker's mark will stand at 631 yards until this Saturday when he will probably increase it. Looker now owns the record for most career passes caught, 78. The old mark of 77 had been held by Tim Sullivan.

Mobil Snow Tire Prices
Three Types To Select From!

$23.95
Any Size Listed Below
Mobil Super Traction 78

Tire Size	Regular Price	SALE PRICE	F.E.T.
A78-13	34.51	28.95	1.78
F78-14	38.50	28.95	2.41
G78-14	33.00	28.95	2.56
H78-14	35.33	28.95	1.78
G78-15	39.00	28.95	2.63

$33.95
Any Size Listed Below
Mobil Super Traction Belted

Tire Size	Regular Price	SALE PRICE	F.E.T.
A78-13	38.00	33.95	1.89
C78-13	38.00	33.95	1.89
E78-14	42.00	33.95	1.98
F78-14	46.00	33.95	2.00
G78-14	46.00	33.95	2.07
F78-15	46.00	33.95	2.00
G78-15	46.00	33.95	2.14

$49.95
Any Size Listed Below
Mobil Radial Traction

Tire Size	Regular Price	SALE PRICE	F.E.T.
FR78-14	57.95	49.95	2.01
GR78-14	60.95	49.95	2.06
HR78-14	60.95	49.95	2.16
GR78-15	60.95	49.95	2.06
HR78-15	60.95	49.95	2.25
LR78-15	67.95	49.95	2.49

SPILLANES SERVICECENTER
WILLISTON ROAD
CHECK OUR PRICES ON RECAPS

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
INC.
Route 2, Williston, Vt. 862-7000
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 95 and 96's
24.95 inc. FET & mounting
VW BRAKE JOB $49.95
Includes: 8 new brake linings, 4 turn drums, rebuild 4 wheel cylinders.
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

SAVE ON HONEYWELL CAMERAS STROBES
BIG PERFORMANCE ...at a not-so-big price!

HONEYWELL PENTAX SPOTMATIC F
The world-famous Pentax Spotmatic now meters wide open so the image in your viewfinder is always bright. A real boon for candids and action photography! No ON/OFF switch to fiddle with: lens cap off . . . and the Spotmatic F is already reading your next shot. Its exclusive Super-Multi-Coated Takumar lens gives you sharp, crisp pictures with truer color and more detail – under conditions you wouldn't attempt with other cameras.
- Uncannily accurate through-the-lens metering
- X, FP, Hot-Shoe with shock-preventing safety switch
- Locking shutter release; self-timer
- ASA range from 20 to 3200
- Great Pentax "feel" – classic design

WITH 50MM F/1.4 LENS
Come in for a demonstration RETAIL $429.00 THIS WEEK $299.
. . . today!
RAP with the Honeywell Factory Sales Rep.
on Friday, Nov. 15th 11PM to 9PM visit with the Kodak Rep. on Saturday Nov. 16th
Be a lucky winner of a door prize No purchase required
RAY SUPPLY INC. 204 MAIN ST.
Many other specials on Strobes & Cameras

BEST SELECTION OF SKI EQUIPMENT IN VERMONT

SKIS by:
Rossignol
K-2
Olin
Head
Dynamic
Kneissel
Volkl
Northland
Yamaha
Fischer
Dynastar
Hart
A&T Elan

SKI BOOTS by:
Nordica
Hanson
Lange Caber
Dolomite
Technica
A & T
Trappeur

FREE CANTING CHECK on our new Kennedy Computer.

SKI TUNE UP — Compare our ski tune-up with any other — our brand new, wet belt, factory machine does a superior job — the low $6.95 cost also includes edge sharpening, hot waxing and binding lubrication.

EXCELLENT SELECTION of SKIWEAR

SKI PARKAS
$20 to $110
by Comfy
Gerry
Alpine Design
Profile
White Stag
Slalom
Tempco
Roffee
C.B. Sports
Hot Gear
Saska Sports
SKyr
Beconta

SKI SWEATERS
$18 to $72
by Obermeyer
Meister
Iceland
Demetre
Sportif
White Stag
Beconta
Profile

ALPINE SHOP
Williston Road, So. Burlington
OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.

A Host Of Recent Intramural Winners

INTRAMURAL SOCCER LEAGUE WINNERS:
League "A" – Acacia; League "B" – Harris/Millis; League "C" – Wasted, League "D" – M.V.L. and Adams tied for league winner. In a playoff game, M.V.L. defeated Adams to represent League "D" in the League playoffs, League "E" – Christie, League "F" – Mason; League "G" – Sigma Nu.

To determine the All-Campus Championship, a single elimination playoff was held. In the first round SN defeated Mason 3-1; Wasted defeated Harris/Millis 4-3; Acacia defeated Christie 3-2; M.V.L. – bye.

In the second round M.V.L. defeated Sigma Nu 3-0, Wasted defeated Acacia 5-2.

In the final round M.V.L. defeated Wasted 5-2.

The roster of M.V.L. includes John Hafner, Doug Woodard, Bruce Tannenbaum, John Podon, William McCune, Boris Fuestow, William Cairns, Barry Gaynes and Robert Jones.

MEN'S INTRAMURAL HANDBALL (SINGLES) TOURNAMENT WINNERS

INTRAMURAL HANDBALL (SINGLES) TOURNAMENT:
"A" Tournament – Comolli (PDT) defeated Paquette (DP) 21-11, 21-14; "B" Tournament – Kennedy (DP) defeated Bayles (LI) 21-9, 21-15; "C" Tournament – Higley (DP) defeated O'Conner (DP) 21-18, 21-10.

ALL-CAMPUS MEN'S INTRAMURAL HANDBALL (SINGLES) CHAMPIONS
1st place – Delta Psi; 2nd place – Lambda Iota; 3rd place – Phi Delta Theta.

INTRAMURAL SORORITY RACQUETBALL DOUBLES WINNERS
Lisa Kreiner/Bobbi Allen (Pi Beta Phi) defeated Pam Marshall/Nancy Danielson (Kappa Alpha Theta) 15-1, 15-4 to win the Sorority Racquetball Doubles Tournament.

SORORITY TEAM CHAMPIONS
1st place – Kappa Alpha Theta; 2nd place – Pi Beta Phi; 3rd place – Alpha Delta Pi.

This week's intramural racquetball (singles) tournament winners were the following:

In the "A" tournament: John Kennedy (DELTA PSI) defeated Ken Munson (DELTA PSI), 21-16, 9-21, 21-15.

In the "B" tournament: David Solomon (WASTED) defeated Jerry Zell (WASTED) 15-3, 15-9.

And in the "C" tournament: Pat Taves (L/L, C) defeated Robert Nost (IBDEP), 15-12, 15-8.

For the all-campus's intramural racquetball (singles) champions:

In first place, Delta Psi, in second place, Wasted, and concluding in third, Living Learning, C.

U.V.M. SPORTS

Cats Win Home Finale 22-14

by Charlie Grace

The swirling November winds magically swept the litter from the bleachers... neighborhood kids tackled each other to the frosty turf at mid-field... the last of the 4000 or so fans filed out the gates for the last Saturday this year.

Vermont football had just won its 1974 Centennial Field closeout in convincing form by defeating Northeastern University 22-14. They complete their 10 game schedule this Saturday in Springfield, Massachusetts, where they tangle with the AIC Yellow Jackets at 1 p.m.

It was fitting that Vermont's most consistent showing this season was played before the home crowd. The contest had been tabbed as a classic passing duel between two of New England's top quarterbacks, Northeastern's Chris Aylward and Vermont's Bob Bateman. That aerial display failed to materialize in so grand a fashion, and, much to the delight of UVM partisans, the Cats established a strong running game in the opening minutes.

The Catamount squad proved they are just as tough on defense as they have been on offense. Defenders held the Huskies scoreless in the game for over 50 minutes while the offense had racked up three touchdowns.

The scoring heroes for Vermont included wide-receiver Billy Looker who caught four passes for 58 yards and two touchdowns, quarterback Bob Bateman who tossed three TDs and completed 11 passes in all for 170 yards, Sam Blood who rushed for 89 yards, George Brunst who kicked an extra point and a crucial field goal, and Rocky Thompson who caught a TD pass.

Throughout the contest, Vermont utilized its running attack with success. Blood, Thompson, and Mike McAllister rose to the occasion and collectively gained 145 yards.

In the passing department, quarterback Bateman completed 11 of 28 passes for three touchdowns. He was not intercepted. As a unit the Vermont offense again performed strongly with 350 total yards.

Defensively, Vermont may have played their best game of the season. Time after time they stalled the Northeastern drives and contained them to a game total of 66 yards on the ground. The secondary was less effective against the passing of quarterback Aylward. He completed 16 of 31 for 277 yards and established three school passing records.

But Vermont's defensive backfield came up with the big plays when they needed them. Mark Boland, Mike Snodgrass, and Steve Ernst intercepted passes deep in their own territory.

The Vermont special teams looked impressive as they covered punts and kickoffs well and in a crucial situation late in the game they recovered a punt receivers fumbled deep in NU territory.

Vermont's Larry Lockwood returned the opening kickoff to the UVM 38 yard line. The Cats opened up with a running attack as halfback Sam Blood swept for five yards around right end. Bateman fumbled in the backfield on the second play for a loss of nine and the quarterback's third down completion to Blood fell short of first down yardage. Bill Looker hit the first of his nine punts well and it sailed to the Northeastern 43 where the Huskies started their first drive.

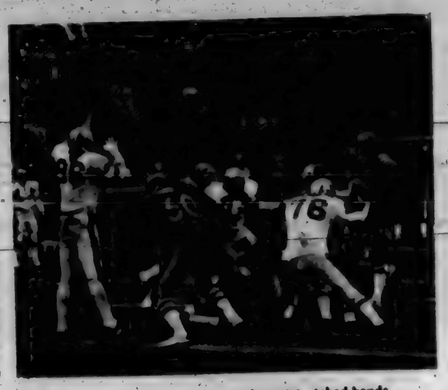
Quarterback Chris Aylward and the Northeastern coaches seemed equally cautious and elected to rush the football instead of passing. A tough Vermont defense forced the Huskies to punt.

On the second series, Vermont moved the ball from their own three yard line to the NU 24 on 11 carries. Penalties began to burn the Cats' tails and they turned the ball over on downs at the Northeastern 32 yard line.

Four plays later a fumble by NU fullback Mark Nemes was recovered by Vermont's Steve Ernst at mid-field. But the Northeastern defense held and Bill Looker booted the ball out of bounds at the Husky 13 yard line. Vermont's defense smelled a safety, but only managed to sack quarterback Aylward at his own three yard line.

The first quarter ended with the ball on the three and the score: Vermont 0, Northeastern 0.

Rhett Lewis punted on fourth down from his own end-zone to his own 38, leaving Vermont in excellent field position. On the first play, Bateman tossed to tight end Chuck Casella and he advanced to the 19 yardline of NU. Wingback Robbie Gilligan then scampered around left end to the ninety six and on third and goal Bateman fired over the middle to Billy Looker for Vermont's first score. George Brunst added the point after and with just under 13 minutes left in the first half the score stood: Vermont 7, Northeastern 0.



Bob Bateman unleashes a pass over the outstretched hands of the Northeastern line.
SPS Photo: Wynn Gold

In the second period, the game transformed into a punting duel between Looker and his Northeastern counterpart, Rhett Lewis, for neither team was able to sustain a drive.

Vermont's big break in the first half came with time running out when Northeastern punter Lewis fumbled a high snap from center on his own 14 yard line and Vermont's Joe Reed recovered. Three plays later Bateman fired a bullet to his wingback Johnny Thompson in the end zone for six more. The two-point conversion attempt failed. The half ended with the score UVM 13-NU-0.

Nemes returned Brunst's kick to the 25 of Northeastern at the start of the second half. This period was scoreless and it seemed as though the punting units were on the field every

(continued on page eleven)

Girl's X-Country Finish First In New England AAU Meet

A contingent of five UVM women runners, coach Perry Bland and manager Ellen Post, traveled to Amherst, Massachusetts to compete in the New England Women's AAU Cross-Country Championships. The team won the competition.

The course was a rugged one complete with pine trees to be evaded, brooks to be hurdled, and mud to contend with. The team compiled 34 points in winning the race. The Cambridge Sports Union was second and the Liberty Athletic Club was third.

Individually, Carol Degan was the standout placing second overall. Her time was 19:04. Next for Vermont was Janet Reynolds who took ninth place overall and was one minute behind Degan. Kathy Gleany was the third UVM runner finishing 14th overall followed closely by Debbie Learned whose time of 21:21 was her best of the season. Jane Griffith was the fifth UVM runner with a time of 22:31.

This Sunday, the women's team will travel to Long Island, New York to compete in the Region 1 AAU Championships. Hopes are high for another strong performance.

Men's X-C Place High

by David J. Raneri

On Monday, November 11, the University of Vermont made its finest showing in the New England Cross - Country Championships since 1970. Vermont finished seventh in a field of over 45 schools with over 300 runners.

The race was won by Providence College with Massachusetts finishing second. The Cats finished 12 points ahead of UConn and just behind Springfield College.

The first runner in for the team was Bob Graves placing 20th with a time of 24:40. Mike Berry was next placing 24th in 24:45. Other UVM finishers were Peter Weith 57th, Lynn Capen 59th, and Dave Milligan 64th.

The Vermont squad with an 8-2 dual meet record will finish the season running in the ICAAAA Championships in Van Cortland Park in New York City on November 18.

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% OFF WITH VALID UVM ID.

MAGRAMS
MORROCCAN SHEEPSKIN
EMBROIDERED OR TOOLED BAGS AND WALLETS
DESIGNS, EARTH TONES.
DIG IT?
FROM $1.00 to $13.00
WAY IN SHOP

GLADSTONE'S BIGGEST EVER WINTER
BOOTS
AND Snowmobile Boots
SALE!

Get FIRST CHOICE of pile lined, ALL LEATHER UPPER Winter Boots and sturdy warm Snowmobile Boots. This is the biggest Boot Sale Gladstone's has ever had and we've had some big ones! We can't show them all here. So get to your nearest Gladstone store EARLY for your style and size.

GREAT PRICES!

WOMEN'S WINTER BOOTS
Values to $30!
$12.99 $14.99
$16.99 $19.99

SNOWMOBILE BOOTS
Children's $6.99 & $7.99
Youths' & Boys' $8.99 & $9.99
Women's $9.99 & $10.99
Men's $9.99 & $10.99

THE WORST WINTER IN YEARS IS FORECAST
SO HURRY TO GET BEST SELECTION!

GLADSTONE'S
New England's Largest Independent Shoe Chain
BURLINGTON 11 Upper Church St
BARRE 128 North Main St
RUTLAND Rutland Plaza
WINOOSKI 94 West Canal St
ST. ALBANS 28 North Main St
NEWPORT 50 Main St
MORRISVILLE 466 Main St

KOREAN KARATE
DISCIPLINE
PHYSICAL FITNESS
SELF CONFIDENCE
SELF DEFENSE DAY & EVENING CLASSES
MEN-WOMEN- CHILDREN
VERMONT
TAE KWON DO, INC.
LAKE SHORE DR
MALLETS BAY 864-0414
VISITORS WELCOME!

TRY AN AZTEC MARTINI.

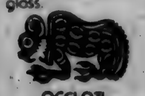
Montezuma® Tequila Martini
Montezuma Tequila, 2 parts Dry Vermouth, 1 part Vanilla extract, 2 drops. Stir with ice. Strain into chilled cocktail glass.



OCELOTL
(THE JAGUAR)
symbol for the 14th day of the ancient Aztec week

©1974 80 Proof Tequila Boston Distillers Import Co., New York, New York

VOLUME XCII
NUMBER 25
NOVEMBER 21, 1974

VE

Stunned

Dr. Andrews Gives the News

Student Task F
No Input In

by Barbara Frankel

Bruce Maddern, chairperson of the Student Task Force Committe on Financial Affairs, claims the student "cried and pleaded for input" into the recent administrative budget cut recommendations, but met with little success.

The committee, consisting of seven student representatives from various campus organizations, such as S.A., IRA, Fraternity Forum and Panhel, and two students at-large, was formed in early October at the request of President Edward Andrews and Dean Richard Powers. It is only supposed to have an advisory role. According to Maddern, committee members requesting information on upcoming budget cuts were "put off and put off. They kept saying, 'Come back next week. We aren't ready yet.' And soon it was too late."

Maddern feels, however, that although his group and a corresponding faculty advisory group had a very minimal say in the administration's decisions, there is hope for the future. The role of the student committee, in his opinion, is just starting. "This is really kind of an appeasement for students so we won't have the kind of gap we've had with the underpass," he commented.

Maddern believes there has been a big switch on the part of the administration. He contends that, although university officials limited input in this decision, they are beginning to listen more and more to student opinion. "I think, in the future, students should be included. Any cuts that affect an academic program have direct effects on students."

Maddern emphasized the lack of time which, he believes, forced the administration to limit the student and faculty input. Each Dean was told to inform each department chairperson to cut ten per cent of his or her budget. Af... request, departments... asked "where you can cu... fat out without hurtin... bone" or, in other words... programs were not essen... the department and... subsequently be eliminate...

The members of the S... Task Force Committee ... approve of the pr... elimination of the tw... nursing program. Althou... realize that this program ... only Allied Health dep... which does not receive ... funding, the students fe... are other alternatives. I... to prevent this step, th... suggested another m... paying for this progra... suppose) switching ... state/out-of-state stud... two or three per cent in... out-of-state student... would increase the Uni... income. The students h... recommended increas... application fee by $5... presently $15.

Maddern, speaking ... members of his com... announced that he ... decision to cut the ... team was justified, ... "academics are far ... important. If anything ... go, it should be footba... never put much money ... anyway..." The co... members also fe... elimination of the expe... program is a necessary e...

The students ... concerned with two as... the budget cuts. They ... the additional influx of ... who had previously ... enrolled in the two-yea... program and the expe... program will hurt the in... attention given to ea... student. The admin... proposes to offset this b... faculty members to ... their teaching loads, e... in introductory courses.

The students also...

Otis McRae Sues
On Charges

On Monday morning, November 25, 1974, a hearing will be held in the Federal District Court, in the city of Burlington, Vermont, regarding the case brought by Otis McRae against Goddard College in Plainfield, Vermont.

It was approximately a year ago this month that McRae led a "trek" to Boston culminating in a rally in the "Yard" at Harvard University to dramatize charges of racism at the hands of the former President of Goddard College and violation of contract.

Actions to force the college to honor its commitment included a twelve day hunger strike by McRae, followed by a ... day "symbolic" hunger ... demonstration staged at ... Tavern Motor Inn in Montpelier opposite ... Pavilion Building ... Governor's office.

McRae has spoken ... major New England ... and has pleaded his ca... York and Washington ...

The Equal Emp... Opportunities Commi... Boston continues ... investigation of the ... independent of the h... be conducted in the ... District Court.

President Wi... under whose Admi... most of the char... directed, formally re... President of Goddard ... on July 13, 1974, and ... local newspaper as ... reasons for his resigna... his "ideas had run th... at the institution."

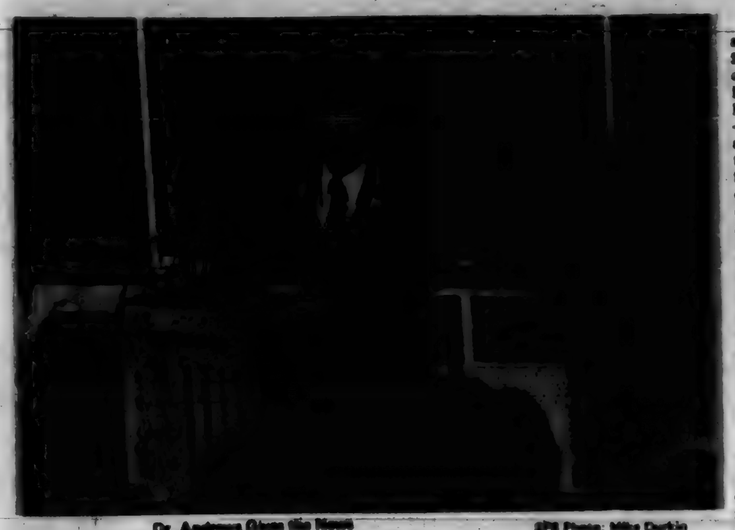
VOLUME XCII
NUMBER 25
NOVEMBER 21, 1974

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

"To a Privilege to Live in Personal"

Stunned University Hears Of Massive Budget Cuts



Dr. Andrews Gives the News — SPS Photo: Mike Durkin

by Randy Jansen

A tired President Andrews addressed a very tense Faculty Senate meeting last Thursday on the financial crisis at UVM. Dr. Wayne Patterson, Dr. Alfred Rollins Jr. and Barbara Snelling — the key officials in UVM's administration — were present to answer questions from the faculty. The administration officially presented its budget cuts to a hostile, confused audience of faculty.

Andrews offered a brief talk, outlining the reasons for the budget crisis. He told how the Trustees decided two years ago to level off the growth of the university. The administration, Andrews said, saw a financial problem for fiscal year '76. In July of this year, the administration began to receive "messages" from Montpelier that there would be drastic loss of state revenues. The administration realized, continued Andrews, that UVM was facing a serious problem and took measures to counteract it.

Montpelier has informed UVM to expect level funding in fiscal year '76. If that is the case, noted Andrews, the current deficit would increase to 3 million instead of the 1.6 million dollar deficit. To make cuts in such a short time at an academic institution was "a very difficult thing to do," said Andrews. He noted in preparing the cuts, no "target" was set. Cuts were based on the consideration that they would "not impair the quality of the university." He said the university would need an additional 1.3 to1.5 increase if state appropiations are at level funding. "Signals are not such that they would make one optimistic," noted Andrews. If further cuts become necessary, Andrews would make them "public policy."

"Frankly we do not have a fall back position," he soberly added.

He reviewed some of the proposed recommendations. Even though the administration has "increased demands on it, it will cut its budget a minimum of $280,000 and possibly up to $300,000.

The two-year nursing program will be eliminated which Andrews terms "the finest associative nursing program in the U.S." He said that federal money is only tied up with the four-year program and not with the two-year program. He added there are two other two-year programs in Vermont, one in Castleton and one at Vermont College.

Andrews' greatest concern was for individuals involved in the cuts. "I should point out that not all of these positions are currently filled," he said. Some are vacant positions and others will be emptied by retirements and resignations. Also, Andrews noted, "People who would normally be reappointed, but because of financial situation will not be reappointed."

Academic Vice-President Alfred Rollins Jr. then discussed the cuts and the process by which they were determined. He began, "I might say this first, that no one knows how to do the job the university is doing now."

Rollins noted that the process to cut was done in a short period of time. To set the initiative for department chairmen and deans, he requested that they submit a budget based on 90% funding. This was done to set priorities, said Rollins, and to have deans justify anything over 90%.

Rollins complained that UVM overexpanded the program scope. He said, "We are offering an awful lot of credits for undergraduate programs." He also felt that there were too much independent study requiring a low ratio of professors to students. He opposed taking all travel, library and operating costs and not touching personnel. Basically, he noted, the program is too rich for such a small state as Vermont.

The College of Agriculture was slashed $120,000. Rollins acknowledged that this college is of great service to the state, but cuts were necessary. Pre-vet students will be affected and treated much like pre-med students in terms of programming.

The College of Arts and Sciences budget was reduced by $270,000. Rollins noted that the PhD program in Physics was being dropped, because of a slim market. He complimented the Physics department for readjusting to changes in the financial situation. Master programs in Philosophy, Music and Spanish will be eliminated as well as the Experimental Program.

Rollins also had praise for the College of Education and Social Services which he felt, "readdressed their resources" in response to the financial crisis. He added that the college was cut $100,000 three years ago.

Athletic director Denny Lambert's budget had serious recommendations, which, in effect, said Rollins would ruin "the whole inter-collegiate program."

After Rollins' presentation, Chairperson Wilfred Roth opened the floor for questions and discussion. In response to a question about sabbaticals, Rollins said that sabbaticals would not be cut, but there would be stricter controls and annual reports.

Rollins said that UVM wouldn't know about the legislation decision on the cuts until April or May and said that tuition will probably increase.

The nurses involved in the two-year nursing program, the science personnel, and the director of the Experimental Program seemed most upset by the recommendations. The nurses questioned the decision to drop the two-year nursing program, while the director of the Experimental Program

(continued on page nine)

Football Team, Band Rally To Gain S.A Senate Support

by Mary Gilbertson

Approximately 25 members of the UVM football team and representatives from the UVM band attended the Tuesday night meeting of the Student Association in hopes of gaining S.A. support for the football program which is presently on the list to be cut from next year's budget.

Elimination of the football program would, according to administrative sources, amount to a $200,000 savings in the next two years. According to S.A. President Peter MacAusland, and the UVM Athletic Council, there are three alternatives: 1) Maintain the football team at its present level. 2) de-emphasize the program, i.e. play smaller schools which would result in a significant financial savings, or 3) Eliminate football at UVM entirely. MacAusland says there is wide disagreement within the Athletic Council on this issue and Denny Lambert's (Director of Athletics) proposal to cut 10 percent from the entire athletic department has been rejected by the administration.

Kevin Murphy, President of the UVM marching band, pointed out the negative effects elimination of football would have on the UVM band. For example, according to Murphy, there are many music majors who need the marching experience. Murphy is trying to "spark" the students to action, and asks what will be cut next. The question is: can the UVM band march only at football games?

The major question facing the Senate was — what is the S.A.'s stand — how are the Senators supposed to respond with regard to their various constituencies? Do students wish to support football? The issue was debated for over an hour with the eventual conclusion being... "We the S.A. as representatives of the UVM student body voice our support for the UVM football program."

Football was described by Dave Schwartz as part of the "fat" which needs to be trimmed from the UVM budget. While Bob Bateman countered with "Dropping football is more than cutting $200,000..." referring to Alumni support, school spirit and etc.

What are the ramifications of S.A. support of the football program? Merely a vocal, emotional support, with no far-reaching financial implications. It is impossible, now, to know either the financial or academic results of eliminating football.

What About Support for Academic Programs?

Throughout the discussion of the football program there was an undercurrent of "Well if we support football we have to support the academic programs faced with elimination as representatives of the entire student body." Town Senator Artie Miller brought a motion to the floor (9:30 p.m.) calling for support of academic programs also. A quorum was called and Senators rushed out of Marsh Lounge so they wouldn't be forced to vote on the issue. Lacking a quorum, the meeting was adjourned with a happy football team and several

(continued on page nine)

Cynic Elections

On December 9, the Cynic will be electing a new editorial board. Editorial positions run from January to January. Any undergraduate student may apply for a post. Positions available are: Editor-In-Chief, Assistant Editor, Managing Editor, News Editor, Assistant News Editor, Feature Editor, Arts and Entertainment Editor, and Sports Editor.

If you are interested in applying, you must submit your name, intended position, and qualifications by Tuesday, November 26 at noon to the Cynic office, lower Billings Center.

You may apply for more than one position but you can only be elected to one. If there are any questions, call 658-4911.

Student Task Force Claims No Input In Decision

by Barbara Frankel

Bruce Maddern, chairperson of the Student Task Force Committe on Financial Affairs, claims the student "cried and pleaded for input" into the recent administrative budget cut recommendations, but met with little success.

The committee, consisting of seven student representatives from various campus organizations, such as S.A., IRA, Fraternity Forum and Panhel, and two students at-large, was formed in early October at the request of President Edward Andrews and Dean Richard Powers. It is only supposed to have an advisory role. According to Maddern, committee members requesting information on upcoming budget cuts were "put off and put off. They kept saying, 'Come back next week. We aren't ready yet.' And soon it was too late."

Maddern feels, however, that although his group and a corresponding faculty advisory group had a very minumal say in the administration's decisions, there is hope for the future. The role of the student committee, in his opinion, is just starting. "This is really kind of an appeasement for students so we won't have the kind of gap we've had with the underpass" he commented.

Maddern believes there has been a big switch on the part of the administration. He contends that, although university officials limited input in this decision, they are beginning to listen more and more to student opinion. "I think, in the future, students should be included. Any cuts that affect an academic program have direct effects on students."

Maddern emphasized the lack of time which, he believes, forced the administration to limit the student and faculty input. Each Dean was told to inform each department chairperson to cut ten per cent of his or her budget. After this request, departments were asked "where you can cut some fat out without hurting any bone" or, in other words, what programs were not essential to the department and could subsequently be eliminated.

The members of the Student Task Force Committee did not approve of the proposed elimination of the two-year nursing program. Although they realize that this program is the only Allied Health department which does not receive federal funding, the students feel there are other alternatives. In order to prevent this step, they have suggested another means of paying for this program. They support switching the in-state/out- of- state student ratio two or three per cent in favor of out- of- state students. This would increase the University's income. The students have also recommended increasing the application fee by $5. It is presently $15.

Maddern, speaking for the members of his committee, announced that he felt the decision to cut the football team was justified, because "academics are far more important. If anything has to go, it should be football. They never put much money into it anyway... " The committee members also feel the elimination of the experimental program is a necessary evil.

The students were concerned with two aspects of the budget cuts. They fear that the additional influx of students who had previously been enrolled in the two-year nursing program and the experimental program will hurt the individual attention given to each UVM student. The administration proposes to offset this by asking faculty members to increase their teaching loads, especially in introductory courses.

The students also voiced their dismay over the number of faculty members who will be dismissed due to the budget cuts. Maddern suggests that some sort of a review committee be set up which would review tenured as well as nontenured faculty. He complained that once a professor is given tenure, he or she is only removed for drastic reasons. Maddern believes that many nontenured professors are better teachers than tenured ones.

Bruce Maddern hopes that the Student Task Force Committee on Financial Affairs will give students the needed input into administrative decisions. "We're finally getting something done. None of that crap that goes on in the Student Association is working here... Input is always tough, but we definitely could have a real say in matters."

The committee members plan to meet with the members of the corresponding faculty committee. They also intend to continue to pressure the Administration into giving them a real voice in the decision-making process.

Serious Fuel Problem For UVM Anticipated This Winter

by Randy Jansen

In an effort to avoid last year's energy crisis, UVM initiated a committee to deal with energy problems. Composed of students, faculty, staff, and administration, the committee searches out methods to reduce energy consumption and expenditures. A very serious problem in fuel for UVM is expected by the committee and they will attempt to lessen the impact.

Chairman Dean Powers led the committee into a general discussion of the energy problems at UVM. Wilbur Newton, of grounds stated that it might be possible to carry over energy allocations from one month to another. Last year UVM was allocated a certain amount of fuel per month, but no surplus of one month could be carried over to the next month.

Increasing the number of days in the Christmas vacation was also discussed. The Academic Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate has recommended that the intercession be extended to 37 days from the present 25 days in 76-77 and FY 77-78 school years, but the committee would prefer not to take this action.

Suggestions to curb energy usage had been requested by the committee from the university community. However, Jean Reidel wanted to stress that the committee is looking for ideas, and not asking people to make choices on present contingency plans. William Coolidge, one of the student members is seeking help from IRA and Keith Miner in developing an "educational system" and "hopefully establishing some feedback." Powers wants committee members to ask their constituents about, "the implications of the contingency plans." He further wants to know "what it (the contingency plans) means to them." Student and faculty members will report next week on the methods being used to incorporate feedback. A hotline number—2560 has been started for "reporting mechanical failure in heating and electrical systems."

Several statistics are being looked into, to further help the committee judge energy levels of savings and consumption. Newton has estimated the square foot operating costs of all buildings. With this information, professors could be asked to conduct their classes in low energy expense buildings. Energy consumption levels have been calculated for all major buildings from FY 1973 to FY 1975. Only Harris - Millis, +28,730 KWH and Cook Science Building +18,400 KWH showed increases in Kilo Watt Hours consumed. Bailey Library and Votey Engineering posted substantial decreases in usage with 199,104 and -189,072 KWH respectively.

One of Newton's major concerns is the possibility of a coal strike. A coal strike would cause an increase in oil and gas consumption, creating havoc in the allocation system.

Availability of fuel would then become questionable.

When asked about the presence of the energy problem, Wilbur Newton replied, "With the information we have now, point to the fact it will be a serious situation." Not only will availability of fuel be serious, but costs also. Newton related that Synejy and Hennessy, an engineering firm predicts a possible 10 percent increase in the $638,000 budgeted for fuel.

Otis McRae Sues Goddard On Charges Of "Racism"

On Monday morning, November 25, 1974, a hearing will be held in the Federal District Court in the city of Burlington, Vermont, regarding the case brought by Otis McRae against Goddard College in Plainfield, Vermont.

It was approximately a year ago this month that McRae led a "Walk" to Boston culminating in a rally in the "Yard" at Harvard University to dramatize charges of racism at the hands of the former President of Goddard College and violation of his contract.

Actions to force the college to honor its commitment included a twelve day hunger strike by McRae, followed by a three day "symbolic" hunger strike demonstration staged at the Tavern Motor Inn in Montpelier opposite the Pavilion Building housing the Governor's office.

McRae has spoken on many major New England campuses and has pleaded his case in New York and Washington as well.

The Equal Employment Opportunities Commission of Boston continues with its investigation of the charges, independent of the hearing to be conducted in the Federal District Court.

President Witherspoon, under whose Administration most of the charges were directed, formally resigned as President of Goddard College on July 13, 1974, and cited by a local newspaper as offering as reasons for his resignation, that his "ideas had run their course at the institution."

Jack Andrews is currently Acting President pending a search by the Goddard College Board of Trustees for a new President.

Goddard College is being represented by the St. Johnsbury Law Firm of Downs, Rachlin and Martin.

John Down is currently President of the Vermont Bar Association and a member of the Goddard College Board of Trustees. McRae is being represented by Ralph Sullivan of the Law Firm of Malloy and Sullivan of Boston, Massachusetts.

Otis McRae can be contacted at the following number (802) 476-5163.

News Analysis:

Will Football Go Because UVM Is Too Large?

UVM–URI game: Soon to be just memories? — SPS Photo: Richard Low

by Norm Robinson

Dr. Edward Andrews, president of the University of Vermont, has recommended that football at the University be dropped. At a Faculty-Senate meeting this past Thursday, Andrews submitted budget cuts amounting to $1.5 million, of which the $200,000 budget of football is a part.

The program reductions will be for $100,000 in fiscal 1975-76 and another $100,000 in fiscal 1976-77.

"A general cut in athletics would cripple all athletic programs and the conclusion has to be to suspend intercollegiate 'football,'" said Andrews.

"A substantial cut could only be made by cutting 'football,'" he said.

Andrews said football was being dropped because it is relatively high in cost, involves the participation of relatively small numbers and is the only area where significant savings can be made without damaging the physical education program.

The president also revealed that if football was maintained at its present level, "We would be compelled to dismiss 20 more academic instructors, as well as cut significantly in some academic programs."

Head football coach Carl Failvene has vowed, "We are not going to let them destroy the football program without a fight."

Alternatives to the total elimination of football appear poor at the very best.

One approach would have been to run the athletic department at 90 per cent of last year. After Dennis Lambert, athletic director at UVM, showed what this type of budget would be like, it was decided that this would be unacceptable. All intercollegiate programs would be hurt. The other athletic programs will not receive an increase in budget or aid

(continued on page twelve)

Featured This Week:

Schwarts On Sports....p.12

Barbara Snelling For President?....p.5

Table Of Contents

Arts & Entertainment . . . . . p. 6
Calendar/Announcements . . . . p. 2
Doctor's Bag . . . . . p. 10
Editorial . . . . . p. 4
Op. Ed. . . . . p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 12

NOVEMBER 14, 1974

22-14

...over the outstretched hands ... SPS Photo: Wynn Gold ... the rusty ox and on third and goal Bateman fired over the middle to Billy Looker for Vermont's first score. George Brunst added the point after and with just under 13 minutes left in the first half the score stood ... Vermont 7, Northeastern 0.

In the second period, the game transformed into a punting duel between Looker and his Northeastern counterpart, Rhett Lewis, for neither team was able to sustain a drive.

Vermont's big break in the first half came with time running out when Northeastern punter Lewis fumbled a high snap from center on his own 14 yard line and Vermont's Joe Reed recovered. Three plays later Bateman fired a bullet to his wingback Johnny Thompson in the end zone for six more. The two-point conversion attempt failed. The half ended with the score UVM 13-NU-0.

Nemec returned Brunst's kick to the 25 of Northeastern at the start of the second half. This period was scoreless and it seemed as though the punting units were on the field every

(continued on page eleven)

KOREAN KARATE
DISCIPLINE
SICAL FITNESS CONFIDENCE
LF DEFENSE
NING CLASSES
N- CHILDREN
MONT
N DO, INC.
ORE DR
Y 864-0414
ELCOME!

YAN MARTINI.

Montezuma® Tequila Martini

Montezuma Tequila
2 parts Dry Vermouth 1 part
Vanilla extract 2 drops
Stir with ice Strain into chilled cocktail glass.

OCELOT
The Ocelot symbol for the Sun God of the ancient Aztec world.

CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS

Billing's Bedlam- An All Night Affair

Billings Bedlam is coming again. The Billings Center Governing Board is sponsoring the Bedlam for the third time. It is an all night affair. The event begins 8:00 p.m. Friday, Dec. 6 and continues until 8:00 a.m. Saturday Dec. 7.

Throughout the night continuous events will be taking place in various rooms of Billings. Planning is still taking place, but at present the following activities are included in the Bedlam: the Movie "HELP", and "Popeye Flicks". Round House, a Boogie Band, WRUV will be there, table tennis tournaments, a chess tourney, etc. These are just a few of the great activities that will be taking place. Also, Sags is working on a special food deal. Watch for more information on Bedlam and by all means plan to come over. With our planning and your presence, this year's Bedlam should prove to be a booming success.

Fast To Feed The Starving

On Thursday, Nov. 21, people across the nation will be fasting and sending the money they save by not eating, to the millions of starving people in Africa, India, and Bangladesh. The funds are being handled by Oxfam- America, a non-profit relief organization which has been in existence for 30 years. It will utilize the funds for both short term relief, i.e. direct food distribution, and long term relief, i.e. agricultural supplies and equipment. There are thousands dying every week. Your help is of the utmost importance for these people. Send your money to:

OXFAM-AMERICA
302 Columbus Ave.
Boston, Mass. 02116

or simply drop it in the collection box in the main lounge in Billings. Thank you. For more information, call 862-1802.

Philosophy Club Sponsors Debate

The Philosophy Club is sponsoring a debate between N.J. Block of MIT and Michael Levin of CUNY, to be held on Friday, November 22 at 8:15 p.m. in Memorial Lounge in Waterman Building. The subject of the debate will be Is Intelligence Hereditary? with some philosophical considerations.

If there are any questions, contact: Philosophy Dept., 481 Main Street, ext. 3080.

John Dewey Foundation Extends Help To Dismissed Faculty

AN APPEAL TO TERMINATED FACULTY:

To all faculty who have been dismissed from UVM for non-academic reasons:

The John Dewey Federation of the American Federation of Teachers wants to know who you are. It wants to find out if the administration is firing faculty to solve its own financial woes, and to do what it can to help protect the jobs of those terminated for non-academic reasons. Please contact Sid Fogar of the English Department, 656-3056.

The John Dewey Federation of the University of Vermont deplores the recent cuts of positions at UVM. Several dozen members of the faculty and professional staff are being fired for non-academic reasons not only in nursing and football but in many other departments at UVM.

The John Dewey Federation is convinced that there are other methods of resolving UVM's financial crisis. The Federation is seeking an urgent meeting with Governor Salmon on behalf of the people who have been unfairly dismissed. If the John Dewey Federation should become the bargaining agent at UVM, it promises that the fate of these men and women will be the number one bargaining issue.

Pre Vet Club Meeting

There will be a meeting of the pre-vet club Thursday (Nov. 21) in room 111 Rowell Hall at 7:00 p.m. Discussion will center on the proposed New England Veterinary College and all those interested are urged to attend. Unless action is taken now, Vermont will never be able to place its state residents in any Veterinary College.

"Narcotics in Vermont"

Guest speaker at the 3 p.m. colloquium of the Psychology Department Friday, Nov. 22, will be Mr. Ed Suits of the Vermont State Police. His topic will be: "Narcotics in Vermont: Narcotics in Burlington, and Narcotics at UVM." Place is 314 John Dewey Hall, and the colloquium is open to all.

PGF Closed Turkey Day Holiday

The Athletic Facilities will be closed for the Thanksgiving Holiday at 6 p.m. Wednesday, November 27. There will be Varsity practices and Faculty and Staff Skating on Friday, the 29. All other facilities will not open until Monday, Dec. 2.

St. Anslem's Chapel

St Anselm's Chapel Services:

Sunday: Holy Eucharist 9:00 a.m. Tuesday Night: Holy Eucharist, 10:00 p.m. Monday-Friday: Morning Prayer 7:15 a.m.

St. Anselm's Coffee House will open for its third week this Sunday night from 7:30- 11:00 p.m. It has been a quiet and enjoyable place to be because people have been willing to come, sing, listen, read stories, and watch TV together.

All are invited. There is no cover. Come for a break from studying, for a place to unwind. Good coffee and a warm fire are guaranteed.

This Sunday (the 24th) Chaplain Odie returns to pay a visit. He will be participating in the Sunday morning celebration by giving the homily. Odie has been anxious to get back to see us all. Come on up to the Chapel Sunday morning. We'll have some sort of food, juice, and coffee after the service.

Programs: Thanksgiving Service, 10:00 p.m., Thursday Night, L/L Commons. Coffee House: St. Anselm's, Sunday Night.

The Living/Learning Commons Room will be the site of a thought provoking experience this afternoon and evening from 1 p.m. until 10 p.m. The experience will include slides recordings and displays and will seek to raise people's consciousnes concerning the bounty of God's creation and the scarcity in many people's lives.

Several religious groups on campus have combined in this effort. It is entitled, "Giving thanks is sharing", and will climax in a worship service at 10 p.m. also in the Commons.

Cunningham - Newman Center

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday 9:00 and 11:30 a.m., 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Monday 3:30 p.m.; Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday 4:15 p.m.; Friday 1:00 p.m.; Also Tuesday 10:00 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and any time by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: Weekday at 7:30 p.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday. The choir, under the direction of Lori Routhier, sings at the Center's 4:15 Sunday Mass, and is open to new membership.

BASIC CATHOLICISM: The study group will not meet Monday, November 25. The series will resume, however, on Monday, December 2 – 7:15 to 8:15.

SCRIPTURE STUDY: with emphasis on the Old Testament will be held on Tuesday, November 26 from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m.

PRE-CANA: The last in a series of presentations in marriage preparation will be held in St. Anthony's Parish at the Inter-Parish Center on Sunday, November 24 at 7:30 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stronach will speak on "The Theology of Marriage."

TWILIGHT RETREATS: Students and Staff members from the Newman Center are planning a series of evening retreats for high school students. If you are interested in being on the team for one or more of these retreats, or if you would like to help with music, A-V presentations or talks, please contact Fr. Holland.

SPECIAL EVENT: Ecumenical Thanksgiving Prayer Service is being held on Thursday, November 21 at 10:00 p.m. in the Commons Room at the Living/Learning Center. Everyone is welcome!

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

Create Your Own Christmas Cards

As much fun to make as they are to receive.

Blocking printing is a great way to send a personal Christmas greeting. Designs can be as simple or intricate as you desire and we'll put together a basic kit for only $4.50. Paper and blank greeting cards are also available.

Art Shop — Lower Level
Church and College Sts.
Downtown Burlington
658-4554

the corner bookstore

"One-stop shopping for books, stationery and art supplies"

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

20,000 SWEATERS
SPORTS WEAR
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 MAIN ST
OPEN DAILY 9-9
SATURDAY 9-5

Through Jan. 1 at the Fleming Museum: "Art of the Northwest Coast". Also "Meg Walker: Works in Fiber". Main Lounge Galleries. Note: the museum is closed Wed., Nov 27 through Sat., Nov. 30 and will re-open at 1 p.m. Sun. Dec. 1.

Tickets are now on sale for the two holiday attractions in the Lane Series: the Welsh Guards and Highlanders marching bands on Thurs., Dec. 5 and the Hartford Ballet Company's production of Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" Dec. 7. For reservations call Ext. 3314.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21

10 a.m. to 4 p.m., The Plant and Soil Science Club sponsors a plant sale in Billings Main Lobby.

12:15 p.m., The Music Dept. sponsors an informal student recital at Ira Allen Chapel.

3 p.m., Dr. David Bee of the Mathematical Sciences Dept. will speak at a seminar in B-104 Cook on "Confounding pass systems."

3:15-5:30 p.m., College of Arts and Sciences fall symposium entitle "Subjectivity-Objectivity," featuring professors of Art, Communication and Theatre and Music. Held at Memorial Lounge, Waterman. Refreshments offered. NOTE: this session was originally scheduled for Nov. 14 at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

4 p.m., Geography Colloquium in cooperation with the Anthropology Dept. Richard Palmieri of the University of California, will speak on "Culture and Ecology of Tibetans in the Greater Nepal Himalaya" in 109 Old Mill.

6:30 p.m., Ananda Marga Yoga Class followed by Group Meditation at 8 p.m. in the Unitarian Church.

6:30 p.m., Greek Coordinating Council Committee meeting concerning campus activities. All are welcome at Sigma Nu.

7 p.m., The Bahai Club of UVM presents a slide show on the Bahai faith in Marsh Lounge, Billings.

7:30 p.m., English majors' seminar featuring Alan Broughton and students; a poetry reading, Dewey Lounge, Second Floor, Old Mill. Coffee served.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Easter Parade" in 101 Votey. Free admission.

7:30 p.m., SA Speakers Bureau presents Fred Newman, chairman of the International Workers Party, who will speak about "Workers on the Move" in B-106 Cook Bldg.

8 p.m., "West Side Story." Royall Tyler Theatre, Tickets, $3.

8 p.m., UVM Horse Club meets at MAT Lounge. All sorts of riders (including cowboys, Indian scouts and Canadian Mounted Police) are welcome. More info. from Verne Batchelder at 863-5944.

9:30 p.m., Greek Coordinating Council Committee meeting concerning membership at Tri-Delta.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22

UVM hosts conference of New England Sociology Dept. Chairmen.

12:30 to 4:30 p.m., UVM Plant & Soil Science Society will sell apples in the breezeway between Hills Agricultural Bldg. & the greenhouse.

4 p.m., "Friday at Four" is an open house at the Royall Tyler Theatre for anyone interested in presenting one-act plays or poetry readings.

5:30 p.m., VPIRG State Trustees meeting at Marsh Lounge, Billings.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Bahai Club of UVM at 71 So. Williams St. Everyone welcome.

7:30 p.m., SA Speakers Bureau and VPIRG present Carl J. Hocevar, former Atomic Energy Commission safety research expert, who will discuss "Why I Left the AEC." In Allen Chapel.

8 p.m., Opening Reception for the Meg Walker display at the Fleming, Main Gallery.

8 p.m., International Folk Dancing at Southwick Ballroom. Everyone welcome.

8 p.m., Special meeting of the UVM Outing Club. A slide show of alpine climbing by John Bouchard will be presented in Commons 115 L/L.

8 p.m., "West Side Story." Details under Nov. 20

9 p.m., "Rec-House" is informal entertainment in a coffee house atmosphere in the basement of Billings. Sponsored by the Billings Center Governing Board.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23

9 a.m. – 4 p.m. Start of the Church St. Center's Quilting Workshop. Call Ext. 4221 for information.

9:30 a.m., Symposium with the visiting New England Sociology chairmen on "The Need for Graduate Training for Careers in Applied Sociological Research" in Memorial Lounge, Waterman. Open to all.

8 p.m., "West Side Story," Royall Tyler Theatre, Tickets, $3.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25

10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Everyone's Gallery in Commons 105, L/L Center features works spanning six centuries. Thousands of prints for sale. Sponsored by the Art Education Program, more info. may be obtained from Hilary Jamieson at Ext 4253.

12 noon, Dr. Burt B. Hamwell of UVM's Dept. of Physiology and Biophysics will speak at a seminar on the following topic: "Mechanical Properties of Papillary Muscle from Hypertrophied Rabbit Heart."

4:10 p.m., Botany-Biology seminar with Dr. Richard M. Klein of UVM's Botany Dept. who will talk about his recent walking tour in Kenya. Held in 105 Marsh Life Science, coffee at 4 p.m. in Rm. 107.

5 p.m., VPIRG board meeting in Billings' Conference Rm. C. All are welcome.

7 p.m., UVM Modern Dance Workshop in Southwick Ballroom. Call Ext. 3240 for more info.

7 p.m., Meeting of the Greek Coordinating Council on "Public Awareness" at Gamma Phi. All welcome. Another meeting at Acacia House at 8 p.m. for all those interested.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Two Women" starring Sophia Loren. Admission is free at 103 Rowell.

8:00 p.m., Last performances of "West Side Story" at the Royall Tyler. For ticket info., phone the box office at Ext. 2094

8:00 p.m., Free showing of the award-winning documentary "Who Is Guru Maharej Ji?" Waterman Bldg., Rm. 413.

8:30 p.m., WRUV-FM presents "Open Circuit," a half-hour program designed to keep listeners up to date on issues of local concern. Moderated by Deborah Janone, a graduate student in Communications at UVM.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 26

Students are free to begin their vacation after their last class today. Classes resume Mon., Dec. 2.

12 noon to 4 p.m., A new counseling service is available every Tues. at Billings. Student advisors Roberto Rios and Calvin Chappel will be in Conference Rm. C, Billings, to aid with problems of any sort. Phone Counseling and Testing at Ext. 3340 for more info.

4:30 p.m., Senate meeting in B-112 Cook.

6:30 p.m., Meeting of the Christian Science College Organization at Harris Hall recreation room. All interested may attend.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Lamplighters, a Pentecostal fellowship group, in MAT Lounge. For more info., call Sue Kukla at Ext. 2952.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27

Thanksgiving Recess commences and continues through Dec. 1. Happy Holiday! No class held.

6 p.m., Athletic facilities close for the vacation and will re-open with the resuming of classes on Mon., Dec. 2.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28

Thanksgiving Day. No Calendar events listed.

A University Holiday - most academic and administrative offices will be closed.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29

University holiday. Most academic and administrative offices closed.

No calendar events listed.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30 and SUNDAY, DECEMBER 1

No calendar events listed.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 2

Classes resume and offices reopen on the regular schedule.

That International Touch

All are welcome to come along to the International Club of UVM.

The club was formed primarily to promote a good understanding amongst International and American students, and arrange social activities through talks, discussions, social evenings, field trips etc.

At present, the club has members from many different countries, and is currently organizing activities including: a Christmas party towards the end of this semester, talks and slides from different countries, a trip to Montreal and more.

For those of you interested in sports, we are organizing teams for soccer, ping-pong, chess, and volley ball.

Or, if you would rather relax, have a cup of coffee and chat, we hold a Coffee Hour at the Area and International Studies 479 Main St. on Wednesday afternoons 3:30-5 PM.

All are welcome: American or International. Contact Mrs. Macmillan at 656-3380, or Sam Johnson at 864-7644 or just come to the coffee hour for more information.

UVM's reactivated International Club, recently sponsored a presentation by UVM Senior Mike Dilmangni with "Iran: The Stable Tower of the Middle East." Dilmangi, majoring in Electro-physics is a student here from the country of Iran.

The 60 minute talk covered cultural differences, the geographical and strategical situation, oil, military build-up, and a fantastic variety of Iranian Handicraft including a few rare Persian carpets.

The presentation was received so enthusiastically, that some UVM students have pledged to visit Iran for the Christmas vacation.

The International Club plans similar presentations later in the year.

Don't let the price of a college education stop you.

The price of a college education is skyrocketing. Fortunately the Air Force has done something to catch up with it. For the first time, the Air Force ROTC Scholarships include the 2-year program, for both men and women.

If you can qualify, the Air Force will pay for the remainder of your college education. Not only do AFROTC 2-year college scholarships cover full tuition, but reimbursement for textbooks, lab and incidental fees, as well as a tax-free monthly allowance of $100.

To cash in on all this just apply, qualify, and enroll in the Air Force ROTC at Department of Aerospace Studies, Saint Michael's College. Telephone: 655-2000 ext. 381.

It's a great way to finish your college education in the money, and build a future where the sky's no limit...as an officer in the Air Force.

MAKE THE MOST OF IT.

Baha'i College Club Presents

The Baha'i College Club is proud to present "Mirrors in the Sun", an audio-visual explanation of the relationship of Baha'u'llah, Prophet-Founder of the Baha'i Faith, to the other Founders of the world's major religions, on Thursday, November 21 at 7:30 p.m. in Marsh Lounge of Billings Center.

This beautiful collage of sight and sound was created by Douglas Crawford of 71 South Williams Street, Burlington, to explain one of the major principles of the Baha'i Faith, namely, that Religion is One, and that the holy men of all ages have proclaimed their essential unity and continuity.

Baha'u'llah stated "These sanctified Mirrors, these Day Springs of ancient glory, are, one and all, the Exponents on earth of Him Who is the central Orb of the universe, its Essence and ultimate Purpose.

From Him proceed their knowledge and power; from Him is derived their sovereignty. The beauty of their countenance is but a reflection of His image, and their revelation a sign of His deathless glory... These Tabernacles of Holiness, these Primal Mirrors which reflect the light of unfading glory, are but expressions of Him Who is the Invisible of the Invisibles.

By the revelation of these Gems of Divine virtue all the names and attributes of God, such as knowledge and power, sovereignty and dominion, mercy and wisdom, glory, bounty, and grace are made manifest."

Baha'is believe that each Messenger of God came with the same spiritual truths, but differing social laws to suit man's development as a social creature. Religious wars and strife have occurred because man loses sight of the spiritual foundation of religion and tends to become preoccupied with the physical and traditional aspects.

Man's perception of the world has been broadened slowly but surely over the centuries by these Prophets, Krishna, Buddha, Moses, Christ, Muhammed, to name a few. Each drew for mankind a wider and wider circle of unity, starting with the individual, then the family, the city, the nation, and now the whole earth.

Baha'u'llah has made it clear that man must now broaden his perception such that he will see the earth as "one country and mankind its citizens".

Just Arrived... over 100 famous brand
Knit Alpine Hats
$5.99

J. Ricker's
117 Bank St. (near Pine)

V.P. Patterson Names Sear

UVM Executive Vice President Wayne C. Patterson has named a committee to begin a search within the University to fill the post of dean of students.

Former UVM Dean of Students Richard Powers was named Oct. 15 to fill the position of associate executive vice president, a position which had been under consideration for most of the past year, and which had the backing of Trustees and the Faculty Senate administrative policy committee.

The move recognized the "need for additional staff support for Dr. Patterson," which has been made "more critical and demanding by the impact of inflation on every aspect of University budgeting," UVM President Edward C. Andrews, Jr. said.

Dr. Andrews also noted that when Roland Patzer left the post of Dean of Students, Dick Powers was moved up from associate dean of students, and that position has not been filled.

In announcing the search committee, Dr. Patterson said "we are starting from the expectation that we may hope to fill the dean of students post from within. We will not rule out going outside if we feel we must, but he indicated that faculty and staff would be given an opportunity to be considered for the dean of students position, as well as for any other positions which might become open.

Members of the dean

Free Public Forum On Nu

Panelists have been announced for the public forum on nuclear energy to be held Monday, November 25 at 8 p.m. in the South Burlington High School Auditorium.

Participants include James Griffin, president of Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corporation; Dr. George B. Saul, a professor at Middlebury College and a leading geneticist; Diana Sidebotham of the New England Coalition on Nuclear Pollution and Dr. David J. Rose of the department of nuclear engineering Massachusetts Institute Technology.

The evening program will begin with the presentation two films, "Best of Bo Worlds" and "Energy: Th Nuclear Alternative."

William A. Gilbert, form chairman of the Vermont Publ Service Board will introduc and moderate the panel experts.

The free and public forum being jointly sponsored by t Green Mountain Audubo Society, the Lake Champla

Placement Office

Placement Announcements

Business Career Night: On Thursday, November 21, the Dept. of Business and the Career Planning and Placement Office will host a Business Career Seminar with representatives from Coopers & Lybrand, Certified Public Accounts as participating guests. This informal seminar will be held in the Living and Learning Center, Room C-120, from 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m.

Government: On Wednesday, December 4, a Federal Career Day will be in progress in the Billings Center, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Representatives from a number of Federal Agencies will be on hand to discuss their career employment program with interested students.

EMPLOYER INTERVIEWS: Week of December 2-13 Period No. 7. Sign up: November 18, 19, 20 for these interviews.

December 2 – Dept. of the Navy Office of Civilian Manpower. Seeks: Bachelors, Masters: EE, CE, ME, In Engrg. Project engineerin Program management, Logis Engineering Citizenship required.

December 2 – Ernst Ernst. Seeks: Bachel Masters: Accounti Citizenship required.

December 3 – Un Carbide. Seeks: BA/BS for MB; MME, Chem.

December 3 – Ar Anderson & Co. Se Bachelors, Masters: Acctg.

December 3 – Tel Kelting & Potter. Se Bachelors, Masters: Acctg.

December 3 – ACTION majors.

December 3 – Beth Hospital. Seeks: Nurses.

December 4 – Agway, Seeks: Bachelors, Assoc Agriculture, or Bus. Ad Management and sales tra for retail. Citizenship requ December 4 ACTION day). All majors.

December 4 – Et

Exciting New Film Aband

ISN'T IT GOOD TO KNOW, a new film that abandons traditional story lines to involve the viewer in the life-experiences of real people, will be shown on Thursday Nov. 21, at the Living Learning Center Commons 115. The latest film from World Wide Pictures, producers of Time To Run, will be shown once beginning at 9:00 p.m.

Isn't It Good To Know was edited and directed by J. Michael Hooser, a young 26 year old film maker who brings provocative new techniques to his first major film. Using a varying number of images on the same screen, Hooser creates a multi-media effect that draws the viewer into the picture.

Included are scenes from Dino De Laurentis produc of "Barabbas" through courtesy of Columbia Pict

By shifting the Vie attention from the true st of the people who live the brief appearances by Graham, to video-vign coupled with original new "Isn't It Good to Know" "Gone Away" by Ted S and "The Soap-box Song

Judy McKenzie, Hooser cr a film conveying ultimate of change. Prupose comes emptiness. Silence bec communication. And fro disillusionment of drugs, v

YOU CAN LEAD A HORNY BULL TO WATER BUT HE'LL MAKE YOU BUY THE DRINKS.

The Montezuma Horny Bull:
1 oz. Montezuma Tequila
5 oz. CONCENTRATED ORANGE
BREAKFAST DRINK. Over ice.
It's sensational, and that's no bull.

Montezuma TEQUILA

©1974 80 Proof Tequila Barton Distillers Import Co. New York, New Y

V.P. Patterson Names Search Committee

UVM Executive Vice President Wayne C. Patterson has named a committee to begin a search within the University to fill the post of dean of students.

Former UVM Dean of Students Richard Powers was named Oct. 15 to fill the position of associate executive vice president, a position which had been under consideration for most of the past year, and which had the backing of Trustees and the Faculty Senate administrative policy committee.

The move recognized the "need for additional staff support for Dr. Patterson," which has been made "more critical and demanding by the impact of inflation on every aspect of University budgeting," UVM President Edward C. Andrews, Jr. said.

Dr. Andrews also noted that when Roland Peter left the post of Dean of Students, Dick Powers was moved up from associate dean of students, and that position has not been filled.

In announcing the search committee, Dr. Patterson said "we are starting from the expectation that we may hope to fill the dean of students post from within. We will not rule out going outside if we feel we must, but he indicated that faculty and staff would be given an opportunity to be considered for the dean of students position, as well as for any other positions which might become open.

Members of the dean of students search committee include William Kelly, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, chairman; Assistant Academic Vice President John Moore; Prof. Donald Gregg, Faculty Senate student affairs committee; Professor Marilyn Osborn Senate Academic Affairs committee; Prof. Judith Anderson, Senate administrative policy committee; Jane Greenberg, assistant director of admissions; and - the student members - Anne Cassvant, '77, Inter-Residence Association; Brian McDonald, '76, Fraternity Forum; and Valerie Murray, '77, Student Association. Dr. Patterson is an ex officio member.

Billings Center Plant Sale

Billings Center Governing Board is sponsoring a Plant Sale. It will be in Marsh Lounge, Billings Center, on Monday Dec. 2, Tuesday Dec. 3, and Wednesday Dec. 4. The time for each day is between 10:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. We have contacted several stores in and about the Burlington area to join us for these days. We feel this will give students a chance to do their early holiday shopping for families and friends. The stores will bring plants that will accomodate everyone's taste and you can care for them in your own room! So come on over and check it out. I'm sure you will be satisfied. Help make this Plant Sale a great success for everyone!

Safety Research Expert Hocevar Tells "Why I Left AEC"

Carl J. Hocevar, a former Atomic Energy Commission safety research expert, will be speaking at the Ira Allen Chapel on the UVM campus on Friday, November 22nd at 7:30 p.m. Hocevar's lecture is being sponsored by the UVM Student Association Speakers Bureau and the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG).

Hocevar, who has an M.S. degree in mechanical engineering, resigned his position at AEC's nuclear research laboratory this past September. The reasons for his resignation will be the subject of his talk: "Why I Left the AEC."

The Atomic Energy Commission has been under fire lately because of its alleged suppression of studies that question the safety of nuclear fission as a means of producing energy. According to an article in the November 10 Sunday New York Times entitled "AEC Files Show Effort To Conceal Safety Perils": "Atomic Energy Commission documents show that for at least the last 10 years the commission has repeatedly sought to suppress studies by its own scientists that found nuclear reactions were more dangerous than officially acknowledged or that raised questions about reactor safety devices." Hocevar left his job with the AEC "in order to be free to tell the American people about the potentially dangerous conditions in the nation's nuclear power plants."

According to SA Speakers Chairman, Dick Cassidy: "The safety of nuclear power is a question that affects all Vermonters, and decisions are being made in Vermont concerning the operation of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant in Vernon. Our intent in bringing Mr. Hocevar to UVM is to present another point of view on the subject of nuclear power to students and people of the state."

Hocevar is expected to present his lecture and to answer questions from the audience.

Canadian Youth fare Still Available

Youth fares are still being sold in Canada. Students who want to see Europe should think about going while the cost is still low, because there is talk of doing away with the Canadian Youth fares. If this happens it will raise the cost of a round trip Youth fare from Montreal to London and return to Montreal, from the present $283 to something over $600 - quite an increase.

The only sure way to beat a ban on Youth fares is to buy one now and use the first part of the ticket as soon as you can. Then the return portion is good for one year at the Youth fare price. Youth fare tickets are also refundable at any time.

Once in Europe, temporary jobs, language study and other opportunities are available. A paying job in Europe serves to earn back all or most of the trip costs, and formal language study can add useful academic credits to any record. In any case, the experience alone will add a helpful line to a job application at any time in the future.

Most of the paying jobs available in Europe are in ski resorts, hotels and restaurants. Wages range from $200 a month, plus tips, up to more than $450 a month depending on your position, and free room and board is provided with each job. The free room and board means that all your wages are cash in hand for your own use as there is little or nothing to pay out for living costs.

Any student interested in accredited language study in Europe (a year of language credits in six weeks) or a temporary paying job in Europe, may obtain information, including job listings and descriptions and an application form, by sending their name, address, and $1 (for postage, printing and handling only) to SOS, 22 Ave. de la Liberte, Luxembourg, Europe.

Art Education Program To Sponsor Exhibit

The Art Education Program will sponsor an exhibit and sale of approximately 1,000 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection on November 25, 1974. The event will be held at Living and Learning Center.

Works spanning six centuries will be featured in the show, which will include prints by such masters as Rouault, Hogarth, Goya, Miro, and Picasso, and many of today's artists, famous and not yet famous. In addition, there will be a collection of Western and Oriental manuscript pages, some dating to the 13th century. Prices range from $10 to the thousands, but most prints, including those of the masters, are under $100.

Area residents will have an opportunity not only to view but to leaf through one of the world's outstanding collections of original graphics. A world-respected authority on graphics of all types, Roten mounts over 400 exhibits annually for major museums throughout the United States and Canada. These exhibits, utilized by museums to extend the range of their shows, are in addition to the 1,500 exhibits and sales arranged by Roten each year for universities, community organizations, and corporations.

All of the work in the forthcoming show is displayed informally so that visitors may see each print at close range. The public is invited to come in, browse, ask questions about the work, artists, and the various graphic techniques. Exhibit hours are from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

GALLERY EXHIBITS

Richard Smith - Graphic Sale 3-6, 7-9, Nov. 20-24

Ferdinand Roten Galleries - Nov. 25th, 10 a.m. - 9 p.m., Commons 105

Beauty Subj. Reality, Opening Dec. 2, 8 p.m. - Work by contemporary Vt. artists.

The Gallery, located in Living/ Learning at Commons 105, is open 3-6 Monday-Friday and 7-9 Monday - Thursday.

Free Public Forum On Nuclear Energy

Panelists have been announced for the public forum on nuclear energy to be held Monday, November 25 at 8 p.m. in the South Burlington High School Auditorium.

Participants include James Griffin, president of Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corporation; Dr. George B. Saul, a professor at Middlebury College and a leading geneticist; Diana Sidebotham of the New England Coalition on Nuclear Pollution and Dr. David J. Rose of the department of nuclear engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The evening program will begin with the presentation of two films, "Best of Both Worlds" and "Energy: The Nuclear Alternative."

William A. Gilbert, former chairman of the Vermont Public Service Board will introduce and moderate the panel of experts.

The free and public forum is being jointly sponsored by the Green Mountain Audubon Society, the Lake Champlain Committee and the Champlain Valley Group of the Sierra Club.

"The nation's utilities are counting on the atom becoming a major source of energy in the decades ahead. The purpose of this forum is to present facts - not fiction - about the potential benefits - and hazards - to an interested and concerned public," said a spokesman for the sponsoring organizations.

For further information contact: Roland W. Wilbur President, Green Mountain Audubon Society, P.O. Box 33, Burlington, Vermont 05401, or call: 863-3441 or 862-6207.

Placement Office Announces Career Day

Placement Announcements

Business Career Night: On Thursday, November 21, the Dept. of Business and the Career Planning and Placement Office will host a Business Career Seminar with representatives from Coopers & Lybrand, Certified Public Accounts as participating guests. This informal seminar will be held in the Living and Learning Center, Room C-120, from 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m.

Government: - On Wednesday, December 4, a Federal Career Day will be in progress in the Billings Center, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Representatives from a number of Federal Agencies will be on hand to discuss their career employment program with interested students.

EMPLOYER INTERVIEWS: Week of December 2-13 Period No. 7. Sign up: November 18, 19, 20 for these interviews.

December 2 – Dept. of the Navy Office of Civilian Manpower. Seeks: Bachelors, Masters: EE, CE, ME, Ind'l Engrg. Project engineering, Program management, Logistics Engineering Citizenship required.

December 2 – Ernst and Ernst. Seeks: Bachelors, Masters; Accounting Citizenship required.

December 3 – Union Carbide. Seeks: BA/BS for EE, ME, MME, Chem.

December 3 – Arthur Andersen & Co. Seeks: Bachelors, Masters: Acctg.

December 3 – Telling, Kelting & Potter. Seeks: Bachelors, Masters: Acctg.

December 3 – ACTION. All majors.

December 3 – Beth Israel Hospital. Seeks: Nurses.

December 4 – Agway, Inc. Seeks: Bachelors, Assocnts: Agriculture, or Bus. Admin. Management and sales training for retail. Citizenship required.

December 4 ACTION (2nd day). All majors.

December 4 – Ebasco Services, Inc. Seeks: BS, CE, EE, ME. Systems Design, Applic. Engrg., Field Constr. and Cost Control, Estimating, Planning and Scheduling. Candidates for Field Contr. must be willing to work anywhere in U.S. all others NYC, Jericho, Atlanta. Citizen or perm. visa.

December 4 – Coopers and Lybrand. Seeks: BS/MS: Acctg.

December 4 – U.S. Army Material Command. Seeks: BA/BS: ME, EE.

December 5 – Mobil Oil Corp. Seeks: Bachelors/Masters: Chem Engrg, ME, CE. Technical people in the Marketing Operations area. Citizen or Perm Visa.

December 5 – N.E. Electric System. Seeks: BS/MA: EE, ME for electric utility design and operation.

December 5 – GTE Sylvania. Seeks: Bachelors/Masters in Phys, Elec. Engrg and Math Citizenship required.

December 5 – The Trane Co. Seeks: BS for CE, EE, ME, MS for ME. Citizen or Perm Visa. Engineering Sales. Work as consultants in commercial and industrial air conditioning industry.

December 5 – ACTION (3rd Day) All majors.

December 6 – The Trane Co. (2nd day)

December 9 – Yale–New Haven Hospital. Seeks: Nurses.

December 9 – Peat Marwick Mitchell & Co. Seeks: Bachelors, Masters: Acctg. MBS for Asst. Accountant. Citizenship required.

December 10 – Smith, Batchelder and Rugg. BS/Acctg for Staff Accountant.

GRADUATE SCHOOLS

December 6 – Syracuse University School of Management. All majors. Grad. Programs in Bus. Adm. and Acctg.

Exciting New Film Abandons Traditional Story Lines

ISN'T IT GOOD TO KNOW, a new film that abandons traditional story lines to involve the viewer in the life-experiences of real people, will be shown on Thursday Nov. 21, at the Living Learning Center Commons 115. The latest film from World Wide Pictures, producers of Time To Run, will be shown once beginning at 9:00 p.m.

Isn't It Good To Know was edited and directed by J. Michael Hooser, a young 26 year old film maker who brings provocative new techniques to his first major film. Using a varying number of images on the same screen, Hooser creates a multi-media effect that draws the viewer into the picture. Included are scenes from the Dino De Laurentis production of "Barabbas" through the courtesy of Columbia Pictures.

By shifting the Viewer's attention from the true stories of the people who live them, to brief appearances by Billy Graham, to video-vignettes coupled with original new songs - "Isn't it Good to Know" and "Gone Away" by Ted Smith and "The Soap-box Song" by Judy McKenzie, Hooser created a film conveying ultimate drama of change. Prupose comes out of emptiness. Silence becomes communication. And from the disillusionment of drugs, violent protest, and witchcraft, there comes a new beginning - new life.

Isn't It Good To Know is currently being shown in thousands of locations across the country each month. Bro. Dale of WRUV-FM, who has made the arrangements for these special free showings of Isn't It Good To Know, extends an invitation to all UVM students and faculty to attend.

For more information call Dale 862-6132.

YOU CAN LEAD A HORNY BULL TO WATER, BUT HE'LL MAKE YOU BUY THE DRINKS.

The Montezuma Horny Bull
1 oz. Montezuma Tequila
5 oz. CONCENTRATED ORANGE BREAKFAST DRINK. Over ice.
It's sensational, and that's no bull.

Montezuma TEQUILA

A diamond wedding ensemble is a Christmas Supergift!

Prices start at under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

E.J. PRESTON & SON

75% of all hi-fi component marriages end in divorce.

It's tough to put a system together that works just right. Mainly because when you begin, you're a beginner.

Advice: come talk with some people (like us) who've made a career of turning great components into great systems.

Since the speakers are the heart of the marriage, let's start there. With a pair of Interaudio Model 100 speakers, tested for compatibility on the unique Syncom II Computor.

They're complimented perfectly be the Pioneer SX434 AM/FM Stereo Receiver with continuous power output 15 Watts per channel minimum RMS at 8 ohms load from 40 to 20,000 H2 with no more than 0.8% total harmonic distortion.

The turntable is a Garrard four speed-complete with Base-Dustcover and Pickering V15 magnetic Cartridge.

-all for our package price of only $369.00

Guarantee: it's a sytem you'll love, honor and cherish for a hell of a long time.

System Price $369.00

Garrard 42M

Garrard

Interaudio

PIONEER when you want something better

Creative Sound

157 Pearl St.

Essex Junction, Vermont

The New Back Room at Lafayette Radio.

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Barbara Penskal '75, Editor-in-Chief
Rick Steinberg '75, Assistant Editor
Wyatt Kash '77, Managing Editor
Sandy Jensen '77, News Editor
Margo Woodward '75, Features Editor
Jean Charles '75, Arts Editor
Peggy Campbell '75, Assistant Arts Editor
Mike Schwartz '75, Sports Editor
Kathy Stannard '77, Copy Editor
Debbie Powell, '76, Advertising Manager

Editorial

A Strange Set Of Priorities

The elimination of the two year nursing program by the administration displays a strange set of priorities. This program which probably provides the most direct benefit for Vermonters was decided by the administration as being "expendable".

What guidelines did the administration use to cut this quality program? Even when one thinks of the criteria that the administration used, one cannot help but wonder why the program was eliminated. The administration guidelines included the job market after graduation, the quality of the program, and the benefit to Vermont and the nation.

Even Dr. Andrews has termed the program "excellent". The two year nursing program is a good quality program and is recognized as such throughout the region and the nation. Dr. Allen, director of the program, states that to her knowledge every graduate who wanted a job, has one. The benefit to Vermont and the nation is obvious. Over 90 percent of the students in the two year nursing program are from Vermont and many stay and practice here after graduation.

What criteria, then, did the administration use? We and the public are throughly confused. We urge the administration to state the reasons why this program was eliminated and not others with perhaps less qualification. We also recommend strongly that the administration reconsider this program and the many services it performs for Vermont, the community and its students. We suggest that the Trustees and the legislature review carefully the two year nursing program and realize the consequences if this program is dropped.

We recognize that the University must make unpopular decisions due to the drastic financial situation. However, the elimination of the two year program may relieve current financial problems, but the long term effect would be increased medical bills and a decline in health care for Vermonters. We feel the decision made by the administration to eliminate the two year nursing program is neither a wise nor just decision.

R.J.

Letters To The Editor

An Open Letter To President Andrews

To the Editor:

An open letter to President Andrews: I am a student who, in the past, has thoroughly supported the way you and your administration have run this institution. Even in your recent budget cuts, I have not been critical as I understand the serious financial situation which you have to deal with.

However, this morning, I cannot find it within me to continue my loyal support of this university. I received a letter from the Financial Aid Office informing me that their office has recently decided, as of Nov. 11, 1974, not to financially support my education. Also included in the letter was an invitation to come to the office and to discuss the situation with the director, if I found the decision unfair. This morning I went over to the office and the director was out.

Sir, I have been to that office five times and not once has the director been in or able to see me! I have discussed my situation with his assistants several times and I now wonder if he, himself, has ever seen my application.

When finding the director out, I went to see the Dean or Assistant Dean of the College of Agriculture (my department) but found neither would return until Thursday, the 21st. My adviser has been out for several days. The only one I could then think of to discuss the situation with is you, the President himself." I asked your receptionist for a mere one minute of your time and I was told I would have to wait two weeks!

Sir, with the director in Philadelphia, the Dean and Assistant Dean at a land grant meeting, and his adviser in Maine, what should a student do when he has a serious problem??! I am thoroughly disgusted with the run-around I got from this school. Do you really know what you're doing??

I believed Financial Aid is totally unfair. My friends have received aid totalling one-half or nearly all their college expenses, and many of their families are capable of putting both of us through! I applied in June and they waitpd until now to tell me "Sorry we can't help you." My family owns a family dairy farm in Shoreham and because of recent expense increases, which have affected all dairymen, we are on the verge of financial collapse. In addition, my younger brother was in a serious auto accident in June and just recently returned home. The bill totalled over $27,000, of which the insurance covered only $17,000, and we are unsure how the rest will be covered. If this does not constitute financial assistance, please, Sir, tell me what does?

This school, as well as other Agricultural Schools throughout the country, are desperately searching for Ag Ed majors, in which I intend to get a degree. However, if I continually have to borrow money from the bank it would be financially unsound to continue my education here. I fail to see the advantage in investing over $10,000 in my education for an occupation which will gross less than $7000 per year once I enter the job market.

Summarizing, Sir, I wonder:

1. What does a student have to do to get financial aid from this institution?
2. How does a student go about pursuing the alternatives and getting a "decent reply" within a six month period.
3. Is anyone ever around on this campus to talk with a student who pays his salary?
4. If you will ever lay eyes on this letter as you and your subordinates seem to be much too busy to discuss problems with students.

Sincerely,
Lyle E. Willey

Football Program

To the Editor:

I would like to voice my approval of any decision to abandon or cut back the present football program at UVM. The UVM community can learn from the example set by the University of Chicago and other schools, who have wisely reduced their emphasis on football and all other forms of inter- collegiate competition. A budget cut in this area would seem especially appropriate for a school that is faced with serious fiscal difficulties.

Just as importantly, the UVM style of football is distinctly inferior and does not merit such a disproportionately large budget. Many of the recent home games have been shockingly sloppy and amateurish. This fashion of football does not deserve $100,000 to $130,000 worth of support each year.

Whoever is responsible for maintaining this debit, whether it be the administration, the board of trustees, the student body, or the alumni, they are basing their support on a false sense of pride and tradition. The time has come for this university to stop living in the past and start thinking about the development of a sound academic reputation for UVM. The first step is a reordering of priorities; a massive reduction in the allocation for football (or the complete elimination of the sport) and at least the maintenance of a semblance of the present academic allocations. The intellectual atmosphere at UVM can only be improved by the presence of more individuals with scholastic scholarships and less individuals with athletic scholarships.

Timothy Myers

Blame The Students

To the Editor:

There is currently much controversy over the proposed UVM budget cuts, especially the abolition of the football team. While there is probably good reason to question the evaluation process involved in these cutbacks, allow me to comment on the one which seems to be raising the most questions, football.

I have just returned from the AIC football game against UVM. To say that the whole afternoon was rather depressing is, perhaps, an understatement. I am not speaking, specifically, of the final score. I am speaking, however, of the general attitude towards the team which has plagued them all season.

A quick glance at the AIC "stadium" would have revealed the following to any observer. Here it is, the final game of the season and most likely forever for the UVM football team. Among the pitiful turnout of fans are some parents of the players, old alumni, and a handful of students (mostly girls, whose boyfriends are probably on the team) and a couple of X-players. Where are the cheerleaders? Why is only a fraction of the band present, and not in their uniforms? But most of all, where are all the students?

While everyone is up in arms about the proposed cutback affecting this program, I can see no reason for blaming President Andrews, the Board of Trustees or other persons supposedly involved. If anyone can be blamed for killing the football team, it is their own fellow students.

The AIC game climaxed what I felt to be a generally shitty attitude all season. Who can say that it was uncommon to hear various individuals throughout the season downgrading the team and their players. I personally believe that the win/loss record this season would have been drastically different, had there been more support. There are some excellent players on the team this year but lacking the moral support they could have used, "getting psyched" for the game just never seemed to happen. This, I feel was our major downfall.

I do not wish for this letter to be derogatory towards the team, coaches, cheerleaders, Friends of UVM Football, etc., etc. And granted, there were many who supported our team. However, I will never forget the last sight of our football team at Springfield, Massachusetts in their final game.

So next time you hear everyone screaming and waving banners reading "SAVE UVM FOOTBALL" think about the scene of the last game and then ask them if they were there.

Sharon Ashe

The Experimental Program

To the Editor:

I am currently an undergraduate at the University of Vermont. As I view the events of the last few years i.e. the firing of Douglas Bailey, the incident with Philosophy Four, and now the proposition to drop the Experimental Program, I cannot help but wonder about the university's concern for the education of the students at UVM.

I was a participant in the Experimental Program for two years. I found the atmosphere a refreshing educational experience. Too often I found my main campus courses stultifying, restrictive, and downright boring. I can understand your need for financial cutbacks, however I believe you are sorely mistaken in denying the students of the Experimental Program the right to spend their tuition money for the type of education they seek.

A student in a university of the size of UVM seeks to find a program or an activity that will in some way facilitate a means of identification with the university. I have found this the Experimental Program. From what I understand of the financial make-up of the program, the university realizes well in excess of ½ million dollars in tuition from students. In return the Experimental Program receives less than sixty thousand dollars in direct aid from the university. It would appear that by no means is the university suffering from this situation.

I would also like to draw attention to the number of students involved in the Experimental Program. 170 students from various disciplines in the university are represented in the E.P. When I think that a program which influences and enhances the experience of so many students is to be cut from the university I lose any sense of affinity I may have held for this institution.

I believe you can do something about this situation, Dr. Andrews. If your administration is to guide this institution of "higher learning" in a conscientious manner that enables individuals to grow in the area of their interest, you must include alternatives to existing curriculum.

I'm afraid I see this university leaning toward those grey areas of conservatism that produce a select type of individual. If this program is dropped I will have lost a part of my identity with this institution and the hope for a student oriented education at the University of Vermont.

Sincerely,
Paul D. Butler

S.A. Concert

To the Editor:

In last week's Cynic the SA Concert Bureau tried "to clear up a few misunderstandings about the upcoming Beach Boys Concerts

I feel that they only cleared up the obvious. To me, the real issue is not how many people Patrick Gym can hold, or why the price of a ticket is $5.00 but is why do the students have to compete with the Burlington Public. After all as SA Concerts "cleared up," the students pay and activity fee and SA Concerts get their share. No one from Burlington pays such a fee. Yet they get a chance to buy tickets after the students are shut off from their concert. The students who want to see the concert must now face the rush from the general public for tickets.

I think that if the students are so enthusiastic about a concert then "the Concert Bureau should channel all of the tickets to the students so that they can see their concert.

Donald Green

Editor's Note

To those Bonnie Raitt fans who were disappointed with the concert review:

At the last minute the original reviewer was not able to attend the concert. Without consulting the arts and entertainment editor, she gave the tickets to an acquaintance who she thought could cover the concert adequately. Her judgment was off, as you and I both noticed. I agree that this concert deserved much more attention and review, and as a Bonnie Raitt fan I too was very disappointed with the review. Had I attended the concert myself (which was impossible at the time) I would have written the review. This was indeed an unfortunate editorial mistake - printing a rushed, incomplete review of an excellent concert. Hopefully this type of inconsideration will not happen in the future.

Lisa Charles

WRUV Editorial

Following is the transcript of an editorial read by the sports director of WRUV-AM, Les Scheinfeld:

"The events of the past week have really dented the prestige which UVM has established over the years. Dr. Andrews has recommended, as part of his $1.6 million budget cut, the termination of interscholastic football here at UVM. The way I see it, football is an integral part of college life. So along with other academic and administrative cuts, the quality of this way of life will be hitting a new low point. It makes me sick to think that the same state whose children this school is educating is not willing or not able to appropriate an extra $2 million so that these programs will not have to go down the drain.

"My proposals may seem harsh to many of you but the recommendations that the President of your University made are even harsher. What I propose is that if the state is not willing or able to appropriate the funds so that this university can be run at the level that it should run at, then the Board of Trustees should decide that it is time not to support the state of Vermont any further. Every student should pay the same high tuition to go to a school which has no ties to the State of Vermont. That would bring an increase of 100% on the tuition paid by almost half of this student body. By my calculations, that would more than cover the mere 17% of our more than $50 million dollar budget that the state is willing to give up to further their children's education.

"That may sound unfair, and I'm sure that you Vermonters are not in complete agreement with me. But I'm sure that you must understand that because this state is not able or willing to adequately finance their own State University, then some other decision must be developed, other than lowering the academic standards and athletic activities which have, over the years, gotten Vermont to the point of prestige in the nation which it holds today."

Worldwide Depression: Workers On The Move

by Fred Newman

Across the country, in Gary, Indiana; Atlanta, Georgia; Flint, Michigan; New York, New York; San Jose, California; Memphis, Tennessee; Salina, Kansas; workers, employed and unemployed, are coming over to IWP organizers at factories, unemployment centers, on street corners, at truck stops, and asking "Are you people communists?" When organizers say, "Yes, we are," workers immediately buy a copy of the International Worker.

Last week at a truck stop in Georgia, the IWP 1976 presidential electoral tour stopped for some coffee and to organize the working people inside. The waitress came over and asked to speak with us more about the National Emergency Strike Support Committee. After a lengthy conversation she took five International Workers, immediately began to sell them to truckers, and came back to ask for more newspapers. As we left she was scolding a resistant trucker. "You'd better read this paper and find out what's happening in the world." He began to read the paper. Across the U.S. the working people are beginning to recognize that the U.S. working class must take on leadership responsibility in this moment of economic crisis and political collapse.

But workers are afraid. In Charleston, West Virginia, IWP organizers were treated with respect and dignity during a one week visit there this month. It was not uncommon for coal miners and other working people of the area to say after several hours discussion, "Listen, we agree with everything you say about the world situation but you're communists and we can't join you." After IWP organizers left, the working people of the area who had been responsive and friendly grew more frightened of "what they had done" and the local yellow press, the Charleston Daily Mail exploited this fear with anticommunist headlines and stories about the "outsiders".

Why are working people afraid of communism? It is easy to fall into the simple explanations offered by petit bourgeois liberals and picked up by so-called socialist sects which pander to the supposed simple minds of the workers. These so-called explanations locate the workers' fear of communism and communists as a response to the massive anti- communist propaganda directed at working people in this country. The "cure" for the problem according to these so-called socialist opportunists is to go drink beer with the workers- socialize with the workers, etc. This form of petit bourgeois rank and file-ism is supposed to make the anti- communist worker see that "Commies are just regular fellas." Progressive Labor (PL) has shown leadership in this "take a worker to the bar this week" politic. Other opportunistic left sects, have, however, their own variations. In reality this "political" response caters to the psychological needs of the petit bourgeois organizers who, while not afraid of communists, are petrified of workers!

Workers are not afraid of communism because they have development as an energy source; they must learn of nutrition and develop new means of irrigation, fertilization, food production, etc.; they must learn how to eliminate pollution and disease - physical and mental; and so on.

Workers respond to these demands with fear. That is the real source of the fear workers express when we speak of communism. For communism means worker ownership, worker control - workers making the critical decisions which effect the entire world's population. And workers are afraid to undertake this responsibility. Yet they must. For the failure to do so means the destruction of the human species.

Socialist education is task oriented. The task is that of running the world's economy in a way which produces abundance for all the peoples of the world. This task can only be accomplished by the working people of the world. The workers of this country must take on leadership in this enormous struggle for survival.

Ideas grow from the historical material conditions of an epoch. Yet ideas themselves are a part of that historical situation and therefore have the power to change historical reality. Socialist education is the transformation of the death dealing ideas of capitalism to the productive practical- critical understanding of world- wide socialism. Socialist education is the transformation of the human mind from the parochial slave mentality to the world historical perspective. Socialist education is overcoming the fear of being too small by locating oneself as a member of the class for itself. Socialist education is organizing and, as such, socialist education means survival.

been brainwashed by massive anti- communist propoganda. Workers are afraid of communism because workers are afraid of workers! The values of a social system are grounded in the mode of production and are mediated through the institutions of the society to be adopted by the population of the society. The capitalist- fascist mode of production demands that the workers' self identity be either that of a wage-slave or a welfare case. That is, either a rugged, isolated, dumb individual- "free" to sell his or her (usually his!) labor- power as a commodity to the capitalist for a price, on the open market, or a welfare "case" - stigmatized by society and readied to serve the fascists as cannon fodder in labor intensive camps or death camps. Several recent serious sociological studies have made very clear that welfare rights is not a humanistic response of the state to the needs of the poor. Rather it is a response to the needs of the capitalists in times of capitalist economic crisis, and therefore, political ferment. political economic policy. The destruction of human beings by the "welfare case system" is on all fours with the destruction of grain during periods of starvation. These capitalistic tactics are dictated not by humanism but by plain old "Boss Greed". The employed workers identity, as we have said, is that of the rugged, isolated (parochial) dumb individual "freely" selling the only thing he's got - his body - labor power - as a commodity. (Coal miners said of themselves to IWP organizers, "why do you want to talk to me, I'm the dumbest of the dumb?") This self-conception is disseminated through the institutions of bourgeois society- the schools, the media, the politicians, the advertising, the trade unions - a brainwashing unrecognizable as such because it is part and parcel of the fabric of capitalistic society itself. The liberal attempts of the last several decades to supposedly raise the educational levels of workers- so-called mass advanced education - was, of course, grounded in the economic needs of the capitalist class to produce technicians for the increased automation in some segments of industry. But the economic collapse makes apparent what has always been true, viz. that workers under capitalism are mere commodities - either bodies which serve as moveable parts in the capitalist - owned monster machines or as junk. Into that controlled environment, into that brainwashed state of self- degradation, the IWP moves not with beer bat with demands! We demand not that the worker become a communist in a formal act of joining the party. We demand that the worker break out of the degraded self-image of the wage slave or the welfare "case" and take on the task of running the economy of running the world. We demand of those who have been degraded and who hide behind that self- degradation, that they take on the problems facing humankind; the problems of food production and food distribution, of energy development, of inadequate housing, of pollution, of disease, of mental illness, of improper education and so on. We demand that this process of taking on the task of running the economy begin where it must at this time by workers organizing working people into the class-wide organization. To perform these tasks workers must learn. They must learn of the nature of capitalism- they must learn economics; they must learn the history of worker struggles; they must learn of the political institutions that threaten the working class; they must learn of Yankee power and begin its

Fred Newman, National Chairman of the IWP will be speaking at the University of Vermont on Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. He will speak on the subject: Worldwide Depression: Workers on the Move.

More Letters...

"The Albatross"

To the Editor:

I was somewhat distressed to see that the Student Advisory Committee of the A&S College has undertaken yet another Course Evaluation project, apparently without any consultation or consideration of the several years experience in such projects accumulated by the Albatross project. Nevertheless, their ignorance is somewhat understandable, since we are all waiting patiently for the current edition of the Albatross to hit the newsstands.

For the record, and in answer to several inquiries which I have received, the Spring 1974 Albatross questionnaires were processed and turned over to Harry Brooks of the Council for Cooperative Christian Ministry (sponsors of the project) in June, 1974. At that point my relationship to the project terminated. The questionnaires were to have been computer-processed by the Institutional Studies Department of the University. Although only a few hours work was involved, I understand that that has not yet been attempted.

Rather than launch a brand new Course Evaluation project, it would seem more economical and sensible for the Student Advisory Committee to prod or even help those who worked on the last one. Perhaps some direct expression of interest would stimulate the project to completion.

John D. Perry, Jr.

The Cynic welcomes letters and columns from students, faculty or any other readers. Material for publication must be signed, but names will be withheld upon request.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arias, George Georgakis, Andy Morse, Audrey Rothstein, Mark Sawyer

FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Defiant, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins, Stephen W. Tanner,

ARTS: Sari Bodi, Robert Dunfee, Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Jon Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Prior, Marsha Woletz

COLUMNISTS: Debbie Adler, Tom McCormick, Scott McKay,

Steve Rice Elliot Freeman

SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Gross, Rick Katz, Norm Robinson

PRODUCTION: Joan Formith, Karen Hill, Madeline Islamaddon, Beth LeVine, John Lunde, Daniel Mead, Mark Valle.

ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Granner, Debbie Powell

BUSINESS MANAGER: Fern Cannon

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices: in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-0911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

Goodbye

by Steven Rice

Barbara Snelling has a certain flair about her. He reflects determination, and she is obviously th member of UVM's administration. And if Edward A decides to step down as university president, I woul Barbara Snelling to fill that position.

You see, I'm really worried about the ima administration projects to the common people of V the affluent people beyond the Green Mountain Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York and Massach now that UVM is experiencing a severe budget especially worried about the image.

And that makes me wonder if it isn't about time of scenery in Waterman.

Edward Andrews doesn't have the spark any mo fifth year as president. The vast majority of university presidents don't go beyond three. A reason. It's not easy being the top administrator a raise money every year to keep the institution necessarily by choice, a university president has to roles: politician, public relations man, diplomat, and a nanny.

And Andrews has fulfilled all these roles me doubt about it. But I believe he is on the brink o And even if decides to take an extended holiday w out on the blue sea, I don't believe it's going to do when he has to come back and worry about next crisis.

I watched Andrews on television last week as he budget speech to the Faculty Senate. Though no for the occasion, his voice lacked punch. And if w interrupted with the sound of clearing his throat.

He talked about the many sleepless nights he ha recently. Admittedly, anyone who is forced to cu program, the two-year nursing program, and the Program, would have just reason for sleepless Andrews talked about pain. And I really believe president meant it.

But lately Andrews hasn't been able to smile facial expression is sad and sorrowful. It has been now, probably ever since he confronted a hall of at Ira Allen Chapel one bitter, winter evening in 1971. It was the evening of Michael Parenti's drama justice, and he did little to settle the anxiety of When Parenti finished, he was applauded wildly, who has successfully killed the bull.

It was Andrews' turn to speak. Silence fell echoed off the walls. And most of the students forgot for the moment that Andrews had stood and academic freedom at the tragic board of trust Dec. 2. Now he was standing up again, and he almost tenderly, about his love for the university decision not to suspend classes. Inspite of the ea strike, Andrews offered that the University of continue onward inspite of adversity. He quiet with his words.

To this writer, who sat in one of the pews tha probably Edward Andrews' finest hour. For h courage and integrity.

Edward Andrews had to stand up again la face his peers and the television cameras. convincing. He was fatigued.

During Andrews' tenure, we have heard t mentioned several thousand times by the presi heard the phrase "quality education" mentio And I have a feeling that the president is gettin uttering these words, as the public is getting hearing them.

But Edward Andrews also spoke ab Thursday. And when someone speaks abo speaking from the heart. His thoughts on here but strongly near the conclusion of his addre was like a professional long-distance runner g to go the last yard. The last fleeting momen will.

Again, Andrews said the university will adversity. It is time to say, with all sincerity, t that he should consider resigning for the good

Dismantling A Uni

by Patrick Clifford

Have you heard the talk about what they' And this time it's not that old radical professo about those four critters who were put outspoken and critical of the university. You Chittenden Bank didn't make it on this one. N about how to dismantle a University.

Actually, this is a very easy task. The fir raise the tuition, just a little every year. Then a of students so that all the classrooms are full. N can devote their time to just lecturing and ha guess exams. Phooey on the individualized le research is the name of the game. But in or students get the most they deserve, don't fire don't pay them too much, and fire a few once them in line. Other items that one needs is b lots of them. And what do you know, we thing. I bet you can't even guess this one. Com obvious – we need a tunnel. Then when th students can be forced to use it by block pathways.

Then when one has all those criteria coexisting that there just isn't enough money to go dismantling begins. Everthing of importan priorities must be set. Since the football team compile a very good record, they aren't university. Naturally they're a first choice the two-year nursing program' – it's full of Vermonters. Don't want too many of them can cough up some more bread. Various oth made both here and there.

These are all very necessary cuts to be m the University really needs in sports teams Also needed is a building and grounds dep them big brick buildings all nice and shiny before they are cut down, and to provide an all sorts of fancy things if he has enough machines. A university also needs that mon teas for visiting elite. But mostly what a sta lots of out-of-state students with lots of mo we could do if we had enough money lef dismantling? Build a tunnel between President's house. Why hasn't anybody thi

So one asks, to what end is all this dism into the future. The Vermonters who ran o will not be able to attend this school. The longer apply because the climate is chan there's not going to be any snow. A few disposed of and there will be interm non-essential programs. What's left? A l keep all them buildings and grounds in top some professors. But here comes the punc for dismantling the university. Didn't ye and his trusted gang always wanted their o

...or

...tball Program

Whoever is responsible for maintaining this debit, whether it be the administration, the board of trustees, the student body, or the alumni, they are basing their support on a false sense of pride and tradition. The time has come for this university to stop living in the past and start thinking about the development of a sound academic reputation for UVM. The first step is a reordering of priorities, a massive reduction in the allocation for football (or the complete elimination of the sport) and at least the maintenance of a semblance of the present academic allocations. The intellectual atmosphere at UVM can only be improved by the presence of more individuals with scholastic scholarships and less individuals with athletic scholarships.

Timothy Myers

...e The Students

no reason for blaming President Andrews, the Board of Trustees or other persons supposedly involved. If anyone can be blamed for killing the football team, it is their own fellow students.

"The AIC game climaxed what I felt to be a generally shitty attitude all season. Who can say that it was uncommon to hear various individuals throughout the season downgrading the team and their players. I personally believe that the win/loss record this season would have been drastically different, had there been more support. There are some excellent players on the team this year but lacking the moral support they could have used, "getting psyched" for the game just never seemed to happen. This, I feel was our major downfall.

I do not wish for this letter to be derogatory towards the team, coaches, cheerleaders, Friends of UVM Football, etc., etc. And granted, there were many who supported our team. However, I will never forget the last night of our football team at Springfield, Massachusetts in their final game.

So next time you hear everyone screaming and waving banners reading "SAVE UVM FOOTBALL" think about the scene of the last game and then ask them if they were there.

Sharon Ashe

...VRUV Editorial

...nt of an... ...sports ...M, Lee ...the past ...nted the ...VM has ...years. Dr. ...ended, as ...n budget ...n of ...ll here at ..., football ...ollege life. ...academic ...cuts, the ...ife will be ...point. It ...k that the ...ildren this ...ot willing ...propriate an ...that these ...ave to go ...ney seem ...u but the ...hat the ...University ...r. What I ...state is not ...ppropriate ...university ...vel that it should run at, then the Board of Trustees should decide that it is time not to support the state of Vermont any further. Every student should pay the same high tuition to go to a school which has no ties to the State of Vermont. That would bring an increase of 100% on the tuition paid by almost half of this student body. By my calculations, that would more than cover the mere 17% of our more than $50 million dollar budget that the state is willing to give up to further their children's education.

"That may sound unfair, and I'm sure that you Vermonters are not in complete agreement with me. But I'm sure that you must understand that because this state is not able or willing to adequately finance their own State University, then some other decision must be developed, other than lowering the academic standards and athletic activities which have, over the years, gotten Vermont to the point of prestige in the nation which it holds today."

...MONT CYNIC

...e, George ... Steve Rice Elliott Freeman
...e, Audrey ... SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Crane, Rick Katz, Norm Robinson
...d Ajemian, ... PRODUCTION: Joan Fornaith, Karen Hill, Madeline Isbrandtsen, Beth LaVine, John Lunde, Daniel Mackhart Volz.
...Andy Hunt, ...
...Tenney, ...
...ent Dunbar, ... ADVERTISING: Katherine Brown, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Greenery, Debbie Powell
...Freedman, ...
...da Murphy, ...
...ots ...
...ne Adler, ... BUSINESS MANAGER: Pam
...ott McKay, ... Gutman

...pressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ...inistration, faculty, or staff, or the State of ...ont; expressed by the columnists do not ...ect the opinion of the majority of the ...CYNIC Editorial Board.

...ished during the college year by the students ...ity of Vermont and State Agricultural College. ...ffices in the Billings Center, ...mont. Telephone: 656-4911. Deadline for ...ek prior to date of publication.

...1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single

Goodbye Ed; Hello Barbara

by Steven Rice

Barbara Snelling has a certain flair about her. Her character reflects determination, and she is obviously the prettiest member of UVM's administration. And if Edward Andrews ever decides to step down as university president, I would nominate Barbara Snelling to fill that position.

You see, I'm really worried about the image that the administration projects to the common people of Vermont, and the affluent people beyond the Green Mountains in Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York and Massachusetts. And now that UVM is experiencing a severe budget crisis, I'm especially worried about the image.

And that makes me wonder if it isn't about time for a change of scenery in Waterman.

Edward Andrews doesn't have the spark anymore. This is his fifth year as president. The vast majority of college and university presidents don't go beyond three. And for good reason. It's not easy being the top administrator and trying to raise money every year to keep the institution going. Not necessarily by choice, a university president has to play several roles: politician, public relations man, diplomat, psychiatrist, and a nanny.

And Andrews has fulfilled all these roles masterfully. No doubt about it. But I believe he is on the brink of exhaustion. And even if decides to take an extended holiday with his yacht out on the blue sea, I don't believe it's going to do him any good when he has to come back and worry about next year's budget crisis.

I watched Andrews on television last week as he delivered his budget speech to the Faculty Senate. Though neatly groomed for the occasion, his voice lacked punch. And it was constantly interrupted with the sound of clearing his throat.

He talked about the many sleepless nights he has experienced recently. Admittedly, anyone who is forced to cut the football program, the two-year nursing program, and the Experimental Program, would have just reason for sleepless nights. And Andrews talked about pain. And I really believe the university president meant it.

But lately Andrews hasn't been able to smile too much. His facial expression is sad and sorrowful. It has been for some time now, probably ever since he confronted a hail of angry students at Ira Allen Chapel one bitter, winter evening in December of 1971. It was the evening of Michael Parenti's dramatic speech for justice, and he did little to settle the anxiety of his spectators. When Parenti finished, he was applauded wildly, like a matador who has successfully killed the bull.

It was Andrews' turn to speak. Silence fell. A few boos echoed off the walls. And most of the students who listened forgot for the moment that Andrews had stood up for Parenti and academic freedom at the tragic board of trustees meeting on Dec. 2. Now he was standing up again, and he spoke quietly, almost tenderly, about his love for the university, and about his decision not to suspend classes. Inspite of the calls for a student strike, Andrews offered that the University of Vermont must continue onward inspite of adversity. He quieted the audience with his words.

To this writer, who sat in one of the pews that evening, it was probably Edward Andrews' finest hour. For he demonstrated courage and integrity.

Edward Andrews had to stand up again last Thursday and face his peers and the television cameras. He wasn't very convincing. He was fatigued.

During Andrews' tenure, we have heard the word "image" mentioned several thousand times by the president. We have also heard the phrase "quality education" mentioned just as often. And I have a feeling that the president is getting sick and tired of uttering these words, as the public is getting sick and tired of hearing them.

But Edward Andrews also spoke about heritage last Thursday. And when someone speaks about heritage, he is speaking from the heart. His thoughts on heritage came slowly, but strongly, near the conclusion of his address to the Senate. It was like a professional long-distance runner getting enough wind to go the last yard. The last fleeting moments of pride, if you will.

Again, Andrews said the university will continue inspite of adversity. It is time to say, with all sincerity, to Edward Andrews that he should consider resigning for the good of the university.

The long-distance runner may have all the heart in the world for the university, but the heart needs rest to survive in a human being.

There are other crises on the horizon for UVM —serious crises—, and it's going to take a president with strength and vigor to confront them. And Barbara Snelling fills this criteria perfectly. She was the only administrator who showed determination last Thursday. And she was the only administrator who told it like it is without any rhetoric. And she has influence, which might help with a tight-fisted Vermont legislature.

Barbara Snelling would be a refreshing change to the University of Vermont. Her personality and style would give new meaning to the phrases of "quality education" and "image".

In these very desperate times, where there seems to be nothing but gloom and despair across the campus, a change of scenery is necessary.

It is time to say farewell to Edward Andrews, and hello to Barbara Snelling. If Andrews departs, he will be leaving with dignity, and if Snelling enters, she will offer hope.

It's for the good of my alma mater. And it's for the good of a weary university president.

Dismantling A University

by Patrick Clifford

Have you heard the talk about what they're doing at UVM? And this time it's not that old radical professor story, or the one about those four critters who were punished for being outspoken and critical of the university. You know, even the Chittenden Bank didn't make it on this one. No, this is the story about how to dismantle a University.

Actually, this is a very easy task. The first thing you do is raise the tuition, just a little every year. Then accept lots and lots of students so that all the classrooms are full. Now the professors can devote their time to just lecturing and handing out multiple guess exams. Phooey on the individualized learning experience, research is the name of the game. But in order to insure that students get the most they deserve, don't fire too many teachers, don't pay them too much, and fire a few once in a while to keep them in line. Other items that one needs is big brick buildings, lots of them. And what do you know, we almost forgot one thing. I bet you can't even guess this one. Come on, the answer is obvious – we need a tunnel. Then when there's a tunnel, the students can be forced to use it by blocking off any other pathways.

Then when one has all those criteria coexisting, one can complain that there just isn't enough money to go around. Now the dismantling begins. Everthing of importance must be kept, priorities must be set. Since the football team hasn't been able to compile a very good record, they aren't too useful, to the university. Naturally they're a first choice. Another natural is the two-year nursing program – it's full of those people called Vermonters. Don't want too many of them around, unless they can cough up some more bread. Various other cuts can easily be made both here and there.

These are all very necessary cuts to be made. After all, what the University really needs is sports teams that win, win, win. Also needed is a building and grounds department to keep all them big brick buildings all nice and shiny, to mulch the trees before they are cut down, and to provide an arborist who can do all sorts of fancy things if he has enough money and fancy machines. A university also needs that money to buy flowers for teas for visiting elite. But mostly what a state university needs is lots of out-of-state students with lots of moolah. You know what we could do if we had enough money left over from all that dismantling? Build a tunnel between Waterman and the President's house. Why hasn't anybody else thought of that?

So one asks, to what end is all this dismantling? First, a look into the future. The Vermonters who ran out of money years ago will not be able to attend this school. The out-of-staters will not longer apply because the climate is changing and pretty soon there's not going to be any snow. A few more faculty will be disposed of and there will be intermittant elimination of non-essential programs. What's left? A little bit of money to keep all them buildings and grounds in top shape, a few students, some professors. But here comes the punch line, the real reason for dismantling the university. Didn't you know that Easy Ed and Mr. trusted pals ALWAYS wanted their own hockey team?

The U.N.: A Decline In U.S. Influence

by Steve Levine

(IF) The UN really isn't the source of much news, though of course it would dearly like to be. Most of the time the General Assembly serves as little more than a proscenium for a discouraging sort of low absurdist comedy. It is a place for the world's cast of comic opera governments to strut around in an embarrassing manner. What little merit the organization exhibits shown in its humanitarian programs which are not readily journalizable.

However, last week the UN became a vitally interesting forum for the examination of the decline in U.S. influence throughout the world.

For three years the UN has refused to accept the credentials of the South African delegation in protest of that country's policy of institutionalized racial hatred.

For the emerging nations, which numerically dominate the UN, South Africa is the symbol against which the spirit of anti-colonialism rallies. Though South Africa nominally remains a member of the General Assembly, it has been made to feel most unwelcome.

In fact, the only reason it hasn't been kicked out altogether prior to this time is that the U.S. has continually intervened to prevent its humiliation.

It is hardly a secret that American corporate interests, ranging from Union Carbide to the Chase Manhatten Bank, have enormous holdings in South Africa, holdings that a non-colonial government would be quick to expropriate. However embarrassing the Afrikaaner's brutally repressive regime may prove, diamond mines are simply not expendable.

In the past the U.S. has been able to wield sufficient leverage to block any direct effort to oust the Africaaners from the world body, but the collapse of the Portuguese line in Africa has changed all that. Now that the last European army is on its way home, black Africa is in an outgoing mood. It is understood that Rhodesia must soon accomodate itself to majority government or perish and afterwards the pressure on South Africa to turn the reins over to the non-white population will grow steadily to the extent of irresistibility.

The pressure intensified greatly last week when the Security Council voted ten to three to kick South Africa out. Only a U.S. veto saved the country's membership.

And with the veto came a warning, the South Africans would either have to modify their policies or face the loss of Western support. Just as the U.S. could not prevent the expulsion from coming to a vote, neither can it be expected to stand against the tide of African independence should the Africaaners move their black neighbors to open conflict.

The message to all U.S. client states is clear. If they wish to continue under U.S. sponsorship they will have to maintain reasonable popularity at home and show reasonable prudence abroad. This country simply lacks the resources to support all manner of international and domestic disputes incurred by its allies. Should the South Africans or any other U.S. trustors doubt the sincerity of the admonition they received last week, they would be wise to look to the current situation in the Mediterranean. When it became obvious that the Greek colonels would not ride out the crisis on Cyprus, the U.S. switched sides, abandoning years of support of the junta and sending guns to the Turks.

The present wing-clipping posture Congress is observing toward the CIA reflects a certain solidarity on the question of foreign entanglements and the austerity that must be brought to them. If the CIA effort in Spain falters, sales of airline tickets to Switzerland will climb precipitously.

The collapse of our colonial holdings must worsen our own economic troubles, as more and more of our trade advantages will be stripped away, but there is no other choice.

Is History Relevant?

by William M. Armstrong

Reprinted from The Chronicle of Higher Education

Mankind lives with myth and bias. All persons are biased in some ways, though some humorlessly refuse to admit it. When Spiro Agnew began attacking the media in 1970 for not painting the Administration in as favorable a hue as he and President Nixon wanted, it reminded one of the tale of the elderly Southerner who longed for an objective history of the Civil War, "from the Confederate point of view."

Today university faculties and students in numbers are scorning the discipline of history on the grounds that it is not "relevant". Something is amiss here. The business of history, as Cambridge historian J.H. Plumb recently noted, is to equip people to cope with the present. "Those who do not remember the past are condemned to relive it," thought Santayana, paraphrasing the great English historian, Lord Acton.

History, in the comprehension of the average citizen, is like politics; anyone can have an opinion about it and usually does. Few people are as candid about their ignorance as the apocryphal culprit being dragged down the street by a lynch mob, who assertedly entreated his assailants: "I didn't say I'm against the Monroe Doctrine; I would fight for the Monroe Doctrine. All I said was that I don't know what it is." As Henry Steele Commager remarked on the American involvement in Vietnam, too many persons are willing to fight over questions the history of which is only vaguely, if at all, known to them.

Curiously, the notion that history is not a rigorous academic discipline is nearly as strong among school administrators as it is within groups as diverse as the student New Left and the so-called "silent majority". Bertrand Russell echoed a long-standing prejudice when he facetiously remarked that when he became too stupid for mathematics he turned to philosophy and when he became too stupid for philosophy he turned to history. One reason for the often-heard cliche, "Anyone can teach history," is that history has burdened itself with less jargon than other disciplines. "Ce que l'on concoit bien s'enonce clairement," admonished the classicist Boileau: what is well-conceived is clearly written.

Understandableness aside, history is not the mere chronicled record of the human experience; history is a particular way of studying the human experience. Academic historians long ago have given the notion that all they need do is "get the facts" and they will speak for themselves. A fact in isolation is meaningless, and any arrangement of facts involves a process of selectivity that is "even in the simple form of listing events chronologically, a generalization of sorts." Professor William B. Wilcox illustrates part of the historian's problem in attempting to be accurate at the same time that he is being "relevant":

"We are creatures of the world around us and cannot, try as we will, divest ourselves completely of its cultural postulates or expect it to recognize that we are biased by them... Our discipline, in short, makes an impossible demand upon us: that we slough off the assumptions of today's society, enter into the past and see it through its own eyes, and then return to the present and talk intelligibly."

Another difficulty the academic historians face is that they are under greater scholarly restraints than historians outside the wall of academe. History buffs do not want scholarly hypotheses; they want answers, and the popularizer supplies answers. Catherine Drinker Bowen, the author of popular biographies of Oliver Wendell Holmes and Sir Edward Coke (Yankee from Olympus, The Lion and the Throne), has felt the academic historian's lash. "I studied the available evidence," rebuts Mrs. Bowen – thereby conceding that she did not try to unearth new evidence – "and built word pictures which to me are consistent with the evidence." In her autobiography Mrs. Bowen takes revenge on the academics when she describes her only visit to a session of the American Historical Association: "The professors talked about passion and point of view in history as a Calvinist talks about sin in the bedroom. There they sat, trying to get the heat out of history and here I sat, trying to get it in."

Not infrequently it is the jack-of-all-disciplines within academe who creates headaches for the academic historian. Daniel Bell, an able jounalist turned professor of sociology at Columbia University, ruffled some feathers when he wrote The End of Ideology. Complained Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., in a book review:

"If Mr. Bell has a major fault, it is the usual occupational disease of the sociological profession – inadequate knowledge of history. Mr. Bell knows far more history than most sociologists; but his knowledge is, alas, not always equal to his certitude. He thus writes, 'One found the strange spectacle of aging William Lemke running for President of the United States in 1940 on an openly anti-Semitic ticket. The Vice-Presidential candidate was Dr. Francis Townsend.'

What does historian Schlesinger find wrong with Bell's account? Almost everything. First, the "aging" Lemke was 58. Second, the year was not 1940; it was 1936. Third, the Lemke ticket was neither openly nor covertly anti-Semitic. Fourth, Dr. Townsend was not the Vice-Presidential candidate; it was Thomas C.O'Brien. Then, when Bell goes on elsewhere in his book to report that Millard Fillmore, who never was elected to the Presidency, was the victor at the polls for that post in 1856, Schlesinger falls into despondency.

Another grievance that the scholarly historian holds toward the popularizer is myth-making. One example of the myth-making process in the way "Give me liberty or give me death" got into the history books. The phrase initially appears in 1817 in a popular biography of Patrick Henry by one William Wirt. Henry is supposed to have shouted, "if this be treason make the most of it," at the speaker of the Virginia House of Burgesses. Yet the only record of the exchange of that famous day is the diary of a French visitor in which he recounts that when Speaker Robinson leveled his finger at Henry, crying, "Treason!" Henry promptly apologized; stating that if he had affronted the speaker and King George he was "ready to ask for pardon."

Legends especially arise in periods of national stress. In 1941 Major James P. Devereux became overnight a household name for his alleged invitation, "Send us more japs," as the Japanese overran Wake Island. Devereux denies saying this, but the legend persists. Before the Civil War, Southern states began rewriting

(continued on page eight)

We, The Women

by Linda Cayton

Feminists have an uncanny knack for confronting the burning issues of today.

Members of the Denver chapter of the national Organization of Women for example, are currently staging a protest of the existence of pay toilets for women in the city's airport where there are free urinals for men.

Before that we had the bra-burnings. Who can forget the stinging debates over who opens doors for whom; or the well-worn arguments over whether a female person is a lady, woman, girl, chick, chairman, chairperson, chairwoman, etc. Someone could get the impression that someperson is putting somebody on.

I, for one, think all of these issues are important. Together, along with hundreds more like them, they make up the day-to-day fabric of the oppressive sexism of our society.

The men who built Denver's airport didn't install pay toilets in women's restrooms as a punitive measure against women. The man who designed the brassiere probably just assumed that women should conform to a male's interpretation of womanly beauty. Men who coined our society's phraseology did so to lend order to language, not to oppress women.

Nevertheless, their actions have slowly and insidiously established a thorough basis for more obvious discrimination.

The manner in which we deal with people depends in large part on how we conceptualize them. Our society is filled with a symbology of womanhood which enforces a conceptual pattern of discrimination. If blatant sexism is to fall, these seemingly insignificant roots must be blasted away.

Nothing can continue to thrive if its lifeblood is sapped and the large discriminatory issues of today depend on a conceptualization of womanhood created by and expressed within minor slights.

In addition to confronting the larger issues of abortion, day care, equal pay, etc., we need to tirelessly and methodically act against the "pay toilet" issues. We have to be such nuisances that the next airport manager thinks twice about installing locks on bathroom doors, that men question what a woman prefers to be labeled.

When people are questioning the validity of minor, routine practices, then will they be that much more attuned to larger-scale practices of oppression.

The insignificant becomes significant when it supports significance.

...While at the Post Office the other afternoon, I noticed that a poster showing Patricia Hearst and the Harris couple had joined the rogue's gallery on the wall next to the counter.

I remember a time, back in the bad old days of nineteen seventy one, when virtually the entire FBI ten most wanted list consisted of left wing politicos. When it became obvious that the weather people and Cameron David Bishop would never be caught, however, and when John Mitchell's fortune began to plummet, the FBI, presumably with a sigh of regret, returned to circulating pictures of bank robbers and check forgers.

But Patty Hearst's presence on the bulletin board reminds us that the machinery of political police work remains intact, that the government is still prepared to use deadly force, without recourse to constitutionally prescribed adjudication, to deal with those it considers enemies of the state.

If Patricia Hearst is in Canada, for her own sake and that of the nation as a whole, I hope she remains there.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

"Gypsy" Lacks Timing And Fluidity

by Barbara Freedman

Gypsy, presented by the Lyric Theatre, under the direction of Tom Gosa, although enjoyable, did not contain a dynamic sense of fluidity as might have been expected. Timing, a crucial element in any performance, especially a musical, seemed lacking in Mr. Gosa's adaptation of Gypsy. There were moments throughout the performance where the action stagnated and so did the actors. During such times, those on stage remained in one spot for an exaggerated length of time. Perhaps if the director had devoted a greater concentration to movement there would have been a more apparent and appropriate pace in his production. Due to a deficiency in timing, this play was not as closely structured as it otherwise could have been.

Despite this fault in pace, this group of players in its entirety projected a fairly strong sense of continuity. These actors exhibited a quality of cohesiveness and were extremely conscious of each others' stage presence. As a result, any serious blunders which might have occurred during the evening were incapable of being determined. This positive aspect should be credited to both director and actor, as it is a product of the two combined.

The musical score of this play, directed by Steve Plumb, enabled the players to make the transition between dialogue and vocal routines with great ease. It not only enhanced the quality of the vocal numbers, but moreover, supplied the play with an additional attraction which created a sense of excitement throughout the production.

Polly Nulty's choreography did not fulfill expectations. Since the play predominantly embraces the vaudeville days in the U.S.A. during the 1920's and through the early 30's, there were expectations of seeing a number of intricate dance routines that were prevalent and apropos to those times. Although there was some tap dancing in a few scenes, the choreography could have been more elaborate.

The costumes for the play were excellent. A number of individuals must have invested much time and energy in creating and collecting the assortment of props and clothing articles that were used to design the wardrobe for this production.

Since the cast consisted of numerous personalities, it is impossible to cite each and give an account of his performance. Each was an important constituent in comprising the talent that created Gypsy.

The character of Rose was double cast and performed by Joan Renaud and Nancy Smith on alternate nights. However, the final performance was delivered with great gusto by Nancy Smith.

Bee Ball's physical appearance as well as her character interpretation was coherent with that of Baby June's.

It is difficult to infer whether Mike Strong as Herbie and Jennifer Miller as Louise, delivered a low keyed performance by choice or by directors preference. Both had to depict individuals who's dispositions were neither strong nor aggressive. This might warrant a degree of downplaying on the actors behalf. However, this should be done without the actor actually relinquishing his strength for the role. This was not effectively accomplished by either Herbie or Louise. Both should have provided a stronger sense of character, which would have resulted in more powerful and defined performance by each.

Some of the secondary characters only occasionally in the limelight, were absolutely delightful and should be acknowledged for contributing character and a sense of humor to the production.

Bob Saikevicz as Tulsa, demonstrated professional abilities in both acting and dancing. He had a scene almost to himself in which he did some incredible "hoofing" that the audience would have enjoyed watching all night.

Jeff Aronson was perfect for his role, and gave a delightfully funny and articulate performance as Yonkers.

Miss Cratchitt played by Liz Bernstein provided boisterous merriment as a stuffy spinsterish secretary.

The extra bonus, the act which enhanced the evening's performance, was that of the strippers' featuring Tessie Tura, Mazeppa, and Electra. Cynthia Harryman, Karen Aschenbach, and Audrey Tinsley with their "You Gotta Get a Gimmick" routine, will be remembered as having given Gypsy and its audience a refreshing act which provoked much response and laughter. This in particular, the audience loved.

(continued from page eight)

albums, uses a lot of vocal overdubbing, with a full chorus repeating the lead singer on phrases and refrain... a style which is borrowed by Manilow for this number. Auger's song Inner City Blues compares well with Something's Comin' Up. The technique for both works well, and is similar. It's A Miracle represents Manilow's commercial best. Right up there with Neil Diamond, Andy Kim, and Elton John. Home Again is the most introspective, probably the meatiest cut from the album, and is most like Billy Joel. Mandy flashes about with grandiose production, much in the 'tradition' of orchestral ballads

Lane Series Presents 2 Holiday Specials

After Thanksgiving recess the University's Lane Series will present two unusual attractions that have a special appeal to the holiday concert- goer. The Welsh Guards and Argyll-Sutherland Highlanders on Dec. 5 and the Hartford Ballet in "The Nutcracker" on Dec. 7.

The Welsh Guards and Argyll - Sutherland Highlanders, marching bands which appear on Thursday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m., in Pittrick Gym, include the massed bands, pipes, drums and dancers of two of Great Britain's most famous regiments.

A company of 80, the two regiments are returning to America for the first time together in an inspiring spectacle of pomp and ceremony. The 75-city tour, which began in mid-September at New York's Madison Square Garden, will conclude in Boston on the day after the Burlington performance.

In the past the Lane Series has presented two such marching bands or tattoos (as they are called in military parlance): the Royal Marines Tattoo as an extra in 1965-66 and the British Tournament and Tattoo, composing the Royal Scots Greys and the Gordon Highlanders, as an extra in 1969-70. Both concerts were sold out.

Although the Welsh Guards and the Argyll - Sutherland Highlanders have previously appeared before American audiences, this is the first time that two companies, considered to be among the most prestigious of Great Britain's royal contingents, will be appearing together.

This tour marks the first visit of the Queen's Regiments in nearly three years and will include all the major cities in the U.S. and Canada.

The performance of the two regiments is a spectacle of precision marching, stirring bagpipe music, traditional Highland dancing, and breathtaking ceremony which will be highly entertaining and memorable.

Queen Elizabeth, England's reigning monarch, is colonel-in-chief of the Guards and the Highlanders, an honor that is shared by few of Great Britain's fighting regiments. Both have distinguished themselves in some of England's greatest triumphs from Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo to the victories of World War II.

Tickets for the Welsh Highlanders concert on Dec. 5, $3, $5, and $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3419.

The second holiday concert, on Saturday, Dec. 7, offers the Hartford Ballet Company in one of the most delightful ballets in all of dance history: Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker."

The concert will take place in Memorial Auditorium and begin at 8 p.m. Last year's presentation of the same ballet by the same company was completely sold out.

Performing with the Hartford Ballet this year will be the Vermont Symphony Ballet Orchestra, conducted by its new leader, Efrain Guigui of the Casals Festival, Puerto Rico. (The music at last year's concert was in the form of tapes.)

This year's "Nutcracker" ballet, a full-length production, is completely new, and includes sets and costumes, both of which were designed by New York designer Carl Michell. The Hartford Ballet's directors, Michael Uthoff and Enid Lynn, have restaged major portions of Tchaikovsky's classic ballet.

The "Nutcracker" appeals to both sophisticated lovers of ballet and to children. The ballet has gained immortality by the snowflake scene in the first act and by superb pas de deux and variations (in the last act) for the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Prince.

And both children and adults will be enchanted by the many and diverse dances of the second act which are commanded by the Sugar Plum Fairy for little Clara (the young heroine of the story) and the other guests: Spanish, Arab, Chinese and Russian.

Tickets for the December 7 performance of the "Nutcracker" are $5 (reserved floor and center balcony seats), $4 (reserved side balconies) and $3 (unreserved floor bleachers). They are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418. (A limited number of the $3 bleacher seats are also on sale at downtown Bailey's Music Rooms on Church St.)

Elton John At The Forum:

by Paul Prior

Hundreds and hundreds of pre- pubescent glitter babies wandering aimlessly in the Forum, most knee-deep in sequins. The air is heavy with musk and marijuana, in fact, most of the people sitting around me were wired and wide-eyed. The occasion is Elton John's 1974 Tour, one of the year's biggies. Shortly after eight the houselights are dimmed and the Kiki Dee Band opens the show. Kiki Dee is one of Mr. John's proteges, and his influence upon her music is quite evident, she comes on like a female Elton at times. She fronts a tight band, and they warmed up the crowd satisfactorily. Kinky Kiki was off shortly however, this is the type of night that no one really wants to hear an opening act, no matter how good they may be. The audience is psyched for the Rocket Man himself.

At nine-thirty the lights go down again, and fog machines create an eerie atmosphere which is a prelude to "Funeral for a Friend." Elton appears as the synthesizer comes in, he's dressed in a metallic, sequined space suit, with matching Robin Hood hat. Yes, the bitch is back in town. "Love Lies Bleeding" and "Candle in the Wind" flow together, the band providing top notch accompaniment. There have been some additions to the band. An additional percussionist, Ray (never caught the last name) played

Another Opinion: "Gypsy" Is

by Robert Deniko

The curtain rose to a surprisingly sparse number of spectators and the tale of the Vaudeville stripper Gypsy Rose Lee as told by the Burlington Lyric Theatre began its unfolding. The Flynn Theatre's seating capacity of fifteen hundred was barely half met for this opening night performance.

Darkness, and the orchestra serenades us with an enjoyable overture. I observe them plainly in their "pit" from my third row niche. They are an ensemble evenly balanced with brass, woodwinds, strings and percussion, their strongest point illustrated during gaps of transition between action. Leading into the resuming of action after a change of scene, the conductor and orchestra faded, then cut softly and smoothly. Following in this vein of tightness and precise synchronization, actors would then jump immediately in on cue with their lines, demonstrating the excellent choreography and organization of the production overall.

The musical score was a high quality representation of the style of the early thirties. Though sometimes monotonous in its waltzing tempo or exhaustive repetition of themes to the point of staleness, the score contains such classic pieces as "Small World" and "Everything's Coming Up Roses."

The voice of Rose's mother (played by Jennifer Smith) in the lead was disappointing. If accurate, it did not have a rich and full sound and voice. Granted, the spacious dimensions of the Flynn resoundingly warm voice, yet the theatre was designed and built for productions of this sort. Rose's voice did not project enough. Perhaps this was carried farthest to the audience belonging to the eleven- year- old who played Gypsy's sister (June in reality) in the early part of her career.

The lines of the songs, the lyrics of songs, the image of a period past when an era of idealism ran rampant in the entire society before the depression forced people to blindly dream and accept the impossible and the reality of Gypsy's mother, Rose, the embodiment of the era's stoicism. Set in the play serves as an analysis of the personality of the figure of Rose. She

Elton John, Th

Greatest Hits
Elton John
MCA 2128

This really wasn't necessary. Y'all know what's on this one. Y'all know it coincides with the tour. Y'all know that Christmas is coming. Y'all know that your old Uni 45's are worn thin. And that's the story behind this album. What other motivation do ya need? Buy the damn thing! And wait till ya see the label.

Fire
The Ohio Players
Mercury SRM-1-1013

Endlessly we concern ourselves with the innovations of rock, folk, country, jazz, reggae, heavy metal, and glitter. What about progressive soul? Need we limit ourselves to worn discussions of Isaac Hayes' Hot Buttered Soul, his eighteen plus minute version of By the Time I Get To Phoenix, and what all this meant to R&B? How about the Ohio Players? They chose the name hoping that it would help them get gigs throughout the entire state! One album for Capitol, three for Westbound (excluding one that Westbound released after The Ohio Players' departure from Capitol). Fire, their second album, have proved to be a milestone in the industry. The presentation of this album has catapulted The Ohio Players to the top charts of every R&B station in the country. While this album will have the advantage of a ready audience, and a ready buying public, the group must depend on the following of those who understand and appreciate what they're doing. It is from this audience of urban blacks, working class people, and (what's left of) hippies that enough backing for Mercury release the million mark.

The Ohio Players have much for which to be proud. Much in the form of Isaac Hayes, The Motown Sound, and more recently Birth. The Ohio Players on Capitol by force. Capitol by the Players and Westbound and Capitol decided that only product of value they left Westbound due to conflicts

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
DORSET STREET
I Groove Tube
II Odessa File

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I King of Hearts
II The Taking of Pelham One, Two, Three

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Trial of Billy Jack

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Call Theatre

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Vanishing Wilderness
II Little Big Man
A Man Called Horse

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Vanishing Wilderness
II The Longest Yard

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

Vanishing Wilderness
NOW SHOWING 7 & 9 pm
MATINEE SAT.-SUN. AT 2 PM
Matinee only All seats $1.00.
★★★!FASCINATING. IT'S EXCELLENT!" - NEW YORK DAILY NEWS
"MAGNIFICENT. A FINE FILM." - NEW YORK TIMES
G
"SEE IT BEFORE CIVILIZATION SWEEPS IT AWAY."

TONITE AT 7:00 & 9:15
Mat. Sat., Sun. 2 pm. Matinee only All seats $1.00.
IT'S SURVIVAL OF THE FIERCEST. AND THE FUNNIEST.
BURT REYNOLDS
THE LONGEST YARD
EDDIE ALBERT
R
HELD OVER 6 BIG WEEKS
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME!

TONIGHT
TRY
"THE MAE WEST"
(A real two breasted sandwich)
FAMOUS SINCE 1970
or try one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Tuesday through Sunday
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21
EASTER PARADE (1948) – Judy Garland
Fred Astaire, Peter Lawford
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25
TWO WOMEN (1961) – Sophia Loren, Jean-Paul Belmondo
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free

MONDAY, DECEMBER 2
THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES (1944)
Frederic March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free

TORTILLA FLAT
for
DELICIOUS MEXICAN FOOD
SPECIAL FOR TWO
Mondays & Tuesdays only $3.95
Your choice of a taco plate or enchilada plate with a lettuce and tomato salad.
Not including dessert, beverage, or tax.
Effective through December 10th, 1974
317 Riverside Ave. Burlington, Vt. 863-9230

The Beginning of a New Life
The Beginning of a New Life
ISN'T IT GOOD TO KNOW
with BILLY GRAHAM
TONITE! THURSDAY Nov. 21 in COMMONS-115 Liv./Learn. at 9PM FREE!

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

Poetry Reading

On Friday Nov. 22 at 4:00 p.m., Lucy Swope Evans will read from her own poetry in the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Evans whose art work is on display in the theatre, came to poetry through her work in the visual media. She has won a poetry award from 'The Nation', which included a reading of her work in New York.

Evans recent writings have been towards bringing the art of poetry to the listener and to establish a communication between the poet and the audience. You are invited to hear the reading this Friday at four in the Royall Tyler Theatre. Coffee will be served after the reading.

THE ÆTNA COLLEGE PLAN IS DI
No other property can financial needs like unique Life Insu
Jim Francke
Tony Wright 862-1701
231 S. Union Street
Ætna Life Insurance Company, Hartfor

PEACE CORPS AND VIS RECRUITERS WILL BE ON CA AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VERM ON DECEMBER 3,4 AND 5, 19
Seniors and Graduate Students up with Placement for an For more information conta Placement Office.

SNOW TIR
Complete line of SNO -new and retre
All UVM students and Fa 10% discount with t
E&E TIRE CO. 152 RIVERSIDE 864-7759

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

"Gypsy" Lacks Timing And Fluidity

by Barbara Freedman

Gypsy, presented by the Lyric Theatre, under the direction of Tom Geno, although enjoyable, did not contain a dynamic sense of fluidity as might have been expected. Timing, a crucial element in any performance, especially a musical, seemed lacking in Mr. Geno's adaptation of Gypsy. There were moments throughout the performance where the action stagnated and so did the actors. During such times, those on stage remained in one spot for an exaggerated length of time. Perhaps if the director had devoted a greater concentration to movement there would have been a more apparent and appropriate pace in his production. Due to a deficiency in timing, this play was not as closely structured as it otherwise could have been.

Despite this fault in pace, this group of players in its entirety projected a fairly strong sense of continuity. These actors exhibited a quality of cohesiveness and were extremely conscious of each others' stage presence. As a result, any serious blunders which might have occurred during the evening were incapable of being determined. This positive aspect should be credited to both director and actor, as it is a product of the two combined.

The musical score of this play, directed by Steve Plumb, enabled the players to make the transition between dialogue and vocal routines with great ease. It not only enhanced the quality of the vocal numbers, but moreover, supplied the play with an additional attraction which created a sense of excitement throughout the production.

Polly Nulty's choreography did not fulfill expectations. Since the play predominantly embraces the vaudeville days in the U.S.A. during the 1920's and through the early 30's, there were expectations of seeing a number of intricate dance routines that were prevalent and apropos to those times. Although there was some tap dancing in a few scenes, the choreography could have been more elaborate.

The costumes for the play were excellent. A number of individuals must have invested much time and energy in creating and collecting the assortment of props and clothing articles that were used to design the wardrobe for this production.

Since the cast consisted of numerous personalities, it is impossible to cite each and give an account of his performance. Each was an important constituent in comprising the talent that created Gypsy.

The character of Rose was double cast and performed by Joan Renaud and Nancy Smith on alternate nights. However, the final performance was delivered with great gusto by Nancy Smith.

Bee Ball's physical appearance as well as her character interpretation was coherent with that of Baby June's.

It is difficult to infer whether Mike Strong as Herbie and Jennifer Miller as Louise, delivered a low keyed performance by choice or by directors preference. Both had to depict individuals who's dispositions were neither strong nor aggressive. This might warrant a degree of downplaying on the actors behalf. However, this should be done without the actor actually relinquishing his strength for the role. This was not effectively accomplished by either Herbie or Louise. Both should have provided a stronger sense of character, which would have resulted in more powerful and defined performance by each.

Some of the secondary characters only occasionally in the limelight, were absolutely delightful and should be acknowledged for contributing character and a sense of humor to the production.

Bob Saikevics as Tulsa, demonstrated professional abilities in both acting and dancing. He had a scene almost to himself in which he did some incredible "hoofing" that the audience would enjoy watching all night.

Jeff Aronson was perfect for his role, and gave a delightfully funny and articulate performance as Yonkers.

Miss Cratchitt played by Liz Bernstein provided boisterous merriment as a stuffy spinsterish secretary.

The extra bonus, the act which enhanced the evening's performance, was that of the strippers' featuring Tessie Tura, Mazeppa, and Electra. Cynthia Harryman, Karen Aschenbach, and Audrey Tinsley with their "You Gotta Get a Gimmick" routine, will be remembered as having given Gypsy and its audience a refreshing act which provoked much response and laughter. This in particular, the audience loved.

(continued from page eight)

albums, uses a lot of vocal overdubbing, with a full chorus repeating the lead singer on phrases and refrain... a style which is borrowed by Manilow for this number. Auger's song Inner City Blues compares well with Something's Comin' Up. The technique for both works well, and is similar. It's A Miracle represents Manilow's commercial best. Right up there with Neil Diamond, Andy Kim, and Elton John. Home Again is the most introspective, probably the meatiest cut from the album, and is most like Billy Joel. Mandy flashes about with grandiose production, much in the tradition of orchestral ballads

Elton John At The Forum:

by Paul Prior

Hundreds and hundreds of pre-pubescent glitter babies wandering aimlessly in the Forum, most knee-deep in sequins. The air is heavy with musk and marijuana, in fact, most of the people sitting around me were wired and wide-eyed. The occasion is Elton John's 1974 Tour, one of the year's biggies. Shortly after eight the houselights are dimmed and the Kiki Dee Band opens the show. Kiki Dee is one of Mr. John's protegees, and his influence upon her music is quite evident, she comes on like a female Elton at times. She fronts a tight band, and they warmed up the crowd satisfactorily. Kinky Kiki was off shortly however, this is the type of night that no one really wants to hear an opening act, no matter how good they may be. The audience is psyched for the Rocket Man himself.

At nine-thirty the lights go down again, and fog machines create an eerie atmosphere which is a prelude to "Funeral for a Friend." Elton appears as the synthesizer comes in, he's dressed in a metallic, sequined space suit, with matching Robin Hood hat. Yes, the bitch is back in town. "Love Lies Bleeding" and "Candle in the Wind" flow together, the band providing top notch accompaniment. There have been some additions to the band. An additional percussionist, Ray, (never caught the last name) played

Lane Series Presents 2 Holiday Specials

After Thanksgiving recess the University's Lane Series will present two unusual attractions that have a special appeal to the holiday concert- goer. The Welsh Guards and Argyll-Sutherland Highlanders on Dec. 5 and the Hartford Ballet in "The Nutcracker" on Dec. 7.

The Welsh Guards and Argyll-Sutherland Highlanders, marching bands which appear on Thursday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m., in Patrick Gym, include the massed bands, pipes, drums and dancers of two of Great Britain's most famous regiments.

A company of 80, the two regiments are returning to America for the first time together in an inspiring spectacle of pomp and ceremony. The 75-city tour, which began in mid-September at New York's Madison Square Garden, will conclude in Boston on the day after the Burlington performance.

In the past the Lane Series has presented two such marching bands or tattoos (as they are called in military parlance): the Royal Marines Tattoo as an extra in 1965-66 and the British Tournament and Tattoo, composing the Royal Scots Greys and the Gordon Highlanders, as an extra in 1969-70. Both concerts were sold out.

Although the Welsh Guards and the Argyll - Sutherland Highlanders have previously appeared before American audiences, this is the first time that two companies, considered to be among the most prestigious of Great Britain's royal contingents, will be appearing together.

This tour marks the first visit of the Queen's Regiments in nearly three years and will include all the major cities in the U.S. and Canada.

The performance of the two regiments is a spectacle of precision marching, stirring bagpipe music, traditional Highland dancing, and breathtaking ceremony which will be highly entertaining and memorable.

Queen Elizabeth, England's reigning monarch, is colonel-in-chief of the Guards and the Highlanders, an honor that is shared by few of Great Britain's fighting regiments. Both have distinguished themselves in some of England's greatest triumphs from Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo to the victories of World War II.

Tickets for the Welsh-Highlanders concert on Dec. 5, $3, $5, and $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

The second holiday concert, on Saturday, Dec. 7, offers the Hartford Ballet Company in one of the most delightful ballets in all of dance history: Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker."

The concert will take place in Memorial Auditorium and begin at 8 p.m. Last year's presentation of the same ballet by the same company was completely sold out.

Performing with the Hartford Ballet this year will be the Vermont Symphony Ballet Orchestra, conducted by its new leader, Efrain Guigui of the Casals Festival, Puerto Rico. (The music at last year's concert was in the form of tapes.)

This year's "Nutcracker" ballet, a full-length production, is completely new, and includes sets and costumes, both of which were designed by New York designer Carl Michell. The Hartford Ballet's directors, Michael Uthoff and Enid Lynn, have restaged major portions of Tchaikovsky's classic ballet.

The "Nutcracker" appeals to both sophisticated lovers of ballet and to children. The ballet has gained immortality by the snowflake scene in the first act and by superb pas de deux and variations (in the last act) for the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Prince.

And both children and adults will be enchanted by the many and diverse dances of the second act which are commanded by the Sugar Plum Fairy for little Clara (the young heroine of the story) and the other guests: Spanish, Arab, Chinese and Russian.

Tickets for the December 7 performance of the "Nutcracker" are $5 (reserved floor and center balcony seats), $4 (reserved side balconies) and $3 (unreserved floor bleachers). They are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418. (A limited number of the $3 bleacher seats are also on sale at downtown Bailey's Music Rooms on Church St.)

Poetry Reading

On Friday Nov. 22 at 4:00 p.m., Lucy Swope Evans will read from her own poetry in the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Evans whose art work is on display in the theatre, came to poetry through her work in the visual media. She has won a poetry award from 'The Nation', which included a reading of her work in New York.

Evans recent writings have been towards bringing the art of poetry to the listener and to establish a communication between the poet and the audience. You are invited to hear the reading this Friday at four in the Royall Tyler Theatre. Coffee will be served after the reading.

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
DORSET STREET
I Groove Tube
II Odessa File

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I King of Hearts
II The Taking of Pelham One, Two, Three

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Trial of Billy Jack

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Call Theatre

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Vanishing Wilderness
II Little Big Man
A Man Called Horse

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Vanishing Wilderness
II The Longest Yard

call theatres for times
Not good for bargain nights or special showings

Vanishing Wilderness
NOW SHOWING 7 & 9 pm
MATINEE SAT.-SUN. AT 2 PM
★★★FASCINATING. IT'S EXCELLENT!" - NEW YORK DAILY NEWS
"MAGNIFICENT. A FINE FILM." - NEW YORK TIMES
Matinee only All seats $1.00.
G
"SEE IT BEFORE CIVILIZATION SWEEPS IT AWAY..."

TONITE AT 7:00 & 9:15
IT'S SURVIVAL OF THE FIERCEST. AND THE FUNNIEST.
Wed., Sat., Sun. 3 pm Matinee only All seats $1.00.
BURT REYNOLDS
THE LONGEST YARD
EDDIE ALBERT
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

TONIGHT
TRY
"THE MAE WEST"
(A real two breasted sandwich)
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
or try one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Tuesday through Sunday
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21
EASTER PARADE (1948) – Judy Garland
Fred Astaire, Peter Lawford
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25
TWO WOMEN (1961) – Sophia Loren, Jean-Paul Belmondo
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free
MONDAY, DECEMBER 2
THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES (1944)
Frederic March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free

TORTILLA FLAT
for
DELICIOUS MEXICAN FOOD
SPECIAL FOR TWO
Mondays & Tuesdays only $3.95
Your choice of a taco plate or enchilada plate with a lettuce and tomato salad.
Not including dessert, beverage, or tax.
Effective through December 10th, 1974
317 Riverside Ave. Burlington, Vt. 863-9230

The beginning of a new life
ISN'T IT GOOD TO KNOW
with BILLY GRAHAM
TONITE! THURSDAY Nov. 21
in COMMONS-115
Liv./Learn.
at 9PM FREE!

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

Another Opinion:

"Gypsy" Is

by Robert Deniko

The curtain rose to a surprisingly sparse number of spectators and the tale of the Vaudeville stripper Gypsy Rose Lee as told by the Burlington Lyric Theatre began its unfolding. The Flynn Theatre's seating capacity of fifteen hundred was barely half met for this opening night performance.

Darkness, and the orchestra serenades us with an enjoyable overture. I observe them plainly in their "pit" from my third row niche. They are an ensemble evenly balanced with brass, woodwinds, strings and percussion, their strongest point illustrated during gaps of transition between action. Leading into the resuming of action after a change of scene, the conductor and orchestra faded, then cut softly and smoothly. Following in this vein of tightness and precise syncronization, actors would then jump immediately in on cue, with their lines, demonstrating the excellent choreography and organization of the production overall.

The musical score was a high quality representation of the style of the early thirties. Though sometimes monotonous in its waltzing tempo or exhaustive repetition of themes to the point of staleness, the score contains such classic pieces as "Small Wor... "Everything's C... Rose."

The voice ... mother (played ... Smith) in the lead ... disappointing ... accurate, it did not ... rich and full soun... voice. Granted, the ... specious dimension ... full resonating ... voice, yet the ... designed and built ... for productions of ... Rose's voice did not ... enough. Perhaps ... earned farthest ... audience behind ... eleven-year-old ... Gypsy's sister (I... reality) in the ear... career.

The lines of ... lyrics of songs ... image of a period ... past when an ... idealism ran rampant ... the entire society ... depression forced ... blindly dream and ... impossible and the ... Gypsy's mother, ... embodiment of the ... stoicism. Set in the ... play serves as ... analysis of the ... personality of the ... figure of Rose. S...

Elton John, Th...

Greatest Hits
Elton John
MCA 2128

This really wasn't necessary. Y'all know what's on this one. Y'all know it coincides with the tour. Y'all know that Christmas is coming. Y'all know that your old Uni 45's are worn thin. And that's the story behind this album. What other motivation do ya need? Buy the damn thing! And wait till ya see the label.

Fire
The Ohio Players
Mercury SRM-1-1013

Endlessly we concern ourselves with the innovations of rock, folk, country, jazz, reggae, heavy metal, and glitter. What about progressive soul? Need we limit ourselves to worn discussions of Isaac Hayes' Hot Buttered Soul, his eighteen plus minute version of By the Time I Get To Phoenix, and what all this meant to R&B? How about the Ohio Players? They chose the name hoping that it would help them get gigs throughout the entire state! One album for Capitol, three for Westbound (excluding one that Westbound released after The Ohio Players' departure from ... Fire, their second ... have proved to be ... industry. T... presentation of ... has catapulted T... to the top cha... every R&B st... country. While ... have the advant... audience, and ... buying public, t... must depend ... following of the ... understand and ... they're doing. ... that this audien... urban blacks, ... people, and ... (what's left of ... enough backing ... Mercury release ... the million mar...

The Ohio P... much for pr... much in the fo... Hayes. The l... and more recen... Birth. The O... Capitol by forc... the Players s... Westbound an... Capitol decide... only product o... they left West... due to conflic...

THE ÆTNA COLLEGE PLAN IS DI...
No other property can ... financial needs like ... unique Life Insu...
Jim Francke
Tony Wright 862-1701
231 S. Union Street
Aetna Life Insurance Company, Hartfor...

PEACE CORPS AND VIS... RECRUITERS WILL BE ON CA... AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VERM... ON DECEMBER 3,4 AND 5, 19...
Seniors and Graduate Students ... up with Placement for an ... For more information conta... Placement Office.

SNOW TIR...
Complete line of SNO...
-new and retre...
All UVM students and Fa...
10% discount with th...
E&E TIRE CO...
152 RIVERSIDE...
864-7759

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

"Gypsy" Lacks Timing And Fluidity

by Barbara Friedman

Gypsy, presented by the Lyric Theatre, under the direction of Tony Geno, although enjoyable, did not contain a dynamic sense of fluidity as might have been expected. Timing, a crucial element in any performance, especially a musical, seemed lacking in Mr. Geno's adaptation of Gypsy. There were moments throughout the performance where the action stagnated and so did the actors. During such times, those on stage remained in one spot for an exaggerated length of time. Perhaps if the director had devoted a greater concentration to movement there would have been a more apparent and appropriate pace in his production. Due to a deficiency in timing, this play was not as closely - structured as it otherwise could have been.

Despite this fault in pace, this group of players in its entirety projected a fairly strong sense of continuity. These actors exhibited a quality of cohesiveness and were extremely conscious of each others' stage presence. As a result, any serious blunders which might have occurred during the evening were incapable of being determined. This positive aspect should be credited to both director and actor, as it is a product of the two combined.

The musical score of this play, directed by Steve Plumb, enabled the players to make the transition between dialogue and vocal routines with great ease. It not only enhanced the quality of the vocal numbers, but moreover, supplied the play with an additional attraction which created a sense of excitement throughout the production.

Polly Nulty's choreography did not fulfill expectations. Since the play predominantly embraces the vaudeville days in the U.S.A. during the 1920's and through the early 30's, there were expectations of seeing a number of intricate dance routines that were prevalent and apropos to those times. Although there was some tap dancing in a few scenes, the choreography could have been more elaborate.

The costumes for the play were excellent. A number of individuals must have invested much time and energy in creating and collecting the assortment of props and clothing articles that were used to design the wardrobe for this production.

Since the cast consisted of numerous personalities, it is impossible to cite each and give an account of his performance. Each was an important constituent in comprising the talent that created Gypsy.

The character of Rose was double cast and performed by Joan Renaud and Nancy Smith on alternate nights. However, the final performance was delivered with great gusto by Nancy Smith.

Bee Ball's physical appearance as well as her character interpretation was coherent with that of Baby June's.

It is difficult to infer whether Mike Strong as Herbie and Jennifer Miller as Louise, delivered a low keyed performance by choice or by directors preference. Both had to depict individuals who's dispositions were neither strong nor aggressive. This might warrant a degree of downplaying on the actors behalf. However, this should be done without the actor actually relinquishing his strength for the role. This was not effectively accomplished by either Herbie or Louise. Both should have provided a stronger sense of character, which would have resulted in more powerful and defined performance by each.

Some of the secondary characters only occasionally in the limelight, were absolutely delightful and should be acknowledged for contributing character and a sense of humor to the production.

Bob Saikevics as Tulsa, demonstrated professional abilities in both acting and dancing. He had a scene almost to himself in which he did some incredible "hoofing" that the audience would have enjoyed watching all night.

Jeff Aronson was perfect for his role, and gave a delightfully funny and articulate performance as Yonkers.

Miss Cratchitt played by Liz Bernstein provided boisterous merriment as a stuffy spinsterish secretary.

The extra bonus, the act which enhanced the evening's performance, was that of the strippers' featuring Tessie Tura, Mazeppa, and Electra. Cynthia Harryman, Karen Aschenbach, and Audrey Tinsley with their "You Gotta Get a Gimmick" routine, will be remembered as having given Gypsy and its audience a refreshing act which provoked much response and laughter. This in particular, the audience loved.

Elton John At The Forum:

by Paul Prior

Hundreds and hundreds of pre- pubescent glitter babies wandering aimlessly in the Forum, most knee-deep in sequins. The air is heavy with musk and marijuana, in fact, most of the people sitting around me were wired and wide-eyed. The occasion is Elton John's 1974 Tour, one of the year's biggies. Shortly after eight the houselights are dimmed and the Kiki Dee Band opens the show. Kiki Dee is one of Mr. John's protegees, and his influence upon her music is quite evident, she comes on like a female Elton at times. She fronts a tight band, and they warmed up the crowd satisfactorily. Kinky Kiki was off shortly however, this is the type of night that no one really wants to hear an opening act, no matter how good they may be. The audience is psyched for the Rocket Man himself.

At nine-thirty the lights go down again, and fog machines create an eerie atmosphere which is a prelude to "Funeral for a Friend." Elton appears as the synthesizer comes in, he's dressed in a metallic, sequined space suit, with matching Robin Hood hat. Yes, the bitch is back in town. "Love Lies Bleeding" and "Candle in the Wind" flow together, the band providing top notch accompaniment. There have been some additions to the band. An additional percussionist, Ray, (never caught the last name) played albums, uses a lot of vocal overdubbing, with a full chorus repeating the lead singer on phrase and refrain... a style which is borrowed by Manilow for this number. Auger's song Inner City Blues compares well with Something's Comin' Up. The technique for both works well, and is similar. It's A Miracle represents Manilow's commercial best. Right up there with Neil Diamond, Andy Kim, and Elton John. Home Again is the most introspective, probably the meatiest cut from the album, and is most like Billy Joel. Mandy flashes about with grandiose production, much in the tradition of orchestral ballads

(continued from page eight)

Lane Series Presents 2 Holiday Specials

After Thanksgiving recess the University's Lane Series will present two unusual attractions that have a special appeal to the holiday concert- goer. The Welsh Guards and Argyll-Sutherland Highlanders on Dec. 5 and the Hartford Ballet in "The Nutcracker" on Dec. 7.

The Welsh Guards and Argyll - Sutherland Highlanders, marching bands which appear on Thursday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m., in Patrick Gym, include the massed bands, pipes, drums and dancers of two of Great Britain's most famous regiments.

A company of 80, the two regiments are returning to America for the first time together in an inspiring spectacle of pomp and ceremony. The 75-city tour, which began in mid-September at New York's Madison Square Garden, will conclude in Boston on the day after the Burlington performance.

In the past the Lane Series has presented two such marching bands or tattoos (as they are called in military parlance): the Royal Marines Tattoo as an extra in 1965-66 and the British Tournament and Tattoo, composing the Royal Scots Greys and the Gordon Highlanders, as an extra in 1969-70. Both concerts were sold out.

Although the Welsh Guards and the Argyll - Sutherland Highlanders have previously appeared before American audiences, this is the first time that two companies, considered to be among the most prestigious of Great Britain's royal contingents, will be appearing together.

This tour marks the first visit of the Queen's Regiments in nearly three years and will include all the major cities in the U.S. and Canada.

The performance of the two regiments is a spectacle of precision marching, stirring bagpipe music, traditional Highland dancing, and breathtaking ceremony which will be highly entertaining and memorable.

Queen Elizabeth, England's reigning monarch, is colonel-in-chief of the Guards and the Highlanders, an honor that is shared by few of Great Britain's fighting regiments. Both have distinguished themselves in some of England's greatest triumphs from Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo to the victories of World War II.

Tickets for the Welsh Highlanders concert on Dec. 5, $3, $5, and $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

The second holiday concert, on Saturday, Dec. 7, offers the Hartford Ballet Company in one of the most delightful ballets in all of dance history: Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker."

The concert will take place in Memorial Auditorium and begin at 8 p.m. Last year's presentation of the same ballet by the same company was completely sold out.

Performing with the Hartford Ballet this year will be the Vermont Symphony Ballet Orchestra, conducted by its new leader, Efrain Guigui of the Casals Festival, Puerto Rico. (The music at last year's concert was in the form of tapes.)

This year's "Nutcracker" ballet, a full-length production, is completely new, and includes sets and costumes, both of which were designed by New York designer Carl Michell. The Hartford - Ballet's directors, Michael Uthoff and Enid Lynn, have restaged major portions of Tchaikovsky's classic ballet.

The "Nutcracker" appeals to both sophisticated lovers of ballet and to children. The ballet has gained immortality by the snowflake scene in the first act and by superb pas de deux and variations (in the last act) for the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Prince.

And both children and adults will be enchanted by the many and diverse dances of the second act which are commanded by the Sugar Plum Fairy for little Clara (the young heroine of the story) and the other guests: Spanish, Arab, Chinese and Russian.

Tickets for the December 7 performance of the "Nutcracker" are $5 (reserved floor and center balcony seats), $4 (reserved side balconies) and $3 (unreserved floor bleachers). They are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418. (A limited number of the $3 bleacher seats are also on sale at downtown Bailey's Music Rooms on Church St.)

Poetry Reading

On Friday Nov. 22 at 4:00 p.m., Lucy Swope Evans will read from her own poetry in the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Evans whose art work is on display in the theatre, came to poetry through her work in the visual media. She has won a poetry award from 'The Nation', which included a reading of her work in New York.

Evans recent writings have been towards bringing the art of poetry to the listener and to establish a communication between the poet and the audience. You are invited to hear the reading this Friday at four in the Royall Tyler Theatre. Coffee will be served after the reading.

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
DORSET STREET
I Groove Tube
II Odessa File

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I King of Hearts
II The Taking of Pelham One, Two, Three

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Trial of Billy Jack

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Call Theatre

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Vanishing Wilderness
II Little Big Man
A Man Called Horse

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Vanishing Wilderness
II The Longest Yard

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

Vanishing Wilderness
"★★★!FASCINATING. IT'S EXCELLENT!" - NEW YORK DAILY NEWS
"MAGNIFICENT. A FINE FILM." NEW YORK TIMES
NOW SHOWING 7 & 9 pm
MATINEE SAT.-SUN. AT 2 PM
Matinee only All seats $1.00.
G
"...SEE IT BEFORE CIVILIZATION SWEEPS IT AWAY..."

TONITE AT 7:00 & 9:15
IT'S SURVIVAL OF THE FIERCEST. AND THE FUNNIEST.
Mat. Sat., Sun. 3 pm Matinee only All seats $1.00.
BURT REYNOLDS
THE LONGEST YARD
ERNE ALBERT
R
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
RT 7 AT I-189 SO BURLINGTON
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

TONIGHT
TRY
"THE MAE WEST"
(A real two breasted sandwich)
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
or try one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Tuesday through Sunday
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

SA FILMS PRESENTS
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21
EASTER PARADE (1948) – Judy Garland
Fred Astaire, Peter Lawford
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25
TWO WOMEN (1961) – Sophia Loren, Jean-Paul Belmondo
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free
MONDAY, DECEMBER 2
THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES (1944)
Frederic March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free

TORTILLA FLAT
for
DELICIOUS MEXICAN FOOD
SPECIAL FOR TWO
Mondays & Tuesdays only $3.95
Your choice of a taco plate or enchilada plate with a lettuce and tomato salad.
Not including dessert, beverage, or tax.
Effective through December 10th, 1974
317 Riverside Ave. Burlington, Vt. 863-9230

ISN'T IT GOOD TO KNOW
with BILLY GRAHAM
TONITE! THURSDAY Nov. 21
in COMMONS-115
Liv./Learn.
at 9PM FREE!

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES
AT GREAT SAVINGS

Another Opinion:

"Gypsy" Is

by Robert Denike

The curtain rose to a surprisingly sparse number of spectators and the tale of the Vaudeville stripper Gypsy Rose Lee as told by the Burlington Lyric Theatre began its unfolding. The Flynn Theatre's seating capacity of fifteen hundred was barely half met for this opening night performance.

Darkness, and the orchestra serenades us with an enjoyable overture. I observe them plainly in their "pit" from my third row niche. They are an ensemble evenly balanced with brass, woodwinds, strings and percussion, their strongest point illustrated during gaps of transition between action. Leading into the resuming of action after a change of scene, the conductor and orchestra faded, them cut softly and smoothly. Following in this vein of tightness and precise syncronization, actors would then jump immediately in on cue with their lines, demonstrating the excellent choreography and organizaiton of the production overall.

The musical score was a high quality representation of the style of the early thirties. Though sometimes monotonous in its waltzing tempo or exhaustive repetition of themes to the point of staleness, the score contains such classic pieces as "Small Wor... "Everything's... C... Rose."

The voice ... mother (played ... Smith) in the lead ... disappointing. ... accurate, it did not ... rich and full sound ... voice. Granted, the ... spacious dimension ... fill resoundingly ... voice, yet the ... designed and built ... for productions of ... Rose's voice did not ... enough. Perhaps t... carried farthest ... audience below ... eleven-year-old ... Gypsy's sister (R... reality) in the ear... career.

The lines of ... lyrics of songs ... image of a period ... past when an ... idealism ran rampa... the entire socie... depression force... blindly dream an... impossible and th... Gypsy's mother, ... embodiment of t... stoicism. Set in t... play serves as ... analysis of ... personality of ... figure of Rose. ...

Elton John, Th...

Greatest Hits
Elton John
MCA 2128

This really wasn't necessary. Y'all know what's on this one. Y'all know it coincides with the tour. Y'all know that Christmas is coming. Y'all know that your old Uni 45's are worn thin. And that's the story behind this album. What other motivation do ya need? Buy the damn thing! And wait till ya see the label.

Fire
The Ohio Players
Mercury SRM-1-1013

Endlessly we concern ourselves with the innovations of rock, folk, country, jazz, reggae, heavy metal, and glitter. What about progressive soul? Need we limit ourselves to worn discussions of Isaac Hayes' Hot Buttered Soul, his eighteen plus minute version of By the Time I Get To Phoenix, and what all this meant to R&B? How about the Ohio Players? They chose the name hoping that it would help them get gigs throughout the entire state! One album for Capitol, three for Westbound (excluding one that Westbound released after The Ohio Players' departure from ... Fire, their secon... have proved to ... industry. ... presentation of ... has catapulted T... to the top cha... every R&B st... country. While ... have the advant... audience, and ... buying public, ... must depend ... following of the ... understand and ... they're doing. ... that this audien... urban blacks, ... people, and ... (what's left of ... enough backing ... Mercury releas... the million mar...

The Ohio P... much for pr... much in the f... Hayes, The M... and more rece... Birth. The O... Capitol by forc... the Players s... Westbound an... Capitol decide ... only product o... they left West ... due to conflic...

THE ÆTNA COLLEGE PLAN IS DI...
No other property can ... financial needs like ... unique Life Insu...
Jim Francke
Tony Wright 862-1701
231 S. Union Street
Aetna Life Insurance Company, Hartfor...

PEACE CORPS AND VIS...
RECRUITERS WILL BE ON CA...
AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VERM...
ON DECEMBER 3,4 AND 5, 19...
Seniors and Graduate Students ... up with Placement for an ...
For more information conta...
Placement Office.

SNOW TIR...
Complete line of SNO...
-new and retre...
All UVM students and Fa...
10% discount with t...
E&E TIRE CO.
152 RIVERSIDE
864-7759

Another Opinion:

"Gypsy" Is A Disappointment

by Robert Deniker

The curtain rose to a surprisingly sparse number of spectators and the tale of the Vaudeville stripper Gypsy Rose Lee as told by the Burlington Lyric Theatre began its unfolding. The Flynn Theatre's seating capacity of fifteen hundred was barely half met for this opening night performance.

Darkness, and the orchestra serenades us with an enjoyable overture. I observe them plainly in their "pit" from my third row niche. They are an ensemble evenly balanced with brass, woodwinds, strings and percussion, their strongest point illustrated during gaps of transition between action. Leading into the resuming of action after a change of scene, the conductor and orchestra faded, then cut softly and smoothly. Following in this vein of tightness and precise syncronization, actors would then jump immediately in on cue with their lines, demonstrating the excellent choreography and organization of the production overall.

The musical score was a high quality representation of the style of the early thirties. Though sometimes monotonous in its waltzing tempo or exhaustive repetition of themes to the point of staleness, the score contains such classic pieces of genius as "Small World" and "Everything's Coming Up Roses."

The voice of Gypsy's mother (played by Nancy Smith) in the leading role was disappointing. Though accurate, it did not contain the rich and full sound of a trained voice. Granted, the Flynn is its spacious dimensions is hard to fill resoundingly with a human voice, yet the theatre was designed and built specifically for productions of this type and Rose's voice did not project well enough. Perhaps the voice that carried farthest into the audience belonged to the eleven-year-old who protrayed Gypsy's sister (June Havoc in reality) in the early days of her career.

The lines of the plot and lyrics of songs conveyed an image of a period in America's past when an attitude of idealism ran rampant through the entire society. Economic depression forced many to blindly dream and hope for the impossible and the character of Gypsy's mother, Rose, is the embodiment of this unrelenting stoicism. Set in the 1920's, the play serves as an in-depth analysis of the unstable personality of the immortal figure of Rose. She suffers from the dilemma of being born too early and "growing up" too late. The mother accepts her age, realizing her prime has fled and must repress the intense desire to be a star herself. As an outlet, she devotes her entire self (in a splendid show of unlimited sacrifice) to bringing her daughters' success. The audience is ultimately left at the end of the musical trying to answer the question, "Did Rose's tolls and bathes (within herself as well as with the forces of the real world) originate and derive momentum from her own personal motives or from a true love for her daughters? The answer most likely is "both".

Another of the play's main themes was the depiction of the low quality entertainment of the period - a period of experimentation and pioneering but nonetheless accompanied by cheap, unimaginative and ridiculous attempts at originality. The veteran strippers' ode to a virgin Gypsy (at the time she was first introduced to the trade of burlesque), "You Gotta Get a Gimmick", brought to light the hidden fraud behind many routines. Costuming, one of the most redeeming aspects, was emphasized here. Electra's costume consisted solely of three bunches of green grapes scattered over her vital areas which she made jiggle, bounce and jump delightfully (though so very simply) by thrusting, shaking and bumping her hips violently. These donned images of deception should have been treated in a farcical and light-hearted fashion so as to follow consistently in the gay mood or sentimental melodrama of the majority of the musical. Instead Gypsy's Vaudeville and burlesque acts often appeared nauseating and boring to me, making the play's latter half slightly choppy. Perhaps this is due to my orientation to sophisticated entertainment forms of the seventies. Still I wish the gimmickry had been dealt with in a different tone.

I was somewhat disappointed in the production as a whole. I had expected a grander, more elaborate display and to be left awestruck and spellbound. I had entered the theatre beneath an expansive billing which advertised "Don't Miss This One" which had instilled a stoned, electric excitement in me. I processed out however, feeling a bit let-down.

... At The Forum

(continued from page six)

tambourine, drums, bells, and duck-quack. Also, for the last 45 minutes or so, the Muscle Shoals Horns provided some fine back up work. This, along with the regulars, Nigel Olsen, drums; Dee Murray, Bass; and Davey Johnston, guitar filled out the sound nicely. The overall sound and production of the concert ranked among the finest I've heard, especially the use of phasing on some tunes.

Some of the numbers included "Grimsby", "Rocket Man", "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road", "Bennie and the Jets", "Daniel", "Grey Seal", "All the Girls Love Alice", and "The Bitch is Back". I was pleasantly surprised to hear "Take Me to the Pilot" and "Burn Down the Mission" - I last saw Elton shortly after Tumbleweed Connection was released, while on his second tour. What amazed me continually was his ability to make even the most over-played songs sound fresh. I thought there was no way in the world I could like "Bennie and the Jets" after hearing umpteen times this past year, but he made it work, that is one of Elton's prime talents.

The most well received numbers were generally the a.m. hits, such as "Crocodile Rock" and "Saturday Night", but they were not the best musically. He did only one song that could be considered "off material", but he added so much to it. It (for me at least) was one of the highlights of the concert. "Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds" will be his new single, it came off great - and of course, there were many in the audience for whom this song had special significance. "Really opens your eyes".

The crowd was on their feet for most of the latter part of the show. He did three encores, and played a total of two and a half hours.

I think he was genuinely enlightened by the response, he made an announcement before his third encore, "We're going to do a song tonite we only do on special occasions" and went on to explain that out of the 35 dates he had done so far, he'd only sang it 7 or 8 times. There was an uproar as the opening notes to "Your Song" were played, and again, Elton made it sound as fresh as ever. In all, a top rate concert long to be savored in the minds of everyone who attended. See you in 75 Elton.

UVM Players Present Ionesco's "Macbett"

After a one year absence, the University Players will present a major production again this year in their traditional January slot. This year's production will be MACBETT by Eugene Ionesco, and will run on two weekends in the end of January at the Royall Tyler Theatre. MACBETT is Ionesco's absurdist version of the Macbeth myth, and is the first production of this genre to be presented at UVM in quite a few years. This "comedy of monarchy" is fast paced, often very funny; often very grotesque. There are acting parts for eleven men and six women and creative technical work for an unlimited number of people. No experience is necessary to work on the production. The only requirement is a desire to do intensive theatre work. Rehearsals begin on January 2, 1975, providing students the only chance during the year to become absorbed in a project such as this without the worry of class work. If you have any questions about the production or would like to find out more about it, scripts of the play can be signed out at the business office of the Royall Tyler Theatre, and an open informational meeting will be held at 4:30 on Sunday the 24th, also at the Theatre. Auditions are open to the entire campus, and will be held on December 9 and 10 at 7:00 p.m. Remember - it is MACBETT, not the other one.

Tri-Delt Donates $500

In celebration of the initiation of Tri-Delta's 1000th member, the national sorority has awarded a gift of $500, to the UVM Bailey Library. Linn Murdoch presented the grant to Paul Kebabian, UVM's Director of Libraries on Tuesday, November 18, at a Founder's Day Celebration. Kebabian has selected the Encyclopedia Universalis collection to be purchased with this grant.

Elton John, The Ohio Players--Xmas Approaches

Greatest Hits
Elton John
MCA 2128

This really wasn't necessary. Y'all know what's on this one, Y'all know it coincides with the tour. Y'all know that Christmas is coming. Y'all know that your old Uni 45's are worn thin. And that's the story behind this album. What other motivation do ya need? Buy the damn thing! And wait till ya see the label.

Fire
The Ohio Players
Mercury SRM-1-1013

Endlessly we concern ourselves with the innovations of rock, folk, country, jazz, reggae, heavy metal, and glitter. What about progressive soul? Need we limit ourselves to worn discussions of Isaac Hayes' Hot Buttered Soul, his eighteen plus minute version of By the Time I Get To Phoenix, and what all this meant to R&B? How about the Ohio Players? They chose the name hoping that it would help them get gigs throughout the entire state! One album for Capitol, three for Westbound (excluding one that Westbound released after The Ohio Players' departure from the label), and Fire, their second for Mercury have proved to be flukes of the industry. Their tight presentation of sexy ghetto soul has catapulted The Ohio Players to the top chart positions at every R&B station in this country. While most pop stars have the advantage of a general audience, and a broad-base buying public, The Ohio Players must depend on a specific following of those few who can understand and appreciate what they're doing. Despite the fact that this audience has featured urban blacks, college media people, and underground (what's left of it), it has been enough backing to put their first Mercury release, Skin Tight over the million mark in sales.

The Ohio Players have done much for progressive soul - much in the footsteps of Isaac Hayes, The Main Ingredient, and more recently, RCA's New Birth. The Ohio Players left Capitol by force (it wasn't until the Players success on both Westbound and Mercury that Capitol decided to reissue their only product on that label), and they left Westbound by choice, due to conflicting control over their music. At Mercury, The Ohio Players have been given free reign, producing, mastering, and doing the final mix on all their own stuff. Their ability for those tasks was more than evident when their first self-produced effort went gold easily (Skin Tight). Both the title tune Fire and Want To Be Free are good examples of the new punch and vigor that The Ohio Players have brought to soul and R&B. The Ohio Players possess all the sophistication and finesse of any of the Motowners - with a few extras. Guts and direction being two of those extras. The Ohio Players are pioneers to the soul sound of the seventies. They have opened the way for a new, free form of progressive R&B, one that has been underplayed by the white media, as well as the black. The scope and dimension of their leadership in a field they created can be described quite easily... what The Ohio Players do is done so well, even those who try to assimilate that sound fall flat on their faces.

year's ballet and to children. The ballet has gained immortality by the snowflake scene in the first act and by superb pas de deux and variations (in the last act) for the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Prince.

And both children and adults will be enchanted by the many and diverse dances of the second act which are commanded by the Sugar Plum Fairy for little Clara (the young heroine of the story) and the other guests: Spanish, Arab, Chinese and Russian.

Tickets for the December 7 performance of the "Nutcracker" are $5 (reserved floor and center balcony seats), $4 (reserved side balconies) and $3 (unreserved floor bleachers). They are on sale in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418. (A limited number of the $3 bleacher seats are also on sale at downtown Bailey's Music Rooms on Church St.)

Poetry Reading

On Friday Nov. 22 at 4:00 p.m., Lucy Swope Evans will read from her own poetry in the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Evans whose art work is on display in the theatre, came to poetry through her work in the visual media. She has won a poetry award from 'The Nation', which included a reading of her work in New York.

Evans recent writings have been towards bringing the art of poetry to the listener and to establish a communication between the poet and the audience. You are invited to hear the reading this Friday at four in the Royall Tyler Theatre Coffee will be served after the reading.

DOLLAR SHOWING
Thurs. at 4:00 PM
The Taking of Pelham
One, Two, Three
Shown at Plaza I & II
on Dorset Street

karate 864-0414

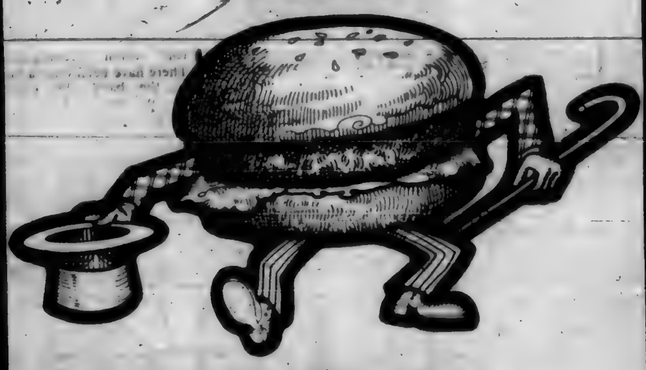
MEXICO NORTH
at the 5 corners Essex Jct., Vt.
Largest Selection of American Indian Turquoise & Silver in Vermont
Afghani, Indian & Mexican clothing, leather goods, jewelery, tapestries, antlerpipes, furniture, stained glass, & lots more
Open 9 to 9 Mon-Fri 9 to 5:30 Sat.
10% off any purchase to UVM Students with this ad

THE ÆTNA COLLEGE PLAN IS DIFFERENT
No other property can meet your financial needs like this truly unique Life Insurance Plan
Jim Francke
Tony Wright 862-1701
231 S. Union Street
Ætna Life Insurance Company, Hartford, Connecticut

PEACE CORPS AND VISTA RECRUITERS WILL BE ON CAMPUS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT ON DECEMBER 3,4 AND 5, 1974
Seniors and Graduate Students sign up with Placement for an interview. For more information contact the Placement Office.

SNOW TIRES!!!
Complete line of SNOW TIRES -new and retreads.
All UVM students and Faculty get 10% discount with this ad.
E&E TIRE CO., INC.
152 RIVERSIDE AVE.
864-7759

THE SILVER KEG
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY- UNESCORTED FEMALES FREE
TUESDAY&THURSDAY- ½ PRICE NITE ALL NITE
WEDNESDAY NO COVER CHARGE ALL NITE
★FEATURING★
NOV. 18-23 DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE
NOV. 25-27 FRANK
NOV. 28-30 SECRET SAM
MON. DEC. 2 GREASE
DEC. 3-7 BOLD EXPRESSIONS
DEC. 9-14 SPOONFEATHER
SUNDAY DEC. 15
JOHN LEE HOOKER
ONE NITE ONLY
DEC. 16-21 DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE

LUMS


OUR BURGERS DON'T COME IN SIZES... THEY COME WITH PERSONALITIES
Our 8 kinds of burgers are all one size—bigger than any Quarter Pounder in town. Nifty. What's even niftier is our variety show of tastes. Like our Gourmet Burger (smothered with mushrooms!). Or our Bacon Burger, featuring crisp bacon and melted, mouth-watering genuine Cheddar. Or, have our famous Cheeseburger, with your choice of Cheddar, American, or Mozzarella. Lots more, and they're all Star Performers.
LUMS No one else will give you more. more. more.

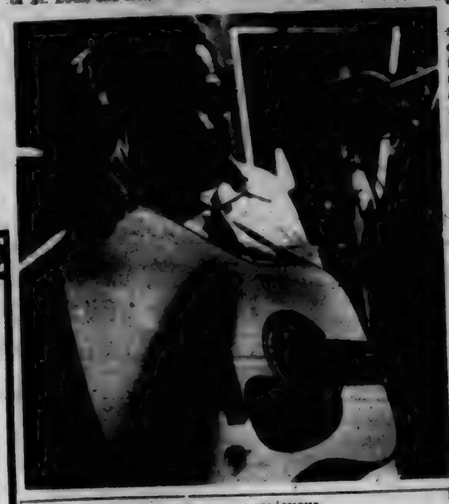
Governing Board Presents Saturday Night Roundhouse

Billings Center Governing Board in conjunction with Philo Records of North Ferrisburg, Vermont is beginning a new Saturday Night Roundhouse series. It will be in the North Den at Billings starting Saturday Nov. 23, at 8:30 p.m. The Governing Board feels that there is a need for alternate activities on Saturday nights, and hopefully there will be support of the students to make it a success. It is on a trial basis and hopefully it will become a tradition, like Friday night roundhouse.

The artists will be professionals in the area recording. The Saturday Night Roundhouse is an attempt by the Governing Board to use a previously untapped resource. All of this has been made possible through the help and financial assistance of the S.A. Concert Bureau.

The artist appearing this week will be Jim Brewer. He knows folk songs, blues, play party songs, country and western songs, religious songs and some Jimmie Rodgers numbers. He represents a cross-section of the musical culture of several generations from Mississippi to Chicago.

Jim was born in Brookhaven, Mississippi. He lost most of his sight at an early age, and started to play the piano. He moved to Chicago and played in the streets. In the late '40's he played on Maxwell Street. He left in the early '50's or St. Louis and settled there for 3 years. He played on streetcars, in taverns and on the streets. He played in the outdoor market area, singing religious songs and the blues. Soon he had scheduled a concert at Northwestern University. At that point he became interested in coffee houses. In 1970, Jim played at the Philadelphia Folk Festival. Since then he has played on the radio and television and at Coffee Houses and Colleges in the midwest and on the East Coast.



Would you be willing to share a couple of hours of your time on Thanksgiving day? We need your help in making this day a little less lonesome for our nursing home residents. We need your help in making their Thanksgiving dinner a little more joyous.

If you have nothing special planned for the holiday, and you would be willing to give us a hand please contact Sarah Ross, Activities Director, Birchwood Terrace Health Care, 43 Starr Farm Road, Burlington. The phone number is 863-6384.

Students Now Have Access To Files

(CPS) - College students now have complete access to all confidential school files kept on them, under the terms of a new federal law.

An amendment to the Education Act of 1965, sponsored by Conservative Sen. James Buckley of New York, gives college students access to their own files, including high school and college personal recommendations. For students who haven't reached 18, the same rights are transferred to their parents. The law goes into effect November 20.

The material open to student inspection includes everything in his or her record: identifying data; scores on standardized intelligence, achievement and aptitude tests; academic work completed; level of achievement, including grades and test results; health data; interest inventory results; health data; family background information; teacher or counselor ratings and observations and verified reports of "serious or recurrent" behavior patterns.

Requests to see the material must be honored within 45 days.

Students may then request a hearing to challenge the content of school records and to request deletion of "inaccurate, mis-leading, or otherwise inappropriate data contained therein."

The law furthermore forbids third parties - including most federal agencies - access to student records, unless the student has given written consent.

A school may lose its federal aid if it "permits the release" of personally identifiable records or files of students to anyone except: school officials and teachers "who have legitimate educational interests;" the officials of a school to which a student is transferring (if the student approves), and federal and state education officers if the records are necessary to audit and evaluate federally supported education programs.

Schools can also lose funds for failure to inform students of their rights concerning student records. HEW has set up an administrative office and a review board to investigate and settle complaints of violations.

The Buckley amendment has drawn shudders from most college administrators who envision bureaucratic overload and serious ethical and practical problems in regard to students' letters of recommendation.

"Letters of recommendation may tend to be worthless if faculty know that students may read them," commented Charles Whitlock, Dean of Harvard College. "There will be a tendency for them not to be as honest as they were previously," he said.

Stanford President Richard Lyman has written Sen. Buckley that his amendment is causing "considerable anxiety" among members of the American Association of Universities, noting that "obviously a personal recommendation is not likely to be candid if the writer knows it can by read by the subject."

Lobbyist John Morse, director of government relations for the American Council on Education, said the concerns for educators were multifold: "Should records written two or three years before the law was enacted be opened?" he asked, "considering the violation of privacy of the persons who in good faith wrote confidential reports. And what is an official file? Are notes of an interview made by a school's staff psychiatrist to be made available to a student?"

Morse said he feared that schools will probably have to rely more and more "on mathematical, objective, non-interpretable statistics - namely, grades and test scores."

Meanwhile, most schools have been reviewing their policies on record-keeping and are developing standards as to what should be in cumulative student folders in the first place. According to Higher Education Daily school administrators are being advised to "purge their cumulative files of materials which do not appropriately serve the student and the school."

Music Thing

by Michael Thurston

Barry Manilow

It's the old story of pop producer-composer turned performer, and working with a superb collection of ten tunes, seven of which are originals, Barry Manilow II updates the old story rather well. Ten hummable, commercially prime tunes, most of which are perfect single length, comprise an album that might do nothing more than catch ya walkin' down the street whistling one of its numbers. But isn't that the name of the game? A year ago Manilow was known primarily by those who worked with him. After working in New York's brutal music industry, Manilow decided to get his own act together. His first album, simply entitled Barry Manilow, certainly didn't set the world on fire. But it did receive a handful of good reviews, caught the ears of both friends and peers, and introduced Manilow to an avid college audience, both through print media, and college radio. The purpose of Barry Manilow II is simple. Broaden that base of followers, hit Top 40 country, and make some money. Nothing so unusual about that. Manilow's frankness about wanting to make it is refreshing, and is reinforced by every tune on the new album. Each song has been perfected, each shines as a totally finished product. Not one piece of filler... something that few albums can boast.

Each track on Manilow II is distinctive and good. The best include Something's Comin' Up, a jazz-pop tune that resembles some of the more recent Brian Auger/Oblivion Express material. Auger, on his Straight Ahead and Closer To It their textbooks to stress Yankee cowardice and dishonesty. A sample problem in a mathematics book:

(continued on page seven)

...Is History Relevant

(continued from page five)

"A Yankee mixes a certain number of wooden nutmegs, which cost him a quarter cent a piece, with a quantity of real nutmegs worth four cents a piece, and sells the whole assortment for $4, and gains $3.75 by the fraud. How many wooden pegs were there?"

Legends help people to achieve a common identity, but when legends harden into national myths about imaginary past glories, a civilization is in danger of evading its real self. For this reason, the history teacher faces problems; the more accurate his or her teaching is, the more likely it is to incur challenge. Textbooks are little comfort. A publisher will seldom retain a textbook, no matter what its scholarly merits, when influential interests oppose it. In 1939 the editor-in-chief of a publishing firm traveled 300 miles to the Washington headquarters of a patriotic organization to obtain evaluations of his firm's textbooks that the organization's national defense committee found "unsatisfactory":

*A geography because it stressed the economic "interdependence" of the world's people.

*An American history for being "deferential to the power of labor and to labor unions."

*A songbook because it contained "selections from the faith of the Jew, the Negro, the Mormons, and the Catholics" without anywhere "proclaiming the deity of Christ and His saving Grace."

*A world history, among other things, for referring to America as a "Melting pot of many people from many lands."

Mark Twain's reputed advice, "Get your facts and then you can distort them as you please," might almost be refashioned into an injunction to those training to be history teachers, "Get your facts first, and then the public can make you distort them all it pleases."

A final problem for the academic historian is the uneasy relationship between history and literature. The gap between historical and literary scholarship may be more unbridgeable than Alfred A. Knopf thought when he appeared before the American Historical Association during the 1950's to upbraid academic historians for their writing. Ought the historian to discard accuracy, as did Macaulay and Froude in the 19th century and Allen Nevins and John Dos Passos in the 20th in order to write history that will gain applause for it's journalistic or literary qualities?" "To clothe the story of human society in a literary dress," answered scientific historian J.B.Bury, "is no more the part of a historian as a historian than it is the part of an astronomer to present in artistic shape the story to the stars."

Faced with the above obstacles, how shall we revitalize history as an academic discipline? One conclusion is inescapable. Too many words have been spilled about the so-called "irrelevance" of a discipline that offers guidelines to the problems of the present by exposing errors of the past. The crisis of our generation makes the role of the historian more important than ever. The citizen without history is like the sleepwalker who awakens the next day to discover around him the unfamiliar consequences of what he has done in his sleep.

As one historian who voted during the turbulent 1960's to discard his institution's graduation requirement in history, I am not advocating a return to the old order. What I advocate is that university administrators and their colleagues in the various academic departments begin now to show a willingness to have departments of history receive the financial and moral support which they must have if a new wasteland of ignorance of the human condition is to be avoided. William Armstrong, chairman of the department of social sciences at Clarkson College of Technology, has written for many historical journals.

CLASSIFIED

Snow is almost here. K2 Winter Hosts 200cm. Brand new, still in factory wrapper. In store $190, Must sell $119. Dave, 402 Marsh x2908

Accoustical Guitar by Giannini brand new. Includes crushproof case, bought one week ago for $210. Make an offer. Call Steve, at 656-4248, or write Box 459, Living Learning Center.

Have a broken leg and need rides to campus till end of the semester from the Marble Ave. area. My classes start at 9 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and at 8 a.m. on Thursday. Please call Katherine Worden at 863-5090.

Lost: my favorite hat. Red wool with blue moose(?) 'around it. Please, please call me if you have found it or know who has. I lost it around L/L and Harris-Millis. Thanks, Barbara 862-4175.

Snow tires for sale. 2 B 78-13 belted snow tires excellent condition. Only 4,000 miles on each tire. $32.50 for the pair. Call: Patrick Taves, 656-4290.

For sale: Brand new (never used) tire chains fit most 14 and 15 inch tires cost $22 new - I'm selling for $14. Call: 656-4290, Patrick Taves.

For Sale: 1970 Maverick. $250 - frozen pistons, good running until pistons froze. Call 899-3232 George.

Ride available to Alaska: $150 to cover expenses. Leaving Jan. 3 Call 862-1522 evenings.

For sale: ski outfit. Kade skis, marker + Nevada Bind. Buckle boots, Head poles, plus spare pair. Ski cover, ski rack, a good A + T. $50 takes all. Rubin: 862-4624.

Roommate Wanted to rent furnished house. $100/month plus utilities. Own bedroom, washer, dryer, large driveway. Non smoker. Win Southworth, 309 White St. Phone (658-0474). Available Dec. 1st.

Drums for sale: Rogers: snare, bass, tom, floor tom, and cymbals, high hat. 2 sets skis: rossignol heavy's regal tipped silhouettes. Wood finish selling $300. R. Freidman, 26 Lafayette Pl, 658-4080.

Wanted: a pair of ice hockey skates about size 10½-11. Call Eddy at 425-2055 (evenings).

Lost: blue Folder containing English papers very important, please call Daryl x4251.

Room for Rent: $75 plus utilities. Large house, kitchen privileges, 10 min. walk to campus. Call 863-3374.

Hang Gliders get Higher! Lessons, kits, parts, plans. Information Kites by Sky Sports, Seagull, Eipo Permasoar (Quicksilver) from $210. Green Mt. Sky Sports, Box 168-A, Newbury, Vt. 603-992-3991 Week. 603- 787-6316 weekends.

royal Christy

BURLINGTON'S ONLY SKI EQUIPMENT SPECIALISTS

DYNAMIC

ATOMIC

dynastar

OLIN SKIS

Recognize these names? These are the skis that Royal Christy specialists feel will make all the difference in the way you ski this winter. There are so many brands on the market today, we felt it necessary to bring you only those skis we feel will be best for you! Beginner and expert alike will find the best skis available at the most reasonable price available at the Royal Christy... for the kind of skiing you'll do here in Vermont. Demonstrators are available at the Royal Christy, we're specialists... we know the technology behind these skis... come in and talk to us about your skiing... we can help you!

ALL NEW SKIS ARE PRE-TUNED ON OUR SKI TUNER:
EDGES SHARPENED, BOTTOMS FLATTENED, WAX APPLIED . . . FOR TOP PERFORMANCE!

REFINISH YOUR SKIS — NOW!
ski tuner $7.00
AN INCREDIBLE MACHINE THAT REFINISHES SKIS WITH A PRECISION THAT RIVALS ANY FACTORY JOB.

IF SHORT SKIS ARE YOUR STYLE — WE'VE GOT THE BEST, FROM BEGINNERS TO HOT DOGGERS

royal Christy

WITHIN THE SKI SHOP
388 SHELBURNE RD., BURL.
862-7472

2-Year Nursing Director Tries To Reverse Decisio

by Randy Jansen

The two-year nursing program has been recommended by the administration to be eliminated in the wave of cuts to ease the financial situation of UVM. The director of the two-year nursing program, Dr. Virginia Allen, and the faculty are upset and they are doing everything they can do to reverse the administration's decision.

Dr. Allen can "appreciate the magnitude of the financial situation at UVM", but she hopes she can reverse the recommendation. "Of course we're disappointed by it." Dr. Allen was not directly involved in the decision to drop the program, but Dr. Jean Milligan, director of Nursing participated. However, neither Dr. Milligan or Dr. Allen supported the decision to drop it.

Vermonters are benefited in many ways by the nursing program, says Dr. Allen. She pointed out that 90 percent of the students are from Vermont and over one-third reside in the state and practice. The two-year program also aids the student who is financially unable to attend the four-year nursing program, she said.

Allen also stated that a student who has interrupted his/her education can find career goals in the two-year nursing program. She stressed that Vermonters "receive nursing care from people trained in a quality program and are motivated to give quality care." A faculty member added that two year nursing provides "career" mobility and involves students who are tied to the area and thereby are encouraged to practice in Vermont.

The effects of the elimination of the two-year program, says Dr. Allen, will be long term. She notes that the health and nursing needs of Vermont will be affected when UVM no longer graduates 50 two-year nurses every year.

Commented Dr. Allen, "The impact will be felt two to three years from now."

To the best of her knowledge, Dr. Allen says that every graduate who wanted a job has one. The majority are in nursing homes and hospitals. She states that "41 graduates are at the Medical Center now." According to Dr. Allen, two-year nurses provide "Direct care" for medical institutions.

Dr. Allen and her faculty are contacting many groups to support their efforts to save the program. "At this point, all of us are doing everything in our power so that they (the administration) will reverse the decision. She mentioned that the Vermont State Medical Society has urged UVM to reverse its decision. National and regional medical groups have been contacted for support including the New England Council of Higher Nursing, the Vermont State Association of Nursing, the National League of Nursing, and other medical associations.

Dr. Allen and the faculty have also contacted the board members in order to present their views. Students are also involved writing letters to their legislatures and graduated students. "We are involving those people who are concerned and those people who are affected," commented a faculty member. Dr. Allen also added, "... I am working on the premise that we will reverse the recommendations."

The faculty offered more of their viewpoints. Said one, emphasing the quality of the program, "As the faculty we see as one of our goals to continue the program as before." And the added, "much of our energy will be directed and continue to be directed" to "whatever the decisi

Another faculty saw a need for planning in higher The community must decide its ne you see a quality pr cut, you're confron magnitude of the pr said.

She concluded question that will many:

"What is the pu university?"

Women Ga

by Kathy St

In an age discrimination aga continues to be prev are discovering opportunity offer Military. This is t that women have be as full fledged me ROTC program, response has been There are 27 fema of whom are freshm

What are wome in this area? Wh involving theme military studies Major Safford, wo advisor, emphe economics of th "While other orga lip service to the opportunity, the equality in fact," graduate of the R is guaranteed a Second Lieu commissioned off are treated exact The only imp distinction betwe sexes occurs as federal law prohi from being com combat arms. Ho their attendance camp," a requir ROTC program, able to fire weapo

The women ROTC have star military organiza and Gold, whic development of drill and leaders Green and Gold Capers, which that it repres branch of organization.

Governing Board Presents Saturday Night Roundhouse

Billings Center Governing Board in conjunction with Phido Records of North Ferrisburg, Vermont is beginning a new Saturday Night Roundhouse series. It will be in the North Den at Billings starting Saturday Nov. 23, at 8:30 p.m. The Governing Board feels that there is a need for alternate activities on Saturday nights and hopefully there will be support of the students to make it a success. It is on a trial basis and hopefully it will become a tradition, like Friday night roundhouse.

The artists will be professionals in the area recording. The Saturday Night Roundhouse is an attempt by the Governing Board to use a previously untapped resource. All of this has been made possible through the help and financial assistance of the S.A. Concert Bureau.

The artist appearing this week will be Jim Brewer. He knows folk songs, blues, play party songs, country and western songs, religious songs and some Jimmie Rodgers numbers. He represents a cross-section of the musical culture of several generations from Mississippi to Chicago.

Jim was born in Brookhaven, Mississippi. He lost most of his sight at an early age, and started to play the piano. He moved to Chicago and played in the streets. In the late '40's he played on Maxwell Street. He left in the early '50's for St. Louis and settled there for 3 years. He played on streetcars, in taverns and on the streets. He played in the outdoor market area, singing religious songs and the blues. Soon he had scheduled a concert at Northwestern University. At that point he became interested in coffee houses. In 1970, Jim played at the Philadelphia Folk Festival. Since then he has played on the radio and television and at Coffee Houses and Colleges in the midwest and on the East Coast.

Would you be willing to share a couple of hours of your time on Thanksgiving day? We need your help in making this day a little less lonesome for our nursing home residents. We need your help in making their Thanksgiving dinner a little more joyous.

If you have nothing special planned for the holiday, and you would be willing to give us a hand please contact Sarah Ross, Activities Director, Birchwood Terrace Health Care, 43 Starr Farm Road, Burlington. The phone number is 863-6384.

Students Now Have Access To Files

(CPS) - College students now have complete access to all confidential school files kept on them, under the terms of a new federal law.

An amendment to the Education Act of 1965, sponsored by Conservative Sen. James Buckley of New York, gives college students access to their own files, including high school and college personal recommendations. For students who haven't reached 18, the same rights are transferred to their parents. The law goes into effect November 20.

The material open to student inspection includes everything in his or her record: identifying data; scores on standardized intelligence, achievement and aptitude tests; academic work completed; level of achievement, including grades and test results; health data; interest inventory results; health data; family background information; teacher or counselor ratings and observations and verified reports of "serious or recurrent" behavior patterns.

Requests to see the material must be honored within 45 days.

Students may then request a hearing to challenge the content of school records and to request deletion of "inaccurate, mis-leading, or otherwise inappropriate data contained therein."

The law furthermore forbids third parties - including most federal agencies - access to student records, unless the student has given written consent.

A school may lose its federal aid if it "permits the release" of personally identifiable records or files of students to anyone except: school officials and teachers "who have legitimate educational interests;" the officials of a school to which a student is transferring (if the student approves), and federal and state education officers if the records are necessary to audit and evaluate federally supported education programs.

Schools can also lose funds for failure to inform students of their rights concerning student records. HEW has set up an administrative office and a review board to investigate and settle complaints of violations.

The Buckley amendment has drawn shudders from most college administrators who envision bureaucratic overload and serious ethical and practical problems in regard to students' letters of recommendation.

"Letters of recommendation may tend to be worthless if faculty know that students may read them," commented Charles Whitlock, Dean of Harvard College. "There will be a tendency for them not to be as honest as they were previously," he said.

Stanford President Richard Lyman has written Sen. Buckley that his amendment is causing "considerable anxiety" among members of the American Association of Universities, noting that "obviously a personal recommendation is not likely to be candid if the writer knows it can by read by the subject."

Lobbyist John Morse, director of government relations for the American Council on Education, said the concerns for educators were multifold: "Should records written two or three years before the law was enacted be opened?" he asked, "considering the violation of privacy of the persons who in good faith wrote confidential reports. And what is an official file? Are notes of an interview made by a school's staff psychiatrist to be made available to a student?"

Morse said he feared that schools will probably have to rely more and more "on mathmatical, objective, non-interpretable statistics - namely, grades and test scores."

Meanwhile, most schools have been reviewing their policies on record-keeping and are developing standards as to what should be in cumulative student folders in the first place. According to Higher Education Daily school administrators are being advised to "purge their cumulative files of materials which do not appropriately serve the student and the school."

Music Thing

by Michael Thurston

Barry Manilow

It's the old story of pop producer-composer turned performer, and working with a superb collection of ten tunes, seven of which are originals, Barry Manilow II updates the old story rather well. Ten hummable, commercially prime tunes, most of which are perfect single length, comprise an album that might do nothing more than catch ya walkin' down the street whistling one of its numbers. But isn't that the name of the game? A year ago Manilow was known primarily by those who worked with him. After working in New York's brutal music industry, Manilow decided to get his own act together. His first album, simply entitled Barry Manilow, certainly didn't set the world on fire. But it did receive a handful of good reviews, caught the ears of both friends and peers, and introduced Manilow to an avid college audience, both through print media, and college radio. The purpose of Barry Manilow II is simple. Broaden that base of followers, hit Top 40 country, and make some money. Nothing so unusual about that. Manilow's frankness about wanting to make it is refreshing, and is reinforced by every tune on the new album. Each song has been perfected, each shines as a totally finished product. Not one piece of filler... something that few albums can boast.

Each track on Manilow II is distinctive and good. The best include Something's Comin' Up, a "jazz-pop" tune that resembles some of the more recent Brian Auger/Oblivion Express material. Auger, on his Straight Ahead and Closer To It their textbooks to stress Yankee cowardice and dishonesty. A sample problem in a mathematics book:

(continued on page seven)

...Is History Relevant

(continued from page five)

"A Yankee mixes a certain number of wooden nutmegs, which cost him a quarter cent a piece, with a quantity of real nutmegs worth four cents a piece, and sells the whole assortment for $4, and gains $3.75 by the fraud. How many wooden pegs were there?"

Legends help people to achieve a common identity, but when legends harden into national myths about imaginary past glories, a civilization is in danger of eroding its real self. For this reason, the history teacher faces problems; the more accurate his or her teaching is, the more likely it is to incur challenge. Textbooks are little comfort. A publisher will seldom retain a textbook, no matter what its scholarly merits, when influential interests oppose it. In 1959 the editor-in-chief of a publishing firm traveled 300 miles to the Washington headquarters of a patriotic organization to obtain evaluations of his firm's textbooks that the organization's national defense committee found "unsatisfactory":

- A geography because it stressed the economic "interdependence" of the world's people.
- An American history for being "deferential to the power of labor and to labor unions."
- A songbook because it contained "selections from the faith of the Jew, the Negro, the Mormons, and the Catholics" without anywhere "proclaiming the deity of Christ and His saving Grace."
- A world history, among other things, for referring to America as a "Melting pot of many people from many lands."

Mark Twain's reputed advice, "Get your facts and then you can distort them as you please," might almost be refashioned into an injunction to those training to be history teachers, "Get your facts first, and then the public can make you distort them all it pleases."

A final problem for the academic historian is the uneasy relationship between history and literature. The gap between historical and literary scholarship may be more unbridgeable than Alfred A. Knopf thought when he appeared before the American Historical Association during the 1950's to upbraid academic historians for their writing. Ought the historian to discard accuracy, as did Macaulay and Froude in the 19th century and Allen Nevins and John Dos Passos in the 20th in order to write history that will gain applause for it's journalistic or literary qualities?" "To clothe the story of human society in a literary dress," answered scientific historian J.B. Bury, "is no more the part of a historian as a historian than it is the part of an astronomer to present in artistic shape the story to the stars."

Faced with the above obstacles, how shall we revitalize history as an academic discipline? One conclusion is inescapable. Too many words have been spilled about the so-called "irrelevance" of a discipline that offers guidelines to the problems of the present by exposing errors of the past. The crisis of our generation makes the role of the historian more important than ever. The citizen without history is like the sleepwalker who awakens the next day to discover around him the unfamiliar consequences of what he has done in his sleep.

As one historian who voted during the turbulent 1960's to discard his institution's graduation requirement in history, I am not advocating a return to the old order. What I advocate is that university administrators and their colleagues in the various academic departments begin now to show a willingness to have departments of history receive the financial and moral support which they must have if a new wasteland of ignorance of the human condition is to be avoided. William Armarong, chairman of the department of social sciences at Clarkson College of Technology, has written for many historical journals.

CLASSIFIED

Snow is almost here. K2 Winter Hosts 200cm. Brand new, still in factory wrapper. In store $180, Must sell $119. Dave, 402 Marsh x2908

Acoustical Guitar by Giannini brand new. Includes crushproof case, bought one week ago for $210. Make an offer. Call Steve, at 656-4249, or write Box 459, Living Learning Center.

Have a broken leg and need rides to campus till end of the semester from the Marble Ave. area. My classes start at 9 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and at 8 a.m. on Thursday. Please call Katherine Worden at 863-5890.

Lost: my favorite hat. Red wool with blue moose (?) around it. Please, please call me if you have found it or know who has. I lost it around L/L and Harris-Millis. Thanks, Barbara 862-4175.

Snow tires for sale. 2 B 78-13 belted snow tires excellent condition. Only 4,000 miles on each tire. $32.50 for the pair. Call: Patrick Taves, 656-4280.

For sale: Brand new (never used) tire chains fit most 14 and 15 inch tires cost $22 new - I'm selling for $14. Call: 656-4260, Patrick Taves.

For Sale: 1970 Maverick. $250 - frozen pistons, good running until pistons froze. Call 899-3232 George.

Ride available to Alaska: $100 to cover expenses. Leaving Jan. 3 Call 862-1522 evenings.

For sale: ski outfit. Kade skis, marker + Nevada Bind. Buckle boots, Head poles, plus spare pair. Ski cover, ski rack, a good A + T. $50 takes all. Rubha: 862-4634.

Roommate Wanted to rent furnished house. $100/month plus utilities. Own bedroom, washer, dryer, large driveway. Non smoker. Wm Southworth, 308 White St. Phone: (658-0474). Available Dec. 1st.

Drums for sale: Rogers: snare, bass, tom, floor tom, and cymbals, high hat. 2 sets stix: rebosis heavy's regal tipped silhouettes. Wood finish selling $300. R. Freidman, 26 Lafayette Pl, 658-4060.

Wanted: a pair of ice hockey skates about size 10½-11. Call Eddy at 425-2955 (evenings).

Lost: blue Folder containing English papers- very important. please call Daryl x4261.

Room for Rent: $75 plus utilities. Large house, kitchen privilege, 10 min. walk to campus. Call 862-3278.

Hang Gliders get Higher! Lessons, kits, parts, plans. Information Kites by Sky-Sports, Seagull, Eipper-Formance (Quicksilver) from $210. Green Mt. Sky Sports, Box 188-A, Newbury, VT. 802-862-3964 Week. 869- 767-6316

royal Christy

BURLINGTON'S ONLY SKI EQUIPMENT SPECIALISTS

DYNAMIC

ATOMIC

dynastar

OLIN SKIS

Recognize these names? These are the skis that Royal Christy specialists feel will make all the difference in the way you ski this winter. There are so many brands on the market today, we felt it necessary to bring you only those skis we feel will be best for you! Beginner and expert alike will find the best skis available at the most reasonable price available at the Royal Christy... for the kind of skiing you'll do here in Vermont. Demonstrators are available at the Royal Christy, we're specialists... we know the technology behind these skis... come in and talk to us about your skiing.. we can help you!

ALL NEW SKIS ARE PRE-TUNED ON OUR SKI TUNER:
EDGES SHARPENED, BOTTOMS FLATTENED, WAX APPLIED . . . FOR TOP PERFORMANCE!

REFINISH YOUR SKIS — NOW!
ski tuner $7.00
AN INCREDIBLE MACHINE THAT REFINISHES SKIS WITH A PRECISION THAT RIVALS ANY FACTORY JOB.

IF SHORT SKIS ARE YOUR STYLE — WE'VE GOT THE BEST, FROM BEGINNERS TO HOT DOGGERS

royal Christy

WITHIN THE SKI SHOP
388 SHELBURNE RD., BURL.
862-7472

WOLFSCHMIDT SCHMILE #188-THE LIBERATED MAN

Start something with Wolfschmidt.

A vodka and tonic, a martini, a bloody mary, a screwdriver. Or anything else you have in mind.

Wolfschmidt Genuine Vodka

$3.40

FIFTH SIZE—CODE #8122

VODKA - DISTILLED FROM GRAIN - 80 AND 100 PROOF - SEAGRAM DISTILLERS CO., NEW YORK, N.Y.

2-Year Nursing Director Tries To Reverse Decisio

by Randy Jerison

The two-year nursing program has been recommended by the administration to be eliminated in the wave of cuts to ease the financial situation of UVM. The director of the two-year nursing program, Dr. Virginia Allen, and the faculty are upset and they are doing everything they can do to reverse the administration's decision.

Dr. Allen can "appreciate the magnitude of the financial situation at UVM", but she hopes she can reverse the recommendation. "Of course we're disappointed by it." Dr. Allen was not directly involved in the decision to drop the program, but Dr. Jean Milligan, director of Nursing participated. However, neither Dr. Milligan or Dr. Allen supported the decision to drop it.

Vermonters are benefited in many ways by the nursing program, says Dr. Allen. She pointed out that 90 percent of the students are from Vermont and over one-third reside in the state and practice. The two-year program also aids the student who is financially unable to attend the four-year nursing program, she said.

Allen also stated that a student who has interrupted his/her education can find career goals in the two-year nursing program. She stressed that Vermonters "receive nursing care from people trained in a quality program and are motivated to give quality care." A faculty member added that two year nursing provides "career" mobility and involves students who are tied to the area and thereby are encouraged to practice in Vermont.

The effects of the elimination of the two-year program, says Dr. Allen, will be long term. She notes that the health and nursing needs of Vermont will be affected when UVM no longer graduates 50 two-year nurses every year.

Commented Dr. Allen, "The impact will be felt two to three years from now."

To the best of her knowledge, Dr. Allen says that every graduate who wanted a job has one. The majority are in nursing homes and hospitals. She states that "41 graduates are at the Medical Center now." According to Dr. Allen, two-year nurses provide "Direct care" for medical institutions.

Dr. Allen and her faculty are contacting many groups to support their efforts to save the program. "At this point, all of us are doing everything in our power so that they (the administration) will reverse the decision. She mentioned that the Vermont State Medical Society has urged UVM to reverse its decision. National and regional medical groups have been contacted for support including the New England Council of Higher Nursing, the Vermont State Association of Nursing, the National League of Nursing, and other medical associations.

Dr. Allen and the faculty have also contacted the board members in order to present their views. Students are also involved writing letters to their legislatures and graduated students. "We are involving those people who are concerned and those people who are affected," commented a faculty member. Dr. Allen also added, "... I am working on the premise that we will reverse the recommendations."

The faculty offered more of their viewpoints. Said one, emphasing the quality of the program, "As the faculty we see as one of our goals to continue the program as before." And she added, "much of our energy will be directed and continue to be directed" to quantity "whatever the decisio

Another faculty saw a need for planning in higher The community, must decide its ne you see a quality pro eul, you're confron magnitude of the pr wed.

She concluded question that will many:

"What is the pu university?"

Women Ga

by Kathy St

In an age discrimination agai continues to be prev are discovering opportunity offer Military. This is t that women have be as full fledged me ROTC program, response has been There are 27 fema of whom are freshm

What are wome in this area? Wi involving theme military studies a Major Safford, wo advisor, emphas economics of th "While other orga -lip service to the opportunity, the s equality in fact," graduate of the R is guaranteed a Second Lieu commissioned off are treated exact The only imp distinction betwe sexes occurs as federal law prohi from being com combat arms. No their attendance camp," a requir ROTC program, able to fire weapo

The women ROTC have star military organiza and Gold, whic development of drill and leaders Green and Gold Capers, which that it represe branch of organization.

story Relevant

...d from page five)

Yankee ...erdice and dishonesty. A-
...matics book
...certain number of wooden nutmegs,
...cent a piece, with a quantity of real
...a piece, and sells the whole assortment
...by the fraud. How many wooden pegs

...to achieve a common identity, but
...national myth about imaginary past
...danger of evading its real self. For this
...faces problems, the more accurate his
...more likely it is to incur challenge.
...fort. A publisher will seldom retain a
...its scholarly merits, when influential
...59 the editor-in-chief of a publishing
...to the Washington headquarters of a
...obtain evaluations of his firm's
...ration's national defense committee

...cause it stressed the economic
...world's people.
...for being "deferential to the power of
..."
...It contained "selections from the faith
...Mormons, and the Catholics" without
...the deity of Christ and His saving

...among other things, for referring to
...of many people from many lands."

...advice, "Get your facts and then you
...please," might almost be refashioned
...training to be history teachers, "Get
...the public can make you distort them

...the academic historian is the uneasy
...ory and literature. The gap between
...olarship may be more unbridgeable
...ought when he appeared before the
...tation during the 1950's to upbraid
...their writing. Ought the historian to ... Macaulay and Froude in the 19th
...and John Dos Passos in the 20th in
...will gain applause for it? Journalistic ...clothe the story of human society in a
...scientific historian J.B.Bury, "is no
...n as a historian than it is the part of an
...tistic shape the story to the stars."

...obstacles, how shall we revitalize
...discipline? One conclusion is
...words have been spilled about the ...discipline that offers guidelines to the ...exposing errors of the past. The crisis
...role of the historian more important
...thout history is like the sleepwalker
...to discover around him the unfamiliar
...be done in his sleep.

...voted during the turbulent 1960's to
...aduation requirement in history, I am
...the old order. What I advocate is that
... and their colleagues in the various
...n now to show a willingness to have
...eive the financial and moral support
...a new wasteland of ignorance of the ...avoided. William Armstrong, chairman
...cial sciences at Clarkson College of
...r many historical journals.

2-Year Nursing Director Tries To Reverse Decision

by Randy Jensen

The two-year nursing program has been recommended by the administration to be eliminated in the wave of cuts to ease the financial situation of UVM. The director of the two-year nursing program, Dr. Virginia Allen, and the faculty are upset and they are doing everything they can do to reverse the administration's decision.

Dr. Allen can "appreciate the magnitude of the financial situation at UVM", but she hopes she can reverse the recommendation. "Of course we're disappointed by it." Dr. Allen was not directly involved in the decision to drop the program, but Dr. Jean Milligan, director of Nursing participated. However, neither Dr. Milligan or Dr. Allen supported the decision to drop it.

Vermonters are benefited in many ways by the nursing program, says Dr. Allen. She pointed out that 90 percent of the students are from Vermont and over one-third reside in the state and practice. The two-year program also aids the student who is financially unable to attend the four-year nursing program, she said.

Allen also stated that a student who has interrupted his/her education can find career goals in the two-year nursing program. She stressed that Vermonters "receive nursing care from people trained in a quality program and are motivated to give quality care." A faculty member added that two year nursing provides "career" mobility and involves students who are tied to the area and thereby are encouraged to practice in Vermont.

The effects of the elimination of the two-year program, says Dr. Allen, will be long term. She notes that the health and nursing needs of Vermont will be affected when UVM no longer graduates 50 two-year nurses every year.

Commented Dr. Allen, "The impact will be felt two to three years from now."

To the best of her knowledge, Dr. Allen says that every graduate who wanted a job has one. The majority are in nursing homes and hospitals. She states that "41 graduates are at the Medical Center now." According to Dr. Allen, two-year nurses provide "Direct care" for medical institutions.

Dr. Allen and her faculty are contacting many groups to support their efforts to save the program. "At this point, all of us are doing everything in our power so that they (the administration) will reverse the decision. She mentioned that the Vermont State Medical Society has urged UVM to reverse its decision. National and regional medical groups have been contacted for support including the New England Council of Higher Nursing, the Vermont State Association of Nursing, the National League of Nursing, and other medical associations.

Dr. Allen and the faculty have also contacted the board members in order to present their views. Students are also involved writing letters to their legislatures and graduated students. "We are involving those people who are concerned and those people who are affected," commented a faculty member. Dr. Allen also added, "... I am working on the premise that we will reverse the recommendations."

The faculty offered more of their viewpoints. Said one, emphasing the quality of the program, "As the faculty we see as one of our goals to continue the program as before." And she added, "much of our energy will be directed and continues to be directed" to quality concerns, "whatever the decision."

Another faculty member saw a need for "statewide planning in higher education." The community, she added, must decide its needs. "When you see a quality program being cut, you're confronted by the magnitude of the problem," she said.

She concluded, asking a question that will be asked by many:

"What is the purpose of the university?"

VPIRG Charges State Transportation Board With Overspending On Unnecessary Roads

VPIRG Press Release

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group has criticized the state Transportation Advisory Board's highway plans, charging that many of the road projects selected by the Board are too costly and not needed.

Carl Bohlen, VPIRG'S student highway specialist, said that the TAB's priority list should be revised. He said that the Board should eliminate plans for I-93, a controversial four-lane road between western New Hampshire and I-91 in eastern Vermont, and shift the proposed highway emphasis from new construction to repair and refurbishing of existing roads.

The Transportation Advisory Board was established by the 1974 Legislature and was authorized to present to the 1975 Legislature a ten year transportation plan which included a priority list of highway projects.

VPIRG Director Scott Skinner emphasized that VPIRG is not opposed to good roads. "What we are against," he said "is all this money going into bigger-than-needed expensive construction." Skinner added that VPIRG backs road improvements over new road construction because such projects are cheaper and less environmentally damaging.

According to the VPIRG Director there are over 800 miles of road in Vermont that badly need road improvements. "If all the available money goes into a few very expensive projects there is going to be no money left over to do repairs that are very definitely needed," he said.

Skinner also said that it appeared to VPIRG's researchers that the TAB had been strongly influenced by the Vermont Highway Department in making its recommendations. Skinner said that the advice given to the TAB from the Highway Department was poor and that in one case, Highway Department Planner Arthur Gow actually misled the board.

Last summer VPIRG predicted that the Advisory Board's report would follow the wishes of the State Highway Department.

"The plan they have come up with vindicates what we said before," the VPIRG director said.

Women Gain Equality Through ROTC Membership

by Kathy Stiesani

In an age in which discrimination against women continues to be prevalent, many are discovering the equal opportunity offered by the Military. This is the first year that women have been accepted as full fledged members of the ROTC program, and the response has been astounding. There are 27 female cadets, 16 of whom are freshmen.

What are women looking for in this area? Why are they involving themselves with military studies and training? Major Safford, women's ROTC advisor, emphasized the economics of the situation. "While other organizations give lip service to the idea of equal opportunity, the army practices equality in fact," he said. Any graduate of the ROTC program is guaranteed a position as a Second Lieutenant. As commissioned officers, women are treated exactly like men. The only imposed career distinction between the two sexes occurs as a result of a federal law prohibiting women from being commissioned in combat arms. However, during their attendance at "summer camp," a requirement of the ROTC program, women will be able to fire weapons.

The women involved with ROTC have started their own military organization, the Green and Gold, which stresses the development of competence in drill and leadership skills. The Green and Gold evolved from Capers, which was limited in that it represented merely a branch of the men's organization. The Pershing Rifles. Though the two groups are now independent, there is interaction between them. Furthermore, members of the female organization are eligible to join The Pershing Rifles and vice versa for the men.

The addition of women to the program of military studies has contributed to the general upsurge of interest. People are also becoming aware of the economic ramifications, the advantages accruing even to those planning to pursue a civilian career field, who have had leadership and management training in the military. The department is anticipating 60 to 80 incoming freshmen, 30 per cent of whom will be women.

There have traditionally been tremendous misconceptions about ROTC. It has mistakenly identified with Main and World War II, and recently stigmatized as a result of the U.S. involvement in Viet Nam. Thus, the value of studying social, historical, diplomatic, and political issues from a military perspective has been underestimated.

Involvement with ROTC is an affiliation to a program, not a commitment to a department. During their first two years in the program, cadets have no military obligations, and they are only required to take two ROTC credits a semester. "Though the program is not for everybody, trying it is a way of keeping options open, giving oneself room to move," according to Major Stafford. Just recently the College of Arts and Sciences has joined the other colleges in recognizing ROTC as an accredited program. Thus, students from every college in the University have the option of taking ROTC courses whether or not they decide to affiliate with the program.

...Football Team, Band Seek Senate Support

(continued from page one)

disgruntled Senators.

Other Business

—There will be no meeting November 26.

—S.26, The new Student Association Policy on Student Organizations was passed.

—$250 was allocated to the United Way fund.

—S.A. clubs and organizations who have not handed in a current list of meeting.

—The "text-book" exchange will be set up after Thanksgiving in Billings Center.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, December 3.

officers to the S.A. office will be up for diarecognition next meeting.

—The new constitution will be up for discussion next

GOOD SHOT!

IRA Discusses Liquor License; Broomball Cross-Country & Bonfire

by Becky Block and Margo Shapiro

The IRA meeting came to order at 7:15 a.m. on Monday in the Harris-Millis Conference Room. The goals and objectives of IRA were discussed, which took up the greatest part of the meeting. They discussed obtaining a liquor license for UVM, IRA sponsored activities for Winter Week such as a broomball tournament, cross-country tour, and a bonfire at Redstone. IRA is also considering sponsoring 35 minute cartoons during the exam period in residence halls.

Ann Cassavant announced a new IRA accountability policy. All money allocated by IRA must be accompanied by a written statement of what the money will be used for, signature of an advisor or faculty member, and signature of a representative of IRA. It is hoped that this will give IRA greater control over its money.

Karen Fleishel, a member of the Student Task Force discussing proposed budget cuts with the administration, reported on the committee's meeting with Vice Presidents Rollins and Patterson. She said the initial consensus of the STF was to approve the cutting of the football team, but they opposed the dropping of many of the academic programs and faculty.

Bill Flanagan, chairman of the Oktoberfest committee, came to IRA with the news that they would get back $200 of their original $600 investment because their costs were much less than anticipated. He also proposed that next year's Oktoberfest be bigger and better. More help will be needed and he is looking for people now who will be interested in working for Oktoberfest next year.

The Breakfast Program for needy children in the Burlington area reported progress. There will be a receptacle for coupons at the coupon bank and MAT Store for any coupons people are willing to donate to the program. Also, on Dec. 4, at Living-Learning and Wright Dining Halls, there will be a special six-coupon dinner, the extra coupon will benefit the program.

A motion was passed that IRA give $169.00 for a free dance to be held on Dec. 8 at MAT. This dance will be cosponsored with SA. Spoonfeather will be playing.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:30 p.m.

UVM Debate Teams Score Big Tournament Win

The University of Vermont debate teams registered their first big tournament win of the season earlier last week in Detroit.

"Debate Days in Detroit" is an unusual tournament conducted by Wayne State University. Unlike the usual tournament held in one location in the classrooms of the University, "Debate Days in Detroit" is a tournament conducted in front of audiences throughout the metropolitan area of Detroit. Some 64 debates were held in front of high school groups, college students, business and professional clubs throughout the city. The University of Vermont were co-champions of the tournament on the basis of the negative team rating 2nd place, and the affirmative 3rd. They shared this championship with St. John's University of Jamaica, New York, who had the 1st place affirmative and the 4th place negative teams.

Each team in the tournament had 4 audience and 1 orthodox non- audience debate. In the audience debates, two judgments are rendered. One is by a critic judge, who is coach of one of the university teams. Audiences may register their Win or Loss by means of an Audience Shift of Opinion ballot. This ballot permits each member of the audience to register his opinion about the topic before the debate begins and then indicate his opinion after the debate is over. The team getting the most shifts of opinion is the winner of the audience ballot.

The University of Vermont affirmative team, consisting of Jeffrey Fernandez and Daniel Mulcahy, won 3 audience shift of opinion ballots, losing only 1; however, they won only 2 judge's ballots and lost 3. The Vermont negative team, consisting of William Tracy and Richard Hayes, won all 4 of their audience shift of opinion ballots and won 4 of the judge's ballots for an 8 Win/1 Loss record.

The topic of the year, "Resolved: That the powers of the presidency should be significantly curtailed," proved an interesting one for audience debates. The University of Vermont's affirmative team debates that area of the topic that whenever human rights are involved in a presidential decision, such as the commitment of troops, on foreign soil or the case of the Japanese internment, there should be a watch-dog committee from Congress to participate in that decision. Since the powers of the presidency are so numerous, there is a wide variety of cases that the various teams in the Detroit area chose to debate. Some argued the abolishment of the Central Intelligence Agency, some would curtail the powers of various other agencies or departments of the presidency, still others would curtail various of the actions of the presidency in handling economic affairs.

The next great effort of the University of Vermont debaters will be in their own tournament to be held this coming Friday night and all day Saturday, November 22 and 23, on the campus here in Burlington. Some 30 visiting schools will participate in 2 different divisions, those who are beginners, called novices, and then, the more experienced in a varsity division.

...Massive Budget Cuts

strongly protested the move to drop his program. He declared, "you (referring to the administration) have done a great injury to a lot of people."

At 6 p.m., after a few more questions and comments, the meeting was adjourned at the suggestion of Chairman Roth. The upset faculty and the weary administration rose, and left Carpenter Auditorium, talking about the proposed cuts.

The recommendations will go to the Trustees' meeting on Saturday, Dec. 6 for their decision. Andrews feels that the Trustees "reluctantly" support most of the cuts. He said, "I predict they will approve it."

(continued from page one)

THE BEST AND MOST COMPLETE SPORT SHOE SELECTION adidas Onitsuka Tiger ★converse
MILLS & GREER 10 DORSET ST. S. BURLINGTON NEXT TO EMS

REILLY TIRE COMPANY
FROM RECAPS TO RADIALS
WE HAVE IT
BE PSYCHED AND SET FOR THE SNOW!

ACCESSIBLE TO UVM
31 San Remo Drive
So. Burlington
ACCOMPANIED BY A COPY OF THIS AD

PLANTASIA
INDOOR PLANT SPECIALISTS
LANDSCAPING
107 ST PAUL STREET, BURLINGTON 658-4488

HILSON Home center
"Do-It-Yourself" HEADQUARTERS
SAVE up to 50%
CLOSING OUT ALL SKIS-BOOTS-BINDINGS

		HILSON'S PRICE
FISCHER GT ALPINE SKIS- 160-190 cm. Complete with Marker Rotomat Toe & Marker Simplex DL Heel	155"	77"
FISCHER GTX ALPINE SKIS with Marker Rotomat Toe and Marker Simplex Heel	165"	82"

FOR THE YOUNGSTERS

ALPHA SKIS complete with Saloman 101 Bindings	110-120cm.	88"	43"
ALPHA SKIS complete with Soloman 202 Bindings	130-140 cm.	99"	49"
GARCIA "Humanic 333" Ski Boots		55"	27"
TYROL Y317 Mens & Ladies Boots		38"	19"
TYROL Y302 Mens& Ladies Boots		34"	17"
TYROL Y301 Youth Boots		30"	15"

Limited Quanties- NOW is the time to SAVE (Installation of bindings extra)
QUANTITIES AND SIZES ARE LIMITED . . . THESE ARE CLOSEOUT PRICES
HILSON

RECORD SALE

STARTS NOV. 25

SCHWANN CATALOG LIST

2 RECORD SET $11.98 OUR PRICE $4.98 — 4 RECORD SET $23.98 OUR PRICE $8.98
3 RECORD SET $17.98 OUR PRICE $4.98 — 5 RECORD SET $29.98 OUR PRICE $9.98

THE CLASSICAL GUITAR—All the great masters including Andres Segovia, Montoya, Williams, DePlaza and many others—5 record set—
NOW ONLY $9.98

ANTHOLOGY OF FOLK MUSIC—including more than 50 pieces by Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, Rod McKuen, Leadbelly, John Lee Hooker, Lightnin' Hopkins and others—5 record set—
NOW ONLY $9.98

THE BEST OF THE BLUES—A superb collection featuring the re-mastered Bluesmen & Sonny, Ray Charles, Memphis Slim, Otis Spann, Big Bill Broonzy, Big Joe Williams and others—3 record set—
NOW ONLY $6.98

MY FAVORITE CHOPIN—HIS MOST FAMOUS WORKS: Piano Concerto No. 2, Op. 21, Piano Sonata No. 2, Op. 35, 5 Polonaises, Fantasie-Impromptu, 17 Waltzes, 6 Etudes, 3 Nocturnes and more—5 record set—featuring E. Richter, W. Klien, P. Frankl, I. Hobbler and other great pianists—
NOW ONLY $9.98

THE BEST OF MOZART—HIS MOST FAMOUS ORCHESTRAL WORKS: Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, Serenade Notturno, Overture to Magic Flute and Marriage of Figaro, Symphonies No. 31, 35, 38, 40 in G Minor, No. 41 Jupiter, Europe's finest orchestras represented—4 record set—
NOW ONLY $8.98

THE BEST OF JOHANN STRAUSS—His most famous waltzes and overtures, including Blue Danube, Gypsy Baron, The Emperor and twelve other favorites . . . featuring Edward Strauss and his Symphonic Orchestra—3 record set—
NOW ONLY $6.98

A TREASURY OF ORGAN CLASSICS—Bach, Toccata & Fugue in D Minor, 5 Choral Preludes, Pastorale in F Major, Fantasia in G Major, Prelude & Fugue in E & C featuring Walter Kraft, Mozart Sonata No. 4 for Organ, Helmuth Rilling, Organist plus many other favorite organ classics—5 record set—
NOW ONLY $9.98

THE CLASSICAL GUITAR—All the great masters including Andres Segovia, Montoya, Williams, DePlaza and many others—5 record set—
NOW ONLY $9.98

ANTHOLOGY OF FOLK MUSIC—including more than 50 pieces by Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, Rod McKuen, Leadbelly, John Lee Hooker, Lightnin' Hopkins and others—5 record set—
NOW ONLY $9.98

THE BEST OF THE BLUES—A superb collection featuring the re-mastered Bluesmen & Sonny, Ray Charles, Memphis Slim, Otis Spann, Big Bill Broonzy, Big Joe Williams and others—3 record set—
NOW ONLY $6.98

MY FAVORITE CHOPIN—HIS MOST FAMOUS WORKS: Piano Concerto No. 2, Op. 21, Piano Sonata No. 2, Op. 35, 5 Polonaises, Fantasie-Impromptu, 17 Waltzes, 6 Etudes, 3 Nocturnes and more—5 record set—featuring E. Richter, W. Klien, P. Frankl, I. Hobbler and other great pianists—
NOW ONLY $9.98

MEET THE CLASSICS

The life and works of the world's greatest composers, fully narrated with famous excerpts especially created for young people

Choose your favorite — collect the whole series!

Vivaldi & Corelli	Paganini	Schumann	Brahms
Bach	Rossini	Liszt	Tchaikovsky
Handel	Schubert	Wagner	Dvorak
Haydn	Berlioz	Verdi	Grieg
Mozart	Mendelssohn	Johann Strauss	Sousa
Beethoven	Chopin	Foster	Debussy

UNIVERSITY STORE

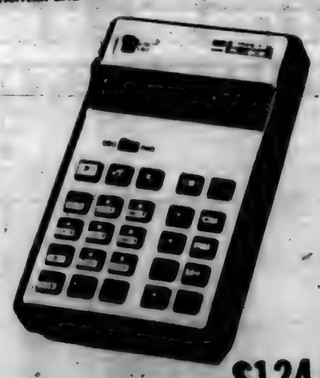
ON THE CAMPUS

SHARP'S PERSONAL POCKET COMPUTER

Performs 12 different scientific functions, including trigonometric, inverse trigonometric, logarithmic, exponential and more!

Now Available at the University Store

SHARP



$124.95

FEATURES:

- Four arithmetic calculations, memory calculation, constant addition (subtraction, multiplication and division), chain multiplication and division, power calculation.
  Repeat addition and subtraction, etc.
- Square root extraction:
  After setting numbers, operate (push) the [√] key.
- Trigonometric functions (sin x, cos x, tan x):
  After setting numbers, operate the [F] [sin] [cos] [tan] keys.
- Inverse trigonometric functions ($\sin^{-1}x$, $\cos^{-1}x$, $\tan^{-1}x$):
  After setting numbers, operate the [F] [sin] [cos] [tan] keys.
- Exponential function (e^x):
  After setting numbers, operate the [F] [ln] keys.
- Logarithmic functions (ln x, log x):
  After setting numbers, operate the [F] [log] [ln] keys.
- Reciprocal calculation: ($\frac{1}{x}$)
  After setting numbers, operate the [F] [1/x] keys.

DEG-RAD MODE SELECTOR

Setting	Description
"RAD"	Instructs the selected calculation of a trigonometric or inverse trigonometrical function to be done in the radian unit.
"DEG"	Instructs the selected calculation of a trigonometric or inverse trigonometrical function to be done in the degree unit.

EL-8002

FEATURES

- Easy-to-read zero suppress system
- Overflow error check device
- Easy-to-operate algebraic operation
- Convenient tax/discount calculation
- Automatic constant calculation
- Percentage calculation
- Chain multiplication & division
- Power calculation

SHARP

THE COMPANY THAT CREATED THE INDUSTRY

$39.95

OTHER MODELS IN STOCK

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by Arnold Werner M. D.

QUESTION: Recently, after sexual stimulation short of actual intercourse, I have suffered great discomfort in my lower abdomen and testicles. After several hours of rest, the pain disappears completely. There is no pain in the penis itself, just the surrounding area. This problem has only arisen recently.

What is the cause of the pain, and possible consequences, and what action would you suggest I take?

ANSWER: With sexual excitement there is increased production of various secretions which make up semen and increased blood flow to the entire genital area. The testicles have a firm and tough connective tissue layer which surrounds them but which does not stretch very much. Prolonged sexual stimulation that does not go on to orgasm eventually becomes painful because the swollen testes are trapped within the protective sac. The common, non-technical name for the phenomenon is "blue balls." Pain from the genital area often radiates to the lower abdomen.

While no exactly comparable situation exists in the woman, prolonged stimulation short of orgasm does result in vascular engorgement of the genital area which can take several hours to resolve and can also be quite uncomfortable.

I am unaware of any harmful lasting consequences from this painful occurence. The discomfort can be prevented by ejaculating before the pain begins or before it becomes severe. Ejaculation after the pain has been present for a while is much less effective in relieving the discomfort.

The recent onset of the problem leads me to think that your luck has recently taken a turn for the better or worse; it's hard to say without more data.

QUESTION: Over a year ago I discovered that I was allergic to nuts of any kind and pickles. Up until then the only allergy I suffered from was hay fever. So pickles and nuts are definitely out of my diet as they cause a horrible swelling of both lips and the swelling lasts for at least 24 hours, sometimes for as long as two and a half days.

Last winter I began to get hives whenever I became nervous, upset or overly tired. I've tried everything from changing soaps to medication but I still suffer from hives occasionally. I would like to see a doctor about these conditions, but my main question is do I go to an allergy specialist, a dermatologist, or a psychiatrist?

ANSWER: Your letter touches me in an area close to my heart. Contrary to Greek and Roman mythology, ambrosia was not the food of the gods, it was sour, kosher dill pickles. Pickles and nuts often tend to have a certain amount of fungus growing on them. They are safe for people who are not allergic, but some people do develop fungal allergies which could be what you are describing. Allergies develop after repeated exposure to the noxious agents so it is not surprising that the condition appeared after a long period of time when you had no trouble.

Skin problems when nervous, upset or tired are also common since the skin responds to emotional factors. For some people this can take the form of hives. People who have allergies and sensitive skin in general, may respond with skin flare-ups when under emotional stress.

I would suggest seeing an allergist first. If the hives are only an occasional occurrence I would be reluctant to recommend a prolonged course of psychotherapy, especially if in other ways you were doing well. It might be that at times of stress, a mild anti-anxiety medication or antihistamine would keep you or your skin calm enough to avoid the hives. But before such a decision is made, it would be wise to eliminate all physical causes of the problem.

If you are not really allergic to pickles or get cured from such an allergy, my mother's recipe for pickles follows: With the tines of a fork, puncture the ends of small and medium sized pickling cucumbers (they have better warts and don't go soft quickly) and pack them tightly into a quart mason jar. Also throw in four cloves of garlic and a stalk of fresh dill, stem and head. Fill the jar to the very top with hot brine made from three-fourths to one cup of kosher salt dissolved in four quarts of water. If you can't get kosher salt use any non-iodized salt but use less of it since it is finer. Seal the jars and keep them at room temperature. They are ready in a week to ten days but only last for a month or two. Refrigerate after opening.

Two English Folksingers To Visit Simpson

by Wayne Bayer

Two Englishwomen, Jacqui and Bridie, who run a folk club in Liverpool, England called "The New Coach House", will be making a surprise visit to the Simpson Hall Coffee House Thursday at 8:00 p.m. Jacqueline McDonald, former lead singer for the British group, "The Spinners", plays guitar. Birdie O'Donnel plays banjo.

Specializing in English ballads (some bawdy) and traditional music, Jacqui and Bridie are also quite familiar with contemporary British folk music. In addition to being fine singers and musicians they're entertainers — partially because one's short and Catholic and the other's tall and Protestant.

They've recorded seven albums in England and are in the states touring and making arrangements for their first American produced album.

Admission to tonight's folk concert will be $.75.

After Thanksgiving the Simpson Hall Coffee House will be sponsoring Martin "King of the Massachussetts Delta Blues Men" Grosswendt, t, Bodie Wagner and the "Arm and Hammer String Band". Check the Cynic and WRUV–FM and AM for more details and the exact dates on these upcoming folk concerts at Simpson Hall.

...Box Lacrosse Starts

(continued from page twelve)

won't be any injuries, when the ball hits the nets it is called out of bounds. In real box lacrosse the boards are used much the same way as in hockey and if the ball goes out of the rink the referee throws another one into the game so that there is no interruption of play.

So far the program has been very successful. Each team has played four games. The games have been on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 8:30 and 9:30 with all four teams playing each night. The schedule will conclude the week after Thanksgiving so as not to interfere with exams.

After Christmas vacation, minimum to insure that there practice will begin in preparation for the outdoor season in the spring. From mid January through February the practices will be two nights a week in the field house. Then in March, things will go into full swing with daily afternoon practices inside or outside depending on the weather. Coac' Canegrande is finalizing the spring schedule. Tentatively planned are thirteen games, several scrimmages and a trip during Spring break to Albany and Long Island. Plans are also being made to have a "B" squad schedule as well. Keep you eyes open for the LACROSSE CLUB BUMPER STICKERS COMING SOON!!!

S·A· Films Wind Down With Music And War

The schedule of SA Films is beginning to wind down for this semester, and very few films are scheduled for the next two weeks. However, there are two fine war films and one musical from which to choose.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in 101 Votey Judy Garland and Fred Astaire team up in Easter Parade. This 1948 Irving Berlin musical also stars Peter Lawford and Ann Miller and was nominated for several Academy Awards. A dancer, Astaire, is deserted by his partner for a Broadway role and bitterly declares that he can take any chorus girl and make her a star.

His job is easy when he happens to pick Judy Garland. Even though he wins his bet, it takes him quite a while to realize the girl is more than just a dancing partner to him. The film is in color.

On Monday, November 25, Sophia Loren and Jean-Paul Belmondo star in Two Women. This film was directed by Vittorio de Sica (who just died last week), the director of such films as The Bicycle Thief, Marriage Italian Style, and The Garden of the Finzi Continis.

Sophia Loren gives the finest performance of her life here; she won the Cannes Film Festival award and the Oscar for Best Actress (the only time an Academy Award has been given for a foreign language performance). The film is the story of a mother and daughter struggling to survive in Italy during World War II. The most memorable scene takes place as mother and daughter make their way to Rome. Enroute, both are brutally raped by Moroccan soldiers in the ruins of a bombed-out church. De Sica zooms in on the daughter's face, and holds the camera there during the rape. The shock and horror of the experience are powerfully expressed in this memorable shot. At the end she and her mother are united by a bond of grief and suffering. The film will be shown in 103 Rowell at 7:30 p.m.

The following Monday, December 2, Fredric March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Virginia Mayo, Hoagy Carmichael and Cathy O'Donnell all come together in The Best Years of Our Lives. One of the most honored films of all time, this movie won nine Academy Awards (including Best Picture, Actor, Director, Writer, and Supporting Actor), the New York Film Critics Award (for Best Picture and Director), and numerous international awards. Set in a post-war American city, it portrays the problems of veterans returning from war, centering around the frustrations and adjustments of three servicemen: Sgt. Al Stephenson (Fredric March), whose daughter has grown up during his absence; Fred Derry (Dana Andrews), whose wife has turned away from him; and Homer Parrish (Harold Russell), a young sailor who has lost his hands in combat. The showing will be in 103 Rowell at 7:30 p.m.

VALUABLE COUPON

SAVE SAVE

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY

ACROSS FROM The Medical Center

SAVE SAVE

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
Route 2, Williston, Vt. 863-7686

FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS

INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES

560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 95 and 96's
24.95 inc. FET & mounting

VW BRAKE JOB $49.95
Includes: 6 new brake linings, 4 turned drums, rebuilt 4 wheel cylinders.

VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.

Potter Kongsli demonstrates form.

News From T

EDITORS NOTE: This article continues the series competition is all about. This week we feature ski j of the nordic events. It is written by Potter Kongsli, jumper and one of the best competing at colleges if at the present time.

Some of you might not know that skiing is a 4 sport. Runic inscriptions in Norway show that the followed by the Vikings, were using skis as freque the bicycle today. By crossing this rugged mount Viking developed skills in covering large areas, and turn around trees, rocks, or other obstacles and ev ruts and bumps.

This later developed as the three events of skiing alpine and ski jumping. In last issue of the Cynic, y downhill skiing, now I will tell you what ski jumpin

It is the oldest competition event of the three early as the 1860's, some Norwegians started t knowledge and skills in how to "lift up in the through the air as a bird, land gently furth mountainside and end it all in a Telemark turn, cascade of snow", as newspapers reported back in

Well, times have changed and so has ski "bumps" they were bouncing off on have now gr structures designed after advanced engineering speed, curves and aerodynamic techniques.

A ski-flying hill is defined as a hill where a jum leap of at least 390 feet. The ramp he skis down the insid

by Barry Cohen

As many of you are well aware, the 1974- Basketball team opens its season December 2 With all five starters returning as well as a as women's the pre-season outlook is a most sun

Not only are there better players this seaso indeed more "players." Depth, always a key fa season of college basketball, will certainly be on Salzburg's assets. With the addition of 6'2" Mi transfer student from NCAA- Junior College Ch College, Vermont will gain an excellent shooter

Mark Cubit, a 6'1" freshman out of Pennsylvania, is a fine playmaker whose steadie impress the coaching staff. Kevin Kelly, a 6'7" Haden Township, New Jersey, and Mark Sob freshman from Syracuse, are both excellen rebounders whose presence will greatly improv offensively and defensively.

In addition to the newcomers are the return hungry for the first winning season in three y Joe Greco, Terry Green, Bernie Palmer, and C no tomorrow. For sophomore Warren P Trapani, Ron Gottshalk, and Jim Hargrave unusual, winning the accustomed.

But in addition to the material improvem there is also something being generated in practices. It is an enthusiasm, a youthful a winning. Perhaps this is the force that has bee past.

In a meeting earlier this year, teammate M "I hate to lose, man, I don't even know how t can't stand to lose even at that. I'll compete don't care who it is, when I'm out on the co business." Perhaps this best expressed the att every member of our team.

The entire campus grows more and mo Vermont basketball. The many who await in first home game December 4, against New H be disappointed.

Basketball Sche

University of Vermont 1974–75 Varsity Bask
December 2 – Monday at Dartmouth
December 4 – Wednesday, New Hampshire
December 7 – Saturday at Columbia
December 10 – Tuesday at Connecticut
December 11 – Wednesday at Norwich
December 30 – Monday at Virginia Tech
December 31 – Tuesday at Tennessee
January 3 – Friday, Lafayette Tourney
January 4 – Saturday (Easton, Pa)
January 9 – Thursday at Northeastern
January 10 – Friday at New Hampshire
January 14 – Tuesday, Massachusetts
January 17 – Friday, Maine
January 18 – Saturday, Maine
January 22 – Wednesday, St. Lawrence
January 25 – Saturday, Connecticut
January 27 – Monday at St. Michael's
January 31 – Friday at Rhode Island
February 1 – Saturday at St. Joseph's
February 5 – Wednesday, St. Michael's
February 11 – Tuesday at Middlebury
February 13 – Thursday at Boston University
February 18 – Tuesday at Massachusetts
February 22 – Saturday, Boston University
February 24 – Monday, Rhode Island
February 27 – Thursday at Siena

Werner M. D.

...ergic to pickles or get cured from such ...ecipe for pickles follows: With the times ...nds of small and medium sized pickling ...ther warts and don't go soft quickly) ...to a quart mason jar. Also throw in four ...s of fresh dill, stem and head. Fill the jar ...brine made from three fourths to one ...ed in four quarts of water. If you can't ...re-iodized salt but use less of it since it is ...ep them at room temperature. They are ...days but only last for a month or two.

...glish Folksingers ...isit Simpson

...Jacqui ...folk club ...called ...e", will ...t to the House ...p.m. ...former ...group, ...guitar, ...njo. ...English ...) and ...ul and ...familiar ...ish folk ...ing fine ...they're ...because ...and the other's tall and Protestant.

They've recorded seven albums in England and are in the states touring and making arrangements for their first American produced album.

Admission to tonight's folk concert will be $.75.

After Thanksgiving the Simpson Hall Coffee House will be sponsoring Martin "King of the Massachusetts Delta Blues Men" Grosswendt, ... Bodie Wagner and the "Arm and Hammer String Band". Check the Cynic and WRUV--FM and AM for more details and the exact dates on these upcoming folk concerts at Simpson Hall.

Lacrosse Starts

(twelve)

...e now the ...tled out ...lacrosse ...uch the ...nd if the ...rnk the ...one into ...re is no ...has been ...team has ...e games ...day and ...8:30 and ...s playing ...dule will ...k after ...not to ...vacation. ...hat there practice will begin in preparation for the outdoor season in the spring. From mid January through February the practices will be two nights a week in the field house. Then in March, things will go into full swing with daily afternoon practices inside or outside depending on the weather. Coach Casegrande is finalizing the spring schedule. Tentatively planned are thirteen games, several scrimmages and a trip during Spring break to Albany and Long Island. Plans are also being made to have a "B" squad schedule as well. Keep you eyes open for the LACROSSE CLUB BUMPER STICKERS COMING SOON!!!

...usic And War

...e Women, ...ected by ...just died ...e of such ...e Thief, ... and The ...Continis. ...the finest ...here, the ...n Festival ...for Best ...time an ...been given ...language performance). The film is the story of a mother and daughter struggling to survive in Italy during World War II. The most memorable scene takes place as mother and daughter make their way to Rome. Enroute, both are brutally raped by Moroccan soldiers in the ruins of a bombed-out church. De Sica zooms in on the daughter's face, and holds the camera there during the rape. The shock and horror of the experience are powerfully expressed in this memorable shot. At the end she and her mother are united by a bond of grief and suffering. The film will be shown in 103 Rowell at 7:30 p.m.

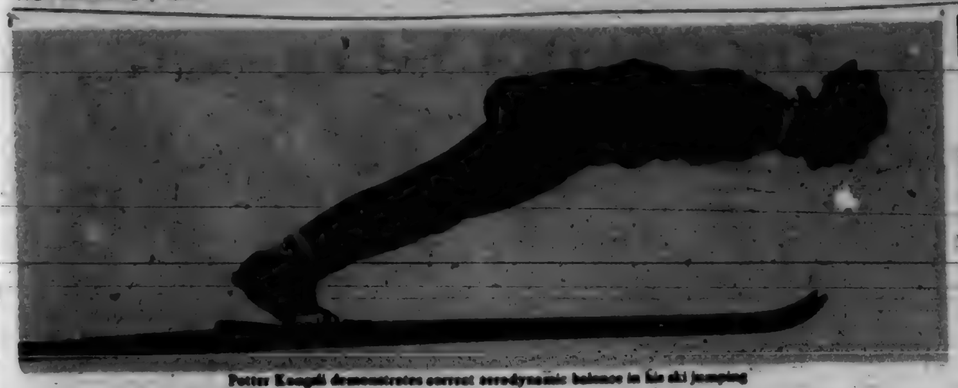
The following Monday, December 2, Fredric March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Virginia Mayo, Hoagy Carmichael and Cathy O'Donnell all come together in The Best Years of Our Lives. One of the most honored films of all time, this movie won nine Academy Awards (including best Picture, Actor, Director, Writer, and Supporting Actor), the New York Film Critics Award (for Best Picture and Director), and numerous international awards. Set in a post-war American city, it portrays the problems of veterans returning from war, centering around the frustrations and adjustments of three servicemen: Sgt. Al Stephenson (Fredric March), whose daughter has grown up during his absence; Fred Derry (Dana Andrews), whose wife has turned away from him; and Homer Parrish (Harold Russell), a young sailor who has lost his hands in combat. The showing will be in 103 Rowell at 7:30 p.m.

durham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.



Potter Kongdi demonstrates correct aerodynamic balance in his ski jumping form.

News From The Slopes: Ski Jumping

EDITORS NOTE: This article continues the series on what ski competition is all about. This week we feature ski jumping, one of the nordic events. It is written by Potter Kongdi, UVM's finest jumper and one of the best competing at colleges if not the world at the present time.

Some of you might not know that skiing is a 4,000 year old sport. Runic inscriptions in Norway show that the people there, followed by the Vikings, were using skis as frequently as we use the bicycle today. By crossing this rugged mountain land, the Viking developed skills in covering large areas, and on their way turn around trees, rocks, or other obstacles and even jump over ruts and bumps.

This later developed as the three events of skiing: X-country, alpine and ski jumping. In last issue of the Cynic, you read about downhill skiing, now I will tell you what ski jumping is about.

It is the oldest competition event of the three ski events. As early as the 1860's, some Norwegians started to spread their knowledge and skills in how to "lift up in the blue sky, fly through the air as a bird, land gently further down the mountainside and end it all in a Telemark turn, spraying up a cascade of snow", as newspapers reported back in the 1860's.

Well, times have changed and so has ski jumping. The "bumps" they were bouncing off on have now grown to gigantic structures designed after advanced engineering theories about speed, curves and aerodynamic techniques.

A ski- flying hill is defined as a hill where a jumper can make a leap of at least 390 feet. The ramp he skis down is an incline as steep as 40 degrees, where you accelerate to a speed of 70 miles per hour. The jumper takes off from the table, inclined down 10 degrees, into the air. The "take off" is the most critical part in ski jumping. The body reaction has to make him extend his body from a tuck position to a fully upright position, exactly on the edge of the take-off. An unaccuracy of plus or minus 1 foot is crucial. He then forms into the air-flight positon. As air-borne he can be as far as 50 feet off the ground - he then accelerates down the hill, still airborne, to a speed of 95 mph. The landing which is down on an incline of 41 degrees, after a 5 second flight, where the jumper has traveled 560 feet in the air (the longest jump ever done) gives a pressure- strain on the jumper of up to 1000 pounds.

His speed slows up as he goes through the transition and out to the horizontal plane after one of the largest thrills and wishes man ever had: to be flying over land through the air as a bird. "Crazy," you said. Yes, for a person not trained for this, it will be the shortest way to suicide there is. Therefore, no one that ski jumps in large hills as a ski flying hill has less than a 10 year experience in jumping off tiny bumps to the intermediate size hills. The skills in skijumping are developed over time and can only be taught properly to kids that start this exciting sport as young as 8 or 9 years of age. During his training time he must develop strength, speed, balance, and accuracy for physical abilities and over the years, he develops mental abilities to control his nerves to do the right reactions if he has difficulties at any part of his "time in action."

In competition the jumper is judged for his grace and given up to 20 points from 3 judges for a total of maximum 60 points. For the distance he also gets points all figured out from the longest jump of the day which is worth 60 points and less for the shorter jumps. From this you determine who is the "king of the hill" for the day. As you see it is a sport for people that like to see and do something different.

On behalf of the UVM Skiteam, as a captain, I would like to thank you for supporting our team. Hope to see you all on skis this winter.

the insider

by Barry Cohen

As many of you are well aware, the 1974-1975 Vermont Basketball team opens its season December 2 at Dartmouth. With all five starters returning as well as several talented newcomers the pre-season outlook is a most suspicious one.

Not only are there better players this season, but there are indeed more "players." Depth, always a key factor in the long season of college basketball, will certainly be one of Coach Peter Salzberg's assets. With the addition of 6'2" Mike Richbow, a transfer student from NCAA- Junior College Champion Mercer College, Vermont will gain an excellent shooter and team leader.

Mark Cubit, a 6'1" freshman out of Sharon Hill, Pennsylvania, is a fine playmaker whose steadiness continues to impress the coaching staff. Kevin Kelly, a 6'7" freshman from Haden Township, New Jersey, and Mark Sobolewski, a 6'4" freshman from Syracuse, are both excellent shooters and rebounders whose presence will greatly improve our depth both offensively and defensively.

In addition to the newcomers are the returning veterans, all hungry for the first winning season in three years. For seniors Joe Greco, Terry Green, Bernie Palmer, and this writer there is no tomorrow. For sophomores Warren Prehmus, Charlie Trapani, Ron Gottshalk, and Jim Hargreves, losing is the unusual, winning the accustomed.

But in addition to the material improvement in the team, there is also something being generated in the pre-season practices. It is an enthusiasm, a youthful and fresh zeal for winning. Perhaps this is the force that has been missing in years past.

In a meeting earlier this year, teammate Mike Richbow said, "I hate to lose, man, I don't even know how to play chess and I don't stand to lose even at, that. I'll compete against anyone, I don't care who it is, when I'm out on the court, I'm there for business." Perhaps this best expressed the attitude of each and every member of our team.

The entire campus grows more and more enthusiastic for Vermont basketball. The many who await in anticipation of the first home game December 4, against New Hampshire, will not be disappointed.

Basketball Schedule

University of Vermont 1974--75 Varsity Basketball

December 2 -- Monday at Dartmouth	8:00
December 4 -- Wednesday, New Hampshire	7:30
December 7 -- Saturday at Columbia	8:00
December 10 -- Tuesday at Connecticut	8:00
December 11 -- Wednesday at Norwich	7:30
December 30 -- Monday at Virginia Tech	8:00
December 31 -- Tuesday at Tennessee	4:00
January 3 -- Friday, Lafayette Tourney	7:00 or 9:00
January 4 -- Saturday (Easton, Pa)	7:00 or 9:00
January 9 -- Thursday at Northeastern	8:00
January 10 -- Friday at New Hampshire	7:00
January 14 -- Tuesday, Massachusetts	7:30
January 17 -- Friday, Maine	7:30
January 18 -- Saturday, Maine	3:00
January 22 -- Wednesday, St. Lawrence	7:30
January 25 -- Saturday, Connecticut	3:00
January 27 -- Monday at St. Michael's	8:00
January 31 -- Friday at Rhode Island	8:00
February 1 -- Saturday at St. Joseph's	9:15
February 5 -- Wednesday, St. Michael's	7:30
February 11 -- Tuesday at Middlebury	7:30
February 13 -- Thursday at Boston University	8:00
February 18 -- Tuesday at Massachusetts	3:00
February 22 -- Saturday, Boston University	7:30
February 24 -- Monday, Rhode Island	8:15
February 27 -- Thursday at Siena

Hockey Team Loses In Finals Of Bishop's Tourney To Quebec

After winning their first game of the season in overwhelming fashion, the Vermont hockey team lost the championship game of the Bishop's University hockey tournament in Lennoxville, Quebec. In the first game the Cats routed Bishop's 10-1. In the finals, the University of Quebec beat the locals 5-3. Quebec was a strong opponent with a 6-0-1 record after the defeat of Vermont.

In the one sided game against Bishop's a variety of scorers lead an attack that outshot their opponents 54-11. In the first period the Cats jumped to a 4-0 lead.

Randy Koch scored the first goal on a low shot that beat Bishop goalie Kim Ellis, the recipient of the UVM shooting gallery. Chris Hurley picked up the assist.

Roger Mallette scored the second goal on a power play and Bill Reber's backhander upped the count to 3-0. Tim O'Connell made it four for the Cats with his first of three scores on the evening.

O'Connell, Michel LeBeau and John Murphy made the score 7-0 before the Gaiters hit the nets. Dave Dussalt was the opponent skater who ruined the UVM shutout at the beginning of the third period.

In the third period, Vermont scored three more goals. Reber scored with an assist from LeBeau, O'Connell completed his hat trick, and LeBeau scored his second of the night.

For the game, O'Connell had four points. LeBeau had two goals and three assists. Andy Halford and Randy Koch each had two assists. Such balanced scoring is indicative of the way UVM played hockey in the past few years. The goalies were hardly tested and the offense was in complete control.

But in the championship game the Cats had a rougher time.

Despite outshooting the Quebec team 17-4 in the final stanza, the Cats lost the game 5-3. There was no scoring in the first period as both teams missed several good opportunities. On one Vermont attempt, Andy Rickard hit the goal post. On another, Rickard's shot was smothered by Quebec goalie, Pierre Benoit.

But in the second period the scoring began and Quebec gained a 2-1 advantage. Alain Thibeault scored early in the period on a shot that McNamara deflected to a UVM defense man who gave it right to Thibeault.

Benoit LaFlamme fired a shot with McNamara screened to up the advantage to 2-0 at 6:27. But Tim O'Connell with assists from linemates Mallette and Billy Kock made the score 2-1. O'Connell was named the tournament's most valuable player.

The Cats tied the score early in the final period. Roger Mallette slipped the puck past Benoit after receiving an O'Connell pass. But Luc Tardif scored at 2:34 and Quebec once again was on top.

It was less than three minutes later when Michel Lebeau got his third goal of the tourney as he stole the puck from the defense and skated in on a breakaway. He scored on a deke and then a backhand shot.

But despite the UVM shooting advantage in the third period, it was Quebec who scored the final two goals. Alain Balthazard hit on a long screen shot that went through a UVM defensman's legs. Then Tardif ended the scoring on an empty net in the final minute of play.

This was the second time in two years that the Cats made the final of this tournament and failed to win. Last year, Merrimack had done the damage in the only Division II loss suffered by the Cats last year. This year Quebec demonstrated good playing ability as compared to the rough and rumble and totally outclassed Bishop's squad.

The Cats now enter Division I action where the games really count. The object is to make the playoffs and a chance for national honors. The Division I action begins this Saturday when they play RPI in Troy, New York.

The athletic Facilities will be closed to student, Faculty and staff recreation for the Thanksgiving holiday at 6 p.m. Wednesday, November 27th. Activities will resume Monday, Dec. 2nd.

Basketball Scrimmage

This past Saturday, the UVM Basketball team held their second of three intrasquad scrimmages. They played before a crowd of about 1,000 at Rutland High School where the Green team defeated the White squad by a score of 88-75.

Terry Green led the Green with 32 points followed by Ron Gottschlak with 24 and Joe Greco with 21. Two freshman led the white scoring, Keven Kelly had 13 and Mark Sobolewski added 20.

Before the season opener there is one more scrimmage. It will be held at the Patrick Gymnasium on Tuesday, November 26 at 8:30 p.m. The action gets under way at 7:00 when the JV team will play Rice High School. Admission is $1.00 for adults and $.50 for students. The season will begin on December 2 with a game against Dartmouth in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Girl's X-C Places Second In AAU Meet

The Women's Cross Country team travelled to Long Island, New York to compete in the Region I Cross Country AAU Championships. Racing against top teams from New England and New York, the women represented the school well.

In the stiff competition, the girls took second place just behind the Connecticut A.G. Athletic Union. Coach Perry Bland said after the race, "It was their best race of the season. They ran well as a team, and I'm pleased with all of them."

The three mile course was a rough one complete with sharp corners, uneven terrain and a bad hill.

The winning runner for the event was Doreen Ennis of Nutley Track Club in a time of 18:39. The top UVM runner and the fourth in the field overall was Carol Degan in a time of 19:58. Three runners placed 14, 15, and 16. They were Kathy Glenney in 21:43, Judi Robitaille in 21:46, and Jane Griffith who was two seconds further behind. Debbie Learned was 18 in a time of 21:48.

Among other finishers by teams, Suffolk, Long Island placed third. Among other competing teams were the Liberty Athletic Club, Hunter College, and West Albany Striders.

SWIM TALK

by John Mahoney

With the surfin' music of the Beach Boys still ringing in the ears of most of the students around UVM today it seems to me as appropriate time as any to begin talking about swimming. While swimming is an activity most people reserve for warm summer days, and sandy beaches, there are a few among us whose natatorial activities do not begin in earnest until the last leaves have fallen from the trees and the snows of winter are imminent. Such are the inclinations of about twenty guys who have been working out at the Forbush pool for the past six weeks.

The object of all their hard work is their meet December seventh against Williams College. It will be the first meeting between the two teams, and both the coaches and swimmers are really looking forward to the meet with a good deal of anticipation. Williams has consistently ranked higher at the annual New England meet than UVM. We are hoping that we can turn the tables in head to head dual competition. I think there is good reason for optimism in considering the Williams meet and others as our season progresses.

One of the reasons for this optimism is the fact that the backbone of our team is returning. Last years record breaking individuals and relay teams are back again. I don't like to make predictions, especially at such an early stage, but it is entirely possible that we could go through our dual meet season without a loss. But that's a long ways away. The main thing we are thinking about now is the Williams meet. Just how successful we are in that meet and subsequent ones will depend in a large measure on a fine group of freshmen swimmers. Hopefully, these young men will complement the rest of the squad so well that the Williams swimming team will be 0-1 after December seventh.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

GUY HAUTE COIFFURE
PRESENTS
OUR NOVEMBER SPECIAL
to all UVM women
L'OREAL
MINI VAGUE PLUS
Invisible style support adds natural-looking body to your hair
ONLY $15.00 including shampoo & style
November 18, 1974 - December 18, 1974
Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday
Call 658-3636 for more information
WALK-IN CALLS AND APPOINTMENTS ARE REQUIRED

tech hifi
AMP CLINIC
MONDAY NOVEMBER 25th

The only thing worse than dumping a Schlitz on the top of your stereo amp Saturday night while putting on Steely Dan, trying not to burn your fingers with the joint someone has passed you, is having your amp go on Sunday afternoon when you're trying hard to forget about the exam you're having on Monday. Watering down your amp is one thing, you know what is exactly wrong with it, every tube, transistor, and wire has been soaked, shorted, or otherwise messed up.

When your amp begins to act funny for no apparent reason you know you're in trouble. You'll have to take it down to a shop, where they'll have you sign away your car, your first born son, and probably your key to the back door of Gemma Phi. Simply put, it's going to cost you to get your amp fixed unless you don't know what's wrong with it.

To let you know just how your amp is performing, and if it's not why, the good people at Tech HiFi and the Ed-Rec members of the LL Center are having an Amplifier Clinic on Monday, Nov. 25, from 7 to 11 p.m. in the Living Learning Center Commons. Anyone that wants their amplifier checked out can bring it over and guys from Tech HiFi will test it out with their special equipment.

If you don't have a stereo to be tested come on over anyways and hear some of the really big stereo systems on the market today. You'll be able to and hear some of those systems you've always heard about but never had a chance to examine first- hand.

tech hifi
"Quality Components at the Right Price"
150 Church St., Burlington

News Analysis:

Will Football Go Since UVM Is Too Large?

(continued from page one)

according to Andrews, because football is dropped.

A second possibility would be the curtailment of the program but little, if any money would be saved. Andrews did talk with people in the Colonial League, of which Middlebury is a member, but UVM wouldn't be allowed to participate in the league. The size of UVM is believed to be the reason.

A third alternative to a total cut would be to give the program $50,000 or $60,000 and let them make their own schedule. This is done with baseball, which is on a club basis, scheduling whatever schools they can. Many people, don't feel this would be acceptable. Baseball does not cost anywhere near what football does, and many schools simply cannot schedule a club football team because of fixed schedules.

Another reason for the unacceptability of this idea is fan reaction. Opening day and Homecoming are the only games that attract a sizeable number of fans. When spectators don't come out to see Northeastern, Boston

Head Coach Carl Fallvene

University and other big name schools, who will watch relatively unknowns.

Because baseball has also been dropped during Andrews' administration it was asked if he was anti-sports.

"No, I am definitely not anti-sports. I believe in the athletic Program".

"I also want you to know that the fact football had losing seasons had nothing to do with the decision to drop it. We have done a very responsible job in the Yankee Conference with low resources. It has been very difficult to compete in the conference with our money."

Andrews did admit that the schools reputation will be hurt because of the dropping of football. A member of the athletic staff said other sports might be hurt in that students might think twice about UVM when they find out no football program.

The return of varsity football does not appear to be in the near future. The question that must be asked however is - Why did the University get to the point of having to make such drastic cuts?

It is difficult to justify keeping a sport which has a $200,000 operating cost when academic programs are being cut as well, and I do not attempt to do this. These cuts never should have been needed however.

The university got in over their heads in allowing more and more programs into a school in a state the size of Vermont. It appears that UVM has become too diversified to swim in the lake of academics. Because of this, the school now attempts to drain off part of the lake so that it can stand on firm ground. If proper planning had been done in the past, the cut would never have been needed. Although the past was handled in a poor way, one must look at the present. President Andrews and his staff have done the best that can be done with a poor situation. Football is only a part of the programs that will probably be gone when the Board of Trustees convenes on Dec. 6 and 7. Although it is disappointing that the programs must be cut, no other alternatives are present.

Let us hope that the lake of academic cost will not get any deeper so that hockey, basketball, soccer or any of the other athletic or academic programs will go adrift.

****

Hockey Tryouts

Anyone interested in trying out for the Junior Varsity Hockey team should call the Athletic Office for further information before the Thanksgiving holiday. The number is 656-3074.

Schwartz On Sports :

The End Of UVM Football

by Mike Schwartz

President Edward Andrews has recommended the elimination of the football program at the University of Vermont to the Board of Trustees. The decision comes at a time when the team seems to be making strides towards reversing the losing trend of the recent past. It is the most visible decision among the $1.7 million budget cutback. Head coach Carl Fallvene will undoubtedly fight the recommendation until the Board of Trustees votes in early December.

One must go beyond the recent strides of the team and view the decision from a long run perspective. Also, this one financial cut must be looked at as part of the overall recommendation. After doing this, I reach the conclusion that the football program should definitely be phased back to a smaller level and that the other sports programs should try to squeeze any excess they still might have. The UVM athletic budget is considerably tight with respect to the Yankee Conference. Perhaps there is still room to tighten the belt some more. In this case, athletics at UVM must look beyond the value of sport. The most important consideration is the University of Vermont.

During the four years I have been at this school, the problem of inflation has hit hard. This is a state-funded college that offers a variety of programs to a small population base. While other schools can offer a state program to 70,000 students, Vermont must serve less than 10,000 students. So while tuition goes up and costs continue to rise, state funding has not kept up with the increases necessary to provide the wide variety of programs.

The athletic department must share in the budget cutback that effects the entire school. To me, before athletics, the most important consideration is that the quality of education at Vermont is deteriorating rapidly. Classes will become even larger and available facilities will be further cut back. Less faculty will mean a smaller choice of courses for students. The education I hope to get may not exist to its fullest extent. Some say that college prestige will be lost because the school does not have a football program to represent the school. But the more important loss of prestige is academic. This is what happens from budget cuts such as the recent decision by President Andrews.

Football at UVM is like football at many other colleges. It loses huge quantities of money. The deficit this year is over $200,000. The sport does not have the support that is seen at an Oklahoma or an Ohio State. That is not the purpose of the program here. If it were the alumni that are now calling for no cutbacks at all would be at games beside the homecoming game and be dishing out money to the old almamater. But football could still be effective at a lower level, realize perhaps half the deficit and serve the students better.

At present, over 120,000 dollars is spent on athletic scholarships. At a smaller level this figure could be cut in half. Less emphasis would be placed on recruiting and on getting players to attend Vermont. Sport could serve its ultimate competitive purpose. By maintaining the program at the lower level, the spirit or athletic competition would be maintained.

At the lower level rivalry would still exist. Norwich and Middlebury would be a permanent part of the schedule. Games with upstate New York teams could offer a smaller scale of a Yankee Conference and allow a program with less operating expense.

In many other areas of the United States, small school conferences still allow the development of school spirit and campus interest.

Vermont is in an area where this could be achieved. Football would become more fun and friendly in its approach rather than professionalized and victory oriented. The school would be competitive but at a lower level.

The program would realize savings in scholarships, operating expenses, a smaller squad, and if necessary, the elimination of coaching positions or trainers. The program would share in the effort to cut back spending but the Administration would also show its faith and belief in athletics and the importance of having a team. If the sport is dropped entirely, there is no hope of rebuilding. Eventually, some sort of club will be formed but it would not have the varsity mystique to ever be effective. A de-emphasis would give the base to a day when funds would be available to reemphasize the programs.

This school has many nonscholarship teams that perform successfully. The cross country team, the swimming team, and the tennis team are successful at a level below the Yankee Conference. They perform well on the field but do not have to have false assurances from coaches and money as an incentive. They can also pursue an education that will serve their future.

Football could do just the same thing at the lower level. There is already a facility on East Avenue that went barren when a program was cut. The waste from not using the baseball field would be extended to the football field. The expense in this case is just as large.

During the 1960's the football program tried to enter the big time in New England. The results were disastrous. Nothing was accomplished from 0-9 seasons. If the program was kept at a smaller level, it could have won competitively. This day when the entire program got the axe, could have been eliminated. But, now this day has come. It reflects a sad state of affairs in the entire financial management of this school.

This semester is drawing to a close and so is my term as sports editor. I have learned much about the role of sport to both players, coaches, and administrators. They all believe in optimism when it comes to the value of sport.

Even the soccer players who I hoped to feature this week want to get the very best out of an athletic program. But now I will look back to the end of this semster as the time when education further deteriorated and football disappeared.

In essence, it is just too bad, that in all areas of the school program, the student is hurt the most. This is a fact the alumni and the Administration never understood. But this is the fact that the students remember.

A.I.C. Routs Cats In Final Game

by Gary Brooks

On the surface, this game meant a .500 season for the Vermont football Catamounts but the final outcome was determined days before the kick-off. UVM lost to American International College 41-15 but everyone knew before the game that it would be the last for UVM in their 77 year history of competition.

The practicality of this decision to drop football will not be discussed here because this is the last article on a UVM football game itself. The issue is discussed in other columns of this paper.

Vermont's loss ended their season at a respectable 4-6 record. But in this game, A.I.C. was in control all the way as the score indicates. Quarterback Jim Reidy had a major role in the game by scoring two touchdowns and passing for three more. The other A.I.C. touchdown was on a five yard run by fullback Steve Desmarias.

UVM quarterback, Bob Bateman, had a good day with 19 or 37 for 226 yards and a touchdown pass to Paul Jarry. The other Vermont touchdown was scored by Larry Lockwood on a one yard plunge in the fourth quarter when UVM got all its points after the final issue was never in doubt.

So for Vermont, the four victories were over Norwich, UMass, Rochester and Northeastern. The six losses included UConn, Boston University, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Maine, and A.I.C. At home the team was 3-2 and they were 1-4 on the road.

Bateman set season passing records for Vermont by completing 141 of 286 passes for 1969 yards and 17 touchdowns.

Soderberg Not Rehired

Early this week the UVM Physical Education Department announced that soccer coach and physical education teacher Don Soderberg would not be rehired. Instructor Richard Szabo was also not rehired. Both dismissals were announced as part of the need to cut the size of the budget so as not to take away other physical education services from the students.

Box Lacrosse Starts

Lacrosse has gotten off to an early start at UVM this year with the advent of an intramural "box" lacrosse program. The program was set up and is being operated by the UVM Lacrosse Club. Four teams are competing against each other, with each team scheduled to play five games plus a championship game. The games are played on the dirt field in the Gutterson Fieldhouse.

Actual box lacrosse is played on a hockey rink with no ice on it. Special box sticks are used, and while there aren't many rules as far as contact goes, and the goals are smaller than in field lacrosse. The game being played by clubmembers here is in reality a compact version of field lacrosse. There are six players on the field for each team as opposed to ten in the outdoor game. Standard sticks and goals are used. The emphasis is on stick-work, not on contact. Hitting is kept at a

(continued on page ten)

PFG-Schedule

WEEKEND OF NOV. 22, 23, 24

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22
- GYM – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
- POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
- RINK – Faculty-Staff 7:00-10:30 p.m. 7-8 under 15 years.
- TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

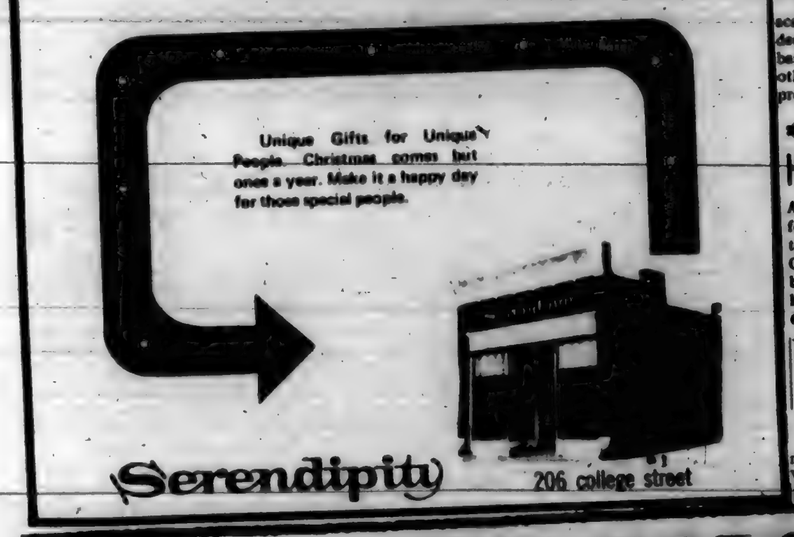
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23
- GYM – Students – Varsity game 6–8 p.m.; 1–4 p.m. and 8–10 p.m.
- POOL – Students 3–5 and 7–10 p.m.
- RINK – Students 7–10 p.m.
- TRACK – Students 7–10 p.m.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 24
- GYM – Students – none
- POOL – Students 3:30–5 p.m.
- RINK – Students 7–10:30 p.m.
- TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

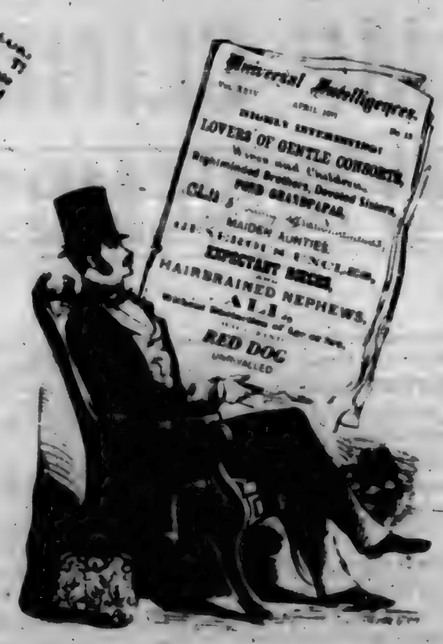
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All Recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
- POOL – 8:30 – 10:30 p.m.
- All other facilities 8–9 p.m.



RED DOG SALOON
A Traditional Beverage And Entertainment Emporium
Since 1965
Lower Church Street- 864-9524



This Week Featuring
ADOM

Sunday Night
50¢ Cover
25¢ Mugs
Featuring DOWNPOUR

ks

ont
05401

863-6103
(Above The Ski Rack)

NAZDAR COMPANY
NAZDAR SILK SCREEN SUPPLIES

Benjamin Moore BENJAMIN MOORE
California &
CALIFORNIA PAINTS

SPECIAL DISCOUNTS TO STUDENTS WITH ID

VERMONT PAINT CO.
138 No. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
862-0201

VOLUME XCII
NUMBER 30 (27)
DECEMBER 5, 1974

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

"Tis a Privilege To Live in Vermont"

Lambert Claims He Was Not Consulted On Football Cut

by Andrew Morse

UVM's Director of Athletics Dennis Lambert discussed in an interview the decision to cut football program made by the administration last week in the midst of massive cuts.

According to Lambert neither he nor Head Coach Lalumiere were consulted about the decision. President Andrews informed Lambert and Lalumiere about the administration's proposal shortly before it was made public. Andrews explained to Lambert that he did not consult him about the decision because he already knew what the reaction and position of the Athletics and Football Departments would be.

Lambert explained that the administration's decision was a financial one and that they could not afford to consider the value of the program's role at UVM. No other athletic program was seriously under consideration for elimination. The administration did not consider cutting hockey because it would not save as much money as football. Football's budget is more than twice that of hockey's ($200,000 as compared to $112,000 in hockey). Lambert added that it would have been impossible to eliminate $200,000 from the athletic department without the elimination of football.

Dennis Lambert

The elimination of football will have a detrimental effect on the University as a whole as well as on the entire Athletic Department, according to Lambert. He pointed out that it will be more difficult to recruit athletes for other sports. A prospective basketball player Lambert said would think twice about attending a University which has cut major sports such as football and baseball within the last four years. These top players will then go to colleges with stronger athletic programs leaving poorer and less sought after players to attend UVM.

Absence of the athletes that the football program brings in will hurt other sports explained Lambert. The best example is track which draws a number of its top performers such as Billy Hooker from the football team. As a result of the elimination of football Lambert said the track program could conceivably be hurt.

If the Board of Trustees approves the Administration's proposal to cut football Lambert said, he and his department will do everything possible to help transfer the non-seniors to other schools where they can play out their eligibility. Lambert added that those players on scholarship who elect to stay at UVM will continue to receive aid until they graduate.

An option under consideration is for UVM to go into a "de-emphasized football program." This would include a budget about ½ of the present day one. With no money available for scholarships, UVM would play schools with approximately the same size program. The drawbacks of this program are many, explained Lambert, with the main one being recruiting good ballplayers with no scholarships to offer them. Then Lambert continued, it would be "most difficult" to compete on any basis.

Lambert expressed concern for the long range effect that the loss of football will have on the University's image. Not enough is known yet, he explained, on what the impact will be on applications to UVM, whether or not students will apply to a school which has dropped such an intricate program as football.

Dr. Simon, Experimental Program Director, Feels Program Need Not Be Phased Out

by Stephen W. Tanner

The University of Vermont administration has recommended to its Board of Trustees that the University's Experimental Program be cut from the curriculum. This action will relieve the Arts and Science budget of some $60,000 when the program is finally phased out by the end of school year 1976. Members of the EP are seeking a revisionary compromise of the recommendation for the Board's consideration when it meets Dec. 6.

Dr. Morris Simon, director of the Experimental Program acknowledged the administration's financial dilemma but insisted "there is still room for experimentation and a need for alternate forms of education at the university."

The Experimental Program has for several years been pursuing means and methods of educating freshman and sophomore students not offered in general university.

Members of the EP are required to take at least two EP courses per semester and a minimum of two additional courses in the university. "The Politics of Presidential Nomination" and "Introduction to the Record Industry" are two diverse and unique EP courses offered in the curriculum.

All EP courses are pass/fail in an attempt to put emphasis on learning and not grading. This EP innovation was adopted by the University in its own pass/fail option for sophomore and upperclassmen.

Experimental Program participants have been encouraged to pursue Independent Study Programs in academic areas of interest early in their college experience.

In a newly adopted Cooperative Studies Program, undergraduates have assisted graduate students in their research projects thus allowing the undergraduate to experience field work first hand again, in an effort to excite students about learning.

The EP student is also given the chance to plan early and develop his own self-direction by the freedom not to fulfill university imposed distribution requirements if he or she completes the two year Experimental Program.

Small classes of no more than 15 have given the student the opportunity to concentrate more on specific areas of interest and to have informal and more intimate learning and sharing experiences with his fellows.

Should the budget cut recommendation be adopted by the Board of Trustees, the EP stand to be cleaned of its ten regular UVM faculty, 11 part timers, and three administrators.

Next years' program would be reduced markedly in course size for those remaining in the last year of the phase-out program. Courses would be cut from 27 in number to between 10 and 12.

Due to a high attrition rate in E.P. freshmen and the sizeable course shortage, next year would see under 60 students as compared with 170 in this year's program.

Director Morris Simon will present an alternate plan to the vice-president in December. He will argue essentially two lines: Economics and Quality.

The E.P. could withstand sizeable cuts in its budget and still function effectively if the program is reduced from its present utilization of Mason and Coolidge Halls to only Coolidge.

This would mean cut backs in enrollment and budget allocations but not total elimination as the University proposes.

The program would be more highly concentrated and retitled "The Coolidge Residential Hall Academic Program." Instead of employing a mixture of UVM staff and part time less expensive staff would be implemented giving a greater cohesion to the program which has previously suffered due to fluctuating UVM staff faculty.

This program would still require university funding, but not nearly as much.

Secondly, Simon is concerned to make the argument for the quality of the Educational Program. He feels such quality would not be impaired by a part time core staff. Citing numerous student course evaluation sheets as overwhelming evidence of enthusiasm for the alternative education program, Simon stated, "nowhere is there such happiness in learning than here."

Concerned students are petitioning and speaking with Trustees in efforts to persuade them to consider the EP's situation carefully before rubber stamping the administrations proposal.

Parents of students are being encouraged to write letters of recommendation to the Board.

Simon concluded that "For many students, the Experimental Program has been of importance in their educational experience." He remarked that he learned about the budget cuts the day they were announced and had had "not much opportunity to offer a rebuttal" at the announcement meeting that afternoon.

In a recent development, Simon disclosed that he will also discuss whether or not the Board has the power to dissolve the Experimental Program since it did not create the Program.

The E.P. was created by the College of Arts and Sciences and whether or not the Dean has the authority to recommend its dissolution without the consent of the college will be discussed with the vice-president.

Survey Of UVM Undergraduates Finds Students Favor Cuts

A survey of UVM undergraduates finds that students favor cutting back new building programs and the size of the administration as the best ways to save money in the current budget crunch it was reported today. Peter Sakash, a sociology student and Ralph Underhill, Associate Professor of Sociology, reported that 32 per cent of the students favor cutting back new building programs and another 32 per cent favor cutting back the administration as the best single means for saving money.

When asked what programs would be most important to maintain in the face of budget deficits, 35 per cent answered "faculty size" and an additional 28 per cent answered "cultural programs".

Students favor high quality academic and cultural programs and are willing to sacrifice new buildings and administration," Sakash and Underhill said.

The survey was taken by a sociology class shortly before the currently proposed budget cuts were announced. It involved a representative sampling of 500 UVM undergraduates. Of these students, 359 or 72 per cent returned the questionnaire.

Sakash and Underhill said "We are sorry that we did not have the foresight to ask specifically about football and the Nursing program when the question were drawn up." Nonetheless, 13 per cent mentioned varsity athletics as a program to be cut back while only seven per cent mentioned varsity athletics as a program to be maintained. "Although we don't know precisely how students stand on the football issue, there certainly is no strong support for athletic programs among the students," Sakash and Underhill said.

In a separate question students were asked their opinion about the proposed Main Street pedestrian underpass connecting the main campus with the residential complexes. Fully 65 per cent were opposed and only 35 per cent were in favor of its construction.

The question on which programs should be cut back and which maintained was worded, "UVM is currently faced with serious budget deficits. In Column A please circle the ONE program or service you most strongly feel should be cut back to save money. In column B please circle the ONE program which you think is most important to maintain or expand. The table below shows the categories and percentage answering each.

	Cutback	Maintain
New Buildings	32%	2%
Size of the Administration	32%	1%
Varsity Athletics	13%	7%
Office of Volunteer Programs	6%	8%
Non-Varsity Sports and Recreation	5%	8%
Maintenance and Repairs of Buildings	3%	7%
Cultural Programs (e.g. lectures, films)	2%	28%
Faculty Size	2%	35%
Other	[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	100%	100%

Aiken Lecture Fund Grows Through Contributions

Vermonters this week and next are showing what Sen. George D. Aiken means to them, and in a tangible way.

Throughout the state, in every city and town, committees are collecting funds that will be put into an endowment for the George D. Aiken Lectures. Income from this endowment will be used to finance an annual lecture at the University of Vermont: this series of lectures will be a perpetual tribute to the man who is retiring after representing Vermont in the U.S. Senate for the past 34 years.

Co-Chairmen of the fund drive for $250,000 are Gov. Thomas P. Salmon and U.S. Sen. Robert T. Stafford. They have emphasized this is a bipartisan effort to pay tribute to a man who has served his state and nation in a bipartisan manner. They have emphasized too, that they and other committee members hope for donations from as many Vermonters as possible.

A committee member noted that "nearly everyone has a personal story to tell about Aiken, a conversation with him or how he helped them out. These are the people we hope will be a part of this drive for funds as a salute to this man."

The names of all donors will be published in a book to be presented to Senator and Mrs. Aiken.

The statewide effort is being handled primarily by county committee chairmen, with each of these organizing his own campaign. In Addison County, a porchlight drive is planned for one evening, with residents urged to turn on a light for Senator Aiken.

Schoolchildren are assisting in many towns, as are farm organizations and others which took upon this as an opportunity to say thanks to a man who has served them in many ways over the years.

College Professors Organize Into Unions

by Philip W. Semas
From the Chronicle of Higher Education

The new academic year may see the most aggressive campaigns so far to organize college professors into unions.

All three national faculty organizations took steps during the summer that indicate that they will be more aggressive this year.

The National Education Association committed $1-million to "basic organizing" of college professors and has given its higher education unit special status.

Albert Shanker, the new president of the American Federation of Teachers (A.F.L.-C.I.O.), promised a "substantial effort" to give higher education more support and influence in his union. Details of his plan will probably be announced during the union's executive committee meeting Oct. 25-27.

The American Association of University Professors named a political activist, Joseph D. Duffey, as its new general secretary. One of his first acts was to launch an aggressive membership drive.

Organizing efforts will be concentrated in states that have laws giving professors the right to unionize, such as Florida, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Oregon, and Pennsylvania. Considerable activity is also likely in California, which is expected to have a bargaining law soon.

However, in what could signal a new trend in faculty unionism, university professors in Ohio and Colorado are working hard to win bargaining rights without state legislation. So far, only teachers at two-year colleges in the Chicago area have been able to do that.

Only three bargaining elections have been scheduled so far this fall. Two will be at small private institutions: Ricker College in Maine on Sept. 25 and Coker College in South Carolina on Oct. 3.

The third election will be held at the University of Hawaii on Oct. 21 and 23. It will mark the final round of an attempt by a coalition of the A.A.U.P. and N.E.A. to unseat the A.F.T. as the recognized bargaining agent. A bitter decertification fight began last fall after the faculty overwhelmingly rejected an A.F.T.-negotiated contract because it contained some controversial tenure provisions.

Although dates have not yet been set, elections will also be held this fall at the University of Cincinnati, Kansas State College at Pittsburg, Robert Morris College in Pennsylvania, Trocaire College, and Union College in New York.

A number of major elections are likely after the first of the year.

Following is a state-by-state run-down of union organizing efforts and prospects for elections.

California

Once Ronald Reagan steps down as governor in January, the major bar to faculty bargaining will be removed. Democrat Edmund G. Brown, the favorite to win the November election, is a strong supporter of public-employee collective-bargaining legislation, which Mr. Reagan opposed.

Since passage of a bargaining law will probably take several months, however, elections are unlikely before the fall of 1975.

The California State University and Colleges System is the prime candidate for unionization in the state. The A.F.T. has long had a strong organization in the system. Affiliates of the A.A.U.P., the N.E.A., and the state civil-service union recently formed a coalition to try to stop the A.F.T. in the state colleges.

Colorado

The A.F.T. and the A.A.U.P. have been trying to persuade the University of Colorado regents to agree to an election, even though the state has no collective-bargaining law. The regents went back and forth on the issue last spring, then voted Aug. 16 to table further discussions.

Meanwhile, the N.E.A.'s Colorado affiliate plans to push hard for a bargaining law in the 1975 legislature. The house failed by one vote to enact such a law this year.

Florida

A new collective-bargaining law goes into effect Jan. 1, become the first in the state to take advantage of a 1971 law granting professors the right to bargain. An election will probably be held there Oct. 2, with the A.A.U.P. and the N.E.A. on the ballot.

Two other state colleges, at Emporia and [illegible]ays, are

(continued on page eleven)

VPIRG Petitions Against Pesticides; Conducts Record Album Price Survey

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) said today that the Vermont Department of Agriculture has agreed to consider evidence relative to the herbicide 2,4,5-T at a hearing to be held in February. The information was contained in a letter from Agriculture Commissioner Leo O'Brien, Jr. to VPIRG Assistant Director Peter Franchot.

VPIRG had petitioned the Department in September for an immediate cancellation of all uses of 2,4,5-T in Vermont. However, in the letter to Franchot, Commissioner O'Brien indicated that he saw no immediate threat from the herbicide and that the matter could be considered at the February hearings. The hearing is necessary in order to revise Vermont's pesticide regulations to meet certain standards of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"We believe that evidence to be presented at the hearing will force the Agriculture Department to recommend for all outlaw the use of 2,4,5-T in Vermont," Franchot said. "We are pleased that the hearing will be held before the summer spraying season."

2,4,5-T is a phenoxy herbicide used to clear brush from forests, pastures and rights of way in Vermont. Its dioxin contaminant TCDD, is one of the most teratogenic (birth deformity causing) molecules known to man. EPA experiments have shown that 2,4,5-T causes fetal damage in laboratory animals with TCDD levels measured in quantities as small as parts per billion.

According to Franchot, even tightly restricted use of 2,4,5-T and other TCDD contaminated chemicals poses an unacceptable threat to the health and welfare of Vermonters. Franchot criticized what he termed "the shaky record" of the Pesticide Advisory Council which has failed to narrow the large list of highly toxic and persistent pesticides which are presently allowed in Vermont.

Franchot cited the recent action of Connecticut in banning the use of BHC, inorganic arsenic compounds, cadmium compounds, toxaphene, and other chemicals still used in Vermont. "It should be remembered that there are more benign chemical alternatives for 2,4,5-T and these other poisons," he added.

On November 16, the V.P.I.R.G. suites in the Living and Learning Center conducted a record album price survey. As one can detect from the price data gathered, it is obvious there are considerable price fluctuations in these albums throughout the greater Burlington area.

The V.P.I.R.G. members arbitrarily used Billboard Magazine's (November 16, 1974 issue) top twenty selection as the basis for the survey.

V.P.I.R.G. performed this consumer oriented project for the benefit of students at UVM and people living here in Burlington area.

In the future, the V.P.I.R.G. suites hope to conduct other consumer oriented projects.

If you are interested in becoming involved in any V.P.I.R.G. projects or would like to initiate one of your own, please contact the V.P.I.R.G. suite A310, A320 Living and Learning Center (656-4244) or the V.P.I.R.G. office, 49 North Prospect St., Burlington. (863-3435.)

(continued on page twelve)

The Beach Boys Drew Quite a Crowd on Nov. 20

Featured This Week:

West Side Story A Flop....p.7

SAGA Offers Revised Meal Plan...p.10

Table Of Contents:

Arts & Entertainment . . . . . .p. 6
Calendar/Announcements . . . .p. 2
Doctor's Bag . . . . . p. 12
Editorial . . . . . .p. 4
Op. Ed. . . . . .p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 16

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

UVM Board Of Trustees In Final Sessions

Individuals and organizations affected or concerned by proposed budget cuts at the University of Vermont will be able to present their views to UVM Trustees at a meeting on the campus Friday, Dec. 6

The session, which is to begin at 9 a.m. with a presentation by President Edwards C. Andrews, Jr., will be held in Memorial Lounge on the main floor of the Waterman Building. Statements by students, faculty, alumni, and others concerned will be heard by the Board next, beginning at about 10 a.m.

The Board has asked persons desiring to make statements to notify the President's office (656-3186) at least 24 hours in advance, so that a schedule may be set up for them. A five- minute time limitation will be placed on each, in order to give all who desire it an opportunity to speak. Written supporting statements may also be presented to the Board if wished.

A formal meeting of the Trustees, sitting as a Committee of the Whole then will follow. There will be a break for luncheon from noon to 1:15 p.m.

A special meeting of the Board of Trustees is scheduled for 9 a.m., Saturday, December 7, also in the Memorial Lounge, for the purpose of taking action on the administration's recommendations, in the event that Trustees are prepared to do so at that time.

Board Vice Chairman Allen Q. Eaton will preside at both the December 6 and 7 sessions.

A regular meeting of the Board will be held at the same location a week later (December 14) at 8:30 a.m., with Chairman C. Douglas Cairns presiding. It will be preceded (December 13) by a full day of committee meetings, following the usual procedure.

Peace Corps & Vista Recruiters Here

Peace Corps and Vista recruiters will be on campus today, December 5, from 9-4:30. Anyone interested in getting some information should either visit Billings Center or sign up in Mansfield House 3rd floor for an interview. We are looking for seniors and graduate students with a good variety of majors for both programs.

Billing's Bedlam- An All Night Affair

Billings Bedlam is coming again. The Billings Center Governing Board is sponsoring the Bedlam for the third time. It is an all night affair. The event begins 8:00 p.m. Friday, Dec. 6 and continues until 8:00 a.m. Saturday Dec. 7.

Throughout the night continuous events will be taking place in various rooms at Billings. Planning is still taking place, but at present the following activities are included in the Bedlam: the Movie "HELP", and "Popeye Flicks". Round House, a Boogie Band, WRUV will be there, table tennis tournaments, a chess tourney, etc. These are just a few of the great activities that will be taking place. Also, Saga is working on a special food deal. Watch for more information on Bedlam and by all means plan to come over. With our planning and your presence, this year's Bedlam should prove to be a booming success.

Renaissance Drawing

L/L Medieval- Renaissance students are sponsoring a donation drawing this week. First Prize... seasons ski pass for Smugglers Notch. More goodies to follow thanks to Saga, Lane Series, Audio Den, EMS Sportsgoods, and the Head shop. Winners will be drawn Wed. Dec. 11th at 8 p.m. in L/L commons.

Gamma Phi Rummage Sale

Come to a Rummage Sale at Gamma Phi Beta, 381 Main Street. Rummage will be available Friday, December 6 from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. and Saturday, December 7, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

UVM Baroque Ensemble Presents Christmas Concert

The UVM Baroque Ensemble and friends will give a short and informal concert of Christmas music on Sunday, Dec. 15, at 3 p.m. in Royall Tyler Theatre.

Admission to the concert is free, and children are welcome. Ticket reservations are not needed. Just come and enjoy a holiday concert for the entire family!

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5

In Billings Marsh Lounge, a print sale will occur and continue through Friday.

12:15 p.m., the Music Dept. sponsors an informal student recital in Ira Allen Chapel.

3 p.m., Mathematical Sciences seminar with Dr. Edward Terry who will speak on the "Role of Statistics in Operations Research." B-104 Cook Building.

6:30 p.m., Ananda Marga Yoga Class followed by group meditation at 8 p.m. at the Unitarian Church.

6:30 p.m., Meeting of the Greek Council concerning campus activities. All are welcome at Sigma Nu.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "West Side Story" in 101 Votey Hall and admission is free.

8 p.m., the Lane Series presents the Welsh Guards and Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders in Patrick Gym. Call Ext. 3418 for reservations.

8 p.m., Meeting of the UVM Horse Club in MAT Lounge. All sorts of riders welcome. More information from Verne Batchelder at 863-5944.

9:30 p.m., Meeting of the Greek Coordinating Council concerning membership. All are welcome at Tri-Delts.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6

8:30 a.m., Special Trustees meeting in Memorial Lounge, Waterman. If necessary, the meeting will continue tomorrow, Dec. 7.

12:30 p.m., UVM Plant and Soil Society will sell apples between Hill Building and the greenhouse (in the breezeway).

4 p.m., "Friday at Four" open house at Royall Tyler Theatre. Open to all.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Bahai Club of UVM at 71 So. Williams St., Everyone is welcome, For more information, dial 985-3224 and ask for Anne.

7:30 p.m., Open poetry reading with R. Tinker Greene at the Church Street Center. 3 hours, no fee. Register by calling ext. 4221.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice" at 101 Votey Hall. Admission is one dollar. Also showing will be "The Great Race" with an all-star cast. Both shows will be repeated starting at 12 midnight.

8 p.m., the Music Dept. presents the UVM Brass Ensemble in Ira Allen Chapel.

8 p.m., Slide show presented by the UVM Outing Club's Drummond Rene: "The Dhauligiri Expedition". 115 Commons, Living-Learning.

8 p.m., International Folk Dancing at Southwick Ballroom. Everyone welcome.

8 a.m. to 8 p.m., The Second Annual Billings Bedlam. Call Ext. 4379 after 1:30 p.m. for more details.

9 p.m., "Roundhouse" is informal entertainment in a coffee house atmosphere held in the basement of Billings Center. Sponsored by the Billings Center Governing Board.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents Paul Newman's classic, "Exodus", in 101 Votey Hall. Admission is free.

8 p.m., the Lane Series presents the Hartford Ballet Company's production of Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" with the Vermont Symphony Ballet Orchestra. Call ext. 3418 for reservations for this presentation at Memorial Auditorium.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 8

4 p.m., the Music Dept. presents a Joint Christmas Concert by the UVM Choral Union and Choir in Ira Allen Chapel.

The Lane Series now has on sale tickets for all the spring Lane concerts. Obtain them from the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, telephone 656-3418.

Also, the Lane Office has announced the spring film series, which will be a W. C. Fields Film Festival. See story in this issue.

Currently on view at Fleming Museum: "Meg Walker: Works in Fiber," and "Art of the Northwest Coast." Both shows will be up through January 1.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9

12 noon, Physiology-Biophysics seminar, Dr. William J. Williams, Bioelectrical Sciences Laboratory, University of Michigan, "Quantitative Properties of Joint Receptors," C-219, Given Building.

1:30 p.m., Counselor Alice Outwater will be available in Harris-Millis as part of the Counseling and Testing program.

5 p.m., VPIRG board meeting in Billings' Conference Room C. All are welcome.

7 p.m., UVM Modern Dance Workshop at Southwick Ballroom. Call Ext. 3240 for further information.

7 p.m., Open auditions for the late January University Players production of Macbett, Royall Tyler Theater.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Judgment at Nuremburg", 103 Rowell. Free admission.

8:30 p.m., WRUV-FM presents "Open Circuit", moderated by Deborah Janone. A half-hour program designed to keep listeners up to date on issues of local concern.

8 p.m., the Music Dept. evening of small ensembles at Living-Learning has been cancelled.

8 p.m., Dr. Jeremy Feit, Director of Area and International Studies, will speak on the topic of "Opportunities for Overseas Study" in the Fireplace Lounge of Living-Learning.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 10

Last day of classes! Examinations begin on Thursday, Dec. 12 and continue through Wednesday, Dec. 18.

12 noon to 4 p.m., Counseling services in Billings' Conference Room C with advisors Roberto Rios and Calvin Chappell. Call Ext. 3340 for details.

1 p.m., Legislative Day begins. Organized by the Student Association. The day will include tours of the university and an opportunity to see a hockey game for visiting Vermont legislators.

2 p.m., Nancy Koch is available for counseling services in Harris-Millis until 4 p.m.

6:30 p.m., Meeting of the Christian Science Organization at Harris Hall recreation room. All are welcome.

7 p.m., Open auditions for the University Players late January production of Ionesco's Macbett, at Royall Tyler Theatre.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Lamplighters, a Pentecostal fellowship group, in MAT Lounge. All are welcome. For details, contact Sue Kukla at Ext. 2952.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 11

12-1 p.m., Nancy Koch will lead a workshop in "An Hour of Relaxation, Centering and Meditation." She will be meeting with all those interested throughout the Christmas recess, too, at the Counseling and Testing Center, 146 S. Williams St.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12

Exams begin and continue through Wed., Dec. 18.

12:15 p.m., Last of the Lunch Bunch films sponsored by the Church St. Center for Community Education. Call ext. 4221 for details.

4:30 p.m., Faculty Senate meeting in B-106 Cook.

8 p.m., Last meeting of the Outing Club in 305 Votey. Slide show on the Greenland expediton.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13

Board of Trustees hold committee meetings, all at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building, on the following schedule: 8 a.m., audit committee; 9:30 a.m., investment committee; 11 a.m., alumni, development and external affairs committee; 1:30 p.m., buildings and grounds committee; 2:30 p.m., educational policy committee; and 4 p.m., finance and budget committee.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14

8:30 a.m., Board of Trustees meet at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 15

3 p.m., the UVM Baroque Ensemble and friends will present "An Hour of Christmas", a brief and informal Christmas concert at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Children are welcome, and admission is free.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9

7:30 p.m., UVM Student Wives Club will meet at the Community Center, Fort Ethan Allen, to make Christmas gifts for nursing home patients.

The Texas Instruments electronic calculator: the gift that improves her figures.

TI-SR-10 Square Root Scientific Notation 99.99
TI-Exactra 20. 4 Function - 24.95.
TI-1500 - 49.95 4 function with percent.
TI-Exactra 21. 4 function. 29.95.
TI-2550 - 69.95. 4 function with memory and percent.

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by IES - Associate Stores - 157 Pearl Street Essex Jct.

Don't let the price of a college education stop you.

The price of a college education is skyrocketing. Fortunately the Air Force has done something to catch up with it. For the first time, the Air Force ROTC Scholarships include the 2-year program, for both men and women.

If you can qualify, the Air Force will pay for the remainder of your college education. Not only do AFROTC 2-year college scholarships cover full tuition, but reimbursement for textbooks, lab and incidental fees, as well as a tax-free monthly allowance of $100.

To cash in on all this just apply, qualify, and enroll in the Air Force ROTC at _____

It's a great way to finish your college education in the money, and build a future where the sky's no limit... as an officer in the Air Force.

MAKE THE MOST OF IT

Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship Program

If you're one of tomorrow's physicians, there are some things you should know today.

For instance. You should know about the opportunities offered by Armed Forces Health Care. As an officer in the service of your choice you'll work in modern facilities. With up-to-date equipment. And modern, up-to-date professionals in every area of Health Care.

For example. You should know that Armed Forces Health Care offers opportunities for initial training and advanced study in practically every specialty. Not to mention the opportunity to practice it.

You should know, too, that we make it possible for you to pursue a post-residency fellowship at either military or civilian institutions.

And if all this strikes a spark, then you should certainly know about our scholarship program.

If you qualify, the tuition for your medical education will be covered fully while you participate in the program. And during that time you'll receive a good monthly stipend.

Just one more thing... we think if you know all the facts, today, you may want to be one of us tomorrow.

Find out. Send in the coupon and get the facts... today.

Armed Forces Scholarships
P.O. Box XF
Peoria, Ill. 61614
I desire information for the following programs:
Army ☐ Navy ☐ Air Force ☐ Medical ☐ Dental ☐ Veterinary ☐ Podiatry ☐ Optometry ☐ Psychology (PhD) ☐
Name
Soc. Sec. #
Phone
Address
City
State
Zip
Enrolled at
To graduate in
Date of birth

Armed Forces Health Care
Dedicated to Medicine and the people who practice it.

"Somebody still cares about quality."

A diamond wedding ensemble is a Christmas Supergift!

Changes Made Thr

During the past three weeks over 100 students have responded with questions, suggestions or complaints via several special boxes on campus. These boxes are part of a program called "The Exchange" operated by the Counseling and Testing Center with assistance from the Office of Student Activities.

Complaints and suggestions are recorded and then forwarded to the various departments responsible for the program or item referred to. The infirmary, residence halls, Saga, Student Activities have all complaints some improve made. The De to eliminate offering fast f

pre-wrapped sandwiche conditions wi
Billings Cente
the number and the infirm student advis deal with pro health services.

Students
individual

Athletic Ticket Exch

The Student Athletic Book "Ticket Exchange" is provided as a service to student bookholders by the Intercollegiate Athletic Office and S.A.

If a ticket book holder does not anticipate using a ticket from the book, he/she should bring Exchange we of the game.
faculty ma ticket and th
admission returned to student.

The "Tic

Legislative Internship In

Each semester our office invites 5 students to work full time in our Washington office on legislation, research and answering letters in addition to other office responsibilities.

Our experience indicates that this semester program is more satisfactory to students and to our office than one lasting a month or six weeks.

The semester program can be combined with a summer internship, if the student wishes.

Becaus
so many internships, hear from
for the spri

in the fall a there are ma
than openin personal int either in Washington
each applica

Most st
the basis o independe

St. Ans

The Carols and Lessons service will be on Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. This service will tie together the themes of Advent and Christmas. We here at the University share all the joy and pressure of being a community. However, because Christmas always lies in the heart of vacation, we don't get the chance to share the hope and thrill of that season by singing, praying and worshipping together.

So, on December 10, after classes are over and before anyone has had a chance to get down to studying (if we ever do?), we have the opportunity to come together. Advent is a time of expectation, of waiting, of preparing for God's presence around us and within us. The first part of the service will be one of preparation. The hymns we sing and the lessons we hear will contribute to this. And then we will remember how and where God came to us, the simple and patient mystery of God's presence in this world, His creation.

Finally, we to sing out by joining familiar around a spiced cide in hand. C all.

Service
Sunday
Holy Euch
Tues
p.m. Holy

Weekend
4:15 and Sunda
a.m. and
Week day
5:30 p.m.
Tuesd
p.m.
Wed
Friday 4
Confessio Masses
appointm

TAKE AN
AT T Siz
S new atmosp new Intimate Atmosphere for a a choice of appetizers, fish
STILL THE MOST REA
STILL NEXT TO MERR
COME IN, SIT BACK A SIZZL
OPEN 7

...ew Outwater will be available in ...nseling and Testing program. ...meeting in Billings' Conference

...Dance Workshop at Southwick ...further information. ...for the late January University ..., Royall Tyler Theater. ...nts "Judgment at Nuremburg".

...nts "Open Circuit", moderated ...hour program designed to keep ...of local concern. ...evening of small ensembles at ...nelled. ...Felt, Director of Area and ...will speak on the topic of ...Study" in the Fireplace Lounge

DECEMBER 10

...mination begin on Thursday, Dec. ...nesday, Dec. 18. ...Counseling services in Billings' ...dvisers Roberto Rios and Calvin ...details. ...begins. Organized by the Student ...clude tours of the university and ...ockey game for visiting Vermont

...vailable for counseling services in

...the Christian Science Organization ...All are welcome. ...for the University Players late ...esco's MacBett, at Royall Tyler

...the Lamplighters, a Pentecostal ...Lounge. All are welcome. For ...Ext. 2952.

..., DECEMBER 11

...lead a workshop in "An Hour of ...editation." She will be meeting ...ughout the Christmas recess, too, ...g Center, 146 S. Williams St.

DECEMBER 12

...inue through Wed., Dec. 18. ...Lunch Bunch films sponsored by ... Community Education. Call ext.

...ate meeting in B-106 Cook. ...of the Outing Club in 305 Votey ...d expedition.

..., DECEMBER 13

...old committee meetings, all at ...man Building, on the following ...committee; 9:30 a.m., investment ...nd, development and external affairs ...ttings and grounds committee; 2:30 ...committee; and 4 p.m., finance and

...Y, DECEMBER 14

...Trustees meet at Memorial Lounge.

..., DECEMBER 15

...roque Ensemble and friends will ...Christmas", a brief and informal ... Royall Tyler Theatre. Children are ...ree.

...AY, DECEMBER 9

...dent Wives Club will meet at the ... Ethan Allen, to make Christmas gifts

A diamond wedding ensemble is a Christmas Supergift!

Changes Made Through "Exchange"

During the past three weeks over 100 students have responded with questions, suggestions or complaints via several special boxes on campus. These boxes are part of a program called "The Exchange" operated by the Counseling and Testing Center with assistance from the Office of Student Activities.

Complaints and suggestions are recorded and then forwarded to the various departments responsible for the program or item referred to. The infirmary, residence halls, Saga, Student Activities have all responded to complaints issued so far, and some improvements are being made. The Den will be trying to eliminate lunch lines by offering fast food service with pre-wrapped burgers and sandwiches, studying conditions will be improved in Billings Center by increasing the number of study lamps, and the infirmary is creating a student advisory committee to deal with problems concerning health services.

Students may request an individual response by indicating their name and where they can be reached on the form provided.

In addition to the boxes in MAT, Harris-Hills, Simpson, Wright, Billings, and Waterman anyone may respond at any time to the Exchange by calling ext. 2068 at Billings Center.

Changes can be made at UVM only if students who see something wrong make and attempt to pass along what they feel. Please use this service to help make UVM a better place.

Athletic Ticket Exchange For All Hockey Fans

The Student Athletic Book "Ticket Exchange" is provided as a service to student bookholders by the Intercollegiate Athletic Office and S.A.

If a ticket book holder does not anticipate using a ticket from the book, he/she should bring the ticket to the Exchange well before the day of the game. Other students or faculty may purchase the ticket and the regular student admission fee of $1.50 is returned to the original student.

The "Ticket Exchange" is located in the S.A. Office in Billings - 2nd floor (Office Hours are 8:30 - 5:00). Upcoming Home Hockey games are scheduled for Dec. 10, Dec. 11, and Jan. 4. This is a great way to buy a ticket for a game that is otherwise "sold out".

Legislative Internship In Washington Now Available

Each semester our office invites 5 students to work full time in our Washington office on legislation, research and answering letters in addition to other office responsibilities.

Our experience indicates that this semester program is more satisfactory to students and to our office than one lasting a month or six weeks.

The semester program can be combined with a summer internship, if the student wishes.

Because our office receives so many applications for internships, it is helpful if we hear from students applying for the spring semester as early in the fall as possible. Because there are many more applicants than openings, we require a personal interview, if possible, either in New York or Washington to help us evaluate each application.

Most students join us on the basis of a work-study or independent study program through which they receive some academic credit. There are not outside funds available for defraying expenses while students are in Washington. Students make their own living arrangements.

Students who feel they are qualified for our internship program should send a letter and a resume to Ms. Marilyn Shapiro, Administrative Assistant, 1009 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

St. Anslem's Chapel

The Carols and Lessons service will be on Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. This service will tie together the themes of Advent and Christmas. We here at the University share all the joy and pressure of being a community. However, because Christmas always lies in the heart of vacation, we don't get the chance to share the hope and thrill of that season by singing, praying and worshipping together.

So, on December 10, after classes are over and before anyone has had a chance to get down to studying (if we ever do!), we have the opportunity to come together. Advent is a time of expectation, of waiting, of prepering for God's presence around us and within us. The first part of the service will be one of preparation. The hymns we sing and the lessons we hear will contribute to this. And then we will remember how and where God came to us, the simple and patient mystery of God's presence in this world, His creation. Finally, we can have a chance to sing out our hope and joy by joining together in the old familiar Christmas carols around a roaring fire, with spiced cider and hot chocolate in hand. Come one and come all.

Service Schedule:

Sunday morning, 9:00 a.m. Holy Eucharist

Tuesday evening, 10:00 p.m. Holy Eucharist

Monday - Friday, 7:15 a.m. Morning Prayer

Coffee House, 7:30-10:00 p.m. Sunday Night. This week several of the people in an Oral Interpretation class are presenting some Christmas poems and brief stories. Anyone who would like to bring something to read is welcome. Please bring it even if you want someone else to read it. Coffee and herb teas will be available. At St. Anselm's.

Newman Center

Weekend Liturgies: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Sunday 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Weekday Liturgies: Monday 5:30 p.m.

Tuesday 4:15 and 10:00 p.m.

Wednesday, Thursday, Friday 4:15 p.m.

Confessions: Before weekend Masses and anytime by appointment.

Morning Prayer: Every weekday at 7:30 a.m.

Choir Practice: for the 4:15 Sunday Mass, at 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday.

Basic Catholicism: Every Monday at 7:15 p.m.

Scripture Study: Tuesdays from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m.

SPECIAL EVENTS: Advent Communal Penance Service - Monday, December 9, at 8:30 p.m.

TAKE AN EXAM BREAK AT THE NEW

SIZZLING STEAK

new atmosphere new salad bar
new menu items

Intimate Atmosphere for a quiet drink and a delicious meal.We now have a choice of appetizers, fish specialties, fried chicken, and new juicier steaks.

STILL THE MOST REASONABLE DINNER PRICES IN TOWN
STILL NEXT TO MERRIL'S SHOWCASE I &II
COME IN, SIT BACK AND RELAX TO A FINE MEAL FOR ALL!

SIZZLING STEAK
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

Some 200 People Victimized By Beat Beach Boys Tickets

Approximately 200 people were turned away from Patrick Gymnasium for the "Beach Boys" concert on Wednesday, November 20th. This was because they purchased one of a variety of types of counterfeit tickets. Although some people paid up to $18 for a fake ticket and were not allowed into the gym, none of them could or would produce the name of the seller. It was unfortunate that so many people fell prey to those who don't seem to care about anyone else besides themselves.

In the future it would be wise not to buy tickets in the dark, outside the gym on the night of a concert. If you suspect a ticket is not genuine bring it to the Office of Student Activities for verification immediately.

It is not sufficient to apologize to all those who were fooled, but to try to develop an awareness of the situation so others will not be hurt in the future.

Philo Record's Martin Grosswendt To Make Roundroom Performance

This Saturday night Martin Grosswendt, another artist from Philo Records, Inc., will be performing in the Round room at Billings. The show is scheduled to start at 8:30.

This entertainment is made possible through the combined efforts of SAConcerts and Billings Governing Board, along with Philo Records, Inc. of North Ferrisburg, Vt. The first week with Jim Brewer was very good and it is hoped that it will continue to be successful and can be continued into next semester.

University Players Return With Ionesco's "MacBett"

After a one year absence, the University Players will present a major production again this year in the traditional January slot. This year's production will be MACBETT by Eugene Ionesco, and will run the last two weekends of January at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

MACBETT, based on the Macbeth myth, has been called a study of the "corruptive effects of ambition." The play is a fast paced "sardonic comedy" that can be both funny and grotesque.

Dr. Drummond Rennie Describes Ascent of Himalayan Giant

Dr. Drummond Rennie will describe the ascent of Dhaulagiri, 26,700 foot Himalayan giant, at 8 p.m. on December 4th, in Carpenter Auditorium in Given Medical Building, under auspices of the Outing Club and Living and Learning Center.

Dr. Rennie is one of the stand-out mountaineers of our time - not only is he sky-tall, but he usually travels in a colorful Peruvian poncho, arms flailing like windmills, making friends with everyone. After graduation from Oxford and from Guy's Hospital - one of the most prestigious of British hospitals - he climbed extensively in the Swiss, Italian and French Alps, then came to the U.S. where he heads the Renal Division of the Rush Medical School - St. Lukes Hospital Unit in Chicago. Dr. Rennie has made eight climbing trips to Peru, speaking Spanish well, and being known far and wide as a climber and doctor. He headed the American Medical Relief team which brought help after the disastrous earthquake of 1970, which wiped out a whole valley, killing 40-50,000 persons, and on other trips has participated - with Peruvian doctors - in numerous studies of high altitude physiology and adaptation. In the last six years he has been a member of the scientific team which works at 17,500 feet on Mt. Logan in the Canadian Yukon.

The Dhaulagiri climb was the second major American attack on this difficult peak - the first ending in tragedy when most members were killed by avalanche. Rennie was the climbing doctor, reaching 25,000 feet himself, and ministering to all sorts of problems among climbers and locals. He has magnificent slides of this formidable and dangerous climb by a new route, up which the party struggled to the summit - the first party to make this route.

Rennie, who stands well over six and a half feet in his socks has an incredible sense of humor, immense vitality, and wide experience in many different areas. His wife and two children share their home with an enormous dog who often seems as huge as Dr. Rennie.

Preparing Your Horse For Winter?

The UVM Horse Club will be sponsoring a "Preparing your Horse for Winter" Clinic, this Sunday at The Spear Street Farm. The Clinic will start at 1:30 p.m.

The purpose of the Clinic is to make riders aware of their horses special needs during the winter time. Demonstrations will include clipping, stabling, nutrition, shoeing, and blanketing. Members of the Club and their horses will be participating.

The Horse Club has invited local 4-H, Pony Clubs and stables to come and watch. This is the second year in a row that the Club has put on such a clinic. Last year the clinic was very successful.

All interested students are invited, and refreshments will be served. If there are any questions, please call Verne E. Batchelder, at 863-5944.

Well folks, that's it for this year.

All of us on the staff would like to extend our warmest wishes for a Happy Holiday.

★ For all our anxious readers, publication will resume January 23, 1975. ★

THE EPI 90: TOP-RATED AMONG SPEAKERS UP TO $120. NOW $75.95

The EPI 90 is the same basic speaker that the leading independent testing magazine rated the most accurate in a category of speakers up to $120 each.

And the EPI 90 is now on factory-authorized, year-end, limited-time-only sale at a price of just $75.95.

When EPI puts a price like that on a speaker, you better believe that hurts.

Here's a fine bookshelf speaker offering superior dispersion characteristics to really fill a room with music.

It'll give you what EPI is famous for: the Linear Sound of EPI. A true and accurate sound. With no artificial boosting of the bass. And no loss of nuances and overtones at the high end.

In short, here's your chance to hurt EPI real bad!

THE LINEAR SOUND OF EPI

AN EPI SPEAKER SALE WITH PRICE CUTS SO DEEP THEY ACTUALLY HURT.

AUDIOMEN

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Barbara Prenkert '75, Editor-in-Chief
Rick Bernhoff '75, Assistant Editor
Wyatt Koch '77, Managing Editor
Sandy Jansen '77, News Editor
Margo Bendorf '75, Features Editor
Lana Charles '75, Arts Editor
Peter Campbell '75, Assistant Arts Editor
Mike Schwartz '75, Sports Editor
Kathy Stannard '77, Copy Editor
Debbie Powell '76, Advertising Manager

Editorial

That's All Folks

With this issue, the present editorial board of the Vermont Cynic steps down. A new editorial board will soon be elected and we wish them the best of luck.

But it takes more than luck to put together a good college newspaper. It takes hard work, ability and, sometimes, courage to do what you feel is right, despite possible repercussions.

A college newspaper has a precarious existence. It changes as its editorial board changes. The Vermont Cynic has gone on many different routes in the past decade. We have been alternatingly conservative, radical, and, unfortunately, quite mediocre.

In the past year, we believe the Cynic has gained a new maturity which, hopefully, will continue. We have been outspoken in our criticism of conflicts of interest, corruption and all the other problems which affect this university and this country.

Despite our criticism, the issues remain. Students and faculty members still have no say in decisions which affect all of us, such as the recent recommendations for massive budget cuts. Oppression and unfairness continue at the University of Vermont.

This is where a student newspaper can, and must, play a vital role. Although we are proud of how much progress we've made, the Cynic and the entire student body must have a stronger voice in university policies.

That is not an easy thing to do. The new editorial board will have to fight for a place that is rightfully theirs. We urge them to try, as hard as they can, to give the students some power over their education.

It seems strange for us to leave the Cynic. We've been involved in this for so long that it is, indeed, a part of us. But our work is finished. It's time for new people to direct the Cynic. We hope they can give it the added push it needs.

B.F.

Letters To The Editor

Football And The Band

To the Editor:

It would appear that on December 6, 1974, history will repeat itself at the University of Vermont. In 1971, we lost our baseball team and unless the board of trustees votes against President Edward Andrews' recommendation on December 6, UVM will not be represented next year on the Yankee Conference football schedule. For the first time in 77 years UVM will not have a football team. This letter is not intended in any way to be an attack on Dr. Andrews or his committee which proposed the budget cuts last Thursday. We do, however, wish to point out that we will be losing significantly more than just the football team, in that the Music Department will also lose.

This past season involved 55 enthusiastic and hard-working marching band members. Of those 55 members, at least half are music majors and will most likely some day be in a position where they will have marching bands of their own to instruct. Consequently, the dropping of our football program does more than just deprive UVM of a fall sport; it eliminates a learning process within the Music Department.

Looking at the situation more closely, the UVM band does not receive any financial support from the athletic department. The University Student Association does assist us in uniform cleaning, new music, recruiting tours and other necessary costs. However, the money that is used for traveling to away athletic activities is earned solely by the band with some help from private contributions. We do not mind having to raise our own funds; in fact, we really enjoy it. The point here is that in past years, the band has been accused of little or no school spirit. This season was an extremely productive one for the band and we are sure that anyone who attended any of the six out of ten games we performed at will tell you just how much spirit we really do have.

Let's not forget the cheerleaders and the majorettes, (neither of which are recognized by the University as a student organization and must fund themselves) who worked just as hard with the band in building school spirit. Let's not overlook how the band enlightened Burlington residents by parading to every home game or forget the pep rallies we held this year.

We are content with the fact that the University will not support us financially due to economic pressures, but we are not content with the possibility that next fall our marching uniforms may go unworn. So, whether your interests are with education, music or a well-rounded university, the UVM band asks for your support in keeping the football program alive.

I have worked with this fine group of musicians for twelve weeks now and have watched the enthusiasm grow with every practice. Marching season is finished for this fall and we are now into our concert season. However, plans are already in the making for next year's marching program. I am tremendously proud of our UVM band and hate to think of having to cancel all our future plans and ideas.

If the dropping of the football program is inevitable, let it be suggested that the process at least be delayed until such time as all Yankee Conference universities are forced to do so as well. It will take a group effort to preserve both our football and musical programs. In closing, if your thoughts and feelings are with ours, we would certainly appreciate hearing from you.

Kevin A. Murphy
President, UVM Band

Neglecting Responsibilities

To the Editor:

As you probably know, the S.A. Senate voted November 19, to express the feeling that football should be continued at UVM. This motion was not passed with the intent that football should be retained at the expense of academic programs, but that the student body sympathizes with the 43 members of the team (a substantial number of who attended the meeting) whose chief recreation has been removed from the university program.

It would appear that the sentiment of the senators would have dictated that a corresponding motion concerning academics be passed; that is that the student body sympathizes with those students who are hurt by the cutting of the Experimental Program, two year Nursing Program, etc.

As this motion was being readied for voting, a large number of senators left the meeting en masse, minutes before the question was to be voted upon; these senators seemed to be tired of the rather long and trying debate of the evening, and chose to depart despite the importance of the matter before them.

The question could not be acted upon as a quorum no longer existed (50 percent of the Senate). Those senators who left the meeting are guilty of complete irresponsibility in their duties to their constituencies.

There was no excuse for avoiding the question. The feeling among the remaining senators was one of complete disgust and disbelief. I may be presumptuous in my assumption that the sentiments of the Senate were in correspondence with the motion, but I do not believe that to be the case.

I would be greatly surprised if the motion in question is not passed on December 3 at the next meeting, but until that time, the student body may incorrectly assume that the S.A. Senate supports football over academics.

As for those senators who departed before the vote could be taken, I can only hope that in the future they will not neglect their responsibilities.

Dallas Xacher
Senator from Coolidge

Voice Your Opinion

To the Editor:

The Congressional elections are over. Many new representatives will go to Washington in January to make decisions about America's future and the major role it will play in world affairs.

With the end of the election season, the political interest and attention of many citizens is extinguished to be reborn again only two years later. In the meantime, our problems persist, often increasing, and around the world many continue to pay the price of our political hibernation and indifference.

American money still supports corrupt dictatorships in South Vietnam, South Korea, and Cambodia. In South Vietnam, thousands of citizens suffer in tiger cages and unimaginably horrible prisons for the crime of speaking out against a dictator who has permitted no political opposition, no freedom for the press, and no freedom of speech.

Two things result from this. The first result is unspeakable pain for the people of these countries. Pain and suffering that our aid makes possible. The second result is continued high military spending for America and great sums of military aid to these countries, a practice that depletes our wealth and adds to inflation as much as any factor.

As a result of our elections in Vermont, Patrick Leahy, Robert Stafford, and James Jeffords will be our representatives for the next two years. They will speak for us in the Congress and the world arena. Our responsibility as citizens did not end with their election.

Let us all, including the press, raise our voices and tell our representatives how we feel about this and other issues. Let us demand an end to military aid for the governments of South Vietnam, South Korea, and Cambodia. It is our government, our money, and our responsibility.

James Hannon
Brandon

More Letters...

False Alarms

To the Editor:

The WDW complex has been plagued by false alarms in the past few weeks. One was due to a smoke bomb that brought the fire department and caused many people still in their p.j.'s or whatever else they could dig up in the rush to stand about in the main lobby till the smoke was cleared out and the cause was determined. The next false alarm caused a more serious problem. On my way out, I found a friend standing under a fire alarm in great distress. He had to be helped out because he was incapacitated with fear. This should have not happened. Maybe the alarms themselves should be changed so that the tone should not produce panic. The idea is to wake up students not drive them into a state of panic. But the more obvious solution is to refrain from pulling the alarms. If the motive was fun, might I suggest that the people (freshmen?) get their kicks elsewhere and save the alarms for more serious purposes.

Brad Underhill

Unnecessary Initiation Rite

To the Editor:

I would like to express my deepest and sincere respects to the parents and family who lost their son and brother to an irrational and unnecessary initiation rite of a fraternity at Monmouth College in New Jersey.

You may have read it on the front page of The New York Daily News or The Boston Globe. Bill Flowers was a fellow classmate with whom I was more than acquainted. He was very independently minded and strongly motivated in what he did. He never quit.

He demonstrated this well in academics as well as in athletics and graduated with honors. During our four years at Christian Brothers Academy, my respect and admiration grew for Bill. But why was life taken away from a young man in such a foolish, impulsive and irrational manner?

I am not completely informed about fraternity initiations and rites, but why would a fraternity employ such a dangerous and senseless rite? If it's because of "tradition" or because it's "symbolic", a real friend of mine is dead.

I don't want to condemn one fraternity or all fraternities, but Bill's death and similar ones are definitely regretful answers to the practicality and reasoning of such fraternity initiations and rites.

John Blake

Save Nursing And EP

by Margo Howland

The UVM Board of Trustees will meet tomorrow – Friday, December 6 – to vote on the proposed budget cuts. In a departure from their original plans, they will meet in open session for the first part of the discussion, reverting to executive session only to act on individual contracts.

The UVM Board of Trustees now hold the future of the University in their hands.

Specifically, they will decide whether to retain the two-year nursing program, UVM football, the Experimental Program and some 60 faculty members.

One Board member has already indicated he is unwilling to drop the football program. I question his sense of priorities.

I know that the decisions made by Dr. Andrews and the Administration were difficult ones. I agree with most of them. I do feel that the UVM nursing program should not be cut. To do this would leave the State of Vermont with only one accredited 2-year program – at Vermont College.

I also question the elimination of the Experimental Program. While the University has seemed to have caught up to the EP, I wonder if the Board of Trustees is authorized to cut the program. It should be a decision of the College of Arts and Sciences. I hope the Board of Trustees will regard the public outcry to save these two programs.

The Penal System

To the Editor:

Once again as the New Year approaches, we take time to reflect upon a folding episode in our lives. To contemplate ways to better ourselves in the new year and make this a better world to live in.

This in itself is a luxury which some people like myself are not allowed to afford. Because we in the situation of confinement must mentally suppress and deprive ourselves in order to sustain a day to day existence.

Although long periods of incarceration have been shown to take a toll, and in some cases caused criminalization instead of rehabilitation, the penal system is still in the doldrums.

In order to rehabilitate you must capitulate to the old ways and give the individuals their basic freedom - that of hopeful thinking. To think that we are indeed able to think of the future with other thoughts besides those of anguish and dispair. That there are people in the penal system who do speak of rehabilitation and are sincerely feeling the words that they speak. And they are willing to let our thoughts flourish and mesh with a program that will better the individual as well as society and its taxpayers.

Hopefully, some good will come of the escalating costs of living which have come to be recently.

To confine a person who, with proper training can become an asset instead of a deficit to society and himself, is not only a crime to democracy but even a worse crime to humanity.

Sincerely yours,
Edward M. Battick
P.O. Box 26
Windsor, Vermont

Living/Learning Ice Cream Shop

To the Editor:

On November 20, at approximately 11:45 p.m., I went to the back of the line at Living/Learning's Walter's Ice Cream Shop with the intent of buying a soda. When fifteen minutes had passed, and I was three or four places closer to the counter, I, along with about ten other people, was told that the snack bar was closed. Nobody had specified in advance which person would be served last, thus allowing several of us to wait in line without being served. An attempt should be made to inform people as to whether or not they will be fortunate enough to buy the desired goods. I suggest that a rope be put up at a designated time, or simply that someone stand at the door during those crucial few minutes before the clock strikes twelve, in order to ensure that no more customers come in.

I also find it unfair that people waiting for sodas should wait behind people ordering items from the grill. A separate line set up specifically for small items during times of brisk business might alleviate this problem.

These are clearly problems of management, which is a problem in itself at Living/Learning.

Sincerely,
Daniel Rothstein

The Experimental Program

To the Editor:

The Experimental Program has been fighting to survive ever since it began at this university in 1969. Except for the original efforts of former Dean of Arts and Sciences Rollins, the administration has supported the Program with little more than words. The various directors (they don't seem to last too long) and some dedicated faculty and students have been the mainstays of support through action. That the E.P. has been able to do anything around here is to the credit of these few.

The Faculty Ad Hoc Committee to evaluate the Experimental Program, a group which has been most sensitive to the strengths, weaknesses and needs of the Program in the past (reports submitted November '70 and January '73), is due to report to the faculty of Arts and Sciences in December. The faculty themselves are to decide whether or not to continue the Program and in what form. This process has been preempted, although hopefully it will take place anyway.

Why continue the E.P.? There is no other program on campus, Living and Learning included, which provides all of the following to Freshman and Sophomores:

Pass/Fail grading with written evaluations

No distributional requirements

Four (five or six) courses per semester for a block of 15 credits

Small seminars in a diversity of subjects offered within the residence hall

Encouragement and support for doing independent study projects or cooperative study with a grad student.

These policies are aimed at getting students to direct their own education - more involved with faculty and less hassled by grades, credits, and requirements. This does not weaken standards or devalue quality as many might conclude. It helps to add personal meaning to learning and puts the responsibility for it, more on the learners themselves.

As for cost, - a careful accounting of tuition generated, number of courses taken by E.P. students, number of low paid non-UVM faculty utilized, amount of grant money received, - may show (I have not done such a study and to my knowledge no one else has either) that UVM is not spending any extra money per student on E.P. students at all.

In closing let me quote from last year's grant application to the Ford Foundation Venture Fund, in which the administration made the following statement about "the four most significant innovations in undergraduate education at UVM in recent years", (included were the Experimental Program, UYA, Environmental Program and Living/Learning):

"These programs are functioning successfully, and the University is committed to their continuation."

Yes, and UVM was awarded a grant for some $240,000.00.

Sincerely yours,
Alan W. Coulter
R.A., Coolidge Hall

Scenic Area Threatened

To the Editor:

Do you know that one of Maine's most wild and scenic areas is threatened by a 4-season resort development?

Bigelow Mountain, in Franklin and Somerset Counties, reaches an altitude of 4150 feet, and in terms of wilderness and esthetic values, is second only to the mountain mass of Katahdin, further north in Baxter State Park. A group of out-of-staters have formed the Flagstaff Corporation and envision turning the north side of Bigelow into the "Aspen of the East." Today this virtually untouched tract is a paradise for fishermen, hunters, hikers, snowshoers, and cross country skiers.

While there is no doubt that some economic benefit would accrue to the area residents, previous studies have shown that the largest benefits will be to the influx of out-of-staters that will change the character of the region. VPIRG studied Warren, Vermont, and found that the arrival of Sugarbush Corporation did little to benefit the local citizens.

Is this worth sacrificing one of Maine's outstanding wild areas?

"Friends of Bigelow" think not and is trying to have the Bigelow area set aside as a public preserve to be administered by the Departments of Conservation and Inland Fisheries and Game. We have written an act and want to let the citizens of Maine decide; but to get our initiative on the ballot we need a large number of signatures of Maine citizens.

If you are a Maine voter and would be willing to sign our petition or just want more information or better yet want to help, stop by and see us or give a call. In order to get the petitions back in time we need the signatures before Christmas!

Dave Barrington
Pringle Herbarium
601 Main St.
Burlington

The Cynic welcomes letters and columns from students, faculty or any other readers. Material for publication must be signed, but names will be withheld upon request.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arlen, George Georgakis, Andy Morris, Audrey Rothstein, Mark Sawyer
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Emery, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hurst, Sue Perkins, Stephen W. Tanner, ARTS: Bert Bodi, Robert Daudlin, Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Jon Kauffman, Adelaide Meagher, Paul Prior, Marsha Woleitz
COLUMNISTS: Debbie Adler, Tom McCormick, Scott McKay, Steve Rice, Elliott Pearlman
SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Grace, Rick Katz, Norm Robinson
PRODUCTION: Joan Forsaith, Karen Hill, Madeline Introndazzo, Beth LeVine, John Lynde, Daniel Mead, Mark Volk.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Glassner, Debbie Powell
BUSINESS MANAGER: Pam Gutman

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 656-4011. Deadline for material is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copies ten cents.

Good Luck on finals; See you next semester

The Effects Of

Recently UVM athletic director Dewie Lam... the Athletic Council with a long list of reas... should continue wasting money on varsity foo... will also be presented to the Board of Trustees. ... comment on some of Mr. Lambert's points.

1. Lambert contends that "football is a part ... educated man's curriculum."

This claim is both invalid and chauvinis... majority of UVM male students have no direc... varsity football. UVM women have absolutely ... impairs our education by wasting assets that ... more maturely. The football program hinde... educations of those few who compete by placin... above academic values and vastly reducing the ... football players can study. This is why they nee...

2. Lambert points out that football is part ... witness weekend TV programs.

Lambert is right here. Football, as were on... big part of our country's commercial ... universities have unfortunately become subse... culture by financing expensive teams which ... farm clubs for professional money interests ... separate itself from this commercialism and ... student and taxpayer money on commerci... (Remember our previous coach? He's now wit... team.)

3. Lambert claims that if football is dropp... band would be eliminated.

If the marching band exists only to serve ... statement contends, it, too, should be elimi... interested in music can join the UVM orchestra ...

4. Lambert contends that dropping ... adversely affect admissions.

The reverse would be true. Students who ... because of its spectator sports can't have m... Dropping football would have a positive effe... by attracting more intelligent and serious stude...

5. Lambert contends that alumni support ... be adversely affected.

This claim is an insult to most UVM alumn... support UVM because they want it to ... excellence and educate students who ... contribute to the solutions of important soci... problems. Unfortunately, there are some alum... support games rather than education. The... contributions to certain varsity teams, and t... repaid by the athletic department with ... privileges. Despite their contributions (or sh... fees") male intercollegiate sports will los... dollars this year. These alumni do not suppo... they support those who directly benefit ... teams. The general student body loses, be... facilities are monopolized by male varsity ... supports (alumni contributors, sports anno... friends).

Eliminating varsity football would ... support, but it might help free up the ... facilities.

6. Lambert warns that "political suppo... will be adversely affected."

This statement is an insult to Vermon... elected representatives, for it contends that ... for its games and not for its academic prog...

7. Lambert says "minority students ... affected."

Presently minority football and bas... being exploited. These players are bought ... money. They lose their scholarships if th... their time to studies rather than to varsity ... varsity football and basketball, UVM ... athletes, not needy minority students.

8. Lambert contends that without fo... is out."

On the contrary, how great homecom... annual football bore were eliminated and ... educational and intellectual like studi... distinguished lectures, etc. in which ha... could participate and show to the alumni ... really stands for.

The remainder of Mr. Lambert's com... fallacious and misdirected. Obviously, h... understand that a university exists to edu... at the expense of the general student body ...

UVM already has a fine intramural s...

We The Women

by Linda Cayton

A few months ago, Inez Garcia, a Ca... attacked and raped. After the attack, M... rapist down and killed him. Last month ... his murder.

Ms. Garcia's conviction for second d... on the fact that she suffered the attack, th... and killed him, rather than defending herse...

As she made no police report, there ... court, no legal proof of rape. Neither was ... By the time Ms. Garcia submitted to ... physical traces of rape remained.

At the trial, the judge forbid any tes... the rape as provocation for Ms. Garcia's ... with no defense.

The taking of life is never excusable ... ways of violating a life, and for many ... murder is the supreme violation.

In its decision the jury indicated tha... lenient if Inez had acted "in the heat ... premeditated a murder. Such a concise... equipped the legal system is to handle ... women who have been raped.

The passion of a woman who ha... dissipates. Rape is the total dehumaniz... total intrusion on her self, her deepest ... mistaken if they believed the passion left ... rapist finished with her.

Laws are made and enforced by men ... and will never understand what it does ... result, a miniscule number of rape co... down by the courts. In most cases, comp... are themselves treated like criminals, in... about their sexual histories, and often ... rape if their lifestyles are less than traditi...

I don't find it surprising that Ms. ... judicial system for relief. She must have ... her rapist would likely not have re... outcome, and would probably have invo... personal attack as the cornerstone ... tantamount to a second rape.

If anybody doubts that the syste... the remarks of a juror who voted f... conviction: "He was not trying to kill h... about the rapist, "he was just trying t... a good time."

"When I leave here, I'll have less ... than I did before."

...r

...g Responsibilities

...depart despite the importance of the matter before them.

The question could not be acted upon as a quorum no longer existed (50 percent of the Senate). Those senators who left the meeting are guilty of complete irresponsibility in their duties to their constituencies.

There was no excuse for avoiding the question. The feeling among the remaining senators was one of complete disgust and disbelief. I may be presumptuous in my assumption that the sentiments of the Senate were in correspondence with the motion, but I do not believe that to be the case.

I would be greatly surprised if the motion in question is not passed on December 3 at the next meeting, but until that time, the student body may incorrectly assume that the S.A. Senate supports football over academics.

As for those senators who departed before the vote could be taken, I can only hope that in the future they will not neglect their responsibilities.

Dallas Sacker
Senator from Coolidge

...e Your Opinion

...ections now go to ...make ...ence's ...role it ...the ...political ...many ...to be ...years ...e, our ...often ...d the ...to pay ...political ...ference. ...still ...orships in ...Korea, ...South ...citizens ...es and ...pracies ...ing out ...who has ...olitical ...for the ...dom of ...om this.

The first result is unspeakable pain for the people of these countries. Pain and suffering that our aid makes possible. The second result is continued high military spending for America and great sums of military aid to these countries, a practice that depletes our wealth and adds to inflation as much as any factor.

As a result of our elections in Vermont, Patrick Leahy, Robert Stafford, and James Jeffords will be our representatives for the next two years. They will speak for us in the Congress and the world arena. Our responsibility as citizens did not end with their election.

Let us all, including the press, raise our voices and tell our representatives how we feel about this and other issues. Let us demand an end to military aid for the governments of South Vietnam, South Korea, and Cambodia. It is our government, our money, and our responsibility.

James Hannon
Brandon

...c Area Threatened

...one of ...d scenic ...d by a ...opment? ...am, in ...Somerset ...titude of ...erms of ...c values, ...mountain ...further ...Park. A ...ers have ...gstaff ...cavinson ...side of ...en of the ...virtually ...paradise ...s, hikers, ...country ...o doubt ...benefit ...the area ...dents have ...benefits ...influx of ...ill change ...region ...Warren, ...that the arrival of Sugarbush Corporation did little to benefit the local citizens.

Is this worth sacrificing one of Maine's outstanding wild areas?

"Friends of Bigelow" think not and is trying to have the Bigelow area set aside as a public preserve to be administered by the Departments of Conservation and Inland Fisheries and Game. We have written an act and want to let the citizens of Maine decide, but to get our initiative on the ballot we need a large number of signatures of Maine citizens.

If you are a Maine voter and would be willing to sign our petition or just want more information or better yet want to help, stop by and see us or give a call. In order to get the petitions back in time we need the signatures before Christmas!

Dave Barrington
Pringle Herbarium
601 Main St.
Burlington

...tters ...ion and ...columns from students, ...readers. Material for publication must be ...be withheld upon request.

...ONT CYNIC

...George ... Steve Rice, Elliott Thurston
...Audrey ... SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Gaus, Rick Kam, Nunn Robinson
...Ajemian, ... PRODUCTION: Joan Foresith, ...ash, Mike ... Karen Hill, Madeline Isbrandtsen, ...Judy Hunt, ... Bob LeVine, John Lundy, Daniel ...Tanner, ... Mead, Mark Valle.
...ert Dunbar, ... ADVERTISING: Katherine ...Freydman, ... Bowen, Stephen Lee Brown, ...Joe Murphy, ... Sherry Gassner, Debbie Powell
...Adler, ... BUSINESS MANAGER: Pam ...Art McKay, ... Gannon

...signed to editorials, cartoons, or columns do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ...administration, faculty, or staff, or the Board of ...Trustees expressed by the columnists do not ...reflect the opinion of the majority of the ...VCYNIC Editorial Board.

...Published during the college year by the students ...of Vermont and State Agricultural College. ...Business offices in the Billings Center, ...Burlington. Telephone: 656-4971. Deadline for ...all copy is date of publication.

...1973. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single

The Effects Of Dropping UVM Football

Recently UVM athletic director Denis Lambert presented the Athletic Council with a long list of reasons why UVM should continue wasting money on varsity football. This list will also be presented to the Board of Trustees. I would like to comment on some of Mr. Lambert's points.

1. Lambert contends that "football is a part of a liberally educated man's curriculum."

This claim is both invalid and chauvinistic. The vast majority of UVM male students have no direct contact with varsity football; UVM women have absolutely none. Football inspires our education by wasting assets that could be used more maturely. The football program hinders the liberal education of those few who compete by placing sports values above academic values and vastly reducing the amount of time football players can study. This is why they need tutors.

2. Lambert points out that football is part of our culture, witness weekend TV programs.

Lambert is right here. Football, as seen on television, is a big part of our country's commercial culture. Many universities have unfortunately become subservient to this culture by financing expensive teams which merely serve as farm clubs for professional money interests. UVM should separate itself from this commercialism and stop wasting student and taxpayer money on commercial farm clubs. (Remember our previous coach? He's now with a professional team.)

3. Lambert claims that if football is dropped, the marching band would be eliminated.

If the marching band exists only to serve football, as the statement contends, it, too, should be eliminated. Students interested in music can join the UVM orchestra.

4. Lambert contends that dropping football would adversely affect admissions.

The reverse would be true. Students who choose a college because of its spectator sports can't have much on the ball. Dropping football would have a positive effect on admissions by attracting more intelligent and serious students.

5. Lambert contends that alumni support for UVM would be adversely affected.

This claim is an insult to most UVM alumni. Mature alumni support UVM because they want it to achieve academic excellence and educate students who will eventually contribute to the solutions of important social and economic problems. Unfortunately, there are some alumni who prefer to support games rather than education. They earmark their contributions to certain varsity teams, and in return they are repaid by the athletic department with lockers and gym privileges. Despite their contributions (or should we say "club fees") male intercollegiate sports will lose about 500,000 dollars this year. These alumni do not support the University; they support those who directly benefit from male varsity teams. The general student body loses, because our athletic facilities are monopolized by male varsity teams and their supports (alumni contributors, sports announcers, and other friends).

Eliminating varsity football would not hurt alumni support, but it might help free up the students' athletic facilities.

6. Lambert warns that "political support and sensitivities will be adversely affected."

This statement is an insult to Vermont citizens and their elected representatives, for it contends that they support UVM for its games and not for its academic programs.

7. Lambert says "minority students will be adversely affected."

Presently minority football and basketball players are being exploited. These players are bought with "scholarship" money. They lose their scholarships if they decide to devote their time to studies rather than to varsity sports. Because of varsity football and basketball, UVM recruits minority athletes, not needy minority students.

8. Lambert contends that without football, "homecoming is out."

On the contrary, how great homecoming could be, if the annual football bore were eliminated and replaced with things educational and intellectual like student concerts, plays, distinguished lectures, etc. in which hundreds of students could participate and show to the alumni what the university really stands for.

The remainder of Mr. Lambert's contentions are equally fallacious and misdirected. Obviously, Mr. Lambert fails to understand that a university exists to educate, not to entertain at the expense of the general student body's education.

UVM already has a fine intramural sports program, which enables all students - both male and female- to participate in almost all sports. Yet this intramural program operates with only a fraction of the money that is wasted on elitist, all male varsity teams and their coaches, tutors, trainers, recruiters, P.R. men, etc.

Dropping big money losers, like varsity football and basketball, which profit a few at the expense of us all, would greatly benefit UVM and Vermont. Cutting back all commercial varsity sports and eliminating unneeded, non-educational positions, like "coach" and "athletic director" would also be beneficial.

United Farmworkers Are Struggling

by Jesse Clemens

The United Farmworkers are struggling for basic rights that most working people already enjoy. But, they are specifically excluded from labor laws that would protect their right to organize and achieve decent working conditions. Millionaire employers simply fire workers who show an interest in forming a union. That's why they need the help of other workers and consumers. People like you!

If you refuse to buy non-UFW lettuce, grapes and wines, a loss in growers profits will result, thus forcing them to give farmworkers their right to form a union and earn a decent living. Some of these wealthy growers have indicated that they're willing to lose up to 50 per cent of their profits rather than sign with the United Farmworkers. Why? Because the UFW will enforce their contracts. They will insist on higher wages so that families can afford to remove their children from the fields and send them to school.

Twenty five percent of farmworkers are under 16 years of age. They will also demand greater control of pesticides sprayed on the fields. 75,000 farmworkers are poisoned every year from these pesticides. A union contract would also mean a health plan for the workers. The death rate from this occupation is 300 percent higher than the average. Death from tuberculosis and other infectious diseases is 260 percent higher than normal. The average life expectancy for a farmworker is 49 whereas the average for most workers is 70. A contract will also provide such things as cool water a necessity when working all day in fields in 120 degree heat.

Who are the growers the farmworkers are struggling against? When we talk about the lettuce-grape growers, we are not talking about small family run farms. In California, less than one tenth of one percent of the farms own forty percent of the cropland. These are farms owned and controlled by such corporations as Dow Chemical, who controls Bud Antle, one of the largest lettuce growers in the country, or Tenneco Corporation, whose landholdings constitute an area more than twice the size of Rhode Island!

These Agri-business Conglomerates are now the ones who are actively fighting the right of the workers to organize themselves. An indication of their callous attitude is exemplified by the words of a southern grower, "We used to own slaves, now we just rent them."

Many growers have seen that the days of non-union farmwork is coming to an end. They have decided that if there is to be a union, they would much rather sign with the Teamster Union, whose high officials have the same basic interests as the growers. Under the Teamsters' contract, there are lower wages, no democratic hiring halls, few benefits, no pesticide control, no grievance procedure. These Teamster-Grower contracts have been declared illegal by the California Supreme Court, but the growers have continued to refuse to negotiate with the UFW.

It is clear then that the only way to force these growers to recognize the UFW is to spread the boycott of Non-UFW produce. These include lettuce without the Black Eagle and United Farmworker emblem on it, all grapes, and Gallo, Guild and Franzia wines. The University of Vermont buys only non-UFW lettuce for its cafeterias. There are petitions circulating, and a committee being set up to get the University to stop supporting the Agribusiness Corporations and the Teamster Officials by getting rid of this non-UFW lettuce. If you would like to help do this call the UFW Support Committee at 864-4661.

We can win! In the late sixties, the grape and lettuce boycott forced the growers to sign the first UFW contracts. When the contracts ran out in April 1973, the growers thought that the farmworkers plight would be a dead issue and they could use cheaper labor once again. But this is not so. Lettuce and grape sales are off 28 percent in the East and as more people become aware of the boycott they will drop further.

Everyone who believes that workers should have the right to union representation must participate in this boycott. Boycott scab lettuce, grapes wines and tell the store managers why you are not buying these things. Remember, the people who feed the people of America, now need food for themselves.

The November Elections

by Steve Lavoie

Seldom do public events conform to a neat and ready analysis. I, for one, am always inclined to see hidden dimensions in even the most seemingly clear cut of situations.

However, the outcome of the November election would be difficult to misread.

The electorate is angry. In fact, the electorate is infuriated and they showed it. All over the country the Republicans, who had come to symbolize a weak and corrupt government and a sagging economy, were goosed out of office with a fiery inward.

While some of the GOP's troubles may be attributable to a negative press, which so vocally predicted a Democratic sweep, and still others might have grown out of the Republicans' universally inept campaigning, there can be little doubt that the voters were fundamentally displeased and anxious to make that displeasure obvious.

During six years of Republican leadership the average American has watched his pay check sink toward zero amid snowballing revelations of government waste and deception. Madison Avenue aside, in a bourgeois democracy such things lose elections.

The net effect of the Democratic mandate on correcting the problems that so fankle the citizenry is less certain. Many of the economic and political problems we face are not readily remedied by a change of regime. Our economic conundrum is rooted in worldwide conditions and the enervation of our institutions is an ongoing process. Nothing less than substantial new initiatives of different sorts can help us out now, and now Congress, however powerful, can take on what are essentially the functions of the executive branch in the creation of new programs. What looks likely now is that we will be forced to endure a tug-of-war lasting less than two years between the Capitol and the White House.

When it is over none of the traditional ententes of American politics will emerge undamaged. It is highly possible that in 1976 the disgusted electorate will face a choice of four major presidential candidates left to right, Gene McCarthy representing the disaffected Democratic Left; Henry Jackson, running for the old Democratic party; Gerald Ford, the nominee of the loyal GOP and George Wallace backed by a coalition of the Rights of both large parties.

One thing is certain, for the first time in a generation the American people are fixing the blame for the nation's woes on the beaver hats and the success or failure of any candidacy for some time will hinge on the candidate's provable distance from beaver hatism, from the old bosses.

An anti-beaver hat, anti-red ticket with a Franklin Roosevelt heading is the formula most probably feasible for the next presidential race, but looking about there is no one of any persuasion or loyalty capable of filling the bill to be seen.

The people have handed their leaders a stinging rebuke. The next move is up to the politicians.

****

Last month the U.S. culminated a massive effort to blockade the shipment of marijuana into the country from the Caribbean using ships, aircraft, sophisticated electronic equipment and the constabularies of three countries. The multi-national task force confiscated tons of marijuana, seized boats, destroyed clandistine landing strips and arrested scores of people, mostly Americans citizens. As usual, many of the searches and arrests were illegal, taking place in many instances in international waters. The cost of this operation, though of course the figures are unavailable, must have run into the millions.

The anti-drug apparatus that the deposed Richard Nixon put together during his regime with the help of such able consultants as G. Gordon Liddy, has become a major source of violence and misery throughout the western hemisphere. It has access to enless funds, its workings are secret and it is accountable to no one. It breaks into American homes at will, connives against them with foreign powers, grabs their property and when it gets the chance, it kills them off.

It would not justify the conduct of the Drug Enforcement Administration even if they were doing their appointed job of keeping drugs out of the country.

Curiously, however, just as the Jamaican supplies are drying up a new and powerful strain of pot from Mexico is hitting the streets in our cities. It is imported without difficulty because it is imported by the CIA. Strangely enough, the big U.S. push against Turkish opium overlooked the supplies that emanate from Southeast Asia which are also moved under the agency's protection.

These people, both in the CIA and the DEA, are a bunch of thugs. They care no more for halting the flow of drugs than they care for human life or constitutional rights and that is very goddam little. From their behavior, the only conclusion to be drawn is that their primary interest is the creation of a government sponsored monopoly of the illicit drug market.

A priority for the new Congress should be the curtailment of this obscene privateering. Justice demands the swift and merciless prosecution of all the individuals involved.

We The Women: Rape

by Linda Cayton

A few months ago, Inez Garcia, a California woman, was attacked and raped. After the attack, Ms. Garcia hunted the rapist down and killed him. Last month she was convicted of his murder.

Ms. Garcia's conviction for second degree murder hinged on the fact that she suffered the attack, then followed the man and killed him, rather than defending herself during the attack.

As she made no police report, there was, according to the court, no legal proof of rape. Neither was there medical proof. By the time Ms. Garcia submitted to an examination, no physical traces of rape remained.

At the trial, the judge forbid any testimony pertaining to the rape as provocation for Ms. Garcia's crime. She was left with no defense.

The taking of life is never excusable. But there are many ways of violating a life, and for many women, rape, not murder is the supreme violation.

In its decision the jury indicated that it might have been lenient if Inez had acted "in the heat of passion" and not premeditated a murder. Such a conclusion indicated how ill-equipped the legal system is to handle the victimization of women who have been raped.

The passion of a woman who has been raped never dissipates. Rape is the total dehumanization of a woman, a total intrusion on her self, her deepest being. The jury was mistaken if they believed the passion left Inez Garcia when her rapist finished with her.

Laws are made and enforced by men. Men cannot be raped and will never understand what it does to its victims. As a result, a minimcule number of rape convictions are handed down by the courts. In most cases, complaining victims of rape are themselves treated like criminals, interrogated and bullied about their sexual histories, and often accused of provoking rape if their lifestyles are less than traditional.

I don't find it surprising that Ms. Garcia didn't trust the judicial system for relief. She must have known that a trial of her rapist would likely not have resulted in a satisfactory outcome, and would probably have involved her in a degrading personal attack as the cornerstone of the man's defense, tantamount to a second rape.

If anybody doubts that the system is weighted, consider the remarks of a juror who voted for Ms. Garcia's murder conviction: "He was not trying to kill her," the man explained about the rapist, "he was just trying to screw her and give her a good time."

"When I leave here, I'll have less fear of raping a woman than I did before."

Harvest Time In The South

by Barry Potter

The standing complaint that freeway travelers miss much of the valuable local color in the passing countryside is noplace more true than in Americas midwest, where domestic marijuana is now ripe for the harvest.

About the time of first frost, sometime in mid- October, the traveler who forsakes the freeways for folksy country highways is constantly rewarded with an abundance of cannabis. Locals bustle around at their daily chores heedlessly stomping pot into the ground or doing their best to eradicate the pesky stuff from corn and soybean fields.

Collecting gear required is minimal. A feed sack (preferably the paper kind with a lithographed picture of a pig) for the big stash and a traditional brown paper shopping bag for actual collecting is all you need to become a dope barron beyond your wildest dreams. Like someone once said about mosquitos, "Kill all you want; there's enough for everybody."

Best hunting locations seem to be along roads, fencelines and in waste places near old buildings, wrecked autos or wood piles. The dreaded weed seems to prefer dry sandy soil to the richer, damper soil of bottoms, and open and sunny areas to shaded places.

Those familiar with the plant from pictures in magazines or books, or who believe it comes in little plastic bags will have to learn a new silhouette. The tall, sparse plants have few of the large, broad leaves (at least along the Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri border area) which one is led to expect from field guide descriptions. Instead one finds a relatively bare stalk with many small, fine leaves concentrated among several buds.

Those with any question of the identity of handfuls of sticky buds, leaves and seeds will be immediately convinced by the minty, somewhat narcotic smell of the plant that they have indeed found the one, true Domestic Green. They will also quite likely recognize that their local OK Sam dealer man has passed the same product as the one, true Imported Green.

The collector must, above all, exercise restraint. Even though confronted by enough of the fabled weed at every turn to run naked through it (according to tradition), the traveler is advised to collect only a shopping bag full at each location and press on to new areas at frequent intervals. Particularly after a frost, leaves and buds may easily be stripped from individual stems, eliminating a considerable amount of bulk. Since plants six feet tall and larger are frequently encountered, stripping results in considerably less handling and far greater convenience if you are traveling in a sedan sized vehicle.

The plant must be properly dried after collection to prevent souring and molding, which will happen if it is kept tightly packed in the feed sack or particularly if it is kept in plastic bags. The collector is presented with a problem at this point, since plastic bags are about the only thing that will contain the strong odor of the drying plants. If a suitably remote area can be found, drying may be quickly accomplished in the open air and sun by spreading the plants on a painter's drop cloth or opened sleeping bags. If you are traveling in a large vehicle, such as a van, the plants may be dried in burlap sacks or cheesecloth bags of the type used by hunters to keep flies from meat.

The successful collector will eventually be trucking down the road with a big sack full of dry dope, which is an ideal of sorts. Because of excess enthusiasm, the collector who has no commercial intent will probably find himself with a considerable excess and be searching for new ways to consume it beyond the familiar cigarette and pipe. Ideal for the traveler in this predicament is thermos tea, which can be made only with a handful of leaves and hot water from the service station can. It also improves the sore throat which usually results from constant sampling the newly obtained product.

The traveling weed collector is in a unique position to perform a public service for all smokers of the green. Remember to separate and save those seeds which you've collected in such abundance. If you carefully plant them in the same kinds of places you've learned they like, making a map if you plan to return next year, you can help spread the good fortune of the midwest all across the country. The reason it's there is that there's too much for anyone to burn or chop down. Leave it to the plant freaks to design new and better strains.

The trip is worth it for anyone that comes from a state where the discovery of a plant or two, or a patch, is grounds for police investigation and pictures in the paper. It grows wild!

The new American ambassador to the famine belt

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Open Auditions For Macbett

Open Audition for the 1975 Player's Production of Eugene Ionesco's MACBETT will be held December 9 and 10 at 7:00 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre. These auditions are open to anyone in the community. Copies of the play are available at the Business Office of the Royall Tyler Theatre, 656-3095.

MACBETT will be the sixth Player's Production since its inception in 1969. The Player's Production is the only major play at the theatre produced entirely by students. Previous Player's Productions have included Shaw's Arms and the Man, Camino Real by Tennessee Williams, and most recently Marlowe's Doctor Faustus which was presented in January 1973. Last year, due to the move from the Arena Theatre to the new Royall Tyler, no production was staged.

Open audition for MACBETT will be held December 9 and 10 at 7:00 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre. These auditions are open to the entire community. Following auditions, a cast will be chosen to begin rehearsal on January 2. While most students will be on semester break, these students plus many more involved in the technical aspects of the show, will be working daily in order to be ready to open on January 24.

Bruce Springsteen

Springsteen & "E" Street Band To Rock On December 8

Bruce Springsteen – What can you say about a rock and roll singer? Well, John Landau of the Real Paper said this: "I saw rock and roll future and its name is Bruce Springsteen, and on a night when I needed to feel young, he made me feel like I was hearing music for the very first time."

Bruce Springsteen will play in Burlington Memorial Auditorium, Sunday, December 8 at 8 p.m. He will lead his "E" Street Band through "an evening of Rock that is guaranteed to get everyone off like a three fingered shot of Tequila.

Bruce Springsteen is unique among singer- songwriters in that his roots are in the exciting colors and chord changes of fifties and sixties rock and roll. His music has been described as a combination of early Bob Dylan, Van Morrison, and Chuck Berry. Lyrically, Bruce's compositions are intricate streams of soul, populated by angels, urban gypsies, go-Kart mozart's and punk saints, real people all. The songs range from love songs to accounts of city life.

The realism of subject matter is no accident. For eight years, since he was 16, Springsteen has been doing street corner research from the Board walk of Asbury Park to the streets of New York City. "The stuff I write I live with, the stories are all around me. I just put 'em down. They're all true, even the names Big Balls Billy, Weak Kneed Willie, All of 'em."

Bruce and The "E" Street Band have been together for five years and have collaborated on two critically acclaimed albums: Greetings from Asbury Park, N.J., and The Wild, The Innocent and the "E" Street Shuffle.

In concert, the Band moves at a lightning pace with the professionalism and togetherness that years of playing bring. Springsteen and company perform well-executed, well- placed instrumental solos, infrequent enough to remain exciting. The orchestration and arrangement highlight the extraordinary range and complexity of Springsteen's vocals.

More than any other rock vocalist Springsteen can articulate a lyric, to locate his delivery at the lyrically appropriate point between whisper and shout. On stage his unique vocabulary of body language and fine choreography merge. He is both creator and actor of his songs. And the humor, dramatics, and even punkiness of his performance emphasize the incredible insight and humanity of his lyrics.

The Bruce Springsteen concert on Sunday will be probably one of the best and most innovative Burlington will see and hear this year. So be you fanatical fan or apprehensive new listener come to the Auditorium and be blinded by the light.

The concert is sponsored by the After school program.

Music Thing:

Carole King, Genesis

by Michael Thurston

Wrap Around Joy
Carole King

The problems involved in trying to equal or surpass a masterpiece are at once complex and frustrating. Carole King has found that out in her repeated attempts at something better than Tapestry. Wrap Around Joy is an album that, in its own way, comes mighty close to that goal. It isn't necessarily better, perhaps not even as good, but that's not important. With Tapestry nearing its fourth birthday, and Wrap Around Joy barely out of the shell, it's both unfortunate and absurd to evaluate the new album in terms of Tapestry's success.

Wrap Around Joy disregards any sense of competition. The twelve selections find a confident, powerful Carole King, influenced heavily by soul and rhythm and blues. Influences which are clearly demonstrated through her delivery, phrasing, and dynamics. The writing is clean and distinctive, the vocals strong and economized, the back-up well mixed and tight.

Wrap Around Joy comes as close as any of King's albums in finding Tapestry's sense of direction. Moreover, Carole King and Dave Palmer have put together a collection of tunes with enough gusto and spunk to stand along Bachman-Turner- Overdrive, Elliott Murphy, and Suzi Quatro without the slightest tinge of laughter. Contemporary songs saying contemporary things through contemporary style. Such an ability was a key to King's early sixties success as a writer for many top chart performers. A step ahead of the trends. That step is the salvation for Wrap Around Joy.

Carole King, as vocalist, has been a constant. The variable of her musical equation has long been the quality of her back-up band. On Tapestry the band was gentle, pastel, yet quick, crisp, and punctual. Subsequent albums heard cheaply constructed commercial riffs, trite pop layers plunked to death, and sappy background vocals, most of which appeared as nothing more than camouflage for sloppy instrumentation. Wrap Around Joy finds success in diversity, being both brash and bucolic. Throughout, the instrumentation is sharp and concise; Carole's piano is back in the spotlight where it can best relate to her vocal delivery. Tom Scott's sax solo on Jazzman is one of the highlights, as is Jim Horn's solo on the title tune. It's a new Carole King album that pays particular attention to every level of the music. The listener gets the impression that as much care was executed on Andy Newmark's wood block as on Carole King's vocals. Such total development of the music brings back diapason to Carole King music which has been missing these past few records.

The material for Wrap Around Joy, updates her commercial ability, epitomizing that well- known King ability to pump out the hits. Simple, uncomplicated lyrics, pyramidal chord structure, and a surplus of vocal overdubbing, both for choral and double- lead effects, combine for twelve commercially 'ripe' dynamos. Jazzman, another of Carole's testimonials to her own influences from black music, is already planted on the top 40 charts, with numbers like You Go Your Way, I'll Go Mine, and Nightingale bound to follow. It is often said of Joni Mitchell that commercial appeal is purely a by- product of her introspective writing. Conversely, any introspection on the art of Carole King is a by- product of commercial appeal. Despite King's priorities in constructing a song, she can make it highly

(continued on page eight)

For Decer... Welsh Guards...

Two marching bands, the be... Welsh Guards and the Argyll/ po... Sutherland Highlanders, appear $3... in the Lane Series on th... Thursday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m., in W... Patrick Gym. With massed 65... bands, pipes, drums and dancers, two of the most famous regiments from Great Britain return to America for the first time together. A company of 80, the group presents an inspiring never-fo...

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5
WEST SIDE STORY (1961) – Natalie Wood, Richard Beymer
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6
BOB & CAROL & TED & ALICE (1969) – Robert Culp, Natalie Wood
THE GREAT RACE (1965) – Jack Lemmon, Tony Curtis, Natalie Wood
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – $1
Also repeated at 12 midnight

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7
EXODUS (1960) – Paul Newman, Eva Marie Saint, Peter Lawford
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9
JUDGMENT AT NUREMBERG (1961) – Spencer Tracy, Burt Lancaster
103 Rowell – 7:30 – Free

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
DORSET STREET
I Grapes Tube
II Odessa File

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I The Bears & I Sat & Sun Matinee
The Shaggy Dog
Chinatown &
II Play it again Sam

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Trial of Billy Jack

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
King of Hearts
Hollander

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I The Gambler
II Harry & Tonto

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I The Savage is Loose
II The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights or special showings

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT AT CARBURS
The Best Place For The Late Night Hungries
CARBURS
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
THURSDAY JOHN CASSELL
FRIDAY LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
SATURDAY FRANK WILLIAMS
TUESDAY BRIAN CURRY WITH RICK PRICE
WEDNESDAY PETER AND JOHN ISAACSON

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS – ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

A TRULY INDEPENDENT "INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION"
EVENINGS AT 7:00 & 9:15
Mat. SAT.-SUN. 2 PM
George C. Scott has spent a lifetime at war with the "Hollywood system". He has defied its most hallowed customs, perhaps epitomized by his rejection of the coveted Oscar. He abhors the stifling and heartrending [illegible] of creative film artistry and talent by studio autocracy.
Now he has risked his own money, and called hard to bring an unusual and exciting film to the screen... free from any compromising influences. Controversial it is! But this is Scott, the gifted painter allowing his canvas to be creased it.
Some will dismiss; many will applaud. We think it is an important film. Perhaps you will too!
The Management
THE SAVAGE IS LOOSE
George C. Scott · Trish Van Devere
"The Savage is Loose"
starring John David Carson and Lee H. Montgomery
Executive Producer Robert F. Phillips · Produced and Directed by George C. Scott
PANAVISION · TECHNICOLOR · GP

There's a little bit of Duddy Kravitz in everyone.
7:00 & 9:30
THE APPRENTICESHIP OF DUDDY KRAVITZ
Starring RICHARD DREYFUSS
A STUNNING DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE BY RICHARD DREYFUSS, who has the ideas involved, invention and excitement that characterized Dustin Hoffman, starred in The Graduate!
–Rex D. Jamerson, Jamerson
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

THE SILVER KEG
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY TUESDAY WEDNESDAY
FREE ADMISSION
THURSDAY ½ PRICE NITE
★ FEATURING ★
SUNDAY DEC. 15
JOHN LEE HOOKER
ONE NITE ONLY
DEC. 3-7 BOLD EXPRESSIONS
DEC. 9-14 SPOONFEATHER
DEC. 16-21
DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE

IF you like good food and drink, you will just love the BLACK CAT
166 Bank Street
Now available!!! Black Cat T-shirts!

THE LAST CHANC... SA...
MON...
147 MAI...

Street Band
December 8

language and fine choreography merge. He is both creator and actor of his songs. And the humor, dramatics, and even preciseness of his performance emphasize the incredible insight and humanity of his lyrics.

The Bruce Springsteen concert on Sunday will be probably one of the best and most innovative Burlington will see and hear this year. So be you fanatical fan or apprehensive new listener come to the Auditorium and be blinded by the light.

The concert is sponsored by the After school program.

ing:
King, Genesis

performers. A step ahead of the trends. That step is the salvation for Wrap Around Joy.

Carole King, as vocalist, has been a constant. The variable of her musical equation has long been the quality of her back-up band. On Tapestry the band was gentle, pastel, yet quick, crisp, and punctual. Subsequent albums heard cheaply constructed commercial riffs, trite pop layers plunked to death, and sappy background vocals, most of which appeared as nothing more than camouflage for sloppy instrumentation. Wrap Around Joy finds success in diversity, being both brash and bucolic. Throughout, the instrumentation is sharp and concise; Carole's piano is back in the spotlight where it can best relate to her vocal delivery. Tom Scott's sax solo on Jazzman is one of the highlights, as is Jim Horn's solo on the title tune. It's a new Carole King album that pays particular attention to every level of the music. The listener gets the impression that as much care was executed on Andy Newmark's wood block as on Carole King's vocals. Such total development of the music brings back diapason to Carole King music which has been missing these past few records.

The material for Wrap Around Joy updates her commercial ability, epitomizing that well-known King ability to pump out the hits. Simple, uncomplicated lyrics, pyramidal chord structure, and a surplus of vocal overdubbing, both for choral and double-lead effects, combine for twelve commercially 'ripe' dynamos. Jazzman, another of Carole's testimonials to her own influences from black music, is already planted on the top 40 charts, with numbers like You Go Your Way, I'll Go Mine, and Nightingale bound to follow. It is often said of Joni Mitchell that commercial appeal is purely a by-product of her introspective writing. Conversely, any introspection on the art of Carole King is a by-product of commercial appeal. Despite King's priorities in constructing a song, she can make it highly

(continued on page eight)

IF you like good food and drink, you will just love the BLACK CAT 160 Bank Street

Now available!! Black Cat T-shirts!

West Side Story: Anatomy Of A Flop

by Peter Campbell

When Ernest Hemingway remarked that the rich were "different from you and I," someone quipped, "yeah, they have more money than we do."

The same may be said for actors. They act more than we, the play-goers, do. Art is sacred but artists are not. As a reviewer, I am just a member of the audience, though, hopefully, a more informed one.

On with the show
On with the review

oooooo

I consider the West Side Story a great musical. It has a strong and well-balanced book, excellent lyrics set to wonderful music, and it is a "modern" musical in the best sense of that word. Leonard Bernstein's score -- a subtle blend of folk, jazz, classical, and show-tune and the suitably eclectic dance choreography are so well woven into the fabric of the story, one is hardly aware of West Side's complexity. It requires a multiple combination of talent, not just dancing, singing, and acting, but dancing, singing, and acting in many styles and moods. This complexity was met somewhat satisfactorily in the dance and song. But the acting was something else, and it cast an un-redeemable pall over the whole show.

West Side's director, Ed Feidner, should have realized that the West Side story is not just a play about juveniles who like to dance and sing. He should have looked more closely at West Side's source, Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, a love story that is beautiful and tragic. While it may be argued that the West Side Story is closer to melodrama than tragedy, still the musical has a very strong look with strong emotional arguments that require strong acting. Hamilton Gillette as "Tony," and Betsy Govine as "Maria" were at best wooden in performance, and they had obviously been under-directed.

They were also grotesquely miscast, Mr. Gillette being about three feet taller and a hundred pounds lighter than Ms. Govine. Could Mr. Feidner have meant this to be humerious? If so, it was out of place. But then Ed Feidner has had a tendency to reduce young love to a mere lusting of loin for loin. In other Shakespearean productions, like The Tempest, last summer and A Midsummer Nights' Dream from the summer before, Mr. Feidner could not resist turning everything into a dirty joke and he laughed at the young lovers where I felt Shakespeare was laughing with them. In comedy Mr. Feidner got away with it. But I suspect that Mr. Feidner could not, or would not, readjust his particular attitude for this more serious work.

If, as some contend, Romeo and Juliet is just a "kidee-story," then perhaps it should be left to the kids, and not unsympathetic old men.

A few other quibbles:

Ed Tracey as "Riff", the leader of the Jets, had a good singing voice, but he still needs to clear the Vermont accent out of his speech.

Paul Uglade, as "Bernardo", head of the "Sharks," was decent, but I wonder why he gets all the "macho" roles when, his face and voice belie that quality.

"Sharks," your Puerto Rican accents did not cut the mustard.

The "sharks" girls had the second-best number with "America." The dancing was graceful and the singing was pretty. Denise Commock, as "Anita," Bernardo's girl-friend, was the only principal who came across with a clear voice, clear emotion, and, most important, a clear identity. None of the other characters seemed quite real to me.

The best number was "Gee, Officer Krumpke," performed by the "Jets" who were all very good, especially Kent Cassella as Arab, Daniel Godhin as "Action" and Steve Godhin as "Snow Boy." They were fast, funny, and they delighted the audience.

One reason for the "Jets" success with this scene may have been their not having to contend with the orchestra, which was too loud. I noticed that the conductor was jumping on pins and needles to keep it soft, but the theatre has acoustical problems which will have to be worked out in the future.

The ballet scene could have been cut down to a symbolic sixty seconds rather than five minutes of distraction.

Technically, the lighting was together, but I had an impression of drabness and darkness most of the time. The difference of light and dark, day and night, are very important for mood and time continuity. The lighting in West Side Story did not establish this sufficiently.

I know a lot of time and energy went into The West

(continued on page nine)

For December Lane Series
Welsh Guards "Nutcracker" Offered

Two marching bands, the Welsh Guards and the Argyll/Sutherland Highlanders, appear in the Lane Series on Thursday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m., in Patrick Gym. With massed bands, pipes, drums and dancers, two of the most famous regiments from Great Britain return to America for the first time together. A company of 80, the group presents an inspiring never-to-be-forgotten spectacle of pomp and ceremony. Tickets, $3, $5, and $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. Reservations: 656-3418.

"B" (Ballet)

Tchaikovsky's most famous ballet, "the Nutcracker," will be danced as a Lane Extra on Saturday, Dec. 7, at 8 p.m., in Memorial Auditorium. The Hartford Ballet's full length production is completely new. Appearing with the company is the Vermont Symphony Ballet Orchestra, conducted by its new conductor, Efrain Guigui. (Last year's performance was sold out.) Tickets, $3 and $5, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. Reservations: 656-3418.

ART PRINT SALE
U.V.M. Billings Ctr.
Marsh Lounge
& GALLERY 410
214 College St.
THURS. 2nd
FRI. 10am-6pm
+Old & Modern Masters
+Contemporary +Art Nouveau
25¢ 50¢ $1.00 $2.50
and a few higher.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON
RETURN OF THE 20' ALE
MONDAY – THURSDAY
7-9:30 PM
147 MAIN ST.

TORTILLA FLAT
for
DELICIOUS MEXICAN FOOD
SPECIAL FOR TWO
Mondays & Tuesdays only $3.95
Your choice of a taco plate or enchilada plate with a lettuce and tomato salad.
Not including dessert, beverage, or tax.
Effective through December 10th, 1974
317 Riverside Ave. Burlington, Vt. 863-9230

billings bedlam
FRIDAY DEC. 6, 1974
7:30p.m. 'til 7:30a.m.
DEN OPEN TIL 5:30 a.m.
WIDE SELECTION OF COOKIES
INTRODUCING THE DENBURGER
BREAKFAST SPECIAL featuring 2 eggs, bacon, toast or english muffins, coffee or tea.
only 79 cents or 2 coupons with this corner of ad.
7:30 p.m. HELP STARRING THE BEATLES 8:00p.m. PINGPONG TOURNEY, CO-ED SINGLES 8:30p.m. CRIBBAGE TOURNEY AND DOUBLES CHESS TOURNEY 9:30p.m. THE NORTHERN LIGHTS-A JAZZ BLUES QUARTET 10:00p.m. SLIPSTREAM-A ROCK AND ROLL BAND 11:30p.m. TIP TONY THE BAND 11:00p.m. 12midnite PAPER AIRPLANE FLYING CONTEST 2:00a.m. POP JUGGLER 1:00a.m. EYE FOLLIES AND PIE EATING CONTEST 2:30a.m. CIGARETTE ROLLING CONTEST 4:00a.m. HELP 2nd showing 6:00a.m. MOVIE OF AUDIENCES CHOICE FOLK DANCING IN MID-EVE WRUV-AM LIVE TV MOVIE SHORTS THRUOUT THE NITE JIGSAW PUZZLING

MACBETT

Simpson Dining Hall Receives Musical Repast

by Robert DeNike

Simpson Dining Hall was filled with two hundred pairs of hungry ears last Tuesday evening in expectation of a filling musical repast with Bruce "Utah" Phillips, Wayne "Aardvark" Bayer, Simpson's Head Advisor and fluent speaker of the mid-eater tongue, in introduction listed the many trades of which Utah is a jack-of-many. They include tall tale teller, folklorist, labor organizer, anarchist, demolition weapons expert and philosopher. By his stories and songs I came to see that Utah was indeed someone very special.

The opening hour left many in the audience with sides sore and eyes tearful from prolonged laughter. Utah's ability to spin off joke after joke was uncanny. I had come expecting a folksinger and instead I was getting a surprisingly hilarious comedian. To a background of country/western style of finger-picking, Utah narrated experiences of work, childhood and travel, all of which had a punch line. He made brief reference to his last visit to UVM when "President Fraud was here making a speech on inflation while he and his followers were munching on fifty dollar dinners. Ya know."

He added, "the President spent the most formative years of his life as a football center, looking at the world upside-down between his legs." This illustrates the nature of Utah's sense of humor and why it is so appealing, not necessarily because it is political (it deals more often with social and economic issues) but because it is basic, down to earth and can be appreciated by anyone of any background, and interests.

Utah's music also centers explicitly around this theme of simplicity and primitivism. Like most musicians, Utah sings about what he doesn't like. "I like to complain," he revealed. His favorite peeves are parents, rich people, gangsters and organized religion. Unlike many musicians, especially the ones with little talent, Utah can vary mood and emotional tone to opposite extremes. Following intermission, the folksinger settled down to proving himself as the "golden voice of the Southwest" and left the humorous patter behind. With guitar and harmonica, Utah brought vivid images to mind of cowboys, steam locomotives and Western mountains.

From his flannel shirt and leather vest to his melancholy lyrics and strumming, Utah Phillips created an atmosphere of unpretentiousness and revived memories of an American past when heroism, simplicity and elementariness were a way of life.

New York Films Portray City Horrors And Threats

The premise of Paramount Pictures' Law and Disorder, caused the New York Times to note a trend in the forbidding tone of recent films done in the city. The films chill the audience with an exaggeration of the prevalence of crime, while the proximity of rape and murder is always on the next block. Those who do not live in the Metropolitan area believe the crime rate to be ten fold while those living in the city become more watchful at night, willing to leave their credit cards and extraneous money at home.

After viewing Death Wish, The Taking Of Pelham 1,2,3, and Law and Disorder one would needlessly think twice before venturing out at night, which raises questions of the motives of film companies in releasing such horrid and disproportionate tales of city living. Yet the incidence of crime has risen and the present economic condition causes the common movie goer to look scornfully upon the cowtowing accounts of the wealthy, just as the depression 'age disdained Fitzgerald's novels. Ultimately an anti-hero emerges befitting the change in film trends, a man diametrically opposed to Clark Gable and Humphrey Bogart, a man like Al Pacino or Dustin Hoffman representing the minority underdog oppressed by a large force in society.

Death Wish shows muggings in New York which finally reach into the family of the hero, Charles Bronson, who reacts with "American Frontier Individualism" and kills a number of New York muggers. Michael Winner attempts to bring the Western American consciousness into New York City, so Bronson's revenge appears like vengeance for a lost draw-duel. The film turns New York Streets into a melange of crime, and one temporarily forgets the Horse and buggy city of pretzel sellers, whose Salvation Army Women collect funds outside the Christmas decorated stores. This enlarged view of the incidence of crime casts a grim shadow on the audience often searing them into identifying with Bronson's crazed vigilantism.

Palomar Pictures, an emerging subsidiary of Columbia pictures released The Taking Of Pelam 1,2,3., which has the dual purpose of displaying the decadent laxness of the New York Police and the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, while accounting the hijacking of a subway with the passengers held for ransom. The New York Government is also represented shabbily when New York's mayor is displayed as a sniveling mercenary whose decisions are dictated by a Jewish overbearing wife. The film features excellent photography by Owen Roizman, the photographical master of the excorcist, and clarifies the simultaneous usurpation of the citizen by the criminal and the authorities of New York, both emerging as master minds in usage of obscenities and the exercising of selfishness.

Palomar Pictures' latest film Law and Disorder, once again easily establishes the atmospheric prevalence of crime, failing miserably in its attempts to piece together scenes of a group of men who decide to form an auxiliary Police Force to protect their families. The Czechoslovakian director, Ivan Passer's attempted portrayal of the look and feel of ordinary Americans is too conscious and the scenes become anachronisms of cornball sentimentality. Often the representation of the criminal is more humanistic than is that of the narrow minded problematic policeman, and one almost identifies with the criminal because disenchantment grows so strong with the auxiliary force. Consequently the ending which should arouse the audience's compassion is resisted, as a gesture.

The fact that all three films deal with the criminal element suggests that New York is awakening to a cry of the street man who is striking back at the opulence of metropolitan society, and this insistence upon the growing power of the underworld presents a gloomy prospect for a future in the complex web of city life.

...Music Thing: King, Genesis

(continued from page six)

personal without mussing herself in autobiographical jabberish. Neither mode, be it introspection or commercialism, need be dissected simply for that exercise. Suffice it to say Wrap Around Joy bouncy, happy, commercial as hell, and very much the Carole King we love and respect. It's not a masterpiece, it's an album.

From Genesis to Revelation

Genesis

It's fun listening to chronicles, old tracks, and first releases. From Genesis to Revelation is that first Genesis item, and it more than reinforces the endless stream of accolades dealt upon them. This first release has its embarrassing moments, surely, what with contrived echo fillet between some of the cuts. But, obvious production flaws aside, this initial Genesis album is an outstanding collection of robust, ear-filling music.

From Genesis to Revelation, recorded in 1969, stands bold and strong against the current musical output, a testament to the universality embodied within Genesis' ability to both compose and perform. Lyrical is secondary, and remains so to this day. There's even a lyric sheet enclosed in the package... but it didn't even occur to me to use the thing until the tenth or so listening. I became so caught up in the level and beauty of the music that lyrical content was not a concern.

Most of the numbers combine full orchestration with selected instrumental solos... among them harpsichord, piano strings and acoustic guitar - with a tasty bit of phasing in In the Beginning. The songs are strung together thematically, most of them dealing with growth and evolution, ironically. It's as if the band, ...or fate, or both realized that this album would not come to the forefront of a mass audience except in the context of an historical, documentary item. Its time has come.

The music resembles much of the Moody Blues work from the period. There are so many instances of the Moodies' Candle of Light or Eyes of a Child come to mind. But Genesis, in many respects, were advanced over The Moody Blues. From Genesis to Revelation displays a greater sense of continuity, both in verbal and musical themes.

Present, too, is a more thorough understanding and implementation of musical symmetry than, say, In Search Of The Lost Chord, or Question of Balance. Where the Moodies were chopped and fragmented, Genesis are fluid and smooth. From Genesis to Revelation is an important musical contribution. Not only does it chart this particular group's beginnings under producer Jonathon King, but it places later Genesis recordings in their proper perspectives, and serves equally well as a solid piece of entertainment.

Tales From The Ozone

Little Feat-A Southern Band

by Paul Prier

What would you do if one of your best friends asked you to put his feet on your stereo? I refer not to hiking boots, but to Little Feat. The first question that comes to mind — Why isn't this band famous? Most people haven't heard of them, and I don't know why. These boys rock the socks right off ya!

Little Feat are a southern rock band, though not quite in the same style of the Allmans or Marshall Tucker. They have funkier roots, at times they sound like a soul band, at times they sound like a boogie band. Perhaps this is an explanation for their lack of fame, their music is very hard to pin down into a category.

"Rock and Roll Doctor" starts the disk off, and leads into "Oh Atlanta", which reminded me a little bit of the old standard "Memphis." Turn up the bass on this one, you can hear it say "No No No" if your ears are open and your feet are movin'. "Skin it Back" contains some nice guitar and keyboard interplay by Lowell George and Bill Payne, respectively. The engineering is particularly notable here, with some very effective phasing. The album was co-produced by the legendary Van Dyke Parks and Lowell George. "Down the Road" is the next cut, another funky little devil guaranteed to make you git down and git to it. "Spanish Moon" finishes off side one, horns used on this cut seem a little out of place though.

"Feats Don't Fail Me Now" is the title cut, and is quite worthy of being chosen for the title. However, it seems the most complex tune of the album is "Wait Til The Shit Hits The Fan". Clocking in at ten minutes, it's full of crescendoes and hits many high points. Among them are the hypnotic patterns woven by Richie Howard on drums and Ken Gradney on bass. This, coupled with Lowell George's searing gee-tar, make for some smokin'! The record ends with a medley of boogie called "Cold Cold Cold – Triple Face Boogie." It starts out soulish, turns into space music in the middle, and boogies out til the end, it goes into a "Midnight Rambler" type time-change. The recording of this album strived for as "live" as possible sound, nd succeeds well. I can't say enough good about Lowel George's slide guitar. I suppose comparison with Duane Allman is inevitable, but George has his own style, very distinct, in fact.

The rest of the musicians include Sam Clayton on percussion and vocals, and Paul Barrere on guitar and vocals. In addition, Emmy Lou Harris and Bonnie Raitt sing back-up on a couple tunes. When you have this combination, you can't lose. So folks, this album is very Highly recommended, one might be tempted to run to the nearest record store and pick it up. Feats do your stuff!

Vanishing Wilderness Captures Nature World

"Sheer beauty is the only way to describe Vanishing Wilderness." This is what Governor Ronald Reagan said after viewing the film. Never before has a Nature film set box office records and won the critical acclaim that has been accorded Vanishing Wilderness. It is more than a passing look at animals in their natural habitats. It is an opportunity to experience many facets of nature that may soon disappear forever. It is an experience that may change your whole outlook on life. John Wayne said, "I was extremely impressed."

German photographer Heinz Seilmann and A.R. Dubs capture the magnificent beauty of rarely photographed wilderness areas in 33 mm. The photography took over 5 years to complete with many of the scenes never before filmed. None of the scenes are staged or retouched.

The entire family will enjoy peeping into the little seen wonders of Nature. You will ride the thundering white water of Oregon's Rogue River, ski exciting mountain slopes and sail the frigid North Seas. Antelopes, mustangs, buffalo, geese and the nearly extinct whooping crane are only a few of the many species of animals shown. There is also a wolf that tries imitating a bear in catching salmon and a loveable sea otter having dinner, floating on his back while cracking clams open with a rock and using his stomach as his table.

The narration is easy and interesting but never preachy as you learn why so many of nature's wonders are disappearing.

Gene Shalit summed up the real value of the film on the TODAY SHOW when he said, "Please, take the children, here is a world they are never likely to see."

George Shearing Delights

by Robert DeNike

From the first note emitted by the George Shearing Quintet on that delightful Monday night in Ira Allen Chapel, I sensed a strong feeling of absolute content and joy conveyed by the band simultaneously with the music. Looking from face to face each of the five musicians wore an expression of unrestrained freedom and pleasure. George Shearing in particular exhibited a silly, gay grin as his eyes concealed by dark glasses pointed at the sky. His facial moods changed correspondingly in as many ways as did his music styles and as the evening progressed, it seemed his music could vary infinitely.

Born in London, this blind piano virtuoso, arranger and composer has, in his thirty three year career in professional music, thoroughly mastered the classical style as well as that of jazz. His compositions number better than one hundred and he is responsible for such old standards as September in the Rain and Lullaby of Birdland. The two of twelve pages in the Lane leaflet which contain pertinent information (infallably hidden away among a bulky ten pages of advertising and propaganda) described the Shearing schedule of sones in

UVM Alumni Office Sets Space For

With graduation getting closer and the economy in turmoil, the UVM Alumni Office has come up with an idea which may improve alumni communication and find jobs for some seniors.

Space has been set aside in the February edition of the UVM alumni magazine for ads written by seniors looking for jobs which alumni in businesses or professions may have available.

The magazine editors will allow a senior up to 60 carefully chosen words to describe him or herself and his or her capabilities. There is no specified format for the ads, the Alumni Office anticipates the ads will be as varied as

Former UVM Pr Heads Aiken

A University of Vermont president who "retired" to a busy life that includes many community activities, has accepted another such post.

Dr. Lyman S. Rowell will be Chittenden County chairman for the fund-raising activities for the Aiken Lectures.

A long time member of the University faculty, Dr. Rowell stepped down as president in 1970, when he was succeeded by Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr.

Dr. Rowell, and his committee will join in a statewide effort to raise $250,000 as an endowment to finance the Aiken Lectures as a

LOOKING FOR A GIFT FOR THE GIFTED?

★ ARTIST & DRAFTING SUPPLIES
★ SIGNWRITERS MATERIALS
★ PAPERS ★ CARDBOARDS
★ SCHOOL SUPPLIES
★ CRAFT MATERIALS

CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING
VT.'S LARGEST ART STORE
Boutilier's
ART CENTER
112 Church Street
Burlington, Vermont

Yaluga Sports
1290 SHELBURNE RD.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-1961

Open 9-9 Mon-Fri
Sat 9-5:30

ROSSIGNOL COBRA SKIS	$85.00
SOLOMAN 202 BINDINGS	40.00
BARRECRAFTER POLES	7.50
INSTALLATION & RELEASE CHECK	5.00
YOUR NAME ENGRAVED	3.00
TOTAL VALUE	$140.50

PACKAGE PRICE $92.00

K-2 TWO	$145.00
SOLOMAN 202 BINDINGS	40.00
BARRECRAFTER POLES	7.50
INSTALLATION & RELEASE CHECK	5.00
YOUR NAME ENGRAVED	3.00
TOTAL VALUE	200.50

PACKAGE PRICE $145.00

One day binding installation on skis bought at our store

LOVE IS

Love is a giving thing... so give the gift of love ... a Keepsake diamond ring. Choose from perfect solitaires, beautiful matched sets and trios. Modern and traditional settings in precious 14K gold. Keepsake, there is no finer diamond ring.

Keepsake

HOW TO PLAN YOUR ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING

VALUABLE COUPON

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY

ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

REILLY TIRE COMPANY
FROM RECAPS TO RADIALS
WE HAVE IT

BE PSYCHED AND SET FOR THE SNOW !

ACCOMPANIED BY A COPY OF THIS AD
Install and Balance Your Snowtires—$5.00

ACCESSIBLE TO UVM
31 San Remo Drive
So. Burlington

GUY HAUTE
PRESENTS
OUR NOVEMBER to all UVM women

L'OREA
MINI VA

Invisible style support adds natural-looking body to your hair

November 18, 1974 - December 18, 1974
Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday

UVM ID CARDS AND APPO

...And Threats

...centrum of the ...pet of ordinary ...no conscious end ...es become ...s of baseball ...ty. Often the ...of the criminal ...astic than is that ...rrow minded ...policeman, and ...ntrition with the ...I because ...ment grows so ...e auxiliary force, ...the ending which ...the audience's ...compassion is wanted, as a ...pretense.

The fact that all three films deal with the criminal element suggests that New York is awakening to a cry of the street man who is striking back at the opulence of metropolitan society, and this insistence upon the growing power of the underworld presents a gloomy prospect for a future in the complex web of city life.

...Southern Band

...ny high points ...are the hypnotic ...ves by Richie ...drums and Ken ...hom. This, coupled ...George's soaring ...for some smokin'" ...nds with a medley ...called "Cold Cold ...Face Boogie." It ...bullish, turns into ...in the middle, and ...ill the end, it goes ...ght Rambler" type ...The recording of ...ived for as "live" ...ound, nd succeeds ...ny enough good about Lowell George's slide guitar. I suppose comparison with Duane Allman is inevitable, but George has his own style, very distinct, in fact.

The rest of the musicians include Sam Clayton on percussion and vocals, and Paul Barrere on guitar and vocals. In addition, Emmy Lou Harris and Bonnie Raitt sing back-up on a couple tunes. When you have this combination, you can't lose. So folks, this album is very highly recommended, one might be tempted to run to the nearest record store and pick it up. Feats do your stuff!

...hing Wilderness Captures Nature World

...eauty is the only ...scribe Vanishing ...This is what ...ould Reagan said ...the film. Never ...Nature film set box ...do and won the ...m that has been ...shing Wilderness. ...n a passing look at ...ir natural habitats. ...opportunity to ...many facets of ...ay soon disappear ...an experience that ...your whole outlook ...Wayne said, "I was ...pressed."

...photographer ...nn and A R Dube ...magnificent beauty ...photographed ...in 33 min. The ...took over 5 years ...with many of the ...

...r before filmed. ...scenes are staged or

The entire family will enjoy peeping into the little seen wonders of Nature. You will ride the thundering white water of Oregon's Rogue River, ski exciting mountain slopes and sail the frigid North Seas. Antelopes, mustangs, buffalo, geese and the nearly extinct whooping crane are only a few of the many species of animals shown. There is also a wolf that tries imitating a bear in catching salmon and a loveable sea otter having dinner, floating on his back while cracking clams open with a rock and using his stomach as his table.

The narration is easy and interesting but never preachy as you learn why so many of nature's ... wonders ... are disappearing.

Gene Shalit summed up the real value of the film on the TODAY SHOW when he said, "Please, take the children, here is a world they are never likely to see."

...ABLE COUPON
...TO STUDENTS
...ULTY MEMBERS
...tions excluded)
...SCOUNT
...N PURCHASES AT
...'S PHARMACY
...OOSE FROM
...Medical Center

...RE COMPANY
...PS TO RADIALS
...HAVE IT
...verse one
...RELLI
Mohawk
Stern Trac
...CCESSIBLE TO UVM
31 San Remo Drive
So. Burlington

George Shearing Quintet Delights Chapel Audience

by Robert Deffike

From the first note emitted by the George Shearing Quintet on that delightful Monday night in Ira Allen Chapel, I sensed a strong feeling of absolute content and joy conveyed by the band simultaneously with the music. Looking from face to face, each of the five musicians wore an expression of unrestrained freedom and pleasure. George Shearing in particular exhibited a silly, gay grin as his eyes concealed by dark glasses pointed at the sky. His facial moods changed correspondingly in as many ways as did his music styles and as the evening progressed, it seemed his music could vary infinitely.

Born in London, this blind piano virtuoso, arranger and composer has, in his thirty three year career in professional music, thoroughly mastered the classical style as well as that of jazz. His compositions number better than one hundred and he is responsible for such old standards as September in the Rain and Lullaby of Birdland. The two of twelve pages in the Lane leaflet which contain pertinent information (infallably hidden away among a bulky ten pages of advertising and propaganda) described the Shearing schedule of sonss in the following way: "Mr Shearing feels that a rigid program would be inappropriate to his music, but many of the selections will be chosen from the following list." Here then, is another illustration of Shearing as "spontaneity personified".

Between songs, when artists paused to wipe sweaty brows and soothe dry throats, Shearing told jokes and stories to the audience. Like his repetoire of songs, the pianist's collection of anecdotes, riddles and puns was limitless. Like his style of playing, his verbal entertainment was smooth, calculated and effective. Typical of his gentle humor he caught the audience off-guard with this gesture of seeming intimacy, "I'd like to introduce to you our drummer Rusty Jones who interestingly enough is from right here in Burlington." A rousing round of applause greeted him, then..."Tomorrow, of course, he'll be from Cleveland."

Shearing's band was excellent, especially in view of the difficult task assigned them of accentuating the highly developed talent of their leader. The guitarist contributed a tasty technique of finger-picking which he employed even while soloing on his electric guitar. The bassist was the fastest of all with his fingers, frequently running them up and down the neck of his instrument in exhibition of speedy and extensive solos. The drummer succeeded in escaping the usual role reserved for musicians of his specialty, that of simply providing a backing steady beat. His use of the high-hat and cymbals was a spicy addition to the music. The vibraphone (much like a xylophone) and its player was, next to Shearing, the most impressive of all the music's aspects. The contribution of both this musician and his instrument was invaluable. Striking the keys with two mallets in each hand, a sound very harp-like was produced by this artist who possessed a far-reaching knowledge of chords and delicious scales derived from these chords.

As I filed out the exit along with the sell-out crowd following three encores by Shearing alone in the spotlight, I overheard one of the "roadies" remark, "They responded to every one of Shearing's solos and styles. Fantastic!" Give yourselves a hand, you Burlington jazz freaks, for recognizing talent when you see it. I can only agree with the words of the equipment man in judging the concert, fantastic!

IRA Sponsors Photography Contest; UVM Planning Process Discussed

by Becky Bloch

The Intha Residence Association meeting came to order at 7:15 on Monday evening in the Harris-Millis Conference Room.

Assistant Vice President of Academic Affairs John Moore, talked about "The Planning Process at UVM". This process will begin next semester, when 1500 undergraduates, alumni, faculty and state legislators receive a questionnaire concerning the goals of UVM. After the data has been collected, open planning workshops will take place. These workshops will discuss educational and administrative plans. Following this process, university president Edward Andrews will issue his "annual planning memorandum." Hopefully, this will allow all the constituencies of the UVM community to take part in an important decision-making process, the setting of goals.

Fred Smith of SAGA announced that on Wednesday night at Wright and Living-Learning, there will be a special six-coupon dinner, the extra coupon to benefit the Breakfast Program for needy children in the Burlington area.

Sunday night, Dec. 8, at MAT Dining Hall, there will be an IRA-SA sponsored free dance, featuring Spoonfeather.

Winter Week was discussed and IRA sponsored activities will include a skating rink in front of the CBW complex, Klondike and cross-country races, and if there is enough snow on the ground, a snow sculpture contest.

IRA is sponsoring a photography contest. First prize is $50. Photos may be submitted to the Billings Desk, Jan. 15-29. All photographs must be 8x10 black and white. There will be an exhibit of all the pictures at the Living-Learning Lounge, Feb. 1-3.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:30 p.m.

New England Needs Vet School

The New England Veterinary College does not exist. It cannot exist until the people of New England let their governors and legislators know that it must exist. The need for regional veterinary college in New England is overwhelming. Hundreds of New England residents are turned down at veterinary schools in the U.S. and Canada regardless of having outstanding scholastic records. There is no room in these colleges to accommodate New England. It seems that a regional veterinary college is the only answer. It would serve the area in many capacities beyond the training of veterinarians. It would be a site for research, continuing education and graduate education. Through it, the New England area would be assured of being supplied with qualified veterinarians for its agricultural and pet needs.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has allocated an 1100 acre site for the building of a regional school. It has stated that it will fund the construction of such a school, if and only if, at least three other New England states aid in that funding. The New England Board of Higher Education has researched the possibilities and needs for such a venture. All is now set for a bill to be presented in the New England state houses stating that such a regional veterinary college will be built. We must let our legislators and governors know how important this bill is for the future of New England. The time for action is now.

The pre-vet club invites all interested students, faculty, staff and friends of the University to a discussion on the proposed New England Veterinary School. Literature and bumper stickers will be passed out at MAT. Please attend: Room 111, Rowell Hall, 7 p.m., Dec. 29, Monday at 7 p.m.

Notes On The Greeks

by P.M. Bentley

Here I am again, full of turkey and whatever else it takes to write this column. I hope the Thanksgiving break served to dissipate some of the disquiet engendered by Waterman's harsh lesson in Macroeconomic theory; i.e. the budget cuts. Budgetary priorities are not for me to discuss, however; so I turn to the subject at hand: Greeks.

I have been asked by the Fraternity Manager's Association to report on that group's annual House of Delegates meeting, held Oct. 29. Greek houses are not obliged to belong to the FMA, but most do. The FMA handles billing for room and board, fuel purchases, and other financial matters for the member houses. Each house pays the FMA three and a half percent of its total accounts receivable to cover operating costs; any of this money not used by the FMA is returned to the houses on a proportional basis. The refund for 1973-74 was $10,000 or roughly 74 percent of what the FMA might have spent to operate. Not bad.

Four new students were elected to the FMA Board at this meeting: Susan Parkhurst of Alpha Delta Pi was elected vice-president; and J. Fletcher Baltz of TEP, Nancy Gelin of Alpha Chi Omega and Nancy Danielson of Kappa Alpha Theta were elected as student representatives.

In the area of Greek service, I find one recent activity particularly noteworthy. Tri-Delta sorority recently awarded a gift of $500.00 to the Bailey Library in celebration of the house's 1000th member. President Lyan Murdoch presented the grant to Paul Kebadin, UVM's Director of Libraries on Nov. 18. The Encyclopedia Universalis collection is to be purchased with the grant.

As I remain uninformed of other Greek activities, I have chosen to close this column with a little philosophical food-for-thought. A wise Greek once said: small people talk about other people; average people talk about issues; great people talk about ideals. See you later... much.

...West Side Story

(continued from page seven)

Side Story, and I can appreciate that. But as I watched Tony and Maria speak hollow words past each other, I could not believe they were in love. Without that love, there was no reason-to-be for all that dancing and singing. It was sad, really sad.

UVM Alumni Office Sets Space For Job Ads

With graduation getting closer and the economy in turmoil, the UVM Alumni Office has come up with an idea which may improve alumni communication and find jobs for some seniors.

Space has been set aside in the February edition of the UVM alumni magazine for ads written by seniors looking for jobs which alumni in businesses or professions may have available.

The magazine editors will allow a senior up to 60 carefully- chosen words to describe him or herself and his or her capabilities. There is no specified format for the ads; the Alumni Office anticipates the ads will be as varied as those writing them.

"If response from seniors is so heavy that we don't have room for all the ads," says Alumni Director Rusty Brink, "we'll keep those we can't use on file and send them to any alumni who write in requesting the list."

Ads will be accepted for use on a first-come, first-served basis, and must be received by the Alumni Office not later than December 13. Be sure to include your name and address where the prospective employer may reach you!

If you send your ad by mail, address it to: Alumni Magazine, Alumni Office, Alumni House.

Former UVM President Heads Aiken Fund Drive

A University of Vermont president who "retired" to a busy life that includes many community activities, has accepted another such post.

Dr. Lyman S. Rowell will be Chittenden County chairman for the fund- raising activities for the Aiken Lectures.

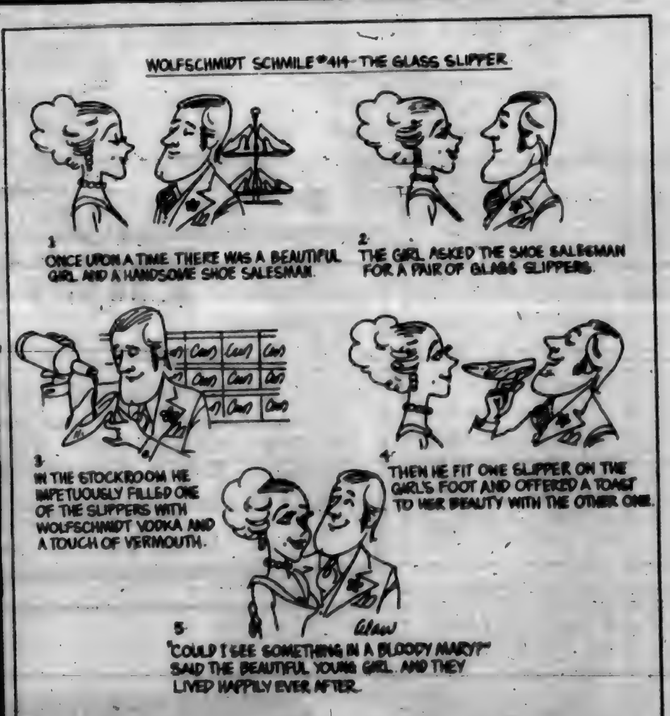
A long-time member of the University faculty, Dr. Rowell stepped down as president in 1970, when he was succeeded by Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr.

Dr. Rowell, and his committee will join in a statewide effort to raise $250,000 as an endowment to finance the Aiken Lectures as a permanent tribute to the man who served his state and nation for 34 years as a U.S. senator, until his retirement this term. The county committee will seek as broad participation as possible among Vermonters.

Each year a lecture by a speaker of national and international fame will be given at the University of Vermont and will be open to the public. In addition, the speaker will be asked to remain on campus for a day or two, to speak to classes and informal discussions with Vermonters. The lectures will stress the three areas for which Senator Aiken is best known, foreign affairs, energy and agriculture.

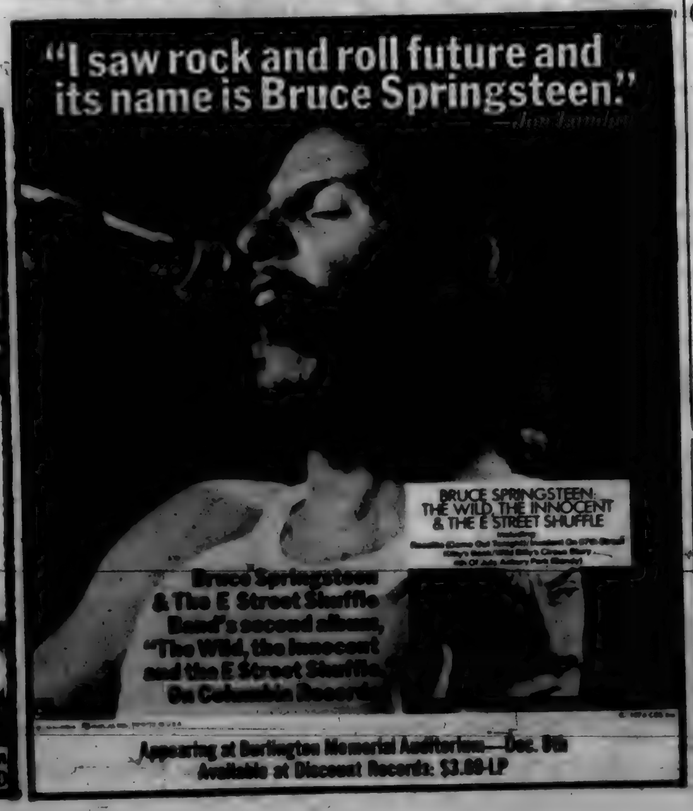
THE VERMONT CYNIC ADVERTISING STAFF WOULD LIKE TO THANK ALL OF ITS SPONSORS FOR THEIR KIND PATRONAGE DURING THE SEMESTER AND EXTENDS TO THEM THE VERY BEST WISHES FOR A HAPPY HOLIDAY SEASON.

DOWN PARKAS by GERRY = WARMTH + STYLE
PRICE $75.00
OPEN 9 to 9 Mon-Fri
9 to 5 Sat.
the SKI shop, inc.
862-6488
388 SHELBURNE ROAD BURLINGTON, VERMONT



Start something with Wolfschmidt.
A martini, a bloody mary, a screwdriver. Or anything else you have in mind.
Wolfschmidt Genuine Vodka
$3.40
FIFTH SIZE—CODE #12
VODKA - DISTILLED FROM GRAIN - 80 AND 100 PROOF - HEUBLEIN DISTILLERS CO., NEW YORK, N.Y.

GUY HAUTE COIFFURE
PRESENTS
OUR NOVEMBER SPECIAL
to all UVM women
L'OREAL
MINI VAGUE PLUS
Invisible style support adds natural-looking body to your hair
ONLY $15.00 including shampoo & style
November 18, 1974 - December 18, 1974
Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday
CALL US for more information
GIFT CERTIFICATES AND APPOINTMENTS ARE REQUIRED



Appearing at Burlington Memorial Auditorium—Dec. 8th
Available at Discount Records: $3.88-LP

SAGA Offers Revised Second Semester Meal Plan

This semester we learned a great deal about "How To" and "How Not To" operate a meal coupon program.

We found 25 per cent of our planned customers in the regular dining halls were eating in the snackbars, restaurants, The Store etc.

A careful 15 minute interval meal count showed many times when we had dining halls open with only a handful of customers. We simply had too many dining halls open too many hours.

The closing of Converse Hall for renovations, the normal drop in customers in any second semester, and the continuing increase in customers using the snackbars led us to the obvious conclusion we must further review our schedule for the second semester.

What follows is a food Facilities schedule we hope will meet the needs of our customers and maintain the Fiscal integrity of the dining hall system as well.

Items of interest in the new schedule include:

1) The Den will be closed on Sunday. Prior to this, the Den was open Sunday evenings as was Waterman Dining Hall. Both places could not remain open and it was decided to leave the regular dining hall open. Waterman will continue to feature its Sunday evening buffets.

2) The Wright Snackbar will be open more hours during the week and on Sunday. This will provide better service to residents on Redstone Campus who desire an evening snack or a late dinner.

3) The Harris- Millis Ala Carte line will not be open. There simply weren't enough customers consistently to make it possible to continue. In addition, the space was badly needed for the regular dinner customers at Harris- Millis.

4) Marsh Dining Hall will not be open for lunch during the week. It is necessary to close one of the four facilities on East Campus during the lunch period to reflect more accurately the present use of the Facilities. It makes more sense to close Marsh at lunch time than the others which serve breakfast.

5) A branch of The STORE will be open at Simpson Dining Hall to provide better service on Redstone Campus.

6) The 4 Coupon light menu dinner will not be offered next semester at Simpson. This concept was an experimental one and it didn't meet its expectations.

The following are special notes on dining hall and snackbar hours.

SPECIAL NOTE!
THE COUPON BANK
-Will be open through 5:00 p.m. on 12/18

-Only whole books of extra (white) coupons can be redeemed at a value of $25.00 per book.

-Base Plan (yellow) books cannot be redeemed.

-Effective this week (beginning 12/2) special 1/2 books can be purchased. They contain 70 coupons and cost $14.00. This is to help students who don't need a full book to get through to the end of exams.

THE STORE at Marsh
-Several special items will be offered at The Store during exams. These large, non-perishable, items will help those who have coupons left realize a value for them.

SECOND SEMESTER FOOD SERVICE FACILITIES HOURS

	Mon.–Fri.	Saturday	Sunday
SNACK BARS, ETC.
CATAMOUNT DEN	7:30 a.m.–10:30 p.m.	Closed	Closed
GIVEN CAFETERIA	7:30 a.m.–10:30 a.m. 11:15 a.m.–1:00 p.m.	Closed	Closed
FACULTY DINING ROOM	8:30 a.m.–3:00 p.m.	Closed	Closed
"WALTERS"	10:30 a.m.–Midnight	1:30 p.m.–1:30 p.m.– 1:00 a.m. 1:00 a.m.
WRIGHT SNACKBAR	7:30 a.m.–10:00 p.m.	Closed	6:00 p.m.– 10:00 p.m.
"THE WHITE MOUSE"	Closed	Closed	5:30–8:00
"REDSTONE STATION"	Closed	5:00–6:30	Closed
THE STORE– MARSH	2:00–7:00 p.m.	2:00–7:00 p.m.	Closed

	Mon.–Fri.	Saturday	Sunday
REGULAR DINING HOURS
WATERMAN
Breakfast	7:15–8:15	Closed	Closed
Lunch	10:50–12:30	Closed	Closed
Dinner	4:30–5:45 (closed Friday)	Closed	4:30–5:45
WRIGHT
Breakfast	7:00–8:45	Closed	Closed
Lunch	11:30–1:30	Closed	Closed
Dinner	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30 (Redstone Station)	Closed
SIMPSON
Breakfast	Closed	8:00–8:30	8:00–8:30
Lunch	Closed	11:00–12:30	11:00–12:30
Dinner	4:30–5:30 (closed Friday)	4:30–6:00	4:30–6:00
HARRIS–MILLIS
Breakfast	7:00–8:30	Closed	Closed
Lunch	11:00–12:30	Closed	11:30–1:00
Dinner	4:30–6:00	Closed	5:30–8:00 (White Mouse)
LIVING/LEARNING
Breakfast	7:15–9:00	8:00–9:00	8:00–9:00
Lunch	11:30–1:00	10:30–12:30	10:30–12:30
Dinner	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30
MARSH
Breakfast	Closed	Closed	Closed
Lunch	Closed	11:00–12:30	Closed
Dinner	5:30–7:00 (closed Friday)	5:00–6:30	Closed

Regular Dining Halls
Waterman - Closed Sunday Evening, 12/15; for dinner. Closed after lunch on 12/17.
Simpson - Closed after dinner 12/16
Wright - Closed after lunch 12/18
Marsh - Closed after dinner 12/12
Harris- Millis - Closed after dinner 12/18. -open on the Saturdays of 12/7 and 12/14 for brunch and dinner.

Meal Hours During Registration Period 1/6 - 1/15

January 6 - 10: -Faculty Dining Room open. -Given Cafeteria Open.
January 11: -All Facilities Closed.
January 12:
-Coupon Bank open 12:00 - 6:00 to begin issuing second semester coupon books.
-"Walters" open at 3:00 p.m.
-Living and Learning Dining Room open 5:00-6:30 p.m.

Living and Learning Closed after lunch on 12/18.

Snackbars and Ala Carte etc.
Faculty Dining Room - Open throughout the exam period.
Wright Snackbar - Will be open through Monday 12/16 and closed thereafter.
Harris - Millis Ala Carte - Will be closed after dinner 12/12.
"Walters" - Will close at 10:00 p.m. on 12/17
The Den - Will close at 2:00 p.m. on 12/18

Given Cafeteria - Will be open throughout the exam period
The White Mouse - Will be open on only 12/8
Redstone Station - Will be open on only 12/7

The Store - Will be open until 5:00 p.m. on 12/18

-Wright Snackbar Open 4:30 - 10:30 p.m.
January 13:
-Faculty Dining Room, Given Cafeteria, The Den, Living/Learning Dining Hall and Wright Dining Hall – open regular hours.
-"Walters" open 3:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.
-Wright Snackbar open 7:30 p.m. - 10:30 p.m.
-Waterman Dining Room Dinner 4:30-5:45
January 14:
-All Snackbars open regular hours
-Living /Learning and Wright open for breakfast 7:30-8:30
-All dining halls open lunch and dinner on regular schedule.
January 15:
-All facilities open on "new" regular schedule for second semester.

... College Profe

(continued from page one)

expected to follow Pittsburg's lead. All three have suffered heavy drops in enrollment and consequent reductions in the size of their faculties.

Massachusetts

The N.E.A. has asked the National Labor Relations Board to order an election at Northeastern University, but the institution's administration is fighting hard against it. Hearings before the N.L.R.B. regional director on the composition of the bargaining unit, which normally take a week at the most, lasted 60 days. The university is expected to fight any N.L.R.B. order in the courts.

The Massachusetts community-college system is seeking a single, state-wide bargaining unit. Three of the colleges already have faculty bargaining and three others have rejected it.

Minnesota

The state-college system has challenged in court a state labor-board ruling that elections be held campus-by-campus instead of system-wide. A decision in the case is expected in six weeks, and an election is now considered likely, sometime after the first of the year.

The A.F.T. has petitioned on only two of the seven campuses. A long-standing system-wide faculty group has affiliated with the N.E.A. and is regarded as the likely winner of the election, although the A.A.U.P. will be on the ballot.

Montana

Montana passed a new collective-bargaining law last year, and some observers believe an election is possible this year at the University of Montana.

Ohio

Ohio may be th... to see large-scal... bargaining by ... four-year colleges ... enabling legislation.

Youngsto... University alre... recognized faculty ... agent and a contra...

The truste... University of Cinc... last spring to have ... there, but no date ...

The truste... University of To... expected to ... bargaining electi... this fall.

Faculty i... collective barga... increasing at ... University and ... of Akron.

The trustees ... University bucke... refusing last spri... an election, alt... professors there ... seek one.

Oregon

Petitions for ... being circulated ... the A.A.U.P., and ... union at the ... Oregon, Ore... University, P... University, and ... of Education. T... board is consider... have a state-wi... public four-ye... individual un... elections are u... four-year insti... next spring or ... college, Southe... an independent ...

Four Oreg... colleges have ... bargaining agent ... are likely at m... during the comi...

Pennsylvania

The A.F.T...

... SA Films

(continued from page eleven)

drama depicts some of the stirring events that attended the post-World War II trials that brought the judgment of mankind to bear upon the crimes against humanity committed by former judges in Nazi Germany. The theme is human responsibility; the plot is fictional, the drama historical, the whole a deeply personal, totally involving, powerful and shattering motion picture, hailed by the world press and by statesmen in many nations.

For those of you who are already thinking about next semester, here is a sample of the films to be coming up. Thursday night will continue its series of musicals. Some to be coming are Singing in the Rain, The Wizard of Oz, and An American in Paris. The Friday night selection will vary again with big name films, including The Harder They Come and Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. A series of Katherine Hepburn films, a female star for a change, will fill the Saturday night slot. Some of these films will be Philadelphia Story, Holiday with Cary Grant, Long Day's Journey Into Night. And finally the Monday night series will be filled with a series of French films, including Beauty and the Beast and Rules of the Game. See you next semester.

Switch hit.

The Olympia Report
electric portable.

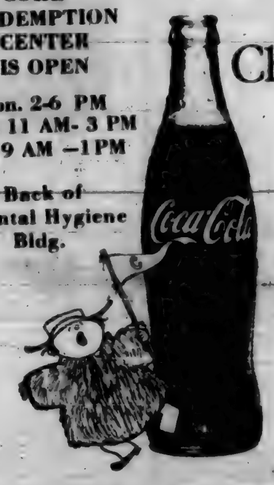
Olympia's electric portable typewriter's a real hit . . . outperforming every other machine in its price class. Weighing in at 36 pounds, it's fully equipped with "heavyweight" features including:

- Sculptured block keyboard with 44 standard keys
- Horizontal and vertical half-spacing
- 8 color coded repeat typing keys
- 4 automatic repeat functions
- Paper ease/last line indicator
- Electric tab key
- Instant tab clearance
- 3 position ribbon selector

Once you switch on an Olympia, it's curtains for every other electric portable around.

Lamy's Office Machine Service
122 N. Winooski Avenue
Burlington, Vermont 05401

COKE REDEMPTION CENTER IS OPEN
Mon. 2-6 PM
Wed. 11 AM- 3 PM
Fri. 9 AM –1 PM
Back of Dental Hygiene Bldg.



Cheers!
It's the real thing. Coke.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

THE HEBREW UNIVERSITY OF JERUSALEM
1975/76 PROGRAMS FOR AMERICAN STUDENTS
- ONE YEAR PROGRAM—for college sophomores and juniors.
- FRESHMAN YEAR—of 4-year program to B.A., B.Sc. degrees.
- REGULAR STUDIES—for college transfer students toward B.A. and B.Sc. degrees.
- GRADUATE STUDIES—Master's and Doctoral programs.
- SUMMER COURSES—given in English.

For Application and Information, write Office of Academic Affairs, American Friends of The Hebrew University, 11 East 69 St., New York, N.Y. 10021 • (212) 988-9400
Name
Address

?
!

CLASSIFIED

Tire, 735 x 14, very good, mounted and balanced, $12. Austrian hiking boots w/Vibram soles, size 7, $20. Mens X-c ski boots, Norwegian fleece-lined, s2. 46, $10. Call 865-2631 after 6 p.m.

1966 International Jeep. 4-wheel drive with snow plow good condition. Call after 6:00 p.m. 985-2722.

For sale: 1968 10 H.P. snow jet and cover. Also, 1971 24 H.P. snow jet and cover. Call 985-2722 after 6 p.m.

American Youth Hostel trip information for summer of 75 has arrived. Stop by 522 Waterman for information about bicycle, foot, train, kayak or bus travel on four continents. Ask for Eric Bye.

VW Pop-top Camper. New: paint, radials, shocks, engine, clutch & transmission. Call anytime - 864-7141.

Rides needed every week: MWF - 9:00 class, Th - 8:00 class, from Merlin Ave Area call Catherine 863-5866 (leg in cast help!)

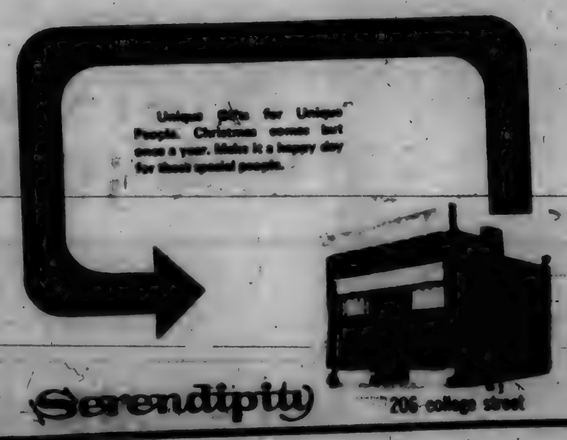
Off street Parking. Great St.; reasonable. 864-7788.

ALTERNATIVE COLLEGE. Small innovative, liberal arts college without walls in Burlington. Flexible curriculum includes community involvement, self-identity, survival and futurism courses. Personal attention and individualized programs. VICC 152 Main St., Burlington, 862-9895.

ZIGGY'S
THE LARGEST HEAD SHOP IN VERMONT

PIPES	INCENSE	KEY RING CLIPS	PIPE GIFT SETS
SCREENS	BURNERS	T–SHIRTS	CLOTHES
PAPERS	JOKES	LEATHER GOODS	BONGS
			ROLLERS

97½ CHURCH STREET
(Above Burlington Shoe Repair)



Serendipity 206 college street

here's December from Fresh ground

Mon	Tues	Wed	Thurs	Fri	Sat
Lasagne 1.85	Collade de Sole 3.50	Curry chicken or Veal 1.95	Beef & Potatoe Au Gratin 1.50	Crepe Pontet 1.95	Beef Stew 2.00
Pate & Apple soup	Maryland Corn Chowder	Soupe Niçoise	Minestrone soup	Cream Spinach	Burgundy Mango Nectar Soup
Enchiladas 1.95	Chicken 2.50 Oriental	Pouchet 1.95	Crepe 1.95 Cannelloni	Eggplant 2.95 Parmigiana	Chinese Beef & Snow Peas 2.50
Navy Bean Soup	Mushroom Barley soup	Meatballs in Tom. Sauce	Chicken Creole	Cream of Mushroom Soup	Creamy Potato Celeriac
Mexican Torte 1.85	Beef Stew 2.00	Sweet & Sour Pork or Veg. 1.95	Fillet of Sole Papillotte 2.50	Pontet au Creme 2.50	Crepe 1.85 Champignon Split Pea
Cookie Jacket soup	Tyronaise Lentil Soup	Dutch Potato soup	Parmesan Cabbage Potage	Miniature soup	soup
Sweet & Sour chicken 2.25	Lasagne 1.85	Closed	until Thursday January 2
Peanut Barley soup	Cream of Mushroom soup	Happy Holidays

Plus Everyday: Chile con Carne, Ratatouille, Salads, hot & Cold sandwiches, Dessert dishes, pastries and a variety of hot & cold beverages

PLANTAS
107 St. P...
BURLINGT...
863-1455
FOR GIFTS... PLANTS ARE A ... NATURAL!
-HANGING C... WITH ATTAC... SAUCERS.
-POTTERY ... COMBOS F...

MERRY CHRISTM...

n

...ar hours which ...

...t STORE ...ion Evening ...ter service ...

...ight menu ...ffered next ...son. This ...perimental ...meet its ...

...ial notice ...mmuter ...

...ANK ...rough 5:00 ...

...ening ...n 12/18. ...

...ATER ETC. ... Room ... the exam ...

... - Will be ...day 12/16 ...

...Ala Carte - ...ter dinner ...ll close at ...

...kbar Open ...

...ing Room, ... The Den, ...ing Hall and ... open regu- ... 3:00 p.m. - ...k bar open ...p.m. ...ning Room

-Only whole books of extra (white) coupons can be redeemed at a value of $25.00 per book.

-Base Plan (yellow) books cannot be redeemed.

-Effective this week (beginning 12/2) special 1/2 books can be purchased. They contain 70 coupons and cost $14.00. This is to help students who don't need a full book to get through to the end of exams.

THE STORE at Marsh

-Several special items will be offered at The Store during exams. These large, non-perishable, items will help those who have coupons left realize a value for them.

10:00 p.m. on 12/17

The Den - Will close at 2:00 p.m. on 12/18

Given Cafeteria - Will be open throughout the exam period

The White Mouse - Will be open on only 12/8

Redstone Station - Will be open on only 12/7

The Store - Will be open until 5:00 p.m. on 12/18

Dinner 4:30-5:45

January 14

-All Snackbars open regular hours

-Living /Learning and Wright open for breakfast 7:30-8:30

-All dining halls open lunch and dinner on regular schedule.

January 15:

-All facilities open on "new" regular schedule for second semester.

... SA Films

(continued from page eleven)

drama depicts some of the stirring events that attended the post-World War II trials that brought the judgment of mankind to bear upon the crimes against humanity committed by former judges in Nazi Germany. The theme is human responsibility; the plot is fictional, the drama historical, the whole a deeply personal, totally involving, powerful and shattering motion picture, hailed by the world press and by statesmen in many nations.

For those of you who are already thinking about next semester, here is a sample of the films to be coming up. Thursday night will continue its series of musicals. Some to be coming are Singing in the Rain, The Wizard of Oz, and An American in Paris. The Friday night selection will vary again with big name films, including The Harder They Come and Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. A series of Katherine Hepburn films, a female star for a change, will fill the Saturday night slot. Some of these films will be Philadelphia Story, Holiday with Cary Grant, Long Day's Journey Into Night. And finally the Monday night series will be filled with a series of French films, including Beauty and the Beast and Rules of the Game. See you next semester.

... College Professors Organize Into Union

(continued from page one)

expected to follow Pittsburg's lead. All three have suffered heavy drops in enrollment and consequent reductions in the size of their faculties.

Massachusetts

The N.E.A. has asked the National Labor Relations Board to order an election at Northeastern University, but the institution's administration is fighting hard against it. Hearings before the N.L.R.B. regional director on the composition of the bargaining unit, which normally take a week at the most, lasted 60 days. The university is expected to fight any N.L.R.B. order in the courts.

The Massachusetts community-college system is seeking a single, state-wide bargaining unit. Three of the colleges already have faculty bargaining and three others have rejected it.

Minnesota

The state-college system has challenged in court a state labor-board ruling that elections be held campus-by-campus instead of system-wide. A decision in the case is expected in six weeks, and an election is now considered likely, sometime after the first of the year.

The A.F.T. has petitioned on only two of the seven campuses. A long-standing system-wide faculty group has affiliated with the N.E.A. and is regarded as the likely winner of the election, although the A.A.U.P. will be on the ballot.

Montana

Montana passed a new collective-bargaining law last year, and some observers believe an election is possible this year at the University of Montana.

Ohio

Ohio may be the first state to see large-scale collective bargaining by faculties of four-year colleges without state enabling legislation.

Youngstown State University already has a recognized faculty bargaining agent and a contract.

The trustees of the University of Cincinnati agreed last spring to have an election there, but no date has been set.

The trustees of the University of Toledo are also expected to approve a bargaining election sometime this fall.

Faculty interest in collective bargaining is also increasing at Ohio State University and the University of Akron.

The trustees of Kent State University bucked the trend, refusing last spring to permit an election, although many professors there continue to seek one.

Oregon

Petitions for elections are being circulated by the A.F.T., the A.A.U.P., and a civil-service union at the University of Oregon, Oregon State University, Portland State University, and Oregon College of Education. The state labor board is considering whether to have a state-wide unit for all public four-year colleges or individual units. However, elections are unlikely at the four-year institutions before next spring or next fall. One college, Southern Oregon, has an independent agent.

Four Oregon community colleges have already selected bargaining agents, and elections are likely at most of the rest during the coming year.

Pennsylvania

The A.F.T. has filed a petition with the state labor board asking for an election for faculty members and graduate assistants at the University of Pittsburgh, excluding the medical school. Both the N.E.A. and the A.A.U.P. are intervening. The university wants the medical school, expected to be anti-union.

Elections might be held this spring but are more likely next fall.

The higher-education affiliate of the N.E.A. and A.F.T. merged in Florida, but the N.E.A. may send in organizers anyway, since the merged group has been expelled from the national organization.

The N.E.A. and the merged group will be the main competitors at the community colleges. The A.A.U.P. is launching a major campaign to become the bargaining agent for the state's nine public universities.

Iowa

Elections are likely in many of the state's 15 community-college districts this spring in the wake of a new collective-bargaining law passed earlier this year.

It will probably be fall of 1975, however, before the state's three public universities vote on the issue.

The N.E.A. has a strong organization in the state and represents the faculty at the private University of Dubuque, but the A.F.T. and A.A.U.P. are beginning to talk about putting more resources into Iowa.

Kansas

Faculty members at Kansas State College at Pittsburg have included in the vote.

The N.E.A. and the A.A.U.P. are active at Pennsylvania State University, although no formal request for an election has been made.

SA Films Ends The Season

Along with a great many other things, the SA Film series winds up its semester schedule of films this weekend. But, it must be said, the series is ending on a very high note, as there are some excellent films still coming up.

Tonight at 7:30 in 101 Votey West Side Story will be presented. This is a very timely showing since this marvelous musical has just been presented by the theatre department here on campus. This 1961 Leonard Bernstein-Stephen Soldheim musical stars Natalie Wood, Richard Beymer, Russ Tamblyn, Rita Moreno and George Chakiris. It won 10 Academy Awards including best picture, direction, supporting actor and supporting actress. This is the Romeo and Juliet story in a New York setting and tells of two rival gangs, the Jets headed by Russ Tamblyn and the Sharks captained by George Chakiris. The Jets challenge the Sharks to a rumble. In the midst of this Beymer, one of the Jets, falls in love with Natalie Wood, sister to the leader of the Sharks. In the rumble Natalie's brother is killed by Beymer. She wants to hate him but her love is too strong. A rumor spreads that she is dead. Beymer comes to find her and is killed. The Sharks have had their revenge. West Side Story is one of the most honored motion pictures of all time. If you saw the play, don't miss the motion picture version.

On Friday there will be a double feature Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice, starring Natalie Wood, Robert Culp, Elliott Gould, and Dyan Cannon; and The Great Race, starring Jack Lemmon, Tony Curtis, and Natalie Wood. These films will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 9:30 and will be repeated again at midnight. Admission to both movies is $1. Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice was made in 1969 and was directed by Paul Mazursky. It is a sophisticated satire exploring the relationship between two young married couples who start off as "just friends" and become involved in something else. Playboy called it "impudent, iconoclastic... the most recklessly original American comedy of the year!" The Great Race was released in 1965 and was directed by Blake Edwards. It is a fast-moving adventure comedy and was voted one of the ten best of the year by Films Daily critics. TV Radio Mirror called it "a rollicking gagged-up comedy about an old-time auto race from New York to Paris... a joy to behold."

Paul Newman winds up his series on Saturday with Exodus. This movie was directed by Otto Preminger and also stars Eva Marie Saint, Ralph Richardson, and Peter Lawford. Based on Leon Uris' epic novel, it tells of the turbulent months in 1947 when the Israeli underground was fighting on two fronts - battling British and Arabs alike in their desperate struggle for life and independence for a chance to bring the age-old Jewish nation back to life again in the Holy Land. At a cost of many millions, with a cast of many thousands, Exodus was filmed in color on actual historical location: in Israel's Galilee, Haifa, Caesarea, Jerusalem, Cana, and in Cyprus's ancient Nicosia. Bosley Crowther, of the New York Times calls the film "a fine reflection of experience that rips the heart." Exodus will be shown at 7:30 in 101 Votey.

The Monday night war film series ends with Judgment at Nuremberg. This film will be shown at 7:30 in 103 Rowell. It was directed by Stanley Kramer and stars Spencer Tracy, Burt Lancaster, Richard Widmark, Marlene Dietrich, Maximilian Schell, Judy Garland, and Montgomery Cliff. Among the most acclaimed motion pictures of

(continued on page ten)

Finest Selection in Vermont!

Skiwear & Sportswear

SKI PARKAS
$20 to $110
by Gerry
Alpine Design
Comfy
Profile
C. B. Sports
Liberty Bell
White Stag
Roffee
Tempco
Hot Gear
Beconta
Saika Sports
Slalom

SKI SWEATERS
$18 to $72
by Demetre
Sportif
Lido
Iceland
Meister
Obermeyer
White Stag
Skane
Profile
Beconta
Icelandic Imports

FREE GIFT WRAPPING

SKIS
$12 to $230
by Rossignol
Olin
Head
K 2
Dynamic
Yamaha
Hart
Dynastar
Elan
Kneissel
Fischer
A&T
Volkl
Northland

SKI BOOTS
$20 to $195
by Nordica
Hanson
Trappeur
Lange
Dolomite
A&T Caber
Technica

GIFT CERTIFICATES

ALPINE SHOP

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 Main St. Burlington

dunham
CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS®

Also Available In A 9" Boot For Men And Women

Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' sizes . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.

FREE PARKING OPEN DAILY 9 to 6 THURSDAY and FRIDAY

PLANTASIA
107 ST. PAUL ST.
BURLINGTON
863-4455
FOR GIFTS... PLANTS ARE A NATURAL!
-HANGING CLAY POTS WITH ATTACHED SAUCERS
-POTTERY & PLANT COMBOS FROM 5.00

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

... VPIRG Conducts Record Album Cost Survey

(continued from page one)

Artist	Album Title	List Price	Bailey's	Uptairs Record Shop (reg.)	Uptairs Record Shop (sale)	Discount Records (reg.)	Discount Records (sale)	Grandway (reg.)	Grandway (sale)	Sears (reg.)	Sears (sale)	Zayres (reg.)	Zayres (sale)	Woolworths (reg.)	Woolworths (sale)	JC Penny (reg.)	JC Penny (sale)	Gayson (reg.)	Gayson (sale
Carole King	Wrap Around Joy	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.72*	$4.29	$5.59	--	$5.69	--	--	$3.97	$5.79	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
John Lennon	Walls and Bridges	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	--	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
Jim Croce	Greatest Hits	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	--	$4.29	$5.69	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
Bachman Turner Overdrive	Not Fragile	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	--	--	--	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$4.47	--
America	Holiday	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	$6.89	--	$5.67	--	$5.79	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
Crosby, Stills Nash & Young	So Far	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	--	$5.59	$4.29	--	--	--	$3.97	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	--	--
Church and Chong	Wedding Anniversary	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	$5.69	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
Barry White	Can't Get Enough	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	--	--	--	$3.97	$5.29	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
Alice Cooper	Greatest Hits	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	--	--	$10.47	--	$10.47	--	$10.77	$9.59	$8.77	--
Traffic	When the Eagles Fly	$12.98	$9.58	$8.73	--	$9.95	--	$8.99	--	--	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	$4.79	--	--
Emerson, Lake & Palmer	Welcome Back My Friends...	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	$5.69	--	--	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$5.27	--
Paul Anka	Anka	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	$3.93	$5.77	--	--	--	--	--	--	$3.97	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$4.47	--
Herbie Hancock	Thrust	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	--	$5.59	--	--	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	--
Quincy Jones	Body Heat	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	--	$5.59	$4.29	--	--	--	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$5.28	--
John Denver	Back Home Again	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	--	$5.59	--	--	--	--	$3.97	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$4.47	--
Isley Brothers	Live it Up	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	--	$5.59	--	--	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$4.47	--
Billy Preston	Kids and Me	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	--	--	$5.67	--	$5.29	--	$6.47	--	$4.47	--
Lou Reed	Sally Can't Dance	$6.98	$4.79	$4.56	--	$5.77	$4.29	$5.59	--	--	--	--	--	$4.29	$3.39	$5.77	--	$4.47	--
Rolling Stones	Only Rock and Roll	$5.98	$3.79	$3.73	--	$4.95	--	$4.38	--	--	--	$5.67	--
Mac Davis	Stop and Smell Roses
Total for Top 20		$144.60	$99.59	$94.54	$93.91	$118.76	$101.00	$13.99	$10.09			$118.20	$109.70	$109.98	$109.08	$133.00	$105.43	$95.30	--

*Not enough records available for total

Important Note
If the record was on sale the day of the survey the sale price was recorded.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG by Arnold Werner M. D.

QUESTION: I recently took the morning-after pill, diethylstilbesterol. My menstrual period did come, but I had a very heavy flow with a lot of solid material. Was this solid material the lining of the uterus?

Also, I have heard that diethylstilbesterol has a long term toxic effect. I have read that if one would take this drug while pregnant there is a chance that if a female baby was born, she might develop cancer of the vagina later in life. If I decided to have a baby in the near future would she be affected by my taking the morning after pill?

ANSWER: The morning after pill probably works by preventing implantation of the fertilized egg into the wall of the uterus. The large dose of hormone results in a change in the lining of the uterus (endometrium) which makes it bulkier. Thus, when the period comes, the amount of endometrium shed is greater than usual.

If the use of the morning-after pill has been successful, then the woman need not fear any long term effects on herself or subsequent pregnancies. Diethylstilbesterol was commonly used about 20 years ago to prevent spontaneous abortions (miscarriages). When used for this purpose it was given in low doses over an extended period. The continual administration of diethylstilbesterol during pregnancy may result in the development of cancer of the vagina in female offspring when they reach maturity. Abortion is recommended if the morning after pill is not successful.

••••••••

QUESTION: My boyfriend and I get along great except for one thing which has bothered me and which I just cannot bring myself to discuss openly with him — he thinks the natural odors of the body are good, earthy scents. At first I hinted about deodorants — joked when we'd see ads for "those products" on TV but to no avail. I can stand "fresh" sweat, but what bothers me is old sweat, from weeks ago it seems!

How do I come out and tell him about this? We are very open about almost everything else. It seems as though I am trying to change him, which maybe I have no right to do. Is this subject none of my business?

ANSWER: If it's as bad as you say, it sounds like it is your business. Why it is so hard to tell someone that they smell bad defies rational explanation. Rather than continuing this as did those people in those awful TV ads of a few years ago ("Even his best friend wouldn't tell him.") you might be able to take a more direct approach without having to go so far as saying he stinks, once you have some more information about sweat.

People tend to be much less sensitive to their own body odors that they are to other people's body odors. Your friend has had years to get used to the way he smells and is probably quite immune to the effect it has on others. Perspiration itself has a relatively bland odor, but when it hangs on for a long time and bacteria have a chance to work on it, it becomes quite rancid.

You might approach the problem with him by simply indicating that you are overly sensitive to the way he smells. Since he would probably resent being perfumed, you might find an odorless antiperspirant that you can recommend to him. To further decrease the chance that he would resent your suggestions, you can also tell him that it is a difficult subject for you to approach him with and you are worried that he might be offended.

••••••••••

QUESTION: I have herpes genitalis and I am going out of my mind with pain every time I walk, wear pants, sit, urinate or try to have sexual intercourse. I used to have them approximately every other month but they seem to be more frequent and more severe now. They are open sores about one quarter inch across which take about 10 to 12 days before they heal. What triggers the attacks? Is there any connection between my sores and a vitamin deficiency, other vaginal infections or the fact that my boyfriend is not circumcized? This thing is making me a crab at work and a weeper at home. Also, is it contagious?

ANSWER: The herpes infection you describe is very much like the herpes infection that produces canker sores around the mouth. No one knows what triggers the attacks. Some people get canker sores when they are anxious but others do not. The virus that causes these things is always present in some people but the actual sores seem to flare up only periodically. There is no known link between what you described and vitamin deficiencies.

In checking with my OB-GYN consultant he said there is some good news and some bad news. The bad news is that there is not too much you can do about the infection. Ice packs to the infected area are as soothing as anything else. There are a whole variety of treatments including painting the things with a special dye and shining a light on them (the combination inhibits viral multiplication) and the use of a variety of preparations. The ice packs seem to be the simplest way of decreasing the pain. The good news is that most people eventually have fewer episodes of sores, again for unclear reasons.

A link between cervical cancer and the presence of a chronic herpes infection has been made, but the exact meaning of this link is unclear. The women who developed the cancer and have the herpes infection also had other predisposing factors that might lead to the development of cancer as well. The best protection would be to get a pap smear yearly which would eliminate the possibility of developing cervical cancer and not knowing about it. Large numbers of women have herpes infections and never develop cancer. I hope this provides you with some reassurance.

"I WILL KEEP MY REMARKS TODAY QUITE BRIEF!"

Why everybody's pretending they're us.

There was a time when the EARTH* negative heel shoe was the only shoe in the world with the heel lower than the toe. In those days the other people who made shoes just laughed at us.

But things have changed. And now that you love our Earth brand shoes so much, the shoe companies have stopped laughing and started copying.

But what they don't understand is this. Merely lowering the heel of a shoe isn't enough. And imitating the outside of our shoe isn't enough.

Just because a shoe looks like the Earth* shoe doesn't mean it works like the Earth shoe.

It took many years to perfect the Earth brand shoe. To get the arch just right. To make the toes wide, comfortable and functional. To balance the shoe. To mold the sole in a special way so that it will allow you to walk in a natural rolling motion. Gently and easily, even on the hard jarring cement of our cities.

And the Earth shoe is patented. That means it can't be copied without being changed. And if it's changed it just isn't the Earth shoe.

So to be sure you're getting the Earth brand shoe, look on the sole for the Earth trademark and U.S. patent #3308947.

You'll be glad you did.

Shoes, sandals, sabots and boots for men and women. From $23.50 to $42.50.

*EARTH is a registered trademark of Kalso Systemet, Inc.

©1974 Kalso Systemet, Inc.

earth shoe

139 BANK STREET

The Austrian alternative

Apply now to experience one of the most exciting 'year abroad' programs available, centrally located in Bregenz, Austria, near Europe's finest winter sports areas.

Live with an Austrian family • No language requirement for admission • Learn German by using it • Independent travel and organized excursions throughout Europe • Skiing and ski instruction • Fully accredited • Transferrable credits.

Curriculum includes Humanities, Social Sciences and Physical Education.

Open to sophomores, juniors and seniors from all accredited colleges. For details write:

WAGNER COLLEGE
STUDY PROGRAM
WAGNER COLLEGE
Staten Island, New York 10301
(212) 390-3167

BREGENZ
13th YEAR

Have you considered a career in INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS?

Our two-year program, Master in International Business Studies, includes intensive language study; in-depth cultural studies; business skills; and a six-month work experience in Latin America or Europe. Preference is given to students with professional undergraduate training in such areas as engineering, business administration, etc.

Other business graduate degree programs at the University of South Carolina include master's in business administration, economics, accountancy and transportation; a combined Law-M.B.A. degree; and Ph.D. studies in economics and business administration.

For further information write to:
Director of Graduate Studies
College of Business Administration
The University of South Carolina
Columbia, South Carolina 29208
(Paid for by SC Partnership Fund)

862-4045 152 church st.

The Brad Shop

You take care of the inside of your head...
.....we'll take care of the outside

karate864-0414

A new style in campus living

Resilio's casual corduroy country shirt is securely complemented with Broughton button down shirt, tartan plaid tie and fine gabardine Resilio trousers. All with traditional Resilio authority for tailoring and styling details.

Resilio

Neckwear, Shirtings & Trousers

MAGRAM'S

TRY AN AZTEC MARTINI.

Montezuma® Tequila Martini

Montezuma Tequila, 2 parts. Dry Vermouth, 1 part. Vanilla extract, 2 drops. Stir with ice. Strain into chilled cocktail glass.

OCELOTL (THE JAGUAR) symbol for the 14th day of the ancient Aztec week.

©1974 80 Proof Tequila Renton Distillers Imported Co., New York, New York

Interdisciplinary Summ

An interdisciplinary summer program in Assisi, Italy, sponsored by the University of Vermont, will become available to area residents this year. Running from May 28 to July 3, it offers six hours of graduate or undergraduate credit in English and History. Students at UVM or other colleges, alumni of UVM, anybody who has attended or been graduated from an accredited college, are eligible to enroll.

The dates of the Program have been set early in the summer so that peak season airline fares, which begin June 1, may be avoided. Also, this early date will allow students with the whole summer free to attend this program, get six hours' credit, and have most of the summer left to travel as they wish. For such students, the cost - $1300 - is little more than they would pay for transatlantic transportation, sightseeing, and 38 days' room and board even if they were on their own and living inexpensively. And there is a good chance that the final price will be less, despite inflation.

This fee will include everything but insurance, books, and passport fees. Members of the program will live in a monastery run by the Franciscans in the city of St. Francis, where his order originated. They will eat in the monastery with two UVM faculty members and their families.

They will take two courses, one in literature and one in history, which will be enriched by coordination with one another, and by illustrating their ideas from the art and music and architecture of the city. One course, taught by Prof. Alfred Andrea of UVM's History Department, will explore the history of medieval Christian monasticism.

The second course will probe the work of Dante, particularly his Divine Comedy, and will be led by Prof. William Stephany, a member of UVM's Department of English.

The look and feel of itself remains medieval, grown little in 800 ye its buildings are ow unchanged. The a farmland surroundi hillside place are als changed. The plan of t its rustic farming envir everything contributes sense of medieval life.

This program, the interdisciplinary, im program in Medieval St is two coordinated cour it is an attempt to integ students and their surro into a total vision subject. The goal is not learn about the Middl but to feel what it wa

Student

Temporary jobs in Europe are av students with a Euro Card. The card entit a paying job, with f and board, in a rest office, restaurant or h Switzerland, Austria, Germany. Standard paid which earn ba most of the trip costs. value in the experie and the fact that it w provide an overs experience to list on job application.

The European system does two t you. It puts your na

SAGA Dir

by Randy Jar

In accordance Thanksgiving spir May, SAGA dir Living/Learning c make the holiday a joyous for ot sponsored a conte "Let's Talk Tur SAGA." May invi Brothers/Sisters to The contestants to write 100 word why they like SAG

Gloves Parkas Ski Racks Bicycles Turtl

HAVI

X-C TUNE-UP

Removing Old Wax
Scraping Bottoms
Pine - Taring (Burnin
into the pores of the Adjusting Bindings
Cleaning Skis

Ski Racks Parkas Poles Down Mittens X-C Suits Ruth John Sweaters Poles X-C Gloves Bike Clothing Tubes Tires Plastic Waxes Po

the Ski Rac

658-3313
81-85 Main St.
A Block Below The Howar

Waxes Scrapers Bike Ruth Tires T

urvey

(sale)	JC Penny (reg.)	(sale)	Gayner (reg.)	(sale
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	---	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	---	---	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$10.77	$9.59	$8.77	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	---	---
---	$6.47	---	$5.27	---
---	$6.47	---	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	$4.79	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	---	$5.[illegible]	---
---	$6.47	---	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	---	$4.47	---
---	$6.47	---	$4.47	---
$3.39	$5.77	---	$4.47	---
$109.08	$133.00	$105.43	$95.30	---

M. D.

antiperspirant that you can recommend to decrease the chance that he would repeat your can also tell him that it is a difficult subject each him with and you are worried that he d.

••••••••••••

ve herpes genitalis and I am going out of my every time I walk, wear pants, sit, urinate or sexual intercourse. I used to have them very other month but they seem to be more re severe now. They are open sores about one eal which take about 10 to 12 days before triggers the attacks? Is there any connection res and a vitamin deficiency, other vaginal fact that my boyfriend is not circumcised? king me a crab at work and a weeper at home. ows?

herpes infection you describe is very much like ction that produces canker sores around the knows what triggers the attacks. Some people when they are anxious but others do not. The these things is always present in some people res seem to flare up only periodically. There is between what you described and vitamin with my OB-GYN consultant he said there is and some bad news. The bad news is that there you can do about the infection. Ice packs to are as soothing as anything else. There are a of treatments including painting the things with and shining a light on them (the combination multiplication) and the use of a variety of he ice packs seem to be the simplest way of pain. The good news is that most people fewer episodes of sores, again for unclear ween cervical cancer and the presence of a infection has been made, but the exact meaning unclear. The women who developed the cancer herpes infection also had other predisposing ght lead to the development of cancer as well. ction would be to get a pap smear yearly which e the possibility of developing cervical cancer ing about it. Large numbers of women have one and never develop cancer. I hope this ith some reassurance.

church st.

end... side

karate 864-0414

Interdisciplinary Summer Program Available In Italy

An interdisciplinary summer program in Assisi, Italy, sponsored by the University of Vermont, will become available to area residents this year. Running from May 28 to July 5, it offers six hours of graduate or undergraduate credit in English and History. Students at UVM or other colleges, alumni of UVM, anybody who has attended or been graduated from an accredited college, are eligible to enroll.

The dates of the Program have been set early in the summer so that peak season airline fares, which begin June 1, may be avoided. Also, this early date will allow students with the whole summer free to attend this program, get six hours' credit, and have most of the summer left to travel as they wish. For such students, the cost - $1300 - is little more than they would pay for transatlantic transportation, sightseeing, and 38 days' room and board even if they were on their own and living inexpensively. And there is a good chance that the final price will be less, despite inflation.

This fee will include everything but insurance, books, and passport fees. Members of the program will live in a monastery run by the Franciscans in the city of St. Francis, where his order originated. They will eat in the monastery with two UVM faculty members and their families.

They will take two courses, one in literature and one in history, which will be enriched by coordination with one another, and by illustrating their ideas from the art and music and architecture of the city. One course, taught by Prof. Alfred Andrea of UVM's History Department, will explore the history of medieval Christian monasticism.

The second course will probe the work of Dante, particularly his Divine Comedy, and will be led by Prof. William Stephany, a member of UVM's Department of English.

The look and feel of Assisi itself remains medieval. It has grown little in 800 years, and its buildings are essentially unchanged. The ancient farmland surrounding this hillside place are also little changed. The plan of the city, its rustic farming environment, everything contributes to one's sense of medieval life.

This program, then, is an interdisciplinary, immersion program in Medieval Studies. It is two coordinated courses, and it is an attempt to integrate the students and their surroundings into a total vision of their subject. The goal is not only to learn about the Middle Ages, but to feel what it was like to live in them - to know that period in the development of western culture as well as a modern student can.

As an educational experiment, this program is also unique. There is no program of study concentrating in the Middle Ages in Italy - only an isolated course or two. Indeed, there is only one in France, and few anywhere in Europe. For educators and students, the challenge is immense.

In this year of inflation and financial hardship, students and faculty of UVM's new Medieval/ Renaissance Program are establishing scholarship funds for Vermont students who might want to attend but cannot earn all the money necessary. Therefore, all interested students are urged to ask for further information, regardless of their personal finances.

It should, perhaps, be further noted that the Program in Assisi will be entirely self-supporting. However, to become operative it requires twenty-five students.

Information is available from Prof. James Howe at UVM's English Department, telephone extension 3056.

Student European Job Cards Offered

Temporary paying jobs in Europe are available to students with a European Job Card. The card entitles you to a paying job, with free room and board, in a resort, hotel, office, restaurant or hospital in Switzerland, Austria, France or Germany. Standard wages are paid which earn back all or most of the trip costs. Of equal value is the experience itself and the fact that it will always provide an overseas job experience to list on any future job application.

The European Job Card system does two things for you. It puts your name on a job list, and it initiates processing of your job and the necessary working papers. As this is an advance planning system, students interested in earning their way to Europe should obtain their European Job Cards well in advance of their anticipated departure. Job cards and jobs are given out on a non- profit, first come, first served basis.

The service is provided by Student Overseas Services. SOS has placed thousands of students in temporary paying jobs in Europe during the past ten years. Throughout the year SOS conducts orientation periods in Luxembourg, Europe, to make certain that every student who wants a job gets off to a good start. Large numbers of students from all over the U.S. converge in Luxembourg to attend these orientations.

Students interested in making it on their own in Europe may obtain complete information, including job listings and descriptions and application forms, by sending their name, address, the name of their school (only students are eligible), and $1 to cover overseas postage, handling and printing, to: SOS Student Overseas Services, 22 Ave. de la Liberte, Luxembourg, Europe. Inquiries are answered the day they are received.

SAGA Director Walter May Gets Into The Thanksgiving Spirit

by Randy Janson

In accordance with the Thanksgiving spirit, Walter May, SAGA director of Living/Learning decided to make the holiday a little more joyous for others. He sponsored a contest entitled, "Let's Talk Turkey about SAGA." May invited all Big Brothers/Sisters to participate.

The contestants were asked to write 100 words or less on why they like SAGA.

First prize was a complete Thanksgiving dinner with all the fixings for the little brother/sister of the winner. Second and third prize were a turkey each for the lucky family of little brother/sister.

All Big Brothers/Sisters of Living/Learning were contacted about the contest, however, only three responded.

May expressed his dismay that only three entered out of an estimated 25 in Living/Learning. Sharon Ashe won the complete dinner for her little sister's family. Sara Epstein and Amy Ecclesine won the turkeys for their little sisters.

When asked why he sponsored the contest, May responded, "I wanted to do something nice for poor people."

Next Thing Presents December Workshops

The following December workshops will be presented by The Next Thing in conjunction with the Center for Human Potential and Mind Resources. Most of the sessions will be in our Space at 73 Church St. and will cost $2 registration fee. For exceptions, general information, registrations, or complete catalogs, call, write or drop by The Next Thing at 73 Church St., 862-2013.

Recording Dreams - The Index Recording System - with Steve Kampmann

Thursday, December 5, 7:30 p.m.

An evening primarily focused on the practical application of dream material: i.e. how to remember, how to record, etc.

Coupling and Individual Freedom - with Diane and Charlie Gottlieb

Friday, December 6, 8-11 p.m.

This workshop will focus on sharing feelings and experiences around such areas as - personal integrity, boundaries and limits, jealousy and possessiveness. This workshop is not just for couples. Limit of 15 or 16.

Consciousness Raising for Men and Women - with Nancy Koch and Dan Meyer

Monday, December 9, 7:30 p.m.

This session is designed for men and women to participate first in separate workshops and then come together as one group to look at feelings about sex-based stereotypes and to share and explore attitudes, behaviors, anxieties and difficulties concerning human relationships.

Creative Problem Solving - with Steve Gold

Tuesday, December 10, 7-10 p.m. $3 per participant.

An introduction to a method of individual or more preferably group problem solving which involves four main steps: problem definition, problem analysis, problem differentiation, and development of possible solutions. The creative and for me exciting part of this method comes in the last two steps, where various types of brainstorming and absurd connections are utilized. Each participant should bring a real people or thing problem to work on with the group. Bring paper and pencil. See Listening and Leveling workshop above. Limited to 10.

Unity Players Open Theater Workshop - with the Unity Players

Wednesday, December 11, 7:30

The I Ching - with John Wilson

Thursday, December 12th, 8-11 p.m.

I have found the I Ching a valuable tool for keeping me sane and centered during a period of my life otherwise very insecure. As a means of sharing it, this workshop will explore the structure, philosophy and uses of the I Ching in an introductory fashion. (People have studied it for their whole life.)

Workshop of TA - with Louise Lindner

Friday, December 13th, 7:30

An introduction to the basic principles of Transactional Analysis with a presentation of theory and some experiential practice. Emphasis will be on using TA concepts in every day life.

Gestalt Therapy and Massage Workshop - with David Sokol and Shelly Petrykowski

Friday and Saturday, December 20 and 21, 7 p.m. - 10 p.m., see 10/18&19, Sokol for details on where and costs.

Gestalt therapy is an approach to therapy focusing on the mind and body as an integrated unit. In this workshop we will use Gestalt and massage as tools to contact ourselves as mind/body organisms. Hopefully we can transcend this split in our experience - at least we will discover how we split ourselves and block our excitement and energy. There will be time to learn massage techniques and be client in Gestalt. These experiences may weave together or be separate for you. The possibility is here for making discoveries which may be important long after this workshop.

NAZ DAR COMPANY
NAZDAR SILK SCREEN SUPPLIES

Benjamin Moore BENJAMIN MOORE & California Paints CALIFORNIA PAINTS

SPECIAL DISCOUNTS TO STUDENTS WITH ID

VERMONT PAINT CO.
138 No. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
862-0201

SNOW TIRES!!!
Complete line of SNOW TIRES -new and retreads.
All UVM students and Faculty get 10% discount with this ad.
E&E TIRE CO., INC.
152 RIVERSIDE AVE.
864-7759

Gloves Parkas Ski Racks Bicycles Turtle Necks Poles Packs Sweaters Waxes Tires Gloves Pine Tar Huck Down Mittens Corks Ruth Bike Parts Scrapers Bike Parts Bike Clothing John X-C Gloves Tubes

HAVE YOU SEEN THE NEW SKI RACK?
81—85 MAIN STREET

X-C TUNE-UP $3
Removing Old Wax
Scraping Bottoms
Pine - Taring (Burning tar deep into the pores of the wood)
Adjusting Bindings
Cleaning Skis

X-C SKI PACKAGE $52.50
Eiger Skis
Boots
Bindings
Mounting
Heel Plate
Poles

X-C SKIS BY
Kongsberg, Bonna, Skillon, Hexceo, Atomic, Lovett, Norse, Toppen, Odyssey, Skillom, Eiger, Jarvinew, Fischer

X-C RACING SKIS
Extra Lite Toppen
Skillom 134
Jarviwen
Balsa-Lett
Blaiskia

the Ski Rack
658-3313
81-85 Main St.
A Block Below The Howard Bank

Bank Americard
Diners Club
Master Charge

Open Daily 9:30-6:00
Saturday 9:00- 5:00
Fridays Till 9:00 PM

the Ski Rack
Downtown Burlington's Only Specialty X-C, Bicycle & Apparel Shop

Waxes Scrapers Bike Ruth Tires Tubes Ski Racks Bicycles Turtle Necks Poles Packs Sweaters Waxes Tires Gloves Pine Tar Tubes Bike Packs Down Mittens Corks Bike Parts Clothing John Bike Clothing

John Sweaters Poles X-C Gloves Bike Clothing Tubes Tires Packs Waxes Poles Ski Racks Parkas Poles Down Mittens X-C Suits Ruth

World's Greatest X-C Book Huck World's Greatest X-C Book Scrapers Huck Ruth World's Greatest X-C Book Bike Clothing Bath X-C Gloves

Fats: In Sickness And In Health

by Sue Milne and Cindy Theall
Living/Learning Nutrition Program

Fat is an important component of the diet and is important to our health in several ways. As the most concentrated source of food energy, fat is a powerhouse of calories, supplying nine calories per gram compared to four calories per gram from carbohydrates and proteins. Fats are also the chief sources of essential fatty acids as well as carriers for some of the essential vitamins - A,D,E, and K. If too little fat is ingested, the diet is deficient in these nutrients, too. Also, this same fat-restricted diet would lack flavor and satiety. Fats are digested slowly; meals containing considerable fat remain in the stomach longer so prevent the early reoccurrance of "hunger pangs" that occur when the stomach is empty.

The building blocks of fat are fatty acids and glycerol. Most food fats are a combination of different saturated and unsaturated fatty acids, depending upon the kind of fatty acids present. A saturated fatty acid is a chain of carbon atoms containing all the hydrogen atoms it can hold. A fat made up of these fatty acids is usually solid at room temperature and occurs chiefly in animal fat.

The saturated vegetable fats found in many solid shortenings are made chemically hard by the addition of hydrogen atoms to normally unsaturated fatty acids so that the products will have a longer shelf life. This process is called hydrogenation and is also used to produce the popular soft margarines. Diet soft margarines are also hydrogenated but half the volume is water, whipped in during processing. A new liquid margarine product is hydrogenated to a lesser degree and therefore is polyunsaturated.

A polyunsaturated fatty acid is a chain of carbon atoms having one or more double bonds where hydrogen could be added. Polyunsaturated fats are generally oils of vegetable origin which remain liquid at room temperature. The only major exception is coconut oil which is a saturated liquid fat. Since our body cannot synthesize polyunsaturated fats, they must be obtained from food.

Oils such as corn, cottonseed, safflower, sesame seed, soybean, and sunflower seed oil are all high in polyunsaturates which, when consumed, have the unique property of lowering the cholesterol level in the blood.

Cholesterol is a wax-like substance which is a normal constituent of blood and tissues. It is found in every animal cell and is an important factor in digesting juices, the brain, certain connective tissues, and sexual secretions. The liver makes large amounts of cholesterol while some is supplied in our diet. Egg yolks and organ meats are very high in cholesterol while shellfish is moderately high.

Foods of plant origin such as fruits, vegetables, cereal grains, legumes, and nuts do not contain cholesterol. Plants do contain plant sterols which tend to reduce cholesterol levels.

Many fatty substances are present in the bloodstream; cholesterol is the easiest lipid to measure and is thus an index of the fatty substances in the bloodstream. If cholesterol accumulates on the walls of blood vessels, the disease, atherosclerosis, may result.

Although atherosclerosis itself is not a killer, excessive deposits on the vessel wall gradually narrow the passage through which blood can travel. If the deposits completely block blood supply, the tissues dependent on the blood vessel die. In the heart, the blockage of a coronary blood vessel causes a coronary thrombosis - heart attack. In the brain, the blockage causes a cerebro-vascular accident (CVA) or stroke.

Atherosclerosis is not completely understood, however. There seem to be other elements in the blood besides fatty substances that contribute to the condition. There also appears to be an hereditary factor involving sensitivity to blood lipids and the onset of atherosclerosis. Diet may or may not be a factor in this disease.

Strangely enough, the American diet provides 45-50 per cent of its calories from fats; heart disease is also the number one killer. Some nutritionists demand a strict moderation of fats, stressing that less than 35 per cent of total calories should be supplied by fat.

This might be achieved by broiling meats and poultry rather than frying, avoiding deep-fat fried foods; using cooking fats, margarines and salad dressing containing mostly polyunsaturated vegetable oils. Any relationship between high fat consumption and heart disease may also be reflected in the high meat consumption in America. Flavorful meat marbled with fat is more desirable and Americans may be consuming a lot of saturated fats along with the meat proteins.

The point to remember is that foods which contain cholesterol and saturated fatty acids raise your cholesterol level while polyunsaturated fatty acids have the unique ability of lowering the amount of cholesterol in your blood.

Since cholesterol can build up in the body over a period of time, we all should watch our food intake for any unnecessary fat and/or cholesterol. Twenty years from now, you may find you are prone to heart attacks, and a link may be found between your diet and heart disease.

Rising Earth Books
81 Main Street
Burlington, Vermont
05401
863-6103
(Above The Ski Rack)

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

Changes In Phys. Ed. Registration

There is a change in physical education activity registration for next semester.

Activity classes will begin on Wednesday, Jan. 15.

Registration for physical education activities will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 15, and Thursday, Jan. 16 at Patrick Gym.

Here are the procedures:

1. Select the activity of your choice and time from the printed class schedule.

2. Report to Patrick Gym at the time and day the class is scheduled to meet (Example: If you want to take Badminton 1 at 9:30 TTh, report to Patrick on Thursday at 9:30)

3. For classes meeting one day per week, M, W, or F, report at the scheduled time the class would begin on Wednesday, January 15. For classes meeting once a week T or Th, report at the scheduled time the class would begin on Thursday, Jan. 16.

4. Students in 2 year programs and upper class students who have not fulfilled the requirement will have a higher priority for registration if they arrive promptly at the time the class begins.

5. Physical Education major activities are open to all students, however majors have a higher priority for registration.

6. Registration for courses listed as TBA will be held on Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Only semester and winter term classes may be added at this time.

Spring term registration will follow the same procedures and will be held on Monday, Mar. 10 and Tues., Mar. 11.

Forced changes will be made for semester and winter term classes on Friday, January 17 from 1 to 4 p.m. at Southwick Gym.

No courses may be added for the semester or winter term after Tuesday, Jan. 21.

increase, and $2 per day for lifts.

Also, please drop the following course from consideration:

PEAC 53, 4009, Archery 1, on 1:35 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one half-credit, spring term.

It should be noted that the following courses have been added for students' consideration:

PEAC 183 6751, Advanced Ballet, Pointe 8:15 on Mondays and Wednesdays, 1 credit hour, and a fee of $20.00.

PEAC 77, 6738, Karate 1-2, at 1:25 on Mondays and Wednesdays, 1 credit hour, and the fee will be determined by enrollment.

PEAC 77, 6743, Karate 1-2, at 1:25 on Tuesdays and Thursdays, one credit hour, and fee will be determined by the number of students participating.

PEAC 111, 4193, X-Country Ski, on 11:15 Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 4144, X-Country Ski, on 10:30 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 4145, X-Country Ski, at 2:25, Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 4733, X-Country Ski, 1:25 on Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

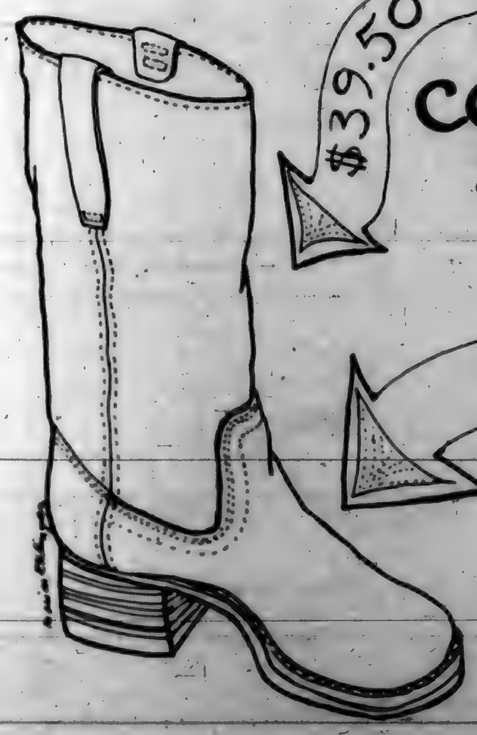
PEAC 111, 9729, X-Country Ski, at 11:25 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one-half credit hour.

Please be advised that the times listed in the Schedule of Courses for X-Country Ski are all incorrect, and those listed above are the right times.

There will also be a course, DOWNHILL SKI, where all levels of freestyle will be offered on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The fee will be approximately $36, depending on possible transportation

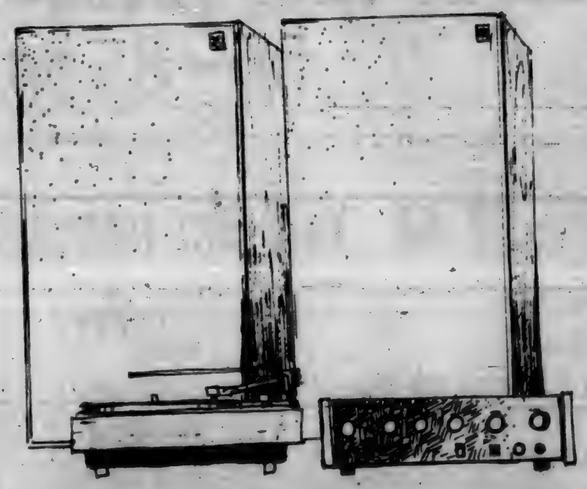
THE COMPANY STORE

Sells BETTER BOOTS
At BETTER PRICES
To BETTER CUSTOMERS
So BUY Better Boots at



THE COMPANY STORE

Lower Church St.



if you've been saving for a jbl sound system, stop.

This system featuring the JBL L-16 Decade Speakers, the Sansui AU-101 Amplifier and the BSR 610 AW/X Turntable with deluxe wood grain base sells for only $$449 at Tech Hifi. Just think of all the money that leaves you to eat with!

150 Church St.
Burlington, Vt.
Phone 862-2638

tech hifi
Quality Components at the Right Price

Dartmouth-Hanover
New Hampshire
Phone 643-3412

SCHWARTZ ON SPORTS

by Mike Schwartz

This is the final column of my year as sports editor. As I end this semester and look back, I find there is much that I have learned from doing this job.

Hopefully, I have added insight to the variety of sport here at Vermont. Beyond the men's varsity activities, sport is also intramurals, women's teams, and the planning of the athletic director or the ticket manager. But instead of recapping I hope to look to the future by trying to answer one important question - at what point are the athletic programs at UVM?

This past year has been a turning point. One sport entered a new phase: Hockey is now beginning their first season in Division I. At the other end is the loss of a sport - football.

In between are the other programs. Cross country made into the New England Top Ten and Tennis won the Yankee Conference last spring. Basketball is building depth and a schedule that is both imposing and yet allows for the rivals closer to home.

This list can go on and on. It presents the need to see where money allows these teams to function. Football does not make this money.

When football was dropped the alternatives to keep the program suddenly appeared left and right. Some call for higher ticket prices, others call for a better schedule so that people will come see better teams, and others, as reflected in this column, believe that a scaled down program is the best alternative.

When football was dropped at Vermont, Joe Paterno of Penn State voiced the opinion that one platoon football should be reinstituted to cut costs of large squads under the two platoon system. Others such as Jeff Hughes of WDEV radio point out the fact that students of faculty and staff do not pay tuition. Much money can be raised if these people paid their way. Another way suggested is to raise the out-of-state student percentage.

What is really needed is a system that is fair to all and the best alternative. Whatever that system is, it must be found quickly.

For as with football, the key to all sports here at Vermont is to have the money to offer programs. This school is the only state university in Vermont that can offer the hope of big-time athletics. Its position as a state university in a small state presents extreme financial problems.

Needless to say, the zenith of sports may be upon us. Other colleges are taking long looks at their programs and perhaps other schools will drop a sport or two this year. No announcements will not be startling. In the past weeks Holy Cross and Villanova have been reevaluating their programs. At the professional level, there are actually tickets available for N.F.L. games. Basketball and hockey have expanded into an oversaturated position in which many games are mismatches. The W.F.L. lost $20,000,000. Even the pros may have gone to extremes in offering too much.

In essence, focusing back at this school we see the need to offer a variety of varsity sports - and these programs at the scholarship and nonscholarship levels have shown much potential. Now we must find the money and the alternatives to keep these programs. Hopefully, football will be the last example of an athletic crisis at Vermont.

WRUV-AM 580

'Hockey
Catar

Dec. 10, 1974
UVM vs.

Dec. 11, 1974
UVM vs.

All the Action
from the G brought

Pants Plus

Registration

...4 p.m.
...and winter
...y added at
...registration
...be some
...be held on
...and Tues.
...s will be
...ead winter
...day, January
...4 p.m. at
...be added
...winter term
...21
...ry day for
...drop the
...ses from
...Archery I,
...days and
...half-credit.
...ted that the
...have been
...students'
...), Advanced
...on Mondays
...credit hour.
...18, Karate
...ondays and
...st hour, and
...ermined by

PEAC 77, 6743, Racquetball I-2, at 1:15 on Tuesdays and Thursdays, one credit hour, and fee will be determined by the number of students participating.

PEAC 111, 4193, X-Country Ski, on 11:15 Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 114, 4144, X-Country Ski, on 10:30 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 141, 4145, X-Country Ski, at 2:25, Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 6733, X-Country Ski, 1:25 on Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 9729, X-Country Ski, at 11:25 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one-half credit hour.

Please be advised that the times listed in the Schedule of Courses for X-Country Ski are all incorrect, and those listed above are the right times.

There will also be a course, DOWNHILL SKI, where all levels of freestyle will be offered on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The fee will be approximately $36, depending on possible transportation

JBL
Sansui
BSR
McDONALD
...saving
...system,
...peakers, the Sansui
.../X Turntable with
...9 at Tech Hifi. Just
...with!
Dartmouth-Hanover
New Hampshire
Phone 643-3412

SCHWARTZ ON SPORTS

by Mike Schwartz

This is the final column of my year as sports editor. As I end this semester and look back, I find there is much that I have learned from doing this job.

Hopefully, I have added insight to the variety of sport here at Vermont. Beyond the men's varsity activities, sport is also intramurals, women's teams, and the planning of the athletic director or the ticket manager. But instead of recapping I hope to look to the future by trying to answer one important question - at what point are the athletic programs at UVM?

This past year has been a turning point. One sport entered a new phase: Hockey is now beginning their first season in Division I. At the other end is the loss of a sport - football.

In between are the other programs. Cross country made it into the New England Toy Tea and Tennis won the Yankee Conference last spring. Basketball is building depth and a schedule that is both imposing and yet allows for the rivalries closer to home.

This list can go on and on. It presents the need to see that money allows these teams to function. Football does not make this money.

When football was dropped the alternatives to keep the program suddenly appeared left and right. Some call for higher ticket prices, others call for a better schedule so that people will come see better teams, and others, as reflected in this column, believe that a scaled down program is the best alternative.

When football was dropped at Vermont, Joe Paterno at Penn State voiced the opinion that one platoon football should be reinstituted to cut costs of large squads under the two platoon system. Others such as Jeff Hughes of WDOT radio point out the fact that students of faculty and staff do not pay tuition. Much money can be raised if these people paid their way. Another way suggested is to raise the out-of-state student percentage.

What is really needed is a system that is fair to all and is the best alternative. Whatever that system is, it must be found quickly.

For as with football, the key to all sports here at Vermont is to have the money to offer programs. This school is the only state university in Vermont that can offer the hope of big time athletics. Its position as a state university in a small state presents extreme financial problems.

Needless to say, the zenith of sports may be upon us. Other colleges are taking long looks at their programs and perhaps other schools will drop a sport or two this year. Such announcements will not be startling. In the past weeks Hofstra and Villanova have been reevaluating their programs. At the professional level, there are actually tickets available for N.F.L. games. Basketball and hockey have expanded to an oversaturated position in which many games are mismatches. The W.F.L. lost $20,000,000. Even the pros may have gone to extremes in offering too much.

In essence, focusing back at this school we see the need to offer a variety of varsity sports - and these programs at both scholarship and nonscholarship levels have shown their potential. Now we must find the money and the right alternatives to keep these programs. Hopefully, football will be the last example of an athletic crisis at Vermont.

PFG-Schedule

WEEKEND OF DEC. 6, 7, 8th, 1974

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6
GYM – Faculty-Staff – West Gym 7–10:30 p.m.; East & Center 9–10:30 p.m.
POOL – Faculty-Staff – 7–10:30 p.m., 7–8 under 15.
RINK – Faculty–Staff – 7–10:30 p.m.; 7–8 under 15.
TRACK – Faculty–Staff – 7–10:30 p.m.

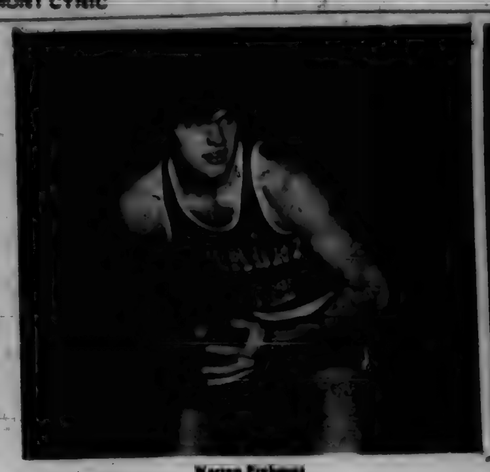
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7
GYM – Students – 8–10 p.m.
POOL – Students – 3:30–5 p.m.; 7–10 p.m.
RINK – Students – 7–10 p.m.
TRACK – Students – 7–10 p.m.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 8
GYM – Students – 1–5 p.m.
POOL – Students – 1–5 p.m.
RINK – Students – 7:30–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Students – 1–5 p.m.

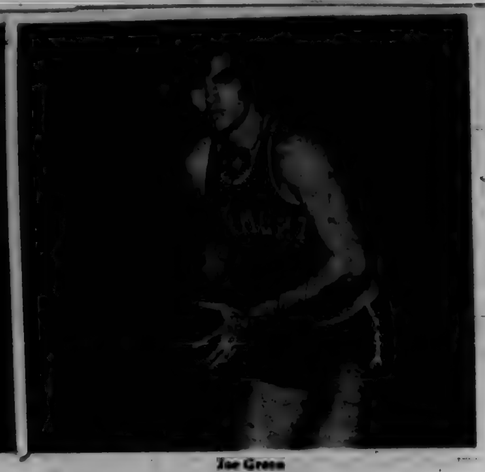
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

© COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-BOX 941-BERKELEY, CA 94708



Warren Prehmus



Joe Greco

Basketball Team Opens Season With Rout Of Dartmouth

The Catamount basketball team hopes to get off to a fast start in their early December games. They started off right on Monday night as they walloped Dartmouth 92-72. For the Green, it was their third loss of the young season.

The first half was close. Although the Cats jumped to an early 13-4 lead behind Warren Prehmus' scoring, Dartmouth rallied to gain a 34-34 tie. But by halftime the lead was 49-43 mainly due to a five point play. Mark Cubit made a one and one foul shot and a technical foul. Vermont retained possession and Joe Greco hit the fourth and fifth points.

Still leading by only eight in the second half, the Cats went on a 14-2 spree and upped their lead to 87-67 as time was running out.

The Cats generated more offense than they have been known for. For the game they shot 54.3 per cent led by Prehmus and Greco who each had 20 points. Terry Green had 13. Cubit, a freshman point guard lead the attack well and added 7 points.

Rebounding was spread out evenly among Greco and Charlie Trapani with seven and Green and Prehmus with six.

The Dartmouth attack was led by all-Ivy star and the leading scorer in that conference last year, Adam Sutton. He had 25 points and 10 rebounds.

The Cats hosted UNH last night at Patrick Gym and have three more games before Christmas. These will be at Columbia this weekend and then have encounters with Norwich and Connecticut.

MEXICO NORTH
at the 5 corners Essex Jct., Vt.
Largest Selection of American Indian Turquoise & Silver in Vermont
Afghani, Indian & Mexican clothing, leather goods, jewelery, tapestries, antlerpipes, furniture, stained glass, & lots more
Open 9 to 9 Mon-Fri 9 to 5:30 Sat.
10% off any purchase to UVM Students with this ad

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
Route 2, Williston, Vt. 862-7686
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
560 X 15 Snow Tires FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 95 and 96's 24.95 inc. FET & mounting
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
Includes: 8 new brake linings, 4 turn drums, rebuilt 4 wheel cylinders.
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
Brake Balancer $3.50 per Wheel
Front End Alignment $12.00

GOOD LISTENING !

WRUV-AM 580 Khz. 91.1 Cable FM

'Hockey Night in Catamount Country'
Dec. 10, 1974 7:30 pm
UVM vs. Clarkson
Dec. 11, 1974 7:30 pm
UVM vs. Hamilton
All the Action from the Gutterson Fieldhouse brought to you by Pants Plus and U-Store

WRUV-AM-FM 90.1 Mhz.

'Exam Week Special'
A lot of people will be staying up all night during the exam period at the University of Vermont.
WRUV will be up all night with you...
24 hours a day...All week long...
Good MUSIC...Different Programming...
JOIN US ! made possible in part by a grant from Pants Plus

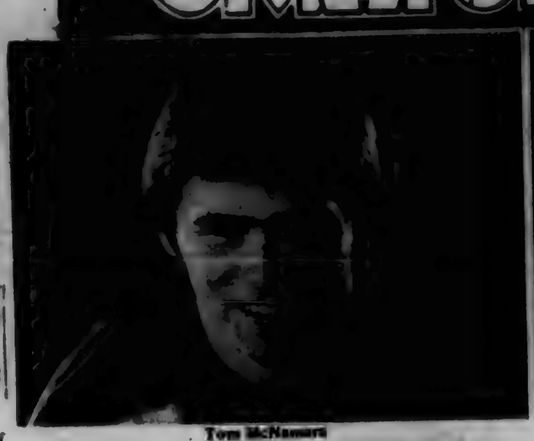
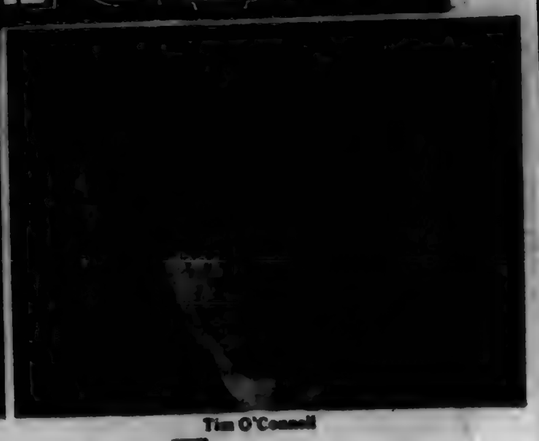
WRUV
the student radio stations of UVM

U.V.M. SPORTS



Tom McNamara



Tim O'Connell

Icecats Beat Princeton For First "Real" Division I Win

The Catamount hockey team, off to a slow start may have found the winning combination as they won their first official Division I hockey contest. The Cats defeated the Princeton Tigers by 4-0 at Princeton on Monday night.

The game marked another first as Tom McNamara, the UVM goalie registered his first shutout as he stopped 30 Tiger shots.

Four players scored the four goals. Tom Colby registered the first one in the first reel on a shot made while sprawled on the ice. It eluded Robin Rollefstad the Tiger goalie as the puck rolled into the net.

Two goals were added in the second period. Ken Yeates scored the first on a 20 foot slap shot with an assist to Andy Rickard. Later in the period Billy Reber scored on a rebound of a John Glynne slap shot from the point. Bill Spence chalked up an assist on the third goal.

Tim O'Connell scored number eight for the season on an assist from Reber in the third period to close the scoring.

For the game, despite being outshot, the Cats played good position hockey as they beokchecked and forechecked effectively.

Vermont went to St. Anselm's on Wednesday to play one of the top Division II teams, in Manchester, N.H. Then the first two home games take place next week against Clarkson and Hamilton.

Women's Swim Team Score Two Impressive Victories

On Thursday, November 14, 1974, the Women's Swim team opened their season by finishing first in the Middlebury Invitational. The team finished with 110 points with Williams second and Dartmouth third with 75 and 73 points respectively. Other teams in the competition were Plattsburgh, Skidmore and Middlebury.

In this great team effort many outstanding performances resulted. In the 200 yard medley relay the team of Clark, Schrieshiem, Kalisch, and Ainsworth finished first. Miss Kalisch also finished first in the 200 individual medley. In the 50 and 100 breast stroke, Laura Schrieshiem finished first. Schrieshiem also finished on top in the 100 back competition. In diving, Cyndie Prehmus was the top placed competitor in the 1 meter diving event.

Then on the 23 of November, the team hosted the UVM Invitational Swimming and Diving Meet. Again the girls finished first with 131 points. The rest of the finishers were UNH-79, Green Mountain-49, Middlebury-47, and St. Michael's-21.

The 200 yard medley team again placed first with Force replacing Clark. The change didn't matter as the girls were on top in a time of 2.05.2. Schrieshiem was first in the 200 yard individual medley while Captain Jackie Force placed on top in the 50 yard backstroke.

Force also was on top in two other events, the 100 backstroke and the 50 yard butterfly. Andrea Kalisch was first in the 50 yard breastroke and 100 butterfly. To top things off, Cyndie Prehmus again placed first in her speciality, the 1 meter diving competition.

All together, the girls won 10 of the 14 events of the day. Indeed, in their first performances of the season, the women's swim team which went undefeated last season kept up their winning ways.

RPI Defeat UVM 4-3

Vermont made its debut in ECAC Division I hockey and suffered a 4-3 loss to the RPI Engineers at Troy, N.Y. RPI twice battled back from one-goal deficits to eek out the win. Vermont lost its lead (3-2) with less than eight minutes left in the game and fell behind at 13:49, 4-3, as freshman Bill Sherlock stole the puck in Vermont's end and waltzed in on Tom McNamara unmolested and beat the sophomore netminder with a wrist shot high over his left shoulder. The Catamounts were outshot, 32-29, and appeared sluggish in the third period, being outshot 15-7.

Junior center Tim O'Connell scored twice for Vermont, upping his team-leading statistics to seven goals and four assists in seven games, an average of 1.57 points a game. His linemate, right winger Bill Koch, had the other tally with only 59 seconds left in the second period, giving Vermont the 3-2 lead which they held until 12:31 of the final stanza. Koch now has five goals and five assists for the season. The line of O'Connell, Koch and Roger Mallette has accounted for 16 of the 28 goals scored in the seven games to date. "That line has been everything that I expected," said head coach Jim Cross. "What we need now is consistent play from the other three lines. It will come. I have said right along that this club will prove to be the strongest team I've had at Vermont and after Saturday's performance at RPI, I'm convinced of that."

"We played great hockey the first two periods, but seemed to weaken in the third. Give credit to RPI, as they came back and forechecked us very well. Sure, we would have loved that win, but we will now set our sights towards Princeton and my good friend, Jack Semler," added Cross. Semler played hockey under Cross at Vermont in the 60's and is in his second year as varsity coach at Princeton, one of the most improved teams in the East last season.

Following the Princeton game, the Catamounts travel to Manchester, N. H. and a game with St. Anselm's College, one of the premier teams in Division II and next, to Vermont was the hottest team at the end of last season in Division II. Everyone returns from that team, along with several top freshmen. The game will be played at the JFK Arena, beginning at 7:00 p.m. Vermont won last year's game in Burlington in overtime, 8-7.

Indoor Track Season Starts

Vermont's track team opens with a "mini" preview of the Yankee Conference championships, as Connecticut hosts Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts at Storrs, Dec. 7, at 1 p.m. Connecticut won the YanCon indoor title last year at UVM, with Massachusetts second and Vermont third. Leading the Catamount indoor track team this year are co- captains Mike Berry and Tom Harrington. Following the meet at Connecticut, Dec. 7, Vermont will again host the Christmas Invitational, Dec. 14, featuring some of the top track performers in the East.

Bateman And Looker Make First Team On All-Yankee Conference Squad

The University of Massachusetts with seven players and Boston University with five selections dominated the 1974 All Yankee Conference offensive and defensive teams which were announced today following a vote of the league's head coaches. Maine, which won its last four conference games to deadlock Massachusetts for the Beanpot, and Rhode Island both placed three men on the first team.

Dennis Kiernan and Tom Bradshaw of UMass and Gary Dziama of Boston Univer were the only repeaters from last year's first team. Vermont quarterback Bob Bateman and Rhode Island halfback Rich Remondino were the top choices of the coaches on the offensive unit while Dziama and UMass middleguard Paul St. Onge led the defensive unit.

FIRST TEAM SELECTIONS - OFFENSE

WR Billy Looker (Vt.) - Sr; WR Bill Britt (URI) - Jr.; TE Mike Maroney (UNH) - Jr; TE Mike Matkevitch (URI) - Sr; OT Jim Roderick (BU) - Sr; OT Rick Understein (Me) - Jr; OG Ned Deane (UMass) - Jr; OG Kevin Brooks (BU) - Jr; O Bob Don Chrisco (BU) - Jr; QB Bob Bateman (Vt) - Jr; RB Jim Torrance (UMass) - Jr; RB Rich Remondino (URI) - So.

FIRST TEAM SELECTIONS - DEFENSE

DE Dennis Kiernan (UMass) - Sr; DE Tom Bradshaw (UMass) - Sr; DT Bill Cooke (UMass) - Sr; DT Mike Lanza (UNH) - Sr; MG Paul St. Onge (UMass) - Sr; LB Gary Dziama (BU) - Sr; Scott Shulman, LB (Me) - So; CB Jack Leggett (Me) - Jr; CB Rick Porter (BU) - Sr; S Rich Fenton (Ct.) - Jr; S Ron Harris (UMass) - So.

SECOND TEAM OFFENSE: Wide Receivers - Allan MacLellan (Ct.), Pete Kessel (BU); Tackles - Tom Harris (UMass), Ross Schubarth (UMass),; Guards - Bill Maver (Ct.), John Gouin (URI); Center - Kevin Martell (UNH); Quarterback - John Cosgrove (Me.); Running Backs - Mark DeGregorio (Me.), Glen Murphy (BU).

SECOND TEAM DEFENSE: Ends - Gary Calvino (Ct.), Kevin Graham (BU); Tackles - Rick Holway (BU), Dom Lalli (BU); Middle Guard - Dave LaRoche (BU); Linebackers - Don Thompson (CT.), Dave Rozumek (UNH); Cornerbacks - Ray Brazzo (URI), Marty Bird (Ct.); Safety - Al Ramos, (BU), Brad Yurek (UNH).

Intramural Results

WOMEN'S RACQUETBALL (SINGLES) INTRAMURAL TOURNAMENT WINNER:-

Mary Dee (DAVIS) defeated Karen Taylor (INDEPENDENT) 15-6, 15-6 for the ALL CAMPUS WOMEN'S RACQUETBALL (SINGLES) CHAMPIONSHIP.

INTRAMURAL TRACK & FIELD MEET INDIVIDUAL RESULTS

Long Jump - Petter Kongsli (DELTA PSI) - 17' 10¼"

12 Shot - Ken Munson (DELTA PSI) - 45' 5½"

50 yd. Dash - Ken Munson (DELTA PSI) - 5.9 sec.

High Jump - Petter Kongsli - 5' 6"

600 Yd Run - Morton Gaarud (DELTA PSI) - 1:23.7

44 Yd. Low Hurdles - James Kaufman (CHITT) - 6.8 sec.

Pole Vault - Andy Witter (DELTA PSI) - 10'

28 Wt. Throw - James Gardner (BARRY) - 54' 3"

300 Yd. Run - Gary Sabourin (DELTA PSI) - 36.1 sec.

TEAM RESULTS

1st place - DELTA PSI - 77.5 points

2nd place - TIE - PHI DELTA THETA - 9 points; BARRYS - 9 points.

AMERICAN INDIAN
Turquoise & Silver
JEWELRY SALE
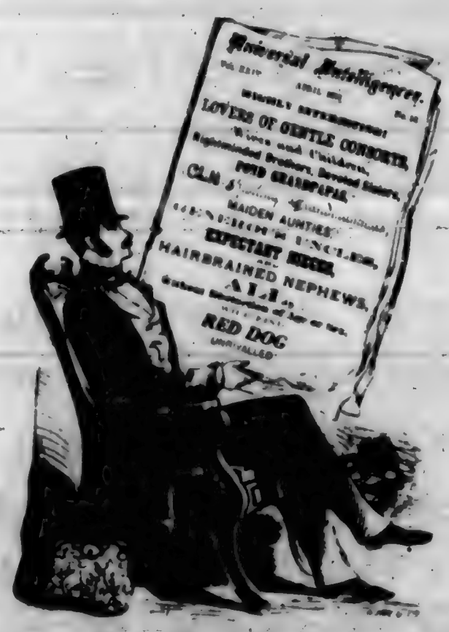
20% - 30% off retail on Handmade NAVIJO, HOPI, ZUNI rings, earrings, bracelets, hesche beads, fetishes, sqesh blossoms, watchbands, liquid silver & many collector's pieces
at the HOLIDAY INN
Williston Rd. So. Burl.
Fri., Sat, Sun. (Dec. 6,7,8,) 10am-9pm
A wise investment for the future
Inspect this fine collection in a relaxed atmosphere. Watch you investment grow in value, while having the pleasure of wearing it.
GREEN MTN. TRADERS Box 189, Richmond, Vt.

RED DOG SALOON
A Traditional Beverage And Entertainment Emporium
Since 1965
Lower Church Street- 864-9524



This Week Featuring
JET
Next Week
TRIADS
Sunday Night
50¢ Cover
25¢ Mugs
Featuring
DOWNPOUR

LOOK WHO'S WEARING Levi's from Pants Plus
for girls & guys
10% off with valid UVM Student ID
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE. 864-0181
BURLINGTON, VT. 05401

THEY'RE REALLY NEAT···
FOR GUYS AND GALS; HAND EMBROIDERED SUEDE LEATHER SHIRT-JACS
PLUS···A FINE SELECTION OF CHRISTMAS GIFTS···
SUNDANCE IN TRADER'S WAY 18 N. WINOOSKI AVE. AT PEARL ST. DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

20,000 SWEATERS
SPORTS WEAR
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 MAIN ST
OPEN DAILY 9-9
SATURDAY 9-5

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 1
JANUARY 16, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a privilege to live in Vermont

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

UVM Surprised by President Andrew's Resignation

by Kathy Stiassni

In a Trustee committee meeting on January 7, President Andrews announced his intention to resign after the Trustee's meeting this June. While the University community was surprised by the abrupt resignation, Dr. Andrews explained that his decision had been a matter of timing. Though he had accepted a second offer in October from the Maine Medical Center to fill a post there as President, he felt an announcement at that time would have an adverse effect on the budget cutting process.

Thus, President Andrews will move on to the largest medical facility in Maine to a post which promises to be a challenge and on par financially with his present position at UVM.

There has been much speculation as to who will succeed President Andrews. Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, UVM's Academic President, and Ex U.S. Rep. Mallary, a republican who lost the bid for the U.S. Senate in last November's election have been mentioned as possible successors to the post. Both men have indicated an interest, and Rollins, an 'active candidate' for permanent appointment has volunteered for interim duty until a final decision is reached.

President Andrews has recommended that a search committee be set up immediately, believing that the Board of Trustees will choose a new president by their June meeting at the soonest. He has indicated that the selection process may take up to two years. However, he said, 'I don't want to have anything to do with the selection of my successor.' While refusing to comment on potential candidates, Andrews did feel strongly that his successor must come out of a university or college background.

In answer to a question as to whether this was an inopportune time to relinquish his position, Dr. Andrews commented optimistically that he thinks the present budget problems can be solved. He asserted that the fiscal '76 problems are under control, and that by the time he leaves, the fiscal '77 problems will be defined. He added that the administration is making a concentrated effort to move toward a long range planning process.

Dr. Andrews does not feel his imminent departure will affect his bargaining power with the legislature. On the contrary he believes it may be strengthened. His comments about legislative support also indicated an optimistic attitude, which was surprising in light of Salmon's proposals for 'level' funding and the possibility of a $1.5 million deficit for this year. Dr. Andrews feels that there is a 50-50 chance of 'level' funding, but that once the legislature fully realizes the negative consequences of this, they will make every possible effort to increase appropriations to the University.

The following letter of resignation was submitted by Dr. Andrews to Douglas Cairns, Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Dear Doug:

The purpose of this letter is to submit to the Board of Trustees my resignation as President of the University.

As you know, I had considered that the span of responsibilities such as mine should be at least six years, subject of course to the wishes of the Board and of the University community. Thus when I was approached some time ago with the idea of filling a newly-created post as President of the Maine Medical Center at Portland, I felt I could not seriously respond even though the possibility had great natural appeal.

But the offer was held open and put to me again and I have now at last agreed with the Center's Trustees to accept it later this year. My interests and background make the position a challenge that I cannot take lightly believing, as I do, that both serious problems and great opportunity lie in the particular pressures on health care delivery in America today.

Five years as President here thus falls short of my expectations as far as duration is concerned, but they have been good and I think productive years. I refer particularly to the need for setting an institutional course that seeks to meet urgent demands in the 70's for both quality and economy in academia for an educational environment that speaks to society's needs and in its administration is fully accountable, in our case to the people of Vermont and to the best interests, as I see them, of the University community itself.

My intention is to relinquish my post following our Trustee meeting in June. Meanwhile I urge the prompt formation of a committee to conduct a search for a successor. I have every confidence that it will have a choice of outstanding candidates to guide the institution in the years ahead and pledge whatever I can do to assure a smooth transition to that choice. It is not my intention, by the way, to relax until June—in a 'lame duck' role. I fully intend to be a vigorous, responsible President as long as I am here.

I want you to know that the Andrews family will leave UVM and friends and colleagues here with the greatest reluctance, for we have invested 17 years of our lives in this campus and love both the University and State and what they stand for. Our commitment is great and our faith in their future profound.

I could not close without expressing a gratitude that I feel very deeply to many individual Trustees present and past, faculty, students and parents, staff, Legislators, State officials, and friends for their own commitment to this strong University and for the personal support and counsel given to me in times both rewarding and difficult. The cause made it all an experience beyond comparision and I will treasure it always.

With best wishes,
Sincerely,
Edward C. Andrews, Jr
President

Dr. Andrews looks back on his five years as President of the University with pride although his tenure was slightly shorter than he had planned. He mentioned that during his period at UVM, the University of New Hampshire has seen three presidents and the University of Maine two. Dr. Andrews came to UVM in 1953. Shortly after in 1956 he became Dean of the Medical College until 1970 when he became President of the University. During his tenure at UVM he was responsible for leading a $12 million development program at the Medical School, for the merger of Degosbriand and Mary Fletcher Hospitals, and for a reorganization of several colleges within the University involving the schools of Agriculture, Home Economics, Business, and Engineering.

During his years as President Dr. Andrews was challenged by both student and faculty unrest. Student protest against the war culminated in temporarily dropping the ROTC program. The issue of tenure, highlighted with the cases of political science professor Michael Parenti and the 'Philosophy Four' motivated the emergence of a faculty union which potentially will be a powerful bargaining unit.

Andrews does feel that he had a good working relationship with both students and faculty although the nature of his position made the communication process between himself and these two groups difficult at times. Asked about his accomplishments he related his pride in the people he works with.

Trustees Question their Role in the University's Decisionmaking Process

by Kathy Stiasini

In recent weeks UVM's Trustees have met frequently to deal with the University's financial stringencies. The first of a series of meetings were held on December 6 and 7. On this occasion trustees took definitive action on the administration's recommended proposals for the 1.5 million budget cuts. With the exception of a Board decision to retain the two-year nursing program, the other proposed cuts were accepted.

The question of whether to retain the football program, an issue which had provoked heated comment among the university population was reconsidered at length during the meeting. The Trustees demonstrated a decided reluctance in their approach towards a final resolution of the question.

There were several motions to retain football on a more limited level with a smaller budget. These motions, however, were tabled shortly after Jim Hope, one of the five student representatives to the Board, delivered a powerful statement in which he indicated a student consensus in favor of dropping football. Thus, the original proposal to drop the football program was approved by the Trustees.

The very nature of this question posed an intricate problem in that it demanded an answer which would have far-reaching implications. It sensitized the need to clearly define educational values and priorities at the University of Vermont. The decision set a precedent for future policy decisions. It was an indication as to whether limited resources would be allocated to boost academic or extracurricular quality.

During the regular December 14 Board meeting a week later, the Trustees were again confronted with the impact of their input into the University's policy-making process in a decision concerning President Andrews' planned appointment of a development director. There was debate about whether the appointment of this type was an administrative or a trustee responsibility.

In a final vote of 6-5, a motion to prohibit the planned appointment of a fund-raising director was tabled. Though there was some comment as to the appropriateness of such an appointment in light of present budget limitations, the feeling that the director would substantially increase the flow of funds to UVM prevailed.

In other business the trustees approved a $151 room fee increase, as well as an increase in summer course fees from $30 to $35 for Vermont students and from $41 to $48 for out-of-state students per credit hour.

At a special committee meeting held December 7 with President Andrews and trustees Luther F. Hackett of South Burlington, Robert Boardman of Burlington, Daniel Burke of Rye, N.Y., and Allen Eaton of Winchester, Mass. there were projections for still further room increases exceeding the $151 figure for fiscal year 76.

This committee also considered the more serious question of tuition. The four trustees and President Andrews discussed the possibility of legislation to change the level of tuition charged to Vermont students. Presently, there is a requirement that resident tuition not exceed 40 percent of non-resident tuition.

However, more students are changing their residency status to avail themselves of the lower in-state rates. Last year $100,000 was lost as a result of residency changeovers.

Fraternities Victims of Christmas Eve Blazes

by Margo Howland

Fire struck two University fraternity houses Christmas eve. The Alpha Tau Omega house on 21 South Williams Street was heavily damaged by a fire of undetermined origin, which apparently started around 8 p.m. December 24. The brothers were home on vacation and there were no injuries.

Around midnight on the same evening, a small fire started in the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity on 371 Main Street. That fire, which caused little damage, has been classified as arson.

After the fire at ATO, the fraternity members were offered housing from different sources. According to William Emberley, the Alumni Associate Advisor for Alpha Tau Omega, the brothers had a choice of "being absorbed into the dormitories, moving into some rooms offered by the Phi Mu Delta house, or accepting University housing at Ft Ethan Allen."

At the present, 14 of the fraternity brothers are living in a 5-bedroom house, leased by the University, at Ft. Ethan Allen in Winooski. The temporary headquarters for ATO is at 402 Dalton Drive, next to the Married Student Housing buildings. The rest of the brothers live in apartments.

"Our major concerns after the fire were insurance and housing," said Emberley. "We've salvaged what we can, and we've been loaned furniture from Converse Hall on a temporary basis."

Speculation that the house would be rebuilt is "too premature" according to Emberley.

"We should know by the end of the semester, when we apply costs and determine alternatives," he declared.

Emberley added that the alumni and active members will be planning a series of meetings to make plans for the future of the fraternity.

UVM Board Rates to Rise

by Stephen W. Tanner

In the meeting of the Board of Trustees Saturday, Dec. 17, the recommendation for an increase of $151 in the room rent on campus for 1975-76 academic year was approved.

"It didn't take very long to figure out how much the increase would be because the majority of the increases were in things we had no control over," said Keith Miser, director of the university's residence halls.

Citing unprecedented rises in fuel oil costs, electricity, water and sewage, and insurance rates, in that order, Miser justified the cost increase.

Room rates have risen from $585 for a multiple occupancy room to $736 per academic year. For a large single, rates have gone from $785 per academic year to $936. For a regular single, rates are up from $645 to $794 per academic year.

Miser explained that the past housing policy had been that board increases would occur every 3 years so that students could plan on spending one set amount for a 3-year period.

Since 1973, when the new increases went into effect, the price of oil has risen over 100%. The Housing Office projections had not counted on the energy crisis last year and thus were forced to abandon the 3-year board increase cycle and to ask for an increase a year earlier to meet costs.

With the rise in expenses Miser noted, "We've used up our 3-year projection in 2 years. At the current rate, we'll just barely be able to make it through the end of the year."

This $151 raise in board rates is projected for next year only, and Miser adds, "This would be keeping everything the way it is now." Future increases will be projected year by year because of the current state of the economy. He predicted, "something like a continous $70 per year raise if things continue as they are now."

Miser noted that the increase will only cover a 7% raise in salaries which, "compared to the 17% rise in the cost of living is low."

The housing director said his office's efforts have kept the costs to rising at only a 20% rate, or 10% per year, over the first two years of the 3-year cycle, and that this is well below the 17% rise in the cost of living.

Trustee Bolwell Resigns

The University of Vermont Board of Trustees accepted "with regret" the resignation of one of its 23 members, Harry J. Bolwell of Chagrin Falls, O., and Board Chairman C. Douglas Cairns of Burlington affirmed that "this Board should only be concerning itself with policy."

In a resignation statement made public last month, Mr. Bolwell had said that the Board "has responsibility and authority for the operation of the University," but "as now constituted and as it now functions, cannot in my opinion exert real authority."

In his statement today, Board Chairman Cairns said that the question of what programs the University would have or not have would be a policy matter for the Board to determine, but he said that which courses within a program or the appointing or terminating of personnel within programs "has to be an administrative decision."

Trustees Luther F. Hackett of Burlington seconded Mr. Cairns' statement, adding "there is a very fine line between management and operation and we have to tread this line very carefully because there is no way the Board can operate the University."

Board Vice Chairman Allen O. Eaton of Winchester, Mass., said he did not agree "at all" with Mr. Bolwell's assumptions.

A committee will be formed to nominate a successor to Trustee Bolwell.

Trustee Francis Peisch of Burlington, who prefaced his motion with the observation that it was stepping over the line between management and operation, moved that the Board recommend the position of director of development, which the University has been seeking to fill, not be filled at this time because, he said, "it seems to be that this would be the exercise of the worst possible judgment at this particular time."

Trustees Eaton – "this would be getting into the area of hiring and firing" – and Hackett – "this steps over the line between management and operating" – spoke against the motion and a move to tabu it was passed.

Featured This Week

Dining Hall Schedules page eight

Pringle And The Bobwhite

Join the Cynic Staff ...see page six

Calendar/Announcements . . . . p. 2
Crossword Puzzle . . . . . p. 7
Doctor's Bag . . . . . p. 8
Op. Ed. . . . . p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 10

This paper is recyclable.
Call Robinson Hall for more information, 656-3084.

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Mini-Courses Begin

Our next round of mini-courses, workshops and special activities will begin during the week of January 13, 1975. If you are not on our mailing list or if you will be away for the Christmas Holidays and would like to receive a flyer at another address, please drop us a line at 135 Church Street, Burlington, or call, 656-4221.

TypistWanted

Wanted: Typist for the CYNIC. Involves about 10 hours/week. Pays $2.00 an hour. For further information, call Randy Jansen at 658-4911 or 656-3092.

Cross Cultural Lectures

The Cross Cultural Program of the Living/Learning Center of the University of Vermont announces the Spring semester lecture series. These lectures and subsequent discussions are designed to widen the students' scope and enrich their knowledge of other cultures. They are free and open to the University and Greater Burlington Community.

There are also a few vacancies for students who wish to live in the Living/Learning Center and enroll in the program for three credits. Call Pol Ndu 656-4275 or come to the Living/Learning Center A-132 Mondays and Wednesdays after 2 p.m.

Hearings on Rise in Utility Rates

The Vermont Alliance announces the first in three of the statewide hearings on the rises in utility rates. Green Mountain Power has requested a 65% permanent rate increase. The hearing, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Jan. 20 in the Federal Courts Building in Burlington, gives the opportunity for citizens to attend or testify before the Public Service Board. This meeting is open to the public and is of particular importance to those in the outlying area of Burlington who receive Green Mountain Power electricity.

Gama Phi 'Inactive'

by Margo Howland

The Beta Nu chapter of the Gamma Phi Beta house on 381 Main St. has been rendered the status of "inactive" by the sorority's national office, effective last Dec. 18.

Representatives from the Grand Council met with sorority members last semester and explained their decision to close the house because of "insufficient membership to function actively."

The University of Vermont now operates the building as a residence hall. The twelve sorority members took on the status of alumnae, and plan to be active in that capacity.

An alumnae spokesperson said that there are plans to reactivate the chapter "when the time is right."

Tickets are currently on sale at the Lane Office, 234 Waterman Bldg., for the next concert. Metropolitan Opera mezzo soprano Frederica Von Stade will appear Sunday, February 2 at Ira Allen Chapel. Tickets are $6, $5, and $3. Make reservations by telephoning 656-3418. Sales are also continuing for other concerts coming up, and for the spring Lane Film Society Series which will feature W.C. Fields, starting February 7.

Still on view at Fleming Museum are Eskimo and Northwest Coast American Indian art exhibits, plus recent acquisitions. Open by the time this issue appears will be a show of art since 1945 – watch for further news of this exhibit. Museum-goers might want to note that the primitive and American galleries will be closed until mid-February for some changes. Don't miss the grand re-opening!

The Royall Tyler Theatre has tickets on sale now for MACBETT, the upcoming production by the University Players. Call or visit the Box Office, 656-2094, for reservations.

On view at the Theatre lobby is a show of "metaphysical photographs" by Fred G. Hill, which will remain up through February 8. The show, consisting of about 80 black and white photographs, is entitled "Presences, Intimations."

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16

12:05 – 12:55 p.m., Church Street Center course on "The Gospel of Mark." At 5:30 p.m., Hatha Yoga, at 7 p.m., Conversational French for Fun, Conversational Spanish for Fun, and Intermediate Photography. At 7:30 p.m., Stained Glass Techniques. At 8 p.m., Introduction to Clinical Medicine. Find out more and register by contacting the Center, 135 Church St., tel. 656-4221.

7:30 p.m., Medieval-Renaissance Program presents Prof. Christie Fengler, UVM art dept. and Prof. Frederick Fengler, Middlebury sociology dept., who will present a travelogue-style motion picture of Assisi, Italy for any interested students, but particularly for those interested in the summer interdisciplinary medieval institute in the summer interdisciplinary medieval institute to be held in Assisi this June. Profs. Alfred Andrea, UVM history dept., and James Howe, UVM English dept., will then discuss the most recent plans and developments involving the summer program, having just returned (January 13) from a week's consultation with the Franciscan and other cultural leaders in Assisi. Place is A-180, Living-Learning Center.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17

10 a.m., Church Street Center course in Basic Drawing begins. Register or find out more by calling 656-4221.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 18

9 a.m., registration for figure skating school, Gutterson Field House. For information call Mark Gabso at 862-1365 to find out more.

9 – 12 noon, "Is It Time for a Change?" – a workshop at the Church Street Center for women who are contemplating or experiencing changes in their lives which may include a new job, a return to school, or a change in personal lifestyle. Judith Versweyveld and Elaine Alberga of the UVM Women's Caucus will lead discussion of change, what it is and how to go about it, by exploring ways of clarifying values, determining priorities and making decisions. Register by visiting the Center, 135 Church St., or calling 656-4221.

9:30 a.m. – 3:30 p.m. Skillship at Fleming Museum, "The Museum and Historical Society as Educational Resources." For art education, social studies teachers and museum and historical society personnel. Diane Rose will conduct the session. Send reservations to Barbara H. Lewis, Fleming Museum. Fee is $2.50.

10 a.m., Church Street Center mini-course, "African Dance Experience," begins. Call the Center, 656-4221, or visit them in the old firehouse on Church St., to learn more and to register.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 19

No calendar events listed.

MONDAY, JANUARY 20

University Store resumes its regular hours, 8 a.m. – 4:30 p.m.

8 p.m., Cross Cultural Program presents Dr. Jackson Clemmons, "A Pathologist's View of Disease," D-170 Living/Learning Center.

7:30 p.m. SA Films presents the French film "Hiroshima, Mon Amour" in 103 Rowell.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 21

6 p.m., "Issues '75," the Military Studies Department lecture series, presents Dr. Elmer L. Gaden, dean of EMBA, who will speak on "Military Innovation and Revolutionary War: The Hussite Experience," Room 301, Williams Hall. All are invited.

7:30 p.m., Student Association Senate meets, Marsh Room, Billings Center.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., Church Street Center courses in trimming your energy budget and writing poetry begin; call Ext. 4221 or visit the Center at 135 Church St. to find out more and to register.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22

Last day to add Evening Division courses on campus.

9 a.m., 1:30 and 2 p.m., Trustees will meet at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center hosts a relaxation and meditation hour.

12:15 p.m., Church Street Center is the site for the "Lunch Bunch" film series, co-sponsored by the Fletcher Free Library and the Burlington Park Department. The films, shown through the courtesy of the Champlain College Library, cover "The Jackson Years" and "The Approach of Civil War." Admission free – bring a bag lunch.

4 p.m., the graduate students in the Resource Economics department present a timely film, "Planning for Floods," a documentary by Dr. Lincoln Brower of Amherst, Mass., 120 Commons, L/L Center. Admission is free; all are welcome. The film should be of interest to those concerned with discussions about controlling the level of Lake Champlain to plan for flooding in Canada.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 23

9 a.m. – 4 p.m., non-degree students enrolling in day courses may obtain enrollment packets at Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg. From there they must go to department offices for sectioning, then return completed enrollment material to the Registrar's Office, Waterman Bldg.

12 noon, UVM Women's Caucus meets at the Women's Center, Blundell House, Redstone Campus. Open to all. (Blundell House is near the South Prospect St. exit from Redstone nearest the main campus.)

University Women Sponsor Concert

The Burlington Branch of the American Association of University Women is sponsoring a Candlelight Concert featuring the Music Ensemble of the Women of UVM for the benefit of its Scholarship and Fellowships Fund. The concert will be held in the Social Room of the First Unitarian Church, Pearl St., on Friday, January 24 at 8 p.m. A reception will follow and refreshments will be served. Tickets are $3.00 for adults and $2.00 for students and may be purchased by calling either Mrs. Alan Brill 864-4982 or Mrs. Alexander Rippa 863-3826.

C and T Center Looks at Parents

An in depth look at parental influences and childhood fantasies on decision making, giving opportunity to sort out real from imagined factors governing choice of major as well as on vocational planning, is being sponsored by UVM's Counseling and Testing Center.

This workshop will encompass six sessions, available either at 3:30 in the afternoons, or 7:00 in the evenings. Limited to 10 people beginning Jan. 21 at 3:30 at Counseling and Testing Center on 146 So. Williams Street, and running weekly though Feb. 25. Depending on response, subsequent sessions will be conducted.

For more information call Counseling and Testing at 656-3340.

Vets Sponsor Films/Protest

The Burlington and Norton chapters of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War/Winter Soldier Organization (VVAW/WSO) are sponsoring a week of activities in support of the Paris Peace Agreements and amnesty for war resisters. These activities will climax in a demonstration in front of the Federal Building in downtown Burlington from 12:00 to 1:30 on Monday, January 27, the second anniversary of the signing of the Paris Agreements.

In addition to a picket line, a delegation will present demands to 'Honor the Peace Agreements/End All Aid to Thieu and Lon Nol' and for 'Universal, Unconditional Amnesty for All War Resisters' to representatives of the Federal Government, and people will be encouraged to raise these damands forcefully at the offices of Vermont's representatives. Plans are to hold the protest regardless of weather conditions and efforts will be made to provide hot chocolate or coffee.

The protest will be preceded by a week of film showings and talks about the crisis situation in Indochina and the continuing need for a real amnesty. There will also be an information booth and literature table in the lobby of Billings Center on the UVM campus from Wednesday January 22, through Friday, January 24.

Three films have been scheduled for Tuesday evening in the Parish Room at St. Paul's Cathedral, Wednesday evening at the Threshold Counseling Center at 65 Main St., and for Thursday and Friday evenings in the North Lounge of Billings Center. All showings are scheduled for 7:30 on the 21st through the 24th. The films are 'Year of the Locust', 'Vietnam: A Question of Torture' - an expose of political repression and torture under the Thieu Regime, and 'Only the Beginning' - an award winning documentary on the war in Indochina. VVAW/WSO members will be on hand to discuss and answer questions about the continuing war and amnesty. The programs are free and the general public is invited. Literature will be available.

VVAW/WSO stresses that the purpose of these activities is to build support for the January 27 demonstration and urges strong support from the community. Those wishing to help with organizing, postering and leafleting should contact VVAW/WSO at 862-8175.

AAUP Looses Labor Battle

The National Labor Relations Board has dismissed a charge of unfair labor practices filed last month against the University of Vermont by the American Association of University Professors.

The AAUP had alleged that UVM assisted the John Dewey Federation of Teachers, AFT Local 3203 of the AFL-CIO, in the Local's efforts to organize the University faculty, and had also "restrained and interfered with the rights of department chairmen" in violation of provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

It was the second such charge against the University to be dismissed by the NLRB in the past six weeks; on Nov. 1 the Board rejected a charge made against UVM by the John Dewey Federation of Teachers that the University had encouraged "support and membership in the AAUP."

The University learned Monday (December 9) that the NLRB had ruled "It does not appear that further proceedings on the (AAUP) charge are warranted inasmuch as the investigation has disclosed that the Employer did not violate Section 8 (a) (1) of the Act by instructing department chairmen, non-coercively, to refrain from union activities. There was also insufficient evidence to sustain the allegation" that the University has assisted the John Dewey Federation of Teachers.

Among the issues in both the AFT and the AAUP charges against the University is use of the campus messenger service and the use of University meeting facilities.

Established organizations of University employees, such as the Faculty Senate, the Non-Academic Employees Council, and the AAUP, regularly make use of the service and facilities.

In an October agreement the University extended the same opportunity to the newly-formed AFT Local, but stipulated that the agreement "shall not constitute recognition of AFT."

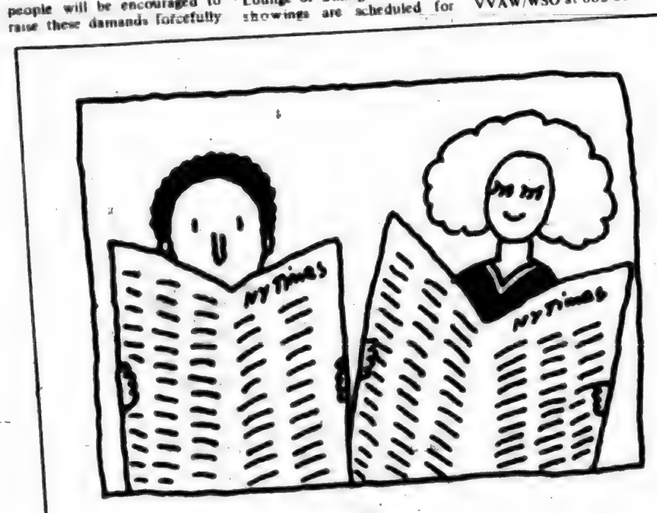
Employers are prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act from extending recognition to any labor organization until formal organizing procedures have been followed through and the organization has been selected by the employees to represent them.

Free Film

There will be a FREE movie Jonathan Livingston Seagull in Life Sciences, Room 235, on Friday, January 17 at 7:30 p.m. This is being sponsored by C.A.R.P., Collegiate Association to Research the Principle. Refreshments will be served after the movie.

Gay Students Present 'Touchpoint'

The Gay Student Union will present the Unity Players in a benefit performance of "Touchpoint" at 8:30 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 25 at Southwick Gymnasium Ballroom on Redstone Campus. The theater production will be followed by a gay dance, with admission being one dollar. Everyone is welcomed. For further information call 862-3955.



Have The New York Times reserved on campus

Contact
UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

or mail this coupon

Second Term

☐ Weekdays (Mon.-Fri. $10.35)

Daily subscription rates on campus are 25% below the newsstand price.

Name _____ Phone _____

School Address _____

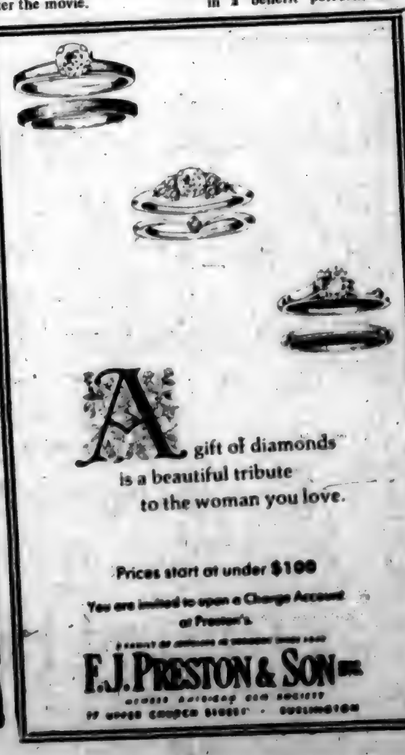
Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon

COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

	LIST	SALE
SR50	149.95	129.00
SR10	69.95	49.95

Must Have This Coupon

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by 85 - Associate Stores -
Burlington - Essex - Bank Montpelier



A gift of diamonds is a beautiful tribute to the woman you love.

Prices start at under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

yarn cellar
YARN SALE

Nantuk Knitting Worsted	$1.49
Berella 4 Knitting Worsted	$1.59
Winsom Sport Yarn	.89
Selected Crewel Kits	20% off

at
THE ROYAL
96 CHURCH ST.

JANUARY 16, 1975

Americans Wor

Job opportunities in Europe this summer... Work this summer in the forests of Germany; on construction in Austria, on farms in Germany, Sweden and Denmark, in Industries in France and Germany, in hotels in Switzerland.

Well there are these jobs available as well as, jobs in Ireland, England, France, Italy, and Holland are open by the consent of the governments of these countries to American university students coming to Europe the next summer.

For several years students made their way across the Atlantic through A.E.S. Service to take part in the actual life of the people of these countries. The this project has cau deal of enthusiast and support both and Europe. Every program has been ex include many mor and jobs. Alrea students have made for next sum American-Europe Service (on a no basis) is offering s students for Scandinavia, Engla Switzerland, France Spain. The jobs forestry work, chil (females only), hotel work (limi available), constru

Big/Brother

"Give an approving nod to a doubtful friend, an encouraging word to a timid child, a feeling of worth to a lonely person"... The Big Brother/Big Sister Program.

The Big Brother/Sister program at UVM tries to meet the needs of some of the lonely or less fortunate children of the Burlington area. A Big Brother/Sister can help to build a greater feeling of security and worth within a child and establish a feeling of warmth and happiness, not only for the child, but for the Big Brother/Sister as well.

Whenever a guidance counselor, teacher, social worker, and various other professionals, see a child who could benefit from a Big Brother/Sister, they fill out a referral form and send it to OVP. The person who filled it out takes the responsibility for explaining the program to the child's parents or guardians and securing their consent and cooperation. Also, the person filling it out is responsible for "briefing" the volunteer at the beginning of the relationship and to follow up throughout the duration of the relationship.

Most of the children referred to the Big Brother/Sister program don't have a thing in the world and [illegible] to getting a Big Brother or Big Sister. The parents realize they can't or are unable to provide the support and companionship that a Big Brother or a Big Sister can. They welcome the opportunity for their son or daughter to have a Big Brother or Big Sister.

The potential Big Brothers/Sisters, after being interviewed by members of the project coordinating committee, look through the referral forms we have on hand and pick a child they feel is compatible to work with as a little brother or a little sister. The interview basically gives the volunteer insight into the program, the relationship they will have with their little brother/sister, and some of the situations which will arise while seeing their little brother or sister. After the volunteer picks a child to work with, the first step is to contact the person who referred the child to the program. After this meeting, the volunteer is introduced to their little brother/sister.

A time commitment requires that the volunteer remain a Big Brother/Sister for at least one year, and see their little brother/sister at least once a week. In addition, they are required to meet with the person who referred the child twice during the first two months of the relationship to talk about how their relationship is progressing.

Within the various social special benefits participants in

Fred Smith, Dir allows the chil free in the uni halls up to twic accompanied Brother or Siste bus tokens wi finds this to means of tra from OVP Halloween Pa party, and a r

Presently involved exte the Big Brothe Their jobs inv social activ volunteers in meeting wi among the referring c program, volunteers activities lett school yea members of committee a social worke daily concer aspects Brother/Siste end of ea volunteers evaluate the members of committee every one c make chang based on comments.

Americans Work and Study in Europe

Job opportunities in Europe this summer... Work this summer in the forests of Germany, on construction in Austria, on farms in Germany, Sweden and Denmark, in industries in France and Germany, in hotels in Switzerland.

Well there are these jobs available as well as jobs in Ireland, England, France, Italy, and Holland are open by the consent of the governments of these countries to American university students coming to Europe the next summer.

For several years students made their way across the Atlantic through A.E.S.—Service to take part in the actual life of the people of these countries. The success of this project has caused a great deal of enthusiastic interest and support both in America and Europe. Every year, the program has been expanded to include many more students and jobs. Already, many students have made application for next summer jobs. American-European Student Service (on a non-profitable basis) is offering these jobs to students for Germany, Scandinavia, England, Austria, Switzerland, France, Italy, and Spain. The jobs consist of forestry work, child care work (females only), farm work, hotel work (limited number available), construction work, and some other more qualified jobs requiring more specialized training.

The purpose of this program is to afford the student an opportunity to get into real living contact with the people and customs of Europe. In this way, a concrete effort can be made to learn something of the culture of Europe. In return for his or her work, the student will receive his or her room and board, plus a wage. However, students should keep in mind that they will be working on the European economy and wages will naturally be scaled accordingly. The working conditions (hours, safety, regulations, legal protection, work permits) will be strictly controlled by the labor ministries of the countries involved.

In most cases, the employers have requested especially for American students. Hence, they are particularly interested in the student and want to make the work as interesting as possible.

They are all informed of the intent of the program, and will help the student all they can in deriving the most from his trip to Europe.

Please write for further information and application forms to: American-European Student Service, Box 34733, FL 9490 Vaduz, Liechtenstein (Europe).

Big/Brother Big/Sister Needs You

"Give an approving nod to a doubtful friend, an encouraging word to a timid child, a feeling of worth to a lonely person"... The Big Brother/Big Sister Program.

The Big Brother/Sister program at UVM tries to meet the needs of some of the lonely or less fortunate children of the Burlington area. A Big Brother/Sister can help to build a greater feeling of security and worth within a child and establish a feeling of warmth and happiness, not only for the child, but for the Big Brother/Sister as well.

Whenever a guidance counselor, teacher, social worker, and various other professionals, see a child who could benefit from a Big Brother/Sister, they fill out a referral form and send it to OVP. The person who filled it out takes the responsibility for explaining the program to the child's parents or guardians and securing their consent and cooperation. Also, the person filling it out is responsible for "briefing" the volunteer at the beginning of the relationship and to follow up throughout the duration of the relationship.

Most of the children referred to the Big Brother/Sister program don't have a thing in the world and really have [illegible] getting a Big Brother or Big Sister. The parents realize they can't or are unable to provide the support and companionship that a Big Brother or a Big Sister can. They welcome the opportunity for their son or daughter to have a Big Brother or Big Sister.

The potential Big Brothers/Sisters, after being interviewed by members of the project coordinating committee, look through the referral forms we have on hand and pick a child they feel is compatible to work with as a little brother or a little sister. The interview basically gives the volunteer insight into the program, the relationship they will have with their little brother/sister, and some of the situations which will arise while seeing their little brother or sister. After the volunteer picks a child to work with, the first step is to contact the person who referred the child to the program. After this meeting, the volunteer is introduced to their little brother/sister.

A time commitment requires that the volunteer remain a Big Brother/Sister for at least one year, and see their little brother/sister at least once a week. In addition, they are required to meet with the person who referred the child twice during the first two months of the relationship to talk about how their relationship is progressing.

The little brother/sister is very receptive to getting a Big Brother or Sister, although he may be suspicious at first because he has never known anything or anybody that had a sincere interest in him. It is necessary to establish trust — to do things together and share experiences. The relationship must be kept one-to-one as much as possible and as the relationship progresses the child will begin bringing problems he encounters to his big brother or sister and asking them for help. At this time the value of the Big Brother/Sister Program becomes unmistakably clear.

Within the community various social activities and special benefits are offered to participants in the program.

Fred Smith, Director of SAGA, allows the children to eat for free in the university's dining halls up to twice a week when accompanied by their Big Brother or Sister. OVP pays for bus tokens when a volunteer finds this to be a necessary means of transportation. Also from OVP budget comes a Halloween Party, a Christmas party, and a spring picnic.

Presently 12 people are involved extensively in running the Big Brother/Sister Program. Their jobs involve working on social activities, calling all volunteers twice a semester, meeting with representative among the 45-50 agencies referring children to the program, and providing volunteers with news and activities letters throughout the school year. In addition, members of the coordinating committee are in contact with social workers and volunteers daily concerning the various aspects of the Big Brother/Sister Program. At the end of each semester the volunteers are asked to evaluate the program. In turn, members of the coordinating committee look at each and every one of these forms and make changes in the program based on the volunteers' comments.

Last semester the coordinating committee placed 125 people in the Big Brother/Sister Program: 13 Big sisters with a little brother, 76 Big Sisters with a little sister, 36 Big Brothers with a little brother. In addition, 50 Big Brothers and Sisters have remained in the program from past years. Thus bringing the total of volunteers who are Big Brothers or Big Sisters to 175 people.

At present, we have some girls available for a Big Sister, some little boys available for a mixed placement (a big sister), and 70 Little Boys Who Desperately Need a Big Brother. These boys range in age from 4 to 17 and for many a Big Brother relationship could initiate a change in their lives. Below is a description of some boys who are waiting for a Big Brother:

5 year old – Child is emotionally immature who has had little experience with other children. History includes a father who was in and out of the home, ending in separation before child's second birthday. Child tends to be mistrustful of men and would benefit from a healthy relationship.

7 year old – Parents are divorced and child is lonely and craves attention. His behavior has become irritating, and is very emotional and has begun to be disobedient.

7 year old – Child lives with his mother and siblings, he sees his father about once a week. He could really profit from some male companionship in an atmosphere where his self-esteem would be raised.

9 year old – Child really needs a consistent dependable relationship with a Big Brother as this sort of contact has been totally lacking in his life. He likes fishing and outdoor activities and rarely has an opportunity to do any of these things.

9 year old – Father and mother are separated and child sorely needs a male figure to look up to. Mother feels neighborhood is a rough one for kids and doesn't even like to let them out to play with other kids.

12 year old – Child has a poor relationship with his father and needs a Big Brother. Someone to be with the child

14 year old – A Big Brother who believed that child was/is capable of what any other kid his age does would encourage him to give up some of his irresponsible excuses and to become more self-sufficient and self respecting and to thereby achieve more for himself.

11 year old – Child had a Big Brother last year and he benefited greatly from it, but the Big Brother has not returned.

If you are interested in finding out more about the program contact the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, Phone 656-2062.

New PE Registration Procedure

There is a change in physical education activity registration for next semester.

Activity classes will begin on Wednesday, Jan. 15.

Registration for physical education activities will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 15, and Thursday, Jan. 16 at Patrick Gym.

Here are the procedures:

1. Select the activity of your choice and time from the printed class schedule.

2. Report to Patrick Gym at the time and day the class is scheduled to meet (Example: If you want to take Badminton 1 at 9:30 TTh, report to Patrick on Thursday at 9:30)

3. For classes meeting one day per week; M, W, or F, report at the scheduled time the class would begin on Wednesday, January 15. For classes meeting once a week T or Th, report at the scheduled time the class would begin on Thursday, Jan. 16.

4. Students in 2 year programs and upper class students who have not fulfilled the requirement will have a higher priority for registration if they arrive promptly at the time the class begins.

5. Physical Education major activities are open to all students, however majors have a higher priority for registration.

6. Registration for courses listed as TBA will be held on Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Only semester and winter term classes may be added at this time.

Spring term registration will follow the same procedures and will be held on Monday, Mar. 10 and Tues., Mar. 11.

Forged changes will be made for semester and winter term classes on Friday, January 17 from 1 to 4 p.m. at Southwick Gym.

No courses may be added for the semester or winter term after Tuesday, Jan. 21.

Please be advised that the times listed in the Schedule of Courses for X-Country Ski are all incorrect, and those listed above are the right times.

There will also be a course, DOWNHILL SKI, where all levels of freestyle will be offered on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The fee will be approximately $36, depending on possible transportation increase, and $2 per day for lifts.

Also, please drop the following course from consideration:

PEAC 93, 4009, Archery 1, on 1:35 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one half-credit, spring term.

It should be noted that the following courses have been added for students' consideration:

PEAC 183 6751, Advanced Ballet, Points 8:15 on Mondays and Wednesdays, 1 credit hour, and a fee of $20.00.

PEAC 77, 6738, Karate 1-2, at 1:25 on Mondays and Wednesdays, 1 credit hour, and the fee will be determined by enrollment.

PEAC 77, 6743, Karate 1-2, at 1:15 on Tuesdays and Thursdays, one credit hour, and fee will be determined by the number of students participating.

PEAC 111, 4193, X Country Ski, on 11:15 Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 4144, X-Country Ski, on 10:30 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 4145, X-Country Ski, at 2:25, Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 4733, X-Country Ski, 1:25 on Mondays and Wednesdays, one-half credit hour.

PEAC 111, 9729, X-Country Ski, at 11:25 Tuesdays and Thursdays, one-half credit hour.

VALUABLE COUPON

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS

(prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY

ACROSS FROM The Medical Center

COUPON

WELCOME BACK SALE

10% OFF

(This Coupon Must Be Presented)

JANUARY 17-24 ONLY

KALSØ earth shoe

139 bank st. · burlington, vt. 05401

Hours: Mon.-Sat 9:30-5:30 Fri. Till 8:00

COUPON

FREE SKIING

You will recieve ONE DAY'S FREE SKIING at SMUGGLER'S NOTCH SKI AREA with the purchase of any new pair of downhill skis at THE ALPINE SHOP!

SKIS BY:

ROSSIGNOL
K2
OLIN
HEAD DYNAMIC
VOLKL
KNEISSEL
DYNASTAR
ELAN
NORTHLAND
A&T YAMAHA
FISCHER

BEST SELECTION OF SKI EQUIPMENT IN VERMONT

ALL LAST SEASON'S SKIS AND BOOTS — ROSSIGNOL, KNEISSEL DURAFIBER, VOLKL, YAMAHA; NORDICA, LANGE, TECHNICA, KOFLACH, RIEKER — UP TO 60% OFF

USED SKIS AND USED BOOTS — 70 pair, 52 pair — $5 UP

ALPINE SHOP

1184 Williston Rd., So. Burlington

OPEN 9A.M. to 9P.M.

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

OUR ART SHOP IS READY FOR THIS SEMESTER — ARE YOU?

Art Shop-Lower Level
Church and College Sts.
Downtown Burlington
658-4554

corner bookstore

Levi's Pants Plus

12 N. WINOOSKI AVE. BURLINGTON, VT. 05401

802 • 864-0181

10% off with valid VMS ID

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Randy Jensen '77, Editor-in-Chief
Wyatt Kash '77, Assistant Editor
Mark S. Vella '77, Managing Editor
Kathy Stinard '77, News Editor
Mark Sawyer '77, Assistant News Editor
Stephen W. Tanner '77, Features Editor
Robert DeNike '77, Arts Editor
Norm Robinson '77, Sports Editor
Sari Bodi '77, Copy Editor
Debbie Powell '76, Advertising Manager

Editorial

The possibility of an improvement in UVM's financial situation continues to decrease because of depleted Vermont aid. Governor Salmon's administration has requested of the Vermont legislature that UVM receive only level funding.

If the legislature concurs, UVM will be left with a $1.5 million deficit. Several proposals have been offered by the Trustees, including increasing the number of out-of-state students or operating on a deficit budget.

However, Trustee Fred Hackett is offering another solution. He proposed dropping the ceiling that Vermonters can pay for tuition, which is currently set at 40 percent of out-of-state tuition. This is the first step to increasing in-state tuition and inevitably out-of-state tuition. Is this the way the Trustees plan to solve UVM's money crisis? UVM students already pay the highest in-state and out-of-state tuition. Why must they carry the burden of UVM's funding?

With student aid down and jobs difficult to find, any increase in tuition will force low and middle income students out of college.

Dr. Patterson projects that in-state students will pay $1200 and out-of-state students $3210 for tuition by fiscal year '77. In this time of recession, it is unreasonable to expect students to pay these ridiculously high costs.

We urge Hackett and the Trustees to reconsider any action concerning a tuition increase. Students should not be forced to carry an unequal proportion of the financing of UVM. The Trustees should seek alternate sources of revenue and make it clear to the Vermont Legislature that Vermont has a responsibility to see that UVM is adequately funded.

R.J.

Letters To The Editor

The Importance of Football

To the Editor:

Your issue of December 5 has only just come into my hands and although it is old news, in fairness to those maligned, I would sincerely appreciate your publishing the following comments in response to an article appearing on page five of that issue entitled, 'The Effects of Dropping UVM Football.'

As a parent of one of the players affected by the trustees' decision, I recognize my bias, but I wonder if your writer is aware of his (proper grammatical form - though I suspect 'hers' to be more accurate.) On the other hand, perhaps it is 'his' knowledge of the gross distortions in this article that caused 'his' to be the only article to appear on page five without a by-line! I for one would have had more respect for this author if 'he' had had the courage to identify 'himself'.

The author (authoress?) consistently assails football as chauvinistic, oblivious to his (her?) own chauvinistic tenor, albeit female chauvinism. Your writer displays an immature pomposity in ironic contrast to 'his' plea for 'more mature' use of the assets of UVM. The writer is so totally out of touch with the thinking of a very large segment of today's young people; it is astounding that 'he' could so glibly pronounce that admissions will not be adversely affected by the loss of UVM football. (For the record I am an educational psychologist who listens daily to both high school and college students.) Mike was accepted by every college to which he applied. He chose UVM for its academic program, YES; but equally for the opportunity UVM offered to a physically small man (5'8" tall, 185 lbs.) to participate in an activity that is an important part of his life. (I might just remind your writer with 'his' penchant for faulty thinking that a small body does not equate with a small intellect or a small heart.) Mike did, indeed, choose UVM "because of this sport" and he has a lot more 'on the ball' than your writer reflects in his article. Mike and many of his teammates have among other things sensitivity, courage, and tolerance; attributes I do not detect in your writer.

Is your writer suggesting that intelligent and serious students have stayed away from UVM because there has been a football team? How absurd! I'll match Mike's intelligence and seriousness to your writer's any day. Amherst College has invited Mike to visit and discuss a possible transfer (as have other schools.) I am certain Amherst College has never admitted dummies.

To the issue of exploitation, I am inclined to reply, 'Humbug' - sounds like your author has latched on to the latest 'in' phrase of the movement. 'He' might be interested to know I pay approximately $4200 per year for my son's education at UVM which has, till now, included the privilege of playing football - I wonder if your writer feels that out-of-state students are being exploited? Though the gross inaccuracies and poor logic based on faulty assumptions is quite appalling; to wit, 'The football program hinders the liberal educations of those few who compete by placing sports values above academic values and vastly reducing the amount of time football players can study. This is why they need tutors.' Perhaps your writer ought to acquaint 'himself' with some of the members of the UVM football team. I will use my son as an example because I know him best: but a majority of the other team members could serve equally to refute your writer's erroneous stereotype of a football player. Through seven years of playing football from Little League to college, Mike has always placed football in perspective along with his academic pursuits and extra curricula activities. His record of achievements: National Honor Society, Boys' State, Who's Who, class and student government offices, Dean's List, a 3.6 grade point average last semester, etc., etc., attests to the fact that his academic values have not suffered because of his participation in football. Incidentally, Mike has spent a portion of his time through these years tutoring others - who, by the way were not athletes, but just students who needed a little extra help. May I ask the writer how much time away from academic pursuits 'he' spends writing for the Vermont Cynic? And all of those 'hundreds of students' who could participate in the new homecoming 'he' envisions - dare they waste so much of their time practicing for concerts, rehearsing for plays, planning distinguished lectures, etc., thereby reducing the time they can study?

Now to the issue of the effect of the loss of football vis-a-vis admissions: Your tuition is steep, I have been willing (if not always happy) to pay the price knowing that Mike was getting an outstanding education and an opportunity to play football.

May I suggest to your writer that when 'he' states 'a university exists to educate: that 'he' hike over to the library and do a little research. 'He' may discover that throughout the history of education, educating the whole man (pardon - whole person) is a concept that has encompassed both MIND and BODY.

Your writer's ignorance is most stridently declared when 'he' suggests that football merely "entertains" and coaches and athletic directors are 'non-educators'. My son has learned, among other things, teamwork (something your writer may discover upon graduation is the essence of all successful social contacts whether vocational, avocational, social, or familial,) dedication to effort, and perseverance in the face of adversity: attitudes that have made him a man of whom his family is most proud. Much of this learning has come from your so-called non-educators. These non-educator's - Mike's coaches - have taught him more than I fear your narrow-minded writer will ever allow 'himself' to be exposed to. I am profoundly grateful to these men - the volunteers of Little League, his high school coaches, and the coaches of UVM. They have been educators in the finest sense of the word.

Mike may choose to stay at UVM because he loves the school, respects the excellent faculty, and has made many friends. If he leaves, his loss will be greater still because the University and people like your writer will have lost an opportunity to experience and learn from Mike and the other fine men of the UVM football team who transfer.

Most sincerely,
Grace Smith (Mrs. James)
115 South Valley Road
Lincoln Park, N.J. 07035

Flat Tire

To the Editor:

It's bound to happen to all of us sooner or later -- a flat tire. It happened on Interstate 89 on Friday the 13th, a few miles west of Waterbury. Business with an old-time jack, finally we had the rear end of the car raised, then to complicate things the lugs holding the tire were sealed so tightly we couldn't budge them.

At least 50 cars and trucks of all descriptions whizzed by without stopping. Cold fingers forced us into the car to get warm, hoping a State Trooper would come along. (Remember this was Friday the 13th) -- no luck. Suddenly a car passed us, stopped ahead and started backing. Out breezed two young ladies. "Can we help?" said the older one with a smile.

Without waiting for a reply she was on her knees and at work. The job was finished in jig time -- spare tire on, old tire slung in the back and the good Samaritans were on their merry way.

In conversation we learned that the girls were sisters from the southern part of the state and were attending the University of Vermont. One girl was Cindy -- we failed to get their last name. We hope they see this in print and learn of our great appreciation to a couple of great young ladies. They made "Friday the 13th" one for us to remember.

Gertrude Heath Platt
Highgate Springs, Vt.

West Side Review Rebuked

To the Editor:

I consider West Side Story a great musical. It is in the words of the Cynic's critics, "a love story that is beautiful and tragic." As he stated in his review, it's more than a mere lusting of loin for loin. However this I am afraid is where Mr. Campbell's ability as a critic stops. His comment in the Dec. 5 issue of the Cynic was rude, ignorant, and a collection of contradictions. To begin with he speaks of love and then drops to the level of stressing something insignificant in true love as physical appearance. How many happily married couples do you know where, for example, the wife is taller than the husband? How can someone be ignorant enough to place importance on appearance and neglect the spiritual aspect of a relationship? Obviously the cast of West Side Story was chosen for their exceptional singing ability. Does Mr. Campbell have a tin ear? How could he be deaf enough to miss the terrific ability of the major characters in the production? True, there were a few technical details to be dealt with in future performances in acoustics, but this is a university, not the Lincoln Center! I applaud the entire cast for their outstanding effort, and tremendous spirit. It was a great show!

Sincerely,
Susan Frazier
Cathy Carley
Kate Rising
Mindy Saxe
Living/Learning Center

Real Joke

To the Editor:

I would like to channel this through you and direct it at the "masters" of critique portrayed in Peter Campbell's bludgeoning of West Side Story. In all due respect of Mr. Campbell's status as a Cynic staff member and a senior at UVM, I cannot feel anything but strong pity for a person who has little better to do than ravage and cast dispersions upon the efforts of the many students that worked with West Side Story. Your article was the real joke, Mr. Campbell.

This is not a rational attack I bring upon you but it is well in step with the maligning, ill-conceived, baseless farce you tried to pass off as a critique. I am acquainted with several members of the cast and know of the tremendous time and effort that went into the production (let, it not be overlooked that the cast is made up of full time students). And what were they asking for in return? Only that someone enjoy. Instead, you chose to shovel-feed them alot of slanted, meaningless, crap. Why not stay away from deciding who's too tall, who's too heavy, and whose accent is deficient, and focus on your own deficiencies as a writer, a scholar, and a human being with any kind of empathy. You may, as they say, place your incredible poor taste where the sun doth not shine.

W. E. Gordon
UVM 1975

Leahy's Informer

To the Editor:

How is it that a man like the State's Attorney of Chittenden County can be elected to the office of senator, when it is a matter of public record that while in the office of State's Attorney, he had an informer working for him from 1969 to 1972 who was allowed to commit crimes against persons and property. This informer was arrested at different times for crimes ranging from cattle rustling to rape. But each time it seems his guardian angel managed to keep him out of jail. Each time at the cost of some other person's freedom. That is the way this informer bought his freedom. He would simply give his guardian angel information about another person who would go to jail in the place of the informer, who would go back to the street to rape and pillage.

Women of Vermont, I ask you specifically how does it feel to be represented by a man who sanctions rape? I ask all people how you can allow this man to go to the senate to represent you and the State of Vermont? This State's attorney who sanctions the crimes of one man as long as the State's Attorney gets to convict other men on the word of his paid informer. Patrick Leahy how does it feel to be this guardian angel? Can you deny this???

Gary Pike
Box 26
Windsor, Vt. 05089

Misquotation

To the Editor:

My tranquil world has been destroyed, and I am aroused from my complancy. Apart from generally disagreeing with columnist Peter Campbell's assessment of 'West Side Story' (5 December, 1974, p.7), I am distressed to discover that Mr. Campbell has also committed the most grevious of 'faux pas' - misrepresenting a personal idol.

Let me point out to your philistine critic that it was not Hemmingway, but rather F. Scott Fitzgerald, who remarked that the rich 'were different from you or I,' to which Ernest Hemmingway replied: 'Yeah, they have more money than we do.' Mr. Campbell's misrepresentation of Hemmingway is not only libellous, but also does unjustifiable (though gratifiable) service to Fitzgerald by ignoring his existence. It takes but the slightest glance at the authors' books to realize how absurd is Mr. Campbell's accusation. Let us hope that this entire generation of critics has not been raised solely on a diet of Cliff's Notes.

As for Mr. Campbell's review of the play....

Respectfully,
Robert W. 'Pape'
Duncan, GR.

Infirmary Sickening

To the Editor:

This letter is in reply to treatment I received at UVM's Wasson Infirmary recently. I realize, as we all must, what a hassle beginnings of semesters and the days leading up to them are. To add to these days of anguish, I developed an eye infection.

Tuesday, the day before classes began, I went to the infirmary for medical care (which my parents generously paid with tuition) at 3:30 p.m. The people working at the infirmary wee courteous and helpful until they asked for the sacred validation sticker on my UVM I. D. card. Since my tuition check had been mailed in, I had not picked up the sticker yet at the Cashier's Office. This office closes at 3 p.m., so it was too late to go pick up the sacred sticker. Well, they were very sorry, but I would have to suffer in excruciating pain until tomorrow morning.

Now, isn't there an oath that doctors must take when they become doctors? Does this oath not have to do with humanistic ethics in regard to medicine? Was the treatment of my particular case in accord with those ethics? I'm sorry, but I don't think so.

Everyone who I asked about this rule of "no sticker-no care" seemed to blame it on someone else higher up. Your basic "hierarchical scapegoat" syndrome.

Although validation stickers will be completely distributed in a few days, these ethical problems may continue in other ways. I really wish that whoever is responsible for these decisions in that vast hierarchy of officialdom, would get his act together.

Signed,
Ada Pollock

Travelogue Movie

To the Editor:

On Thursday, Jan. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in A-180, Living-Learning Center, Prof. Christie Fengler, art history of UVM, and Prof. Frederick Fengler, sociology, Middlebury, will present a travelogue-style motion picture of Assisi, Italy for interested students, but particularly for those interested in the summer interdisciplinary medieval studies institute to be held in Assisi this June. Profs. Alfred Andrea, history, and James Howe, English, will then discuss the most recent plans and developments involving the summer program, having just returned recently from a week's consultation with the Franciscan and other cultural leaders in Assisi.

James Howe,
English,
Associate Professor.

Furloughed Inmates

To the Editor:

In the clamor over the recent Christmas furloughs for the inmates of Windsor State Prison there has been, it seems to me, a failure to realize that these men will be returning to our society once again and rather soon as well.

Considering this, it would be reasonable to maintain for them some contact with the outside world in order to keep from alienating them from the same world.

There have been many statements recently about all of the bad things which could have happened while these people were outside during the recent holidays. To my knowledge however, no one has come forward to state they were dealt a bad hand by these furloughed inmates.

Everyone is concerned at this time about the budget of the State of Vermont and the dire need for a drastic reduction in the same. Preparing individuals now to return to society from any institution will only eventually save tax dollars and add to the income of the State of Vermont with a drop in the amount budgeted for the Department of Corrections. We can not overlook, as well, the savings to the State of Vermont for the welfare and medical expenses now being granted to the families of these inmates for these, too, will be eliminated once these inmates are self-supporting.

It all boils down to the old saying that "you can't have your cake and eat it too". Either we will continue along the lines of long term incarceration and thereby continue to contribute to inflation, or we must consider the alternatives.

We should lay aside our narrow-minded thoughts and prejudices and allow ourselves to grow and prosper together.

In the struggle,
E. M. Battick
Windsor, Vt.

The Cynic welcomes letters and columns from students, faculty or any other readers. Material for publication must be signed, but names will be withheld upon request.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arlan, George Gongaldis, Andy Morris, Audrey Rothstein, Mark Sawyer
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Absmilan, Paul Cain, Carol DuFault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Ben Perkins, Stephen W. Tanner,
ARTS: Sari Bodi, Robert Dunfee, Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Jon Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Prior, Marsha Wolosz
COLUMNISTS: Debbie Adler, Tom McCormick, Scott Molloy, Steve Rice, Elliott Thurston
SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie Green, Rick Katz, Norm Robinson
PRODUCTION: Jean Ferguson, Karen Hill, Madeline Isbrandtsen, Beth LeVine, Eileen Driscoll, Ricky McGuiseuddy
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Nancy Glazier, Debbie Powell
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shmith

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 656-4941. Deadline for material is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy 10 cents.

Squeez

by Tracy Apple

(CPS)– An advertising war has been waged on... of college newspapers and national magazines.

The opening attack was spearheaded by a series o... the United Farm Workers Union (UFW). Their ob... solicit support for a national boycott of wines ... Gallo Winery, the largest wine producer in the world.

Launching a $13 million anti-boycott campa... recently armed itself with the ultimate ad. Gallo ... UFW ad, circled key points and attempted to refute ... notes in the margin. In addition, a blitz of anti-U... were sent to religious leaders, student organiz... college newspapers which have supported the wine ...

Gallo's counterattack was grounded in econo... the UFW boycott was initiated in 1973, Gallo ... dropped from 9% to 19% according to conflicti... Other developments in the wine industry have com... picture, but the Wall Street Journal, for one, ... partially attributed the sales decline to the boycott.

According to the UFW, key support for the ... come from students. Boone's Farm, Ripple and T... have been familiar brand names to college stude... fruity, barely alcoholic, these and several other ... wines" were designed specifically for student ... budgets. Student boycott of these wines has trigg... Gallo's floundering sales, the farmworkers have m...

The wine dispute began nearly two years ago... refused to renew a six-year old contract with t... instead signed up the Teamsters. By UFW account... of the Gallo workforce then refused to go to wo... instead the picket lines. Gallo fired all the work... on strike, and the Teamster contract was ratifie... strikebreakers.

"The Teamsters don't organize workers, ... growers," UFW president Cesar Chavez charge... sweetheart contracts with the growers and re... they now belong to the union."

More strikes erupted all over California, en... the UFW, $65-a-day Teamster Union goons ... incidents wherever demonstrations forme... cornered UFW-Gallo-Teamster battel then ... marketplace and the Gallo boycott was institute...

The Teamster rationale for its union bust... would use its power to improve the lot of the fa... Teamsters "want to better wages and worki... Teamsters Union President Frank E. Fitzimmo...

Such improvements, however, have been... Chavez has noted.

An Er...

VVAW/WSO is organizing a demonstrati... January 27 (see related article in this issue) ... implementation of the Paris Peace Agreemen... aid for the Saigon and Penom Penh Regime... unconditional amnesty for all war resisters. ... strong community support in raising these ... they are just, necessary, and long overdue.

In each of the two years since the Par... Ending the War and Restoring Peace in Vie... more Indochinese have been killed, crippled ... during any other period of the war with th... and 71. Over 622,000 Vietnamese killed, w... over 10,000,000 refugees. More than 300 ... continue to be killed or wounded; over ... since 69 and millions more refugeed. Th... awesome as to be incomprehensible, yet th... each statistic is a human life.

The Agreements were to end the slaugh... not. Nevertheless the signing of the Agree... victory for the Indochinese and America... forced an end to direct and open U.S. impe... The Agreements called for a strict, in-pl... release of all political prisoners, democratic ... organizations, freedom of the press, speec... also called for the formation of a Na... Reconciliation and Concord. This counsel ... equally of representatives of the Thieu Reg... Revolutionary Government (PRG) and the ... supporting neither the Saigon or Comm... purpose of this interim coalition is to or... open democratic elections which would ... government representing the wi... self-determination of the Vietnamese Peo... provisions have been implemented with h...

Former President Eisenhower remark... "Mandate for Change" that had the electi... Geneva Agreements, which ended the war ... and Vietnamese, been held, "perhaps upw... the people would have voted for the ... Minh." Little has changed between 1954 ... insistance of the U.S. Government, refused ... holding of elections, and 1975, as Thieu ... backing, refuses to implement the A... elections which he and Ford know wou... end to our imperialist involvement ... completely repudiating the claim our ... making that it is supporting Vietnames... Such a repudiation of U.S. involvement ... Vietnam would create a furror far beyon... but it would also end the killing.

Despite millions of dead and millio... refugeed, our policy makers in Washing... their decision to force history to rep... incressing cost in human lives and resou... ever before, it is time for us to rededica... this senseless slaughter once and for ... "leaders" are pursuing can only prolon... not hold back the tide of history forever.

Since the signing of the Agreements, ... proceeded to "seed" military bases i... belonging to the PRG in order to expan... Until recently, the PRG continued to pl... rebuilding the liberated zones and work... implementation of the Agreements. T... negotiate a political settlement and ha... on stepping up attacks against the PRG... clear that there was no hope of a peac... as Thieu remained in power, the PRG w... systematically retaking positions given ... attacking base areas from which these ... while also calling for Thieu's ouster.

During this period, Thieu's "pop... zone has been deteriorating rapidly. ... anti-Thieu demonstrations and the des... and defections of Saigon military ... records. The economy is collapsing a... out of control and hunger, including ... widespread. In addition to rampa... hundreds of thousands of political ... released. This combination of political ...

ers'

Editor

Flat Tire

said the older one with a smile.

Without waiting for a reply she was on her knees and at work. The job was finished in jig time – spare tire on, old tire stung in the back and the good Samaritans were on their merry way.

In conversation we learned that the girls were sisters from the southern part of the state and were attending the University of Vermont. One girl was Cindy – we failed to get their last name. We hope they see this in print and learn of our great appreciation to a couple of great young ladies. They made "Friday the 13th" one for us to remember.

Gertrude Heath Platt
Highgate Springs, Vt.

Review Rebuked

relationship? Obviously the cast of West Side Story was chosen for their exceptional singing ability. Does Mr. Campbell have a tin ear? How could he be deaf enough to miss the terrific ability of the major characters in the production? True, there were a few technical details to be dealt with in future performances in acoustics, but this is a university, not the Lincoln Center! I applaud the entire cast for their outstanding effort, and tremendous spirit. It was a great show!

Sincerely,
Susan Frazier
Cathy Carley
Kate Rising
Mindy Saxe
Living/Learning Center

Inmates

institution will only eventually save tax dollars and add to the income of the State of Vermont with a drop in the amount budgeted for the Department of Corrections. We can not overlook, as well, the savings to the State of Vermont for the welfare and medical expenses now being granted to the families of these inmates for these, too, will be eliminated once these inmates are self-supporting.

It all boils down to the old saying that "you can't have your cake and eat it too". Either we will continue along the lines of long term incarceration and thereby continue to contribute to inflation, or we must consider the alternatives.

We should lay aside our narrow-minded thoughts and prejudices and allow ourselves to grow and prosper together.

In the struggle,
E. M. Battick
Windsor, Vt.

...lcomes letters and columns from students, ...ther readers. Material for publication must be ... will be withheld upon request.

...MONT CYNIC

... Editor ... Business Manager
SPORTS: ... Photos
PRODUCTION: ... Typesetting ... Ellison Driscoll ... Ricky McGuinnessity
ADVERTISING: ... Stephen Lee Brown, ... Bonny Guiness, Debbie Duvall
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Sherrill

... expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in ... do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ... administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of ... Opinions expressed by the columnists do not ... reflect the opinion of the majority of the ... of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

... published during the college year by the students ... University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, ... and Business offices in the Billings Center, ... Vermont. Telephone: 656-4941. Deadline for ... one week prior to date of publication. ... Second class postage paid at Burlington, Vt. ... Subscription rate $5.00 per year; single ...

Squeezing Grapes

by Tracy Apple

(CPS)– An advertising war has been waged on the pages of college newspapers and national magazines.

The opening attack was spearheaded by a series of ads from the United Farm Workers Union (UFW). Their objective: to solicit support for a national boycott of wines bottled by Gallo Winery, the largest wine producer in the world.

Launching a $13 million anti-boycott campaign, Gallo recently armed itself with the ultimate ad. Gallo reprinted a UFW ad, circled key points and attempted to refute each with notes in the margin. In addition, a blitz of anti-UFW letters were sent to religious leaders, student organizations and college newspapers which have supported the wine boycott.

Gallo's counterattack was grounded in economics. Since the UFW boycott was initiated in 1973, Gallo sales have dropped from 9% to 19% according to conflicting reports. Other developments in the wine industry have complicated the picture, but the Wall Street Journal, for one, has at least partially attributed the sales decline to the boycotts.

According to the UFW, key support for the boycott has come from students. Boone's Farm, Ripple and Thunderbird have been familiar brand names to college students. Cheap, fruity, barely alcoholic, these and several other Gallo "pop wines" were designed specifically for student tastes and budgets. Student boycott of these wines has triggered much of Gallo's floundering sales, the farmworkers have maintained.

The wine dispute began nearly two years ago, after Gallo refused to renew a six-year old contract with the UFW and instead signed up the Teamsters. By UFW accounts, nearly half of the Gallo workforce then refused to go to work, preferring instead the picket lines. Gallo fired all the workers who went on strike, and the Teamster contract was ratified by a vote of strikebreakers.

"The Teamsters don't organize workers, they organize growers," UFW president Cesar Chavez charged. "They sign sweetheart contracts with the growers and tell the workers they now belong to the union."

More strikes erupted all over California, and according to the UFW, 365-a-day Teamster Union goons created violent incidents wherever demonstrations formed. The three cornered UFW-Gallo-Teamster battel then spread to the marketplace and the Gallo boycott was instituted.

The Teamster rationale for its union busting was that it would use its power to improve the lot of the farmworker. The Teamsters "want to better wages and working conditions," Teamsters Union President Frank E. Fitzsimmons said.

Such improvements, however, have been sadly lacking, Chavez has noted.

Under the old UFW contract child labor was prohibited; Gallo workers were protected from deadly pesticides and provided with a credit union, hiring hall, and effective seniority and job security systems. In addition, portable toilet facilities and cool drinking water with individual cups were brought into the fields.

All of those improvements were dropped or ignored by the Teamster contract, according to the UFW.

The UFW hiring hall was particularly a sore spot for the Gallo Brothers. Under the hiring hall system the power to allocate jobs and security, usually left solely to Gallo farm supervisors, fell to the workers themselves. To get a job a worker received a dispatch from the hiring hall, and dispatches were assigned on the basis of seniority.

So instead of the grower controlling the farm labor force thought his hiring and firing power, the union controlled it. This did not sit well with Ernest Gallo. Gallo complained of cronyism and favoritism in the hiring hall systems and claimed that the workers also rejected the arrangement. It was for those reasons, he said, that he signed a contract with the Teamsters.

Recently, the Gallo-UFW conflict reared its ugly head in the California State Legislature. The UFW, with strong AFL-CIO backing, sponsored a workers secret ballot election bill which would give farm workers the right choose their union.

Unlike the National Labor Relations Act – under which Gallo wants farm workers included – this bill did not carry the riders ruling out boycotts and harvest time strikes. Under successful Teamster lobbying, however, the proposal was defeated.

The UFW was knocked another blow when an October court order prohibited it from filing any lawsuits against the Teamsters in federal and state courts throughout California. This time, fate swung the other way and the order was recently overturned in the US Court of Appeals.

Generally, the Teamster-Gallo Alliance has enjoyed the advantage of the conflict. The UFW, which once had close to 55,000 due-paying members and nearly 200 contracts is down to a current membership of 10,000 and a mere dozen contracts, Ramparts reported. By contrast, the Teamsters have some 30,000 farmworker members under about 350 contracts. In addition, both Gallo and the Teamsters have more money at their disposal than does the UFW.

Still, the UFW has staked its hopes on the boycott campaign. "Don't swallow Gallo's line," warned a recent ad in answer to Gallo's advertising campaign. "Buying some other wine won't make much difference in your life – but it will make a big difference in the lives of thousands of farmworkers.

The VPIRG Vigil

Topic: VPIRG Capital Watch

For most Americans the idea of effective citizen action was lost somewhere following high school civics. Citizenship, never clearly understood, is for the eternal optomists who don't understand power. The "You can't fight City Hall" syndrome has become the accepted Gospel of the Modern American.

Inequalities of wealth, skill, and access to governmental decision-making have added to the feeling of impotency of many voters. Voting itself, as often as not, has degenerated into a choice between two evils. Incorrectly accepting social injustices as a fact of life, many Americans have decided to do nothing.

Democracy, however, is based on the principle that average citizens must act together to make change. Unless citizens take charge, neither government nor industry will be accountable to anyone. Without citizen pressure, the government will be, by, for, and of the special interests.

Individual citizens rarely have the resources to match the influence of special interest groups. VPIRG, a student-funded, student-controlled research and advocacy organization, seeks to change this power imbalance. Traditionally student social action has been interrupted by vacations, exams, and other schools activities. VPIRG's full time staff provides the continuity necessary for successful social action by students.

One of the most important tools VPIRG uses to influence Vermont lawmakers is the Citizen Lobby. The Citizen Lobby is an attempt by VPIRG to inform as many Vermonters as possible about the issues facing Vermont's lawmakers. Except for three or four very visible, highly volatile issues, few of the bills facing the State's Representatives are known to the average Vermonter.

As a result, Vermont's legislators receive little response from their constituents on many important issues. Five letters on one bill is considered an avalanche of public sentiment. Since Vermont is such a small state, with elections often decided by a handful of votes, few representatives can afford to ignore public opinion.

Each week throughout the 1975 legislative session the VPIRG staff will analyze and discuss in this paper the issues that are facing the State's lawmakers. Hopefully students interested in social change will let their representatives know their views. Names, addresses and phone numbers of representatives can be obtained at the campus VPIRG, 26 State Street, Montpelier, Vermont 05602

All Things Considered

A View From the Ivory Tower

by larry seiden

O.K. this is just one of a never ending series of columns you see in newspapers all the time. A 5 cent gem. But what do I have to say? Alot. So hang on here comes my bullet!

UVM hits the big time. Steven Cahn, Ph.D., Chairman of the Philosophy Department ("down the escalater and to your left, next to maternity fashions", the petite saleagirl offers.), had a short essay published in the Sunday New York Times. Beautiful, it even had Burlington, Vermont as its dateline. Infamy on December 29, 1974, and only 75 cents for all that excess newsprint.

It was quite an accident that I found Dr. Cahn's lecture on the educational state apathy, titled, "If At First You Don't Succeed, Quit." Catchy, isn't it? What Dr. Cahn says (if I may take the liberties to delve into Dr. Cahn's wordy dropping) is that we (students) are lazy, unenterprising, cry babies who will only use initiative to maneuver our way out of graded courses; use craft to soften up our teachers so they may raise our grades; and constantly opt for courses from leniant instructors who "indiscriminately award A's to virtually everyone."

Dr. Cahn, you're absolutely right. You see, (you knew there was an explanation coming) it's not that we don't want to learn or we don't mind a B once in a while (He mentions an unnamed Dean from Yale remarking "They get a B and they bawl.") because we are learning. We're learning how to get ahead. That's what you need to know in the jungle, you know – survival of the fittest. Dr. Cahn, you don't really believe in the We're-just-here-for-the-education-theory. You see Life is Tough and we are preparing to meet it with our heads on.

Maybe from your ivory tower it's a bed of roses with a few scattered thorns like Rice, Corcoran, et al. Well those ex-UVM professors will tell you it hurts to fall from the ivory. To satisfy the competative cutthroats in business and postgrad programs beyond the tower, we have to be in the top echelon. I realize this kills the 'bell curve' but all those monsters out in the postgrad muck only take the cream and nobody wants to be considered just milk or butter.

O.K. we all can't be in the top echelon, but who wants to be on the bottom or even the lower half. Let's face it, Dr. Cahn, we're here so we can go on and make our niche in society. To hit that spot we're going to have to beat out 25 others. In a crowd of 25 others, it is very hard to avoid slitting the fleshy area below the head and above the shoulders. Academic guerilla tactics.

So when a student comes to you holding their life dreams in their sweaty palms, telling you how the B or C is going to ruin their academic career and no med school is going to look at them (why should a med student need an A in philosophy anyway?) Then DR. CAHN, you being a man of integrity, you look that student in the eye and you tell him or her all about "the joy of learning." Fa-la-la-la-la. Enough foolishness, let's get it serious....

JUICY TIDBITS:

Led Zepplin is going to be in Montreal on February 6. Good Luck trying to find tickets... Tom Rush and Linda Ronstadt are in Burlington January 28... All the prestigious rock writers (myself included) are shining Bruce Springsteen's star. He made a big mark in '74. Look to the sky in '75, his new album is due out the end of the month... The Sting promises to be an experience worth looking into – local bands mixed with national talent and the most disjointed bunch of people ever to converge on a single spot in nighttime Burlington... Lady to watch in the futhre – Phoebe Snow, a singer/songwriter, who needs a little hype. Springsteen could use a little of the same medicine, though I understand it is starting in the large cities...

My list of top records for '74 based on nothing in particular and in no particular order. (does anybody really care?) but i love lists...

APOSTROPHE/ frank zappa; TOO LATE TO STOP NOW/ van morrison; IT'S ONLY ROCK AND ROLL/ stones; STREETLIGHTS/ bonnie raitt; FEATS DON'T FAIL ME NOW/ little feat; SWEET REVENGE/ john prine; BEFORE THE FLOOD/ dylan & the band; PRETZEL LOGIC/ steely dan; GONE CRAZY/ grin; THE WILD, THE INNOCENT & THE E STREET SHUFFLE/ bruce springsteen....

Remember – these footprints on your ceiling are going to disappear.

An End Once and For All

VVAW/WSO is organizing a demonstration for Monday, January 27 (see related article in this issue) demanding strict implementation of the Paris Peace Agreements, an end to all aid for the Saigon and Penom Penh Regimes, and universal, unconditional amnesty for all war resisters. We are asking for strong community support in raising these demands because they are just, necessary, and long overdue.

In each of the two years since the Paris Agreements on Ending the War and Restoring Peace in Vietnam were signed, more Indochinese have been killed, crippled and refugeed than during any other period of the war with the exception of 68 and 71. Over 622,000 Vietnamese killed, wounded or missing; over 10,000,000 refugees. More than 300 Cambodians a day continue to be killed or wounded; over 600,000 casualties since 69 and millions more refugeed. The statistics are so awesome as to be incomprehensible, yet the fact remains that each statistic is a human life.

The Agreements were to end the slaughter, but they have not. Nevertheless the signing of the Agreements was a great victory for the Indochinese and American Peoples since it forced an end to direct and open U.S. imperialist intervention. The Agreements called for a strict, in-place cease fire, the release of all political prisoners, democratic rights of political organizations, freedom of the press, speech and assembly. It also called for the formation of a National Council of Reconciliation and Concord. This counsel is to be composed equally of representatives of the Thieu Regime, the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) and the neutralist – those supporting neither the Saigon or Communist forces. The purpose of this interim coalition is to organize and conduct open democratic elections which would result in a new government representing the will and right to self-determination of the Vietnamese People. None of these provisions have been implemented with history

Former President Eisenhower remarked in his memoirs "Mandate for Change" that had the elections called for in the Geneva Agreements, which ended the war between the French and Vietnamese, been held, "perhaps upward of 80 percent of the people would have voted for the communist Ho Chi Minh." Little has changed between 1954 when Diem, at the insistance of the U.S. Government, refused to negotiate for the holding of elections, and 1975, as Thieu, also will full U.S. backing, refuses to implement the Agreements and hold elections which he and Ford know would certainly spell an end to our imperialist involvement in Indochina while completely repudiating the claim our government has been making that it is supporting Vietnamese self-determination. Such a repudiation of U.S. involvement at the ballot box in Vietnam would create a furror far beyond that of Watergate, but it would also end the killing.

Despite millions of dead and millions more maimed and refugeed, our policy makers in Washington remain locked into their decision to force history to repeat itself at an ever increasing cost in human lives and resources. Now, more than ever before, it is time for us to rededicate ourselves to ending this senseless slaughter once and for all. The course our "leaders" are pursuing can only prolong the suffering, it can not hold back the tide of history foever.

Since the signing of the Agreements, the Thieu Regime has proceeded to "mop" military bases in areas recognized as belonging to the PRG in order to expand its zone of control. Until recently, the PRG continued to place all its energies into rebuilding the liberated zones and working politically to force implementation of the Agreements. Thieu has refused to negotiate a political settlement and has concentrated instead on stepping up attacks against the PRG. Only when it became clear that there was no hope of a peaceful settlement so long as Thieu remained in power, the PRG went on the offensive by systematically retaking positions given up to Saigon and by attacking base areas from which these attacks were launched while also calling for Thieu's ouster.

During this period, Thieu's "popularity" in the Saigon zone has been deteriorating rapidly. Almost daily there are anti-Thieu demonstrations and the demoralization, desertions and defections of Saigon military forces are setting new records. The economy is collapsing as inflation soars totally out of control and hunger, including starvation, has become widespread. In addition to rampant official corruption, hundreds of thousands of political prisoners have not been released. This combination of political, military, economic and social errosion have already marked the point of no return for the Saigon Government. The only question is how long U.S. aid and advisors can prop Saigon up before its final collapse. And how many more lives will be "wasted" in the process.

In a significant victory for the Indochinese and American peoples, the Congress last year was forced to cut direct military appropriations to Saigon nearly in half. However, through A.I.D., Food for Peace, the Commodities Import Program and other sham devices, millions of additional dollars have been made available to supplement Saigon's war budget. Despite the fact that during the past two years Saigon forces have been outshelling the PRG at a rate of ten to one, they are now demanding that the U.S. taxpayer, already beset by unemployment, inflation and relentless economic attacks, spend millions more in support of his corrupt dictatorship. Ford is now expected to pressure Congress for an immediate supplemental increase of 300 million and, if this passes, he can doubtlessly be expected to ask for more. Ironically, one of the major causes of the growing depression here at home is the inflation generated by decades of deficit spending in Indochina. Additionally, Washington has been rattling its sabers and inferring that reintervention can't be ruled out. We cannot allow this to happen.

Twenty to thirty thousand American military advisors and support personnel remain in Vietnam in direct violation of the Peace Agreements under the guise of being "civilian contractors." For all practical purposes, they are the backbone of Saigon's effort, as is the case with American "civilians" in Cambodia. They do everything from flying aircraft to programming computers and planning military activities.

Virtually every other provision of the Agreements has also been openly violated by our policy makers in Washington. Only through the support of U.S. Advisors and tax dollars can Thieu keep himself in power. Rumors have it that the CIA may replace Thieu due to his increasing unpopularity, but even if this occurs, only a face will have changed and not the policys.

Our responsibilities and obligations are clear; we must force strict implementation of the Agreements and an end of all aid to the corrupt regimes of Saigon and Cambodia. We must also fight for universal, unconditional amnesty for all war resisters.

Just as the war is wrong, amnesty is right. Ford's blatantly fraudulant attempt at "binding the nation's wounds" while the war continues in a new form is just another example of the hypocritic and morally bankrupt "leadership" we have come to expect from those who really run the system. The total failure of Ford's so-called "amnesty" program is clearly pointed out by the fact that it included only a small percent of those in need of amnesty. And of that small percent who were eligible to apply for the program, less than one percent "took advantage" of it – and half of them were G.I.'s already in the stockades! The program doesn't even mention the 580,000 Vietnam-era veterans with less-than-honorable discharges earned by resisting the war, racism and repression of the military system. The war resisters – exiles, G.I.'s, prisoners and those with "criminal" records – have overwhelmingly refused to have anything to do with Ford's "amnesty" because it is not amnesty at all. It is vendictive punishment for having been right. Punishment through alternative service, bad discharges and "criminal" records is hardly what is called for.

The government is afraid of amnesty because it means that the government was wrong and that the war resisters were right... the war was, and continues to be, wrong, immoral, illegal and dishonorable. It has been said that "in war truth is the first casualty," and only through granting universal, unconditional amnesty can our society begin to come to grips with what it has done in Indochina, and to understand the way it has been lied to and manipulated by the government, the corporations it represents, and the media which serves their interest.

Amnesty is also indispensible because it would set the precedent that resistance to imperialist wars of aggression such as the one in Indochina is just, legitimate and honorable. As such, it could spell the end of such involvements in the future, something we have all fought hard for. But we must remember that without our continued action, and involvement, the demands to "Honor the Peace Agreements / End All Aid to Thieu and Lon Nol" and for "Universal, Unconditional Amnesty for All War Resisters" can not be won.

IF YOUR CAR'S ON THIS LIST YOU MAY BE LIVING DANGEROUSLY

10 MOST DANGEROUS CAR RECALLS*

GM	Chevrolet V-8s	1965-68	Engine mounts may separate, causing sudden loss of control	GM will install free new safety device, but not new mounts.
GM	All full-sized cars.	1971-72	Steering mechanism may jam	GM will install protective shielding.
GM	Chevrolet Vega	1971-72	Defective rear axle; wheels may fall off	GM will replace rear axle where necessary
GM	Chevrolet Vega	1971-72	Defective carburetor may jam throttle	GM will install new idler bracket where necessary
GM	Chevrolet Vega	1972	Defective exhaust; car may burst into flame.	GM will install new muffler system where necessary
Ford	Torino & Montego	1972	Rear axle defect; wheel may fall off	Ford will replace axle and bearing where necessary.
AMC	Most models	1972-73	Defective brake pedal link fastener can cause total loss of brakes.	AM will replace link where necessary.
Chrysler	Cricket	1971-72	Defective steering gear assembly can cause loss of steering control	Chrysler will replace with modified rack bar assembly
Ford	Most models	1972-73	Defective power steering assembly can result in loss of control	Ford will install lockpin thusing in assembly
GM	Corvair	1961-69	Defective heaters can cause carbon monoxide poisoning	GM will inspect but owner must pay for repairs

*NOTE: These are only 10 of the most dangerous car recalls. Many others have been recalled. If you think yours might be among them, or if you suspect unrecalled defects in your car, please send the details to us.

Over 30 million cars have been recalled by their manufacturers for built-in defects, many of them deadly: Fires can break out. Engine mounts can break. Heaters can leak deadly carbon monoxide. Brakes can fail. Power steering can freeze.

Please check this list. If your car's on it, you may be living dangerously. If you haven't had it repaired, get to your dealer, fast. In most cases he'll repair or safeguard it free. If he refuses, notify the manufacturer.

Public Communication, Inc.

Citizen-supported advertising and research in the public interest. 8929 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90067

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by Arnold Werner, M.D.

Address letters to Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, Mi. 48823

Question: We are confirmed lesbians – we like our arrangement and are not asking for any advice regarding changing our sexual status. However, we have a problem which is causing some concern in our relationship. While performing mutual oral stimulation, one of us is experiencing multiple orgasms while the other is not able to climax at all. Is there a more effective way for us to achieve a satisfying end for both?

Answer: A reasonable evaluation of the problem you describe would require more information than what is provided by your letter. People involved in homosexual relationships can have the same range of difficulties in terms of sexual response as can people who are involved in heterosexual relationships. It would be important to know the previous sexual experience of the person having the difficulty. For instance, is the lack of orgasm something recent or is this something that has always been the case? Is there a particular event that marked the beginning of the difficulty? How important is the sexual side of the relationship to each partner?

You specifically mentioned difficulty involving oral sex. Some people have concerns about oral sex or just find it unpleasant. It might be that other forms of stimulation would be more satisfying.

Discussing the problem with a physician or other professional who is knowledgeable in the area of sex therapy would be wise. Finding such a person might not be that easy since the subject of homosexuality still makes a lot of people uncomfortable. Check with friends to see if they know anyone you can talk to, or patiently check with psychologists, psychiatrists or counselors in your area. People willing to work with sexual problems in general would probably be open to hearing your problem.

Question: I have a friend who eats very fast. It is unbelievable the way he can take a mouth full of food, chew it once and swallow. He immediately follows this with another large mouthful and this cycle continues until he has demolished a full meal within minutes. Is this mere habit or is it psychological? And what, if any, difficulties could result?

Answer: I am afraid you describe an eating style that is quite prevalent. I have never been sure whether the pattern is a reflection of the hectic pace some people live by, a throw back to what must have been a common style when human eating behavior more closely resembled that of lower animals, or whether it is simply a matter of dealing realistically with the terrible tasting food one gets served in so many quarters these days.

Eating should be one of those areas of biologic function pursued in pleasant surroundings, with enjoyable people, and at a leisurely pace. The only difficulty that would result for your friend may be a lack of pleasure. You might help him by taking away his silverware and providing him with chopsticks.

••••••••••

Question: Why do natives of equatorial regions of the world have the same essential body temperature as do the natives of the polar regions?

Answer: The efficient operation of enzyme systems and other intracellular phenomena in the human species depends upon a body temperature that is constant over a fairly narrow range. Human beings are sufficiently closely related to each other, regardless of where they are in the world, that they share the same highly developed physiology. People who live in different parts of the world adapt in a variety of ways to maintain an internal environment that is fairly constant.

SA's New Films

The Spring Semester brings a new series of SA Films to campus. A complete list of the films is being published in an ad in this paper. Also about 750 full sized posters are being printed up and will be posted around campus as soon as possible, probably within the week. (A fair number of these will be available to students, on a first come-first served basis until they run out. These will be found in Billings Center.) And a smaller sheet will be printed for distribution to interested students. So watch for these posters and pick up one if you are interested.

There is only one film scheduled during the coming week. This is Hiroshima Mon Amour, which will be shown in 103 Rowell at 7:30 on Monday. This is a French film, made in 1959 and directed by Alain Resnais. It stars Emmanuelle Riva and Eiji Okada. An actress (Emmanuelle Riva) is in Tokyo to make an anti-war movie. She meets and falls in love with a Japanese architect (Eiji Okada). Immediately, Resnais introduces us to things within things – the filming of a film within a film; an actress playing an actress who is then in the midst of a part; an anti-war film within an anti-war film; all taking place in a Japan at peace, with flashbacks to Japan and France at war. Resnais subtlely mirrors the many layered levels of our lives – the complications, the meanings.

The Actress' love for the architect triggers in her a memory of her love for a German soldier during World War II. That love cost her her home, her sanity, and a large part of her very existence. So there is love within love, compounded by the fact that both are presently married, and if she stays with her Japanese lover it may cost her those same things again. And if she leaves him she will lose her love. Resnais has carefully and skillfully placed his boxes within boxes, his meaning within layers of meaning, to bring us a vivid insight into the reality of our world. Resnais plays with time still sequence in ways that few directors would dare. He wrenches us from present to past and back to present, assaulting us with images of war and peace, with madness and sanity, with love and death.

Hiroshima Mon Amour started the stampede of modern French novelists into the cinema, with Marguerite Duras' beautiful screenplay. It thrust Resnais into the forefront of the French cinema. Saturday Review describes the film as "undoubtedly a masterpiece... It is of course a work of enormous dignity, a landmark in motion pictures."

Billings' Spring Schedule

Billings Center operating schedule, Spring Semester, 1975

Monday through Friday – 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. (Sales Desk: 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.)
Saturday – 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.
Sunday – 2:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m.
The Catamount Den will reopen for normal hours on Wednesday, January 15.

Catamount Den operating schedule, Spring Semester, 1975

Monday through Friday – 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.
Saturday – Closed
Sunday – Closed (unless there is sufficient student protest)

Pringle Saves Bobwhite

In a curious, roundabout way, the work of a University of Vermont botanist nearly a century ago may save from extinction a bird now found only in a remote section of Mexico.

The bird is the masked bobwhite, once common in the desert areas of Arizona and Mexico, but extinct in the United States since the 1900's, and rare today but still occasionally seen in Sonora, Mexico.

And the botanist: Cyrus Guernsey Pringle, UVM Class of 1863, called the "prince of botanical collectors," who from 1902 until his death in 1911 was custodian and principal collector for the University's plantlife collection. In the last 26 years of his life, Pringle made annual trips to Mexico in order to continue his field work there.

The Vermont part of the recent story began with a telephone call in September. It was from David Ellis of the Arizona Fish and Wildlife Service, calling the University and eventually reaching David S. Barrington, who had just taken over as curator of the Pringle Herbarium.

"Ever hear of a guy named Pringle?" asked Ellis.

"Hear of him," answered Barrington. "We have 16,000 of the plant specimens he collected, here in this herbarium."

It was just the answer Ellis had hoped to hear. He explained his interest.

Arizona wants to save the masked bobwhite from extinction and return it to the desert areas of that state. To do so, it must provide the plant life on which the bird feeds. But much of that vegetation disappeared long ago, due to drought and overgrazing of cattle, and Arizona has no record of what was growing there in those days.

The question asked by Ellis, specifically, was: "What must be planted?"

"We have a scientific article written in 1884 by a man named F. Stephens who tells about the bird, and describes how he was with Pringle on an expedition into Arizona when he studied that bird," said Ellis. "We knew Pringle was studying the plantlife, and we need to know as much as possible about the plants he collected, so that we can provide what the bird requires."

Pringle, in his trips to Arizona and Mexico, collected more than a half-million specimens which were mounted and distributed to the nation's herberia, museums and scientific institutions. These included 20,000 species, of which 12 per cent were new to botanical science. At the time of Pringle's death, the University collection had reached 150,000 specimens, including the invaluable section collected by Pringle in Arizona and Mexico.

Two botany students, Susan Mary Bockus, of Westfield, N. J., and Lynn Wilson of Morrisville, are now amassing the list Arizona wants, using what Barrington calls "the carefully mounted works of art" that Pringle collected, works of art that may save from extinction a bird in the deserts of Mexico.

Barrington says this is only one example of an effort to make the herbarium a more interesting and accessible place. In his months here he has started a program of field trips to such places as the Colchester Bog, the Winooski Gorge and an area in Brandon where fossil fruits, nuts and seeds are found. The trips will continue this winter, with ski hikes to study plants and a visit to the Botanical Gardens in Montreal on the schedule.

The herbarium, in Williams Science Hall during Pringle's day, and now at 601 Main St., will move again, at the end of March, going into the renovated Old Art Building now known as Torrey Hall.

Join the Cynic Staff

The Vermont Cynic is currently looking for creative students who are interested in the workings of a newspaper. If you are interested in writing, there are many positions open. The Cynic has no censorship and we encourage writers to write about subjects that interest them. There are many opportunities for in-depth articles, interviews and sometimes tickets to movies, dinners and lectures.

Journalism is an excellent way to improve your writing ability. Students experienced in journalism are able to collect their thoughts and write them in a clear, concise manner.

The layout staff welcomes all new members. They're the people who put the paper together in the form which is sent to the printers. If you are interested in participating with the Cynic, come to the Introductory meeting on Monday, January 20, at 7:00 in the Fireside Lounge at L/L.

If you can't make it to the meeting, come down to the Cynic office any time. You are always welcome.

Dr. Moore Evaluat

Institutional planning is undergoing a renewed emphasis at the University of Vermont, where Assistant Academic Vice President John W. Moore has devoted the past two months to a study of the means of developing and implementing the more effective planning process.

Given a primary assignment to develop and coordinate the planning process at UVM by President Edward C. Andrews, Jr., Dr. Moore has visited a number of other campuses, including Cornell, Princeton, SUNY at Albany, Furman University and the University of South Carolina to see how institutional planning has evolved elsewhere.

He has also met to discuss planning with the Academic Council, the steering committee of UVM's Faculty Senate and with the Senate's several policy committees; with the Non Academic Employees Council, the Student Association Senate; the Inter-Residence Hall Association; and individually with deans and directors of the University's seven colleges and four schools, with academic department chairmen, and members of the faculty.

Dr. Moore views planning as a continuous process by which a rational framework is developed for making decisions regarding University missions and goals, program alternatives and priorities, resource allocation, and program evaluation.

The ultimate purpose of planning is to assist the University community to achieve its purposes and to assure on-going institutional evaluation and renewal.

Dr. Moore believes that effective planning requires the commitment of persons occupying formal leadership positions at various levels throughout the University, and broad based participation of faculty, students and other people both inside and outside of the University.

Development of the actual planning process has been the initial phase of a five step "planning cycle" which will now enter the second phase. This phase will continue throughout the spring semester and will focus upon: (1) clarification of the University's missions and goals; (2) development of educational plans within the respective colleges and schools; (3) analysis of operational policies and problems; and (4) refinement of the University's management information system. As part of this phase faculty, students, and others will be asked to participate in an institutional goal survey and series of open planning workshops designed to help clarify the University's missions, goals.

Phase [illegible] development survey, [illegible] workshops [illegible] comprehe[illegible] plan to be [illegible] initial anal[illegible] by the Pr[illegible] summariz[illegible] mission, [illegible] the Univ[illegible] highlights [illegible] developed [illegible] and scho[illegible] departmen[illegible] instructio[illegible] service and[illegible] well as ad[illegible] physical d[illegible] services an[illegible]

Dr. M[illegible] while the [illegible] be coordi[illegible] administra[illegible] which w[illegible] process w[illegible] reports [illegible] continuing [illegible] students [illegible] added th[illegible] the subst[illegible] carried ou[illegible] schools, [illegible]

"Thu[illegible] "the reve[illegible] and he[illegible] cooperat[illegible] receiving [illegible] survey is[illegible] are an[illegible]

SNOW TIRES!!!
Complete line of SNOW TIRES -new and retreads.
All UVM students and Faculty get 10% discount with this ad.
E&E TIRE CO., INC.
152 RIVERSIDE AVE.
864-7759

GET OFF YOUR ROCKS
LACROSSE CLUB DANCE
ALL CAMPUS INVITED
9:00 PM MAT DINING HALL
Friday January 24

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II At the Top of the World

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I The Longest Yard
II Law & Disorder

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Behind the Green Door
Resurrection of Eve

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Man & The Golden Gun

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I The Trial of Billy Jack
II Challange to be Free

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Challange To Be Free
II Airport 1975

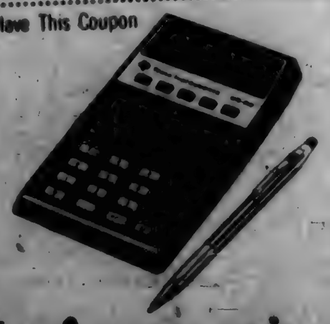
call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights or special showings

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon
COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

	LIST	SALE
SR50	149.95	129.00
SR10	69.95	49.95

Must Have This Coupon


Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by 85 Associate Stores

ZIGGY'S
THE LARGEST HEAD SHOP IN VERMONT
PIPES, SCREENS, PAPERS
INCENSE, BURNERS, JOKES
KEY RING CLIPS, T-SHIRTS, LEATHER GOODS
PIPE GIFT SETS, CLOTHES, BONGS, ROLLERS
101 Church St., Burlington

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

ICE COLD DRAFT & DRINKS
DELICIOUS CHILI & HAMBURGERS
20¢ NIGHT MONDAY–THURSDAY
OLD TIME MOVIES SUNDAY NIGHTS
147 MAIN ST.
BURLINGTON

Rising Earth Books
81 Main Street
Burlington, Vermont
05401
863-6103
(Above The Ski Rack)

JANUARY 16, 1975

ves Bobwhite

"We have a scientific article written in 1894 by a man named F. Stephens who tells about the bird, and describes how he was with Pringle on an expedition into Arizona when he studied that bird," said Ellis. "We knew Pringle was studying the ptalstilo, and we dreed to know as much as possible about the plants he collected, so that we can provide what the bird requires."

Pringle, in his trips to Arizona and Mexico, collected more than a half-million specimens which were mounted and distributed to the nation's herbaria, museums and scientific institutions. These included 20,000 species, of which 12 per cent were new to botanical science. At the time of Pringle's death, the University collection had reached 150,000 specimens, including the invaluable section collected by Pringle in Arizona and Mexico.

Two botany students, Susan Mary Bockus of Westfield, N. J., and Lynn Wilson of Morrisville, are now amassing the list Arizona wants, using what Barrington calls "the carefully mounted works of art" that Pringle collected, works of art that may save from extinction a bird in the deserts of Mexico.

Barrington says this is only one example of an effort to make the herbarium a more interesting and accessible place. In this months here he has started a program of field trips to such places as the Colchester Bog, the Winooski Gorge and an area in Brandon where fossil fruits, nuts and seeds are found. The trips will continue this winter, with ski hikes to study plants and a visit to the Botanical Gardens in Montreal on the schedule.

The herbarium, in Williams Science Hall during Pringle's day, and now at 601 Main St., will move again, at the end of March, going into the renovated Old Art Building now known as Torrey Hall.

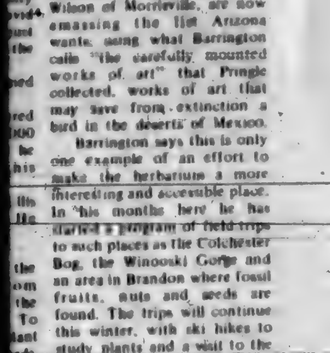
e Cynic Staff

The Cynic has no censorship and we encourage writers to write about subjects that interest them. There are many opportunities for in-depth articles, interviews and sometimes tickets to movies, dinners and lectures.

Journalism is an excellent way to improve your writing ability. Students experienced in journalism are able to collect their thoughts and write them in a clear, concise manner.

The layout staff welcomes all new members. They're the people who put the paper together in the form which is sent to the printers. If you are interested in participating with the Cynic, come to the introductory meeting on Monday, January 20, at 7:00 in the Fireside Lounge at L/L.

If you can't make it to the meeting, come down to the Cynic office any time. You are always welcome.



ng Earth Books
Main Street
ington, Vermont
05401
863-6103
bove The Ski Rack)

Dr. Moore Evaluates UVM' Programs

Institutional planning is undergoing a renewed emphasis at the University of Vermont, where Assistant Academic Vice President John W. Moore has devoted the past two months to a study of the means of developing and implementing "a more effective planning process."

Given a primary assignment to develop and coordinate the planning process at UVM by President Edward C. Andrews, Jr., Dr. Moore has visited a number of other campuses, including Cornell, Princeton, SUNY at Albany, Furman University and the University of South Carolina to see how institutional planning has evolved elsewhere.

He has also met to discuss planning with the Academic Council, the steering committee of UVM's Faculty Senate and with the Senate's several policy committees; with the Non Academic Employees Council, the Student Association Senate; the Inter-Residence Hall Association; and individually with deans and directors of the University's seven colleges and four schools, with academic department chairmen, and members of the faculty.

Dr. Moore views planning as a continuous process by which a rational framework is developed for making decisions regarding University missions and goals, program alternatives and priorities, resource allocation, and program evaluation.

The ultimate purpose of planning is to assist the University community to achieve its purposes and to assure on-going institutional evaluation and renewal.

Dr. Moore believes that effective planning requires the commitment of persons occupying formal leadership positions at various levels throughout the University, and broad based participation of faculty, students and other people both inside and outside of the University.

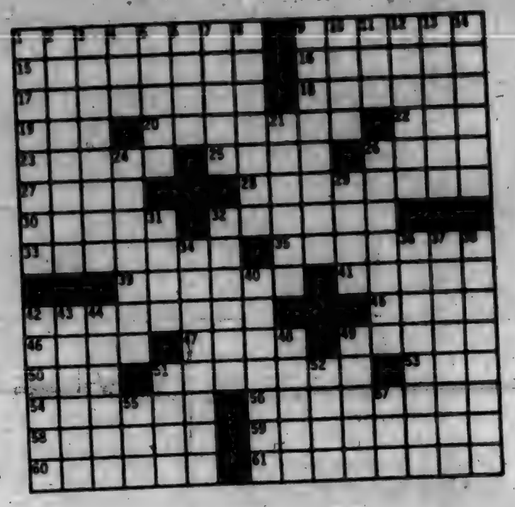
Development of the actual planning process has been the initial phase of a five step "planning cycle" which will now enter the second phase. This phase will continue throughout the spring semester and will focus upon: (1) clarification of the University's missions and goals; (2) development of educational plans within the respective colleges and schools; (3) analysis of operational policies and problems; and (4) refinement of the University's management information system. As part of this phase faculty, students, and others will be asked to participate in an institutional goal survey and series of open planning workshops designed to help clarify the University's missions, philosophy, and goals.

Phase three will be the development, out of the goals survey, and open planning workshops of key aspects of a comprehensive institutional plan to be enunciated in an initial annual planning report by the President which will summarize the philosophy, mission, goals and policies of the University, including highlights of educational plans developed by UVM colleges and schools and academic departments for programs in instruction, research, public service and related services; as well as administrative plans for physical development, support services and budgeting.

Dr. Moore stresses that while the planning process will be coordinated by the central administration, the process which will be an ongoing process with annual planning reports — will be built upon continuing in-put by faculty, students and others. He also added that the major part of the substantive planning will be carried out within the colleges, schools, and departments.

"Thus far," he reports, "the reception has been good," and he asked for the cooperation of all who will be receiving the institutional goals survey in early January. "We are anxious to have the broadest possible participation in this stage of the planning cycle from which many recommendations for the annual planning report will be drawn."

The survey will be sent to all full time faculty, to a substantial sampling of students, and to a cross section of others including trustees, legislators, alumni, parents and community representatives, Dr. Moore said



ACROSS

1 Cattle-breeding nation
9 Shore
15 South American boa
16 Catholic nine days' devotion
17 Type of rifle
18 Commercial
19 Here: Pr.
20 Obliterates over
22 Eastern daylight time (abbr.)
23 Wally Cleaver's best friend
25 Rescue
26 Scoff at 27 Pigeon-——
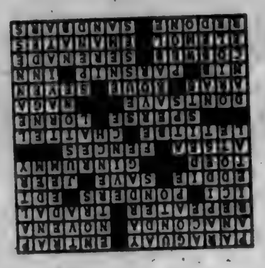
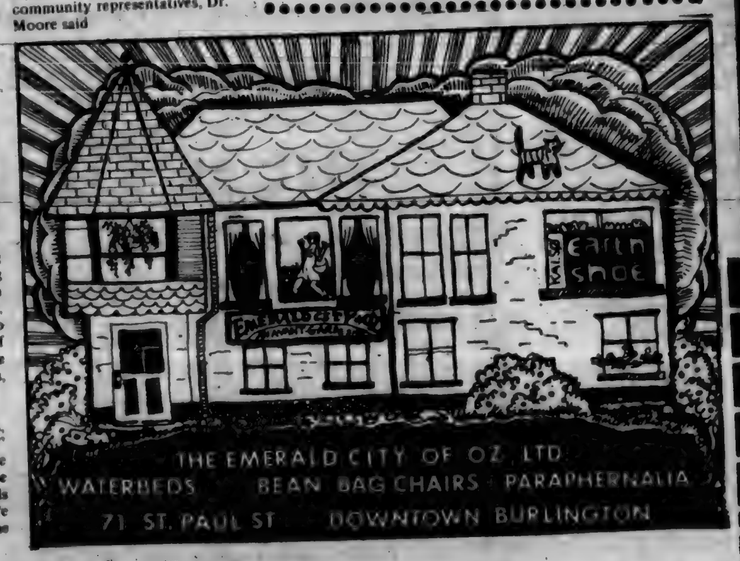
28 Card game
30 On an ocean voyage
32 Fights with an epee
33 Beatles song
35 Article of personal property
39 Scatter (old shortened form)
41 Mr. Greene
42 "—— your money, invest it"
45 Hindu spirit
46 Turkish river
47 Debauchee
48 —— your tish
50 Fan palms
51 Type of vegetable
53 Tavern
54 Hillmark quote or insect trap
56 "Moonlight ——"
58 A crystalline alcohol
59 Comes forth
60 Redecorated
61 Accumulations near the shore

DOWN

1 Of the visitation rules in a dorm
2 Short, amusing tale
3 Most spooky
4 High card
5 Act crazy
6 Archaic preposition
7 Arabian seaport and adjoining gulf
8 Distance
9 Position oneself defensively
10 Words to accompany neithers
11 Tennessee power complex
12 Free from sin
13 Wreath for the head
14 Contemptibly small or worthless
21 Show plainly
24 Epistemological dilemmas
26 "Bet you can't eat ——"
29 Non-imaginary number
31 Adenosine triphosphates (abbr.)
32 Great warmth of emotion
34 That can be endured
36 La —— (opera)
37 Bring into being
38 Meat quality
40 "The Cat in the Hat" and "The Grinch Who Stole Christmas"
42 Famous reindeer
43 Brooks Robinson, e.g.
44 Arrested
46 A purgative
49 Pay out money
51 Mexican slave
52 Country south of the Caspian
55 Wartime Medical Officer (abbr.)
57 Catch



LIVE ENTERTAINMENT AT CARBURS
The Best Place For The Late Night Hungries
BURGS
FAMOUS SINCE 1874
THURSDAY "ROSE"
FRIDAY STRATTON & AGOSTI
SATURDAY FRANK WILLIAMS
MONDAY JOHN CASSELL—SOLO
TUESDAY PETER ISAACSON
WEDNESDAY MICHAEL FAIRBANKS

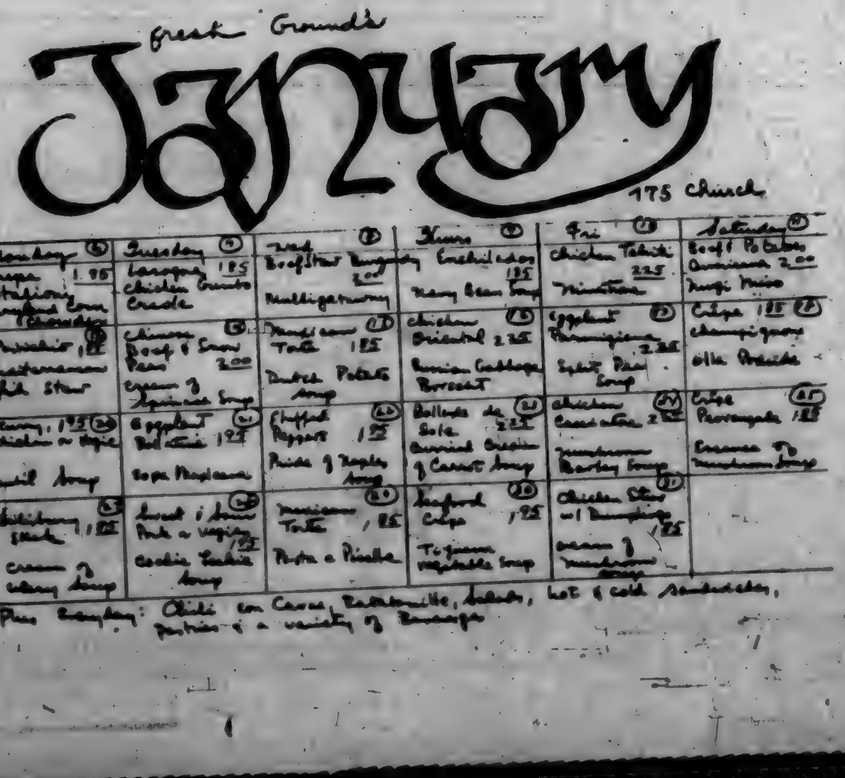


No Tom, Dick or Harry can beat our frank.

Lots of people try.
But there's just no way to improve on the great eating Lumdog. After all, nobody knows more about hot dogs than LUMS. Whether you like it with melted cheese, spicy chili or hot sauerkraut, LUMS is a place for a great Hotdog.
The Lumdog.

LUMS
FAMILY RESTAURANTS
WILLISTON ROAD TOWARDS THE AIRPORT
1130 am - 100 am

★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY TUESDAY WEDNESDAY & THURSDAY
FREE ADMISSION
★ FEATURING ★
SUNDAY JAN. 19
JOHN LEE HOOKER
ONE NITE ONLY
JAN. 13-18 SPOONFEATHER
JAN.20&21 HOME COOKING
JAN. 22-25 WIDE OPEN
JAN. 27-FEB.1 SECRET SAM



Intramural Basketball (Fall) Winners

League "A" – Sigma Nu; League "B" – Kappa Sigma; League "C" – Faculty League "D" – Wasted. League "E" – Gang. League "F" – B.D.B.; League "G" – Adline, League "H" – Prime Cuts.

Sigma Nu defeated Kappa Sigma 48-38 for the Fraternity Championship. Prime Cuts defeated Faculty 46-33 for the Independent Championship. Prime Cuts defeated Sigma Nu 70-61 for the All-Campus Championship. This All-Campus Championship game was held as a pre-lim to the UVM-New Hampshire varsity game.

Prime-Cuts Roster – Richard Moss, Mike Fitzmaurice, Dom Sisto, Jeff White, Gabe Vicks, Boris Puntow, John Vrsa.

Sigma Nu Roster – Tom Lenci, Twig Burke, Dave Campagne, Tony Segale, Gary Gottfried, Vic Vaughn, Mark Camilla, Rich Hilmer, Mark Byrne, Brian Donahue, Peter Schiller, Mike Snodgrass.

University of Vermont Basketball 1975 Junior Varsity Schedule

January 17 – Vermont Tech	5:30
January 18 – Intramural Champions	1:00
January 25 – at Champlain College	6:00
January 27 – at St. Michael's	7:30
January 29 – at Dartmouth	5:30
February 5 – St. Michael's	6:15
February 14 – at RPI	6:00
February 15 – Kimball Union	1:00
February 22 – RPI	5:30
February 24 – Champlain College	6:00
February 27 – at Siena College

The university's "Old Art Building", a brick structure behind Ira Allen Chapel which formerly housed the art department, has been named by the trustees in honor of the Rev. Joseph Torrey, university president from 1862 to 1866.

Renovation of the building will be completed in January; it will house the Pringle Herbarium collection and several activities of the School of Home Economics, such as weaving.

The building was erected during the tenure of President Torrey, the university's ninth inaugurated president, to serve as a library. He personally bought the collection of books and an art collection which started the library, and also taught classes in the building.

The board also heard progress reports on a number of current renovation and construction projects on the university campus; renovation of the former Municipal Nursing Home on East Avenue to serve as the university infirmary, which is due to be completed any time now.

Construction of the music building on the east side of Southwick Hall is due for completion at the end of March, and will have partial occupancy. The renovation of Redstone Hall, evacuated last year because of deteriorating conditions, is progressing.

Also, the renovation of Converse Hall, a popular student residence hall, is in the works with bids already in, the lowest being $914,000. The Main Street pedestrian underpass project may go to bid in February. It was noted again that the construction of the underpass was mandated by the Environmental District Commission as a condition for the construction of the Living-Learning Center.

SECOND SEMESTER FOOD SERVICE FACILITIES HOURS

REGULAR DINING HOURS

	Mon.–Fri.	Saturday	Sunday
WATERMAN
Breakfast	7:15–8:15	Closed	Closed
Lunch	10:30–12:30	Closed	Closed
Dinner	4:30–5:45 (closed Friday)	Closed	4:30–5:45
WRIGHT
Breakfast	7:00–8:45	Closed	Closed
Lunch	11:30–1:30	Closed	Closed
Dinner	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30 (Redstone Station)	Closed
SIMPSON
Breakfast	Closed	8:00–8:30	8:00–8:30
Lunch	Closed	11:00–12:30	11:00–12:30
Dinner	4:30–5:30 (closed Friday)	4:30–6:00	4:30–6:00
HARRIS–MILLIS
Breakfast	7:00–8:30	Closed	Closed
Lunch	11:00–12:30	Closed	11:30–1:00
Dinner	4:30–6:00	Closed	5:30–8:00 (White Mouse)
LIVING/LEARNING
Breakfast	7:15–9:00	8:00–9:00	8:00–9:00
Lunch	11:30–1:00	10:30–12:30	10:30–12:30
Dinner	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30
MARSH
Breakfast	Closed	Closed	Closed
Lunch	Closed	11:00–12:30	Closed
Dinner	5:30–7:00 (closed Friday)	5:00–6:30	Closed

SNACK BARS, ETC.	Mon.–Fri.	Saturday	Sunday
CATAMOUNT DEN	7:30 a.m.–10:30 p.m.	Closed	Closed
GIVEN CAFETERIA	7:30 a.m.–10:30 a.m. 11:15 a.m.–1:00 p.m.	Closed	Closed
FACULTY DINING ROOM	8:30 a.m.–3:00 p.m.	Closed	Closed
"WALTERS"	10:30 a.m.–Midnight	1:30 p.m.–1:00 a.m.	1:30 p.m.–1:00 a.m.
WRIGHT SNACKBAR	7:30 a.m.–10:00 p.m.	Closed	6:00 p.m.–10:00 p.m.
"THE WHITE MOUSE"	Closed	Closed	5:30–8:00
"REDSTONE STATION"	Closed	5:00–6:30	Closed
THE STORE– MARSH	2:00–7:00 p.m.	2:00–7:00 p.m.	Closed

Texas Instruments slide rule calculator SR-50

Must Have Coupon

COUPON SALE

SPECIAL SALE

	LIST	SALE
SR50	149.95	129.00
SR10	69.95	49.95

Must Have This Coupon

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS

Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong

Owned and Operated by 85 Associate Stores – Burlington – Essex – Barre-Montpelier

MILLS & GREER, Inc.

HOCKEY STICKS– KOHO, TITAN, LOUISVILLE ASK ABOUT OUR SPECIAL DOZEN PRICE?

CONVERSE SHOE SALE

SUEDES– NATURAL LO WERE $18.95 GOLD LO NOW $13.95 GREEN LO

CANVAS RED GREEN LT. BLUE HI CUT WERE 12.95 NOW 9.95

GOLD LT. BLUE LO CUT

PADDLE RACKETS & BALLS GYM SHORTS, SHIRTS & SOCKS

HOME OF THE BIG THREE: SPAULDING, MACGREGOR, WILSON

TOPS GO DOWN 4.99 – 10.99 SALE

THE COMPANY STORE 199 CHURCH STREET 864-7379

Start the Year off on a Bright Note

-PAINT your room, apartment, car, dog, or roommate

To get you started

★ 20% off all supplies with a valid UVM ID

★ free helpful advice-questions welcome

Come see us for everything you need from paint hats to paint

PITTSBURGH® PAINTS

61 Main Street 863-6866

Vermont Fiv

by Norm Robinson

The University of Massachusetts had defeated UVM 13 consecutive times going into Tuesday night's game at the Patrick Gym, and they were heavily favored to do it again. The problem was that they ran into a hot Vermont squad that handed the Minutemen a 69-65 defeat and brought Vermont into the race in the Yankee Conference.

The Cats had a tough time in the first half, shooting only 35 percent from the floor and making 16 turnovers. Plus, they were without the services of Joe Greco, who was out with an injury.

Vermont trailed at the half, 37-26 and it looked like UMass was about to blow it open. With big Jim Town and John Murphy, the Cats couldn't penetrate the Minutemen's defense and were forced to take some bad shots.

The Cats played even with the Minutemen early in the second half but with 13 minutes left they were behind 51-36 and it looked like it was just a matter of time before they were out of it.

With approximately eight minutes remaining however, John Murphy, the UMass star, got his fourth foul and was sat down by Coach Jack Leaman. The Vermont squad had a life and jumped at the chance to get back into it.

With the score 61-46, Bernie Palmer, Warren Prehmus, and Ron Gottschalk hit baskets, and after a Massachusetts hoo got nine unanswe and it was 63-6 minutes to play.

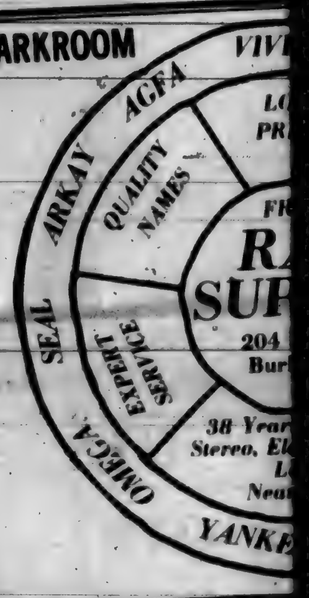
Playing a fu neither team c bucket until only a half remained. just into the ball breather, hit a jum left baseline to m UMass.

Murphy who the ball game, soon after, and t Murphy for the went to the line and one, and both shots to tie

By this ti capacity crowd h the game and CATS GO, an were spurring the

With only a the Cats went u Palmer was fo seconds left. B shots and Verm

DARKROOM



VALUG

SKI EQUI

Last

SKI BOOTS
Hanson Riva Red
Nordica Alpina
Nordica Elegance
Nordica Mercury
Nordica Olympic
K-2 Three
Trappeur Elite
Trappeur Cosmos

SKIS
Rossignol Concorde
Rossignol Europe
Rossignol Strato 102
Olin Mark I
Olin Mark IV
K-2 Two
K-2 Bermuda Shorts
K-2 Competition
Atomic - Atomic
Atomic Short

WHILE THEY

TIES HOURS

Sunday
Closed
Closed
4:30–5:45

Closed
Closed
:30 Closed
ose Station)

:30 8:00–8:30
12:30 11:00–12:30
:00 4:30–6:00

Closed
11:30–1:00
5:30–8:00
(White House)

:00 8:00–9:00
12:30 10:30–12:30
:30 5:00–6:30

Closed
12:30 Closed
6:30 Closed

Saturday Sunday
Closed Closed

Closed Closed

Closed Closed

1:30 p.m.– 1:30 p.m.–
1:00 a.m. 1:00 a.m.

Closed 6:00 p.m.–
10:00 p.m.

Closed 5:30–8:00

5:00–6:30 Closed

2:00–7:00 p.m. Closed

ar off
Note

artment,

valid UVM ID

ons welcome

thing you to paint

PAINTS

Vermont Five Upsets Massachusetts 69-65

by Norm Robinson

The University of Massachusetts had defeated UVM 13 consecutive times going into Tuesday night's game at the Patrick Gym, and they were heavily favored to do it again. The problem was that they ran into a hot Vermont squad that handed the Minutemen a 69-65 defeat and brought Vermont into the race in the Yankee Conference.

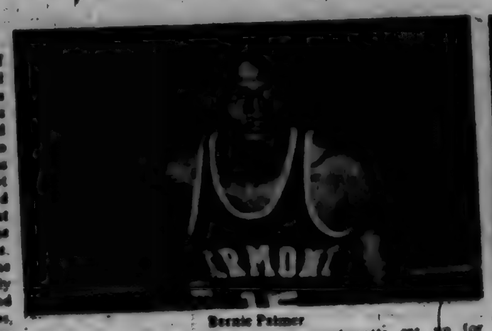
The Cats had a tough time in the first half, shooting only 35 percent from the floor and making 16 turnovers. Plus, they were without the services of Joe Greco, who was out with an injury.

Vermont trailed at the half, 37-26 and it looked like UMass was about to blow it open. With big Jim Town and John Murphy, the Cats couldn't penetrate the Minutemen's defense and were forced to take some bad shots.

The Cats played even with the Minutemen early in the second half but with 13 minutes left they were behind 51-36 and it looked like it was just a matter of time before they were out of it.

With approximately eight minutes remaining however, John Murphy, the UMass star, got his fourth foul and was sat down by Coach Jack Leaman. The Vermont squad had a life and jumped at the chance to get back into it.

With the score 61-46, Bernie Palmer, Warren Prehmus, and Ron Gottschalk hit baskets and after a Massachusetts hoop, Vermont got nine unanswered points and it was 65-61 with 3½ minutes to play.



Bernie Palmer

Playing a tight defense, neither team could fine a bucket until only a minute and a half remained. Terry Green, just into the ball game after a breather, hit a jumper from the left baseline to make it 65-63, UMass.

Murphy who was back in the ball game, fouled Green soon after, and that was all for Murphy for the evening. Green went to the line shooting one and one, and promptly hit both shots to tie the game.

By this time the near capacity crowd had gotten into the game and cries of GO CATS GO, and DEFENSE, were spurring the Cats on.

With only a minute to go, the Cats went into a stall and Palmer was fouled with 23 seconds left. Bernie hit both shots and Vermont led 67-65.

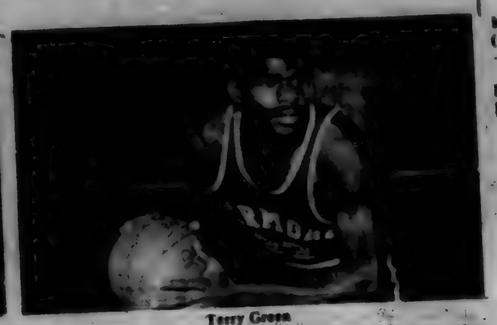
Massachusetts set up for one last shot but threw the ball away. Vermont came down the court, taking their time, and Warren Prehmus was fouled. He hit both of his shots, icing the game and the Cats had pulled off the big upset.

It was a team effort all around with Green and Gottschalk getting 12 points; Palmer 11, Mike Richbow 10 and Prehmus 9 to lead the Cats. Vermont is now 7-5 overall, and 3-1 in the Conference.

Vermont's next home games are this Friday and Saturday against Maine. Friday's game is at 7:30 and Saturday's at 3:00 p.m.

●●●●●●●●●●

A Basketball Note: The Vermont Five had a tough schedule over the holidays; losing to Virginia Tech, Tennessee, going 1-1 in the Lafeyette Tournament; and losing in the closing seconds to Northeastern, 93-91.



Terry Green

The bright spot was this past Friday when the Quintet topped New Hampshire 69-60. In that game, Terry Green and Warren Prehmus combined for 42 points to lead the Cats. Green hit 10 of 16 shots from the field and 3 of 6 from the line for 23, and Prehmus connected for 8 of 10 field goals and 3 of 4 foul shots for 19 points.

Intramural Results

Men's Intramural Handball (doubles) Tournament Winners

Gary Sabourin/Gary Paquette (Delta Psi) defeated Mark O'Connor/Gary Higby (Delta Psi) for the All-Campus Championship — Men's Handball (doubles).

Co-ed Racquetball Doubles Tournament Winners

Kenneth Munson and Karen Taylor defeated Craig Iverson and Mary Dee – 9-15, 15-9, 15-5 for the All-Campus Championship in Co-ed Racquetball Doubles.

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE - NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
1216 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington
durham
CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS®
Also Available In A 9" Boot For Men And Women
Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' sizes . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.
FREE PARKING OPEN DAILY 9 to 6 FRIDAY 'til 9

DARKROOM PLEASURE
VIVITAR GAF DURST SAVAGE TESTRITE YANKEE OMEGA-A SEAL EXPERT SERVICE ARKAY AGFA QUALITY NAMES LOW PRICES COMPLETE INVENTORIES A SOURCE YOU CAN TRUST
FROM RAY SUPPLY
204 Main St. Burlington
38 Years Business In Stereo, Electronics Photo Located Near Campus

VALUGA SPORTS
SKI EQUIPMENT SALE
Last Year's Models

	Reg. Price	Sale Price
SKI BOOTS
Hanson Rival Red	$155.00	105.00
Nordica Alpina	45.00	35.00
Nordica Elegance	60.00	45.00
Nordica Mercury	100.00	65.00
Nordica Olympic	185.00	85.00
K-2 Three	150.00	99.00
Trappeur Elite	185.00	100.00
Trappeur Cosmos	120.00	65.00
SKIS
Rossignol Concorde	110.00	70.00
Rossignol Europe	135.00	80.00
Rossignol Strato 102	176.00	115.00
Olin Mark I	155.00	99.00
Olin Mark IV	175.00	130.00
K-2 Two	145.00	99.00
K-2 Bermuda Shorts	155.00	109.00
K-2 Competition	210.00	155.00
Atomic - Atomic	200.00	140.00
Atomic Short	100.00	75.00

WHILE THEY LAST
For All Your Skiing Needs
Visit Valuga
Open Everyday 'till 9 P.M.
Sat. 'till 5:30 P.M.
• BankAmericard • Master Charge
Next to Swidget Restaurant
Shelburne Road,
So. Burl., Vt.

JANUARY SALE
At AUDIO DEN
Thursday thru Saturday
January 9-11

RECEIVERS TUNERS—AMPS

Quantity	Item	Manu. Sugg. List	Our Price
2	Pioneer SX636 Receiver	$350	$295
2	Pioneer SA5200 AMP	$140	$119
2	Pioneer SA7100 AMP	$250	$209
2	Pioneer SA8100 AMP	$350	$295
2	Pioneer SA9100 AMP	$450	$375
1	Marantz 2245 Receiver	$500	$375
1	Marantz 4230 Receiver	$500	$450
1	Marantz 4240 Receiver	$600	$225
2	Marantz 115B Tuner	$300	$395
1	Marantz 120 B Tuner	$580	$569
1	Epicure One Amp	$649	$389
2	Onkyo TX666 Receiver	$450

SPEAKERS

Q.	Item	Manu. Sugg. List	Our Price
2	EPI 150	$149	$119
4	EPI 201	$219	$179
2	EPI 400 Plus	$399	$329
4	EPI MTII	$120	$99
4	Audioanalst A76	$95	$69
8	Audioanalst A100	$140	$99
2	Audioanalst A200	$250	$189
6	Harmon Kardon 20	$60	$35
12	Audio 1	$70	$39

TAPE DECKS

Q.	Item	Manu. Sugg. List	Our Price
2	Sony TC353 Reel-to-Reel	$350	$289
2	Sony TC377 Reel-to-Reel	$406	$339
2	Sony TC161SD Cassette	$300	$239
2	Teac 140 Cassette	$200	$169
1	Pioneer 1020 Reel-to-Reel	$650	$575

All prices on turntables include base, dust cover and cartridge.

CHANGERS — TURNTABLES

Q.	Item	Manu. Sugg. List	Our Price
6	Garrard Zero 92 (complete)	$247.85	$135
2	Thorens 125AB (complete	$480	$375

MISCELLANEOUS

Q.	Item	Manu. Sugg. List	Our Price
6	KLH AM/FM Radio	$120	$99
4	KLH FM Radio	$100	$85
2	Marantz SE-1 Electrostatic Headphone	$120	$89
8	Koss HV1/LC Headphone	$50	$34
1	Superscope 1016 Compact	$250	$179
3	Superscope 3026 Compact	$300	$229
12	Sanyo Portable AM/FM Radio	$35	$19

• All items in sale are either new or demonstration models and are limited to specified quantities.

AUDIO DEN
100 Dorset St., South Burlington
Phone 863-4398
So. Main St., Middlebury — Phone 388-6788
Not all items are available in Middlebury

CALCULATORS

YOUR ON CAMPUS CALCULATOR HEADQUARTERS

Compare our Prices and service

BOWMAR
MX25	$34.95
MX55	44.95
MX90	79.95
MX100	129.95
MX140	159.95
Hewlett PACKARD
HP35	195.00 •
HP45	325.00
HP65	795.00
HP80	395.00
LLOYD'S
Accumative 200	49.95
MELCOR
380	39.95
SC535	99.95
SHARP
PC-1802	124.95
TEXAS INSTRUMENTS
SR10	59.95 •
SR11	79.95
Sn16	99.95
SR50	139.95 •
TI1500	49.95
TI2550	69.95

• Price recently reduced

10% OFF JACKETS

UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

UVM SPORTS

The UVM offense in action against Penn. in the vacation game at Gutterson. SPS Photo: Dick Law

Hockey Team Wins Four In A Row Over Vacation

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont hockey team skated through the holidays with four consecutive victories over St. Lawrence, Cornell, Pennsylvania, and Dartmouth.

In the opening round of the Syracuse Invitational Hockey Tournament on December 27-28, UVM outscored St. Lawrence 7-5, to reach the finals.

Junior center Tim O'Connell, scored three goals and assisted on another to lead the Cats past the Division I foe. The opening period was a tough one for the Cats because of the long layoff due to Christmas vacation but Andy Halford and Billy Koch tallied goals to tie it at two apiece after a period.

The second period was all Vermont, taking a 5-2 lead on two goals by freshman Randy Koch and O'Connell's first goal of the night.

UVM got a bit sloppy in the final frame, but O'Connell scored two more to help offset the three-goal burst by St. lawrence and Vermont held on to claim the victory. Tom McNamara came up with 25 saves while going the distance for Vermont.

With the win over SLU, the Vermont squad moved into the final round of the Tournament against highly regarded Cornell. UVM shocked the Big Red with a solid 5-2 win, with Tim O'Connell firing in three more goals to bring his total to 17. The Cat's dominated the entire game and Tom McNamara gave another fine performance with 30 saves.

With the score tied 2-2 after two periods, Chris Hurley slammed one past Cornell goalie Steve Kelleher to give the Cats the lead and Billy Koch and Tim O'Connell finished off the scoring for Vermont.

The victory was labelled one of the biggest in Vermont history because of its surprising outcome but another important point is that it left the Cats with a 4-1 Division I mark.

The Icecats' third win was against Division I rival, the Pennsylvania Quakers. After a tough two periods with the teams deadlocked at two apiece the Vermont squad turned on their potent offence and ripped through and around the Quaker defense for four goals to ice the game.

The first two periods saw a stubborn Pennsylvania squad play a good forechecking game and had Vermont bottled up in their own end much of the time. The Quakers appeared content to dump the puck into the Vermont end and sit back, attempting to fire out the Catamounts. Their strategy backfired in the final period as a weary Pennsylvania squad was overrun by coach Cross' troops.

On Friday the Cats invaded Hanover in hopes of picking up another win, and win they did, 6-2. Dartmouth had the territorial edge throughout the game but as DC coach Grant Standbrook said, its putting the puck into the net that counts.

Vermont jumped out to a 2-0 lead on first period goals by Andy Halford, who dribbled one past Dartmouth goalie Bob Ringrod on a face-off, and Rogie Mallette tallied the other.

Early in the second period Bill Spence and Billy Koch netted goals to make it 4-0. Penalties got the Cats in trouble soon after Koch's goal however and suddenly it was 4-2 with a period to play.

Vermont, like it has done so many times in the past, came up with the big third period however, and Chris Hurley and Bill McAlduff finished the scoring to help the Cats pull off the victory.

Tom McNamara had another outstanding game in the nets with 36 saves. He was constantly harrassed by the DC squad but he was not to be denied of yet another win. The victory was a big one for Vermont as it leaves them with a fine 6-1 record in Division I, tied with Boston University for first place in the ECAC.

The holiday break was good to the Vermont squad as they were impressive throughout the schedule. With these victories the Cats are in excellent shape to finish up the season and go on to the playoffs. The Cats return home this Saturday against Massachusetts and start a seven game home stand going through February 4.

NAZDAR COMPANY NAZDAR SILK SCREEN SUPPLIES

Moore BENJAMIN MOORE & California CALIFORNIA PAINTS

SPECIAL DISCOUNTS TO STUDENTS WITH ID

VERMONT PAINT CO.
138 No. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
862-0201

S.A. FILMS PRESENTS

Mondays
The French Cinema

- JANUARY 20 HIROSHIMA MON AMOUR
- JANUARY 27 BEAUTY AND THE BEAST
- FEBRUARY 3 GRAND ILLUSION
- FEBRUARY 10 FORBIDDEN GAMES
- FEBRUARY 17 THE CONFESSION
- FEBRUARY 24 PLAYTIME
- MARCH 3 LAST YEAR AT MARIENBAD
- MARCH 10 THE BRIDE WORE BLACK
- MARCH 17 LES BONNE FEMMES
- MARCH 31 KING OF HEARTS
- APRIL 7 CLAIRE'S KNEE
- APRIL 14 RULES OF THE GAME
- APRIL 21 LE BONHEUR

Thursdays
A History of the Hollywood Musicals Part II

- JANUARY 30 ANCHORS AWEIGH
- FEBRUARY 6 SHOWBOAT
- FEBRUARY 13 TOP HAT
- FEBRUARY 20 FLYING DOWN TO RIO
- FEBRUARY 27 SINGING IN THE RAIN
- MARCH 6 THE JAZZ SINGER
- MARCH 13 THE PIRATE
- MARCH 20 THE WIZARD OF OZ
- APRIL 10 ROYAL WEDDING
- APRIL 17 GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES
- APRIL 24 AN AMERICAN IN PARIS

Fridays
The Return of the Big Film Part II

- JANUARY 24 ROMEO & JULIET
- JANUARY 31 HORSEFEATHERS; CHAPLIN'S EASY STREET & RINK; THREE STOOGES
- FEBRUARY 7 LET IT BE; HARD DAY'S NIGHT
- FEBRUARY 14 COCOANUTS; CHUMP AT OXFORD
- FEBRUARY 21 DAY OF THE JACKAL
- FEBRUARY 28 FRANKENSTEIN; WOLFMAN
- MARCH 7 CABARET
- MARCH 14 BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN; BLACK CAT
- MARCH 21 BUTCH CASSIDY & THE SUNDANCE KID
- APRIL 4 MY LITTLE CHICKADEE; ABBOTT & COSTELLO MEET FRANKENSTEIN
- APRIL 11 THE HARDER THEY COME
- APRIL 18 YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN; COLLEGE HOLIDAY
- APRIL 25 KING KONG
- MAY 2 SOME LIKE IT HOT

Saturdays
The Films of Katherine Hepburn

- JANUARY 25 STAGEDOOR
- FEBRUARY 1 WOMAN OF THE YEAR
- FEBRUARY 8 BRINGING UP BABY
- FEBRUARY 15 PHILADELPHIA STORY
- FEBRUARY 22 ADAM'S RIB
- MARCH 1 AFRICAN QUEEN
- MARCH 8 PAT AND MIKE
- MARCH 15 TROJAN WOMEN
- APRIL 12 LONG DAYS JOURNEY INTO NIGHT

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 2
JANUARY 23, 1975

VE

Aiken

Aiken Retir

by Jerry Weil

The entire U.V.M. community will be enriched this semester as Senator George D. Aiken, retiring Dean of the United States Senate, will be coming to the University.

For two days out of every week, beginning Wednesday-Thursday January 22-23 and on most Mondays and Tuesdays during the rest of January, February, and March, Senator Aiken will be on campus working on an oral history project and meeting with students, classes, and groups. He will also conduct a seminar. The Senator and Mrs. Aiden will reside in the scholar-in-residence apartment in the Living and Learning Center.

Senator Aiken will work on an oral history project with Mr. Charles Morrissey, Director of the Vermont Historical Society. Mr. Morrissey has done extensi... field of oral ... the oral histo... S. Truman Lib... Kennedy Libr... Project, a... Foundation ... Project. Mo... Morrissey w... Alaska invol... Eskimos.

In the ... Morrissey, 3... make his 34 ... (1941-1975) ... will cast m... the 352 car... his senate ... been beautif... the Senato... and donated ... Recording ... in the L/L C...

Mrs. Ba... President f... External ... Muller, Di... Learning C...

Exciting Win

Winter Week 1975 represents the efforts of several programming organizations on campus. A comprehensive list of events has been planned marking Winter Week 1975 a week you won't want to miss.

The week begins on January 30 with the opening of the Nordic events at the UVM Winter Carnival at Smuggler's Notch. Following, that evening SA Films presents "Anchors Aweigh" at Votey Hall at 7:30 p.m. Friday, January 31 will see the UVM ski team competing in the Alpine Events at Smuggler's Notch, the second day of the Winter Carnival. For those interested in attending the Alpine Competition, busses will leave Billings Center at 8:30 a.m. and return at 3:30 p.m. The ride is free and people should call x2068 for reservations.

SA Films will feature the Marx Brothers in Horsefeathers, Charlie Chaplin in Easy Street and The Rink and the Three Stooges in Rockin' Through the Rockies on Friday night at Votey Hall. Shows are at 7:30 p.m. and 10:00 p.m. and admission is $1.00.

Saturday brings to a close the Winter Carnival with Jumping events features in Williston. Busses will leave Billings at 12 noon and return at 3:00 for those interested in attending. American Graffiti will be shown on campus Saturday night but information concerning the price and time is not available as of yet. Watch the Cynic for further details.

On Sunday February 2, SA Speakers presents Wolfman Jack emceeing an old-fashioned sock-hop in Patrick Gymnasium. The fun gets started at 9:00 with a nominal charge of 50 cents at the door.

SA Films presents on Monday night the French Classic "Grand-Illusion" in Votey Hall at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night of Winter Week 1975, the UVM Icecats face off against St. Lawrence at 7:30 in Gutterson in what should prove to be an exciting Division I matchup. The UVM Basketball Team, high on its winning ways, will encounter on Wednesday night, their cross-town rivals St. Michael's College. Tipoff time is 7:30 ... game.

Thur... evenings ... Billings ... Board wi... and Sm... production... I Go Ho... perform... impromp... and musi... Billings ... admission... with I... Thursday ... Showboa... Hall pres...

In ac... and Smu... Winter W... be a Gre... at Ira A... at 7:00 ... to com... fraterni... perform... productio... songs an... also find... the Bea... Be" and ... Admissio... in Vote... 10:00 ... dence A... a night ... construc... in front ... ham and ... lit with ... tap by ... be a c... specially ... back of ... Both th... I R A ... through ... sure to...

Sa... find t... Council ... afterno... Tug-of... broom ... Charlo... in an ... activit... Greek ... spon... dinner ... for al... $ys t... e n c... reserv... is hou... event... years ... an el... "Tro...

JANUARY 16, 1975

BPS Photo: Dick Law

Vacation

squad offense around or four

Bill Spence and Billy Koch netted goals to make it 4-0. Penalties got the Cats in trouble soon after Koch's goal however and suddenly it was 4-2 with a period to play.

Vermont, like it has done so many times in the past, came up with the big third period however, and Chris Hurley and Bill McAlduff finished the scoring to help the Cats pull off the victory.

Tom McNamara had another outstanding game in the nets with 36 saves. He was constantly harrassed by the DC squad but he was not to be denied of yet another win. The victory was a big one for Vermont as it leaves them with a fine 6-1 record in Division 1, tied with Boston University for first place in the ECAC.

The holiday break was good to the Vermont squad as they were impressive throughout the schedule. With these victories the Cats are in excellent shape to finish up the season and go on to the playoffs. The Cats return home this Saturday against Massachusetts and start a seven game home stand going through February 4.

squad
offense around or four s saw a squad game d up in
of the ppeared ck into t back, out the strategy period as squad
Cross' invaded king up
hey did,
nd the hout the h Grant putting pet that put to a nd goals
d, who rtmouth on a Mallette
d period

HEAT AN HONEST
GE HOLIDAY

T HOT

ays
s of Hepburn

OR

F THE YEAR

G UP BABY

LPHIA STORY

IE

QUEEN

MIKE

WOMEN

AYS JOURNEY
GHT

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 2
JANUARY 23, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

"To a privilege to live in Vermont"

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

Aiken Surveys his Records

Aiken Retires To UVM

by Jerry Weil

The entire U.V.M. community will be enriched this semester as Senator George D. Aiken, retiring Dean of the United States Senate, will be coming to the University.

For two days out of every week, beginning Wednesday-Thursday January 22-23 and on most Mondays and Tuesdays during the rest of January, February, and March, Senator Aiken will be on campus working on an oral history project and meeting with students, classes, and groups. He will also conduct a seminar. The Senator and Mrs. Aiden will reside in the scholar-in-residence apartment in the Living and Learning Center.

Senator Aiken will work on an oral history project with Mr. Charles Morrissey, Director of the Vermont Historical Society. Mr. Morrissey has done extensive work in the field of oral history. He was the oral historian for the Harry S. Truman Library, the John F. Kennedy Library Oral History Project, and the Ford Foundation Oral History Project. Most recently, Mr. Morrissey was consulted in Alaska involving a history of Eskimos.

In the project with Mr. Morrissey, Senator Aiken will make his 34 years in the Senate (1941-1975) come alive. He will cast meaningful light on the 352 cartons of records of his senate years. They have been beautifully catalogued by the Senator and Mrs. Aiken and donated to the University. Recording sessions will be held in the L/L Center.

Mrs. Barbara Snelling, Vice President for Development and External Affairs, and Nick Muller, Director of the Living Learning Center, have met with the senator and have expressed the senator's enthusiasm for interaction with students, classes, and groups.

"We're not trying to put him in a piece of glass," says L/L Director Muller, who stresses that anybody can get to see Senator Aiken. Muller says that the Senator will have a busy schedule but anyone wishing to see him can get on his schedule by calling the Office of the Director of the Living/Learning Center at 656-4200.

Plans are underway for a select group of students to meet with Senator Aiken in a seminar titled Vermont and National Affairs.

It should be noted that Mrs. Lois Aiken served for many years as the Senator's chief administrative assistant and is herself an inexhaustive resource for interested students.

UVM Administration Ambivalent On The Subject Of State College Merger

by Margo Howland

Top officials of the UVM administration are not wildly enthusiastic about current proposals to merge the university with the four state colleges. There have apparently been no outright objections to the basic idea of merger, but the subject is being approached with gingerly caution.

As top administration officials debate the viability of such a merger, the prevailing sentiment appears to be one of ambivalence.

At a meeting of the Council of Academic Deans on Jan. 9, UVM President Dr. Edward C. Andrews reviewed studies pertaining to the coordination of state-supported higher education. Materials presented included a draft of a bill to establish a permanent Vermont Higher Education Planning Commission, a plan to deliver Community College services across the state at low cost, and a copy of S. 37, a bill introduced by Senator Soule (D-Franklin) to establish a Vermont System of Higher Education.

The bill would, in its own language, provide for such a system to "assume and coordinate the functions of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College and the Vermont State Colleges."

At the meeting, Andrews indicated that he had a growing ambivalence on the question because current economic conditions underline the importance of maintaining the university's attractiveness to out-of-state students, and alteration of the institution's unique image through merger could be a critical matter.

Academic Vice-President Alfred B. Rollins agreed. Rollins thought that a strong bill, and one that retains the title of "the University of Vermont" should be minimum requirements for a merger.

An administration spokesman told this newspaper that the requirements mentioned by Rollins were "absolutely vital."

"Our whole identity is important to in-state and out-of-staters," he declared.

The spokesman also said that the whole concept "ought to be approached very carefully and cautiously. Maybe we shouldn't try to push overnight for a merger which we would be sorry for tomorrow."

An alternative step, one which would precede a merger and perhaps even replace it, might be the coordination with the state colleges in such fields as teacher and continuing education, and perhaps agriculture and vocational education.

Dean Dean C. Corrigan of the university's College of Education and Social Services told the Cynic of the coordinating efforts the College has made with the state colleges already.

"There is a need to develop a coordinated approach to meet the needs of education and social services personnel in this state. We have a number of collaborative efforts underway with the state colleges. We are presently having discussions on ways that we could utilize the talents of people throughout the state system," Corrigan explained.

In teaching centers where student teachers come from the four state colleges and the university, faculty supervisors from the colleges work with one field of concentration. Thus a math supervisor from Johnson, for example, would be supervising student teachers from UVM, Castleton, and Lyndon, while other colleges would handle other areas.

It was noted that the faculty of Castleton voted last week to oppose a merger of the four state colleges with the university, citing that such a move would "erode local autonomy at the colleges and could mean elimination of programs and jobs on the local campus."

If there was a merger, how might it come about? One administration official described for the Cynic two possible models.

"One extreme would be to have the University of Vermont with campuses in several different locations. It would have one executive board, one board of trustees, one single budget control, a unified administrative system, and one admissions office. This would be tight, strong, and unified.

"The other extreme would be to have a loosely federated system, retaining the names of the schools and their present board of trustees, and preserving local autonomy with planning to avoid duplication.

"Put over them would be a superstructure consisting of a chancellor and a super board of trustees.

"A third possibility (short of a merger) would be to set up a planning board to be concerned with local interests, the interests of the present university in terms of out-of-state students, and what is good for the state as a whole. There is no real consensus," he concluded.

UVM Faces Hard Financial Decisions

by Mark Sawyer

Tuition increases as an increased source of revenue to the university appears as the primary alternative to a potential budget deficit of approximately 1.2 million dollars for fiscal year 1976.

In a press release last week University President Edward C. Andrews, Jr. eliminated a change in the in-state, out-of-state mix of students or further academic cuts as viable options in meeting the University's pressing financial needs. The present mix of students is approximately 60% in-state and 40% out-of- state. An increase in the percentage of out-of- state students would increase revenues since out-of-state tuition is $2,650 as compared to the $950 in-state rate.

Andrews offered a policy rationale, stating that "the major mission of the University of Vermont must continue to be to provide opportunities for all qualified Vermont students to obtain a college education" although political considerations probably influenced the decision also.

Faced with a possible 3 million dollar deficit for FY '76 due in part to level funding by the state, the administration achieved approximately half the needed reductions through cuts in academic programs and personnel. The administration anticipates a need for an additional 1.2 million dollars which will probably be met through tuition increases or financing of a deficit from endowment fund income if the legislature refuses UVM's request for additional funds.

A Trustee Committee in cooperation with the administration is investigating several proposals increasing revenue through tuition increases. Specific proposals include changing the tuition rate per credit hour, a medical school tuition differential, and increases in tuition rates for Continuing Education and graduate students.

Trustee Luthur Hackett is proposing to eliminate the legally required 40% ceiling on in-state tuition as a percentage of out-of-state tuition to give the administration more flexibility in meeting the financial crisis. Hackett asserts that the Board of Trustees desired to keep in-state tuition at the lowest possible level but that the legislature must fund the difference between a low tuition rate and the rate necessary to cover the costs of educationing Vermonters. Hackett feels Vermonters in higher income levels could afford a higher tuition rate while middle and lower class Vermonters would be subsidized by the Vermont Student Assistance Corporation.

Dr. Wayne Patterson, Executive Vice-President, holds the position that the University has done its job in keeping costs to a minimum and making difficult decisions in cutting its budget and should not be penalized for good management. Patterson is skeptical of Vermont State College Chancellor William G. Craig's proposal to reduce administration overhead for the state colleges by discontinuing the Chancellor-Presidency bureaucracy and combining the two systems. Patterson feels that although consolidation is inevitable and useful if properly done, in the present financial situation consolidation would be like "one waterlogged man holding up a drowning one."

Patterson foresees the acceptance or rejection of Governor Salmon's request for a tax increase as instrumental in deciding the efficaciousness of UVM's plea for increased state funding. If the tax increase is accepted Patterson feels the University deserves $600,000 - $800,000; if the tax increase is rejected, UVM will not expect any increased funding and will be compelled to increase tuition or finance a deficit. Patterson emphasizes that the University's main function is undergraduate education and that inadequate funding will necessitate cuts in the other programs the University offers.

Professor and legislator Robert Daniels asserts that the state desires more in programs and services than it is willing to pay for. While the state benefits from the medical school and Extension Service and wants the University to educate Vermonters for inadequate remuneration it is unwilling to incur the requisite costs. With inflationary increases in expenses Daniels feels the state can only expect "to get what it pays for." Daniels feels the 60% -40% in-state/ out-of-state student population ratio is desirable if the legislature is willing to fund the difference. If funding is inadequate Daniels favors an increase in in-state tuition or a change in the in-state/ out-of-state student mix. A Faculty Senate resolution authored by Daniels containing similar provisions was rejected by the administration last fall.

Daniels foresees the University's chances for increased funding as grim. He points out that the present state budget incorporates a 10 million dollar deficit due to recessionary decreases in tax revenues. Daniels portrays the state as "running just to stand still" since even with a tax increase most programs will be funded at last year's levels. An increased appropriation for UVM would involve reallocating funds from other areas. Consequently, the legislature faces hard choices in determining the future of higher education in Vermont.

Exciting Winter Week Ahead

Winter Week 1975 represents the efforts of several programming organizations on campus. A comprehensive list of events has been planned marking Winter Week 1975 a week you won't want to miss.

The week begins on January 30 with the opening of the Nordic events at the UVM Winter Carnival at Smuggler's Notch. Following, that evening SA Films presents "Anchors Aweigh" at Votey Hall at 7:30 p.m. Friday, January 31 will see the UVM ski team competing in the Alpine Events at Smuggler's Notch, the second day of the Winter Carnival. For those interested in attending the Alpine Competition, busses will leave Billings Center at 8:30 a.m. and return at 3:30 p.m. The ride is free and people should call x2068 for reservations.

SA Films will feature the Marx Brothers in Horsefeathers, Charlie Chaplin in Easy Street and The Rink and the Three Stooges in Rockin' Through the Rockies on Friday night at Votey Hall. Shows are at 7:30 p.m. and 10:00 p.m. and admission is $1.00.

Saturday brings to a close the Winter Carnival with Jumping events features in Williston. Busses will leave Billings at 12 noon and return at 3:00 for those interested in attending. American Graffiti will be shown on campus Saturday night but information concerning the price and time is not available as of yet. Watch the Cynic for further details.

On Sunday February 2, SA Speakers presents Wolfman Jack emceeing an old-fashioned sock-hop in Patrick Gymnasium. The fun gets started at 9:00 with a nominal charge of 50 cents at the door. SA Films presents on Monday night the French Classic "Grand Illusion" in Votey Hall at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night of Winter Week 1975, the UVM locals fast off against St. Lawrence at 7:30 in Gutterson in what should prove to be an exciting Division I matchup. The UVM Basketball Team, high on its winning ways, will encounter on Wednesday night, their cross-town rivals St. Michael's College. Tipoff time is 7:30 for this important game.

Thursday and Friday evenings at 8:00 p.m., the Billings Center Governing Board will present Kampmann and Smet in their original production of Please God, Can I Go Home Now! The performance featuring impromptu comedy, drama and music, will be held in the Billings Center Apse for an admission charge of 50 cents with ID. Also featured Thursday night will be the film Showboat at 7:30 in Votey Hall presented by SA Films.

In addition to Kampmann and Smet on Friday evening of Winter Week 1975, there will be a Greek Skit and Song night at Ira Allen Chapel beginning at 7:00 p.m. All are welcome to come and watch the fraternities and sororities perform on stage original productions of their favorite songs and skits. Friday night also finds SA Films presenting the Beatles Classics, "Let It Be" and "A Hard Days Night." Admission is $1.00 for shows in Votey Hall at 7:30 and 10:00 p.m. The Inter-Residence Association is sponsoring a night of skating at a specially constructed rink on the green in front of Chittenden-Buckham and Wills. The rink will be lit with music. Also on tap by IRA Friday night will be a cross-country race on a specially lighted course in the back of Gutterson Fieldhouse. Both these innovative ideas by IRA will be publicized throughout the campus so be sure to watch for more details.

Saturday February 8 will find the Greek Coordinating Council and IRA sponsoring an afternoon of Winter Games. Tug-of-Wars, Klondike Races, a broomball tournament, and Chariot racey will be featured in an interesting line-up of activity on CBW Green. The Greek Coordinating Council is sponsoring a semi-formal dinner dance at Marble Island for all members of the Greek System. All Greeks are encouraged to make reservations early for the affair is bound to be one of the best events for Greeks in recent years. Also on Saturday night an all-campus mixer featuring "Tricks" one of Connecticut's finest boogies bands, will be held at MAT Dining Hall beginning at 9:00 p.m. Prepare yourself for a free night of music and dancing. If films are more your style on Saturday night, Bringing Up Baby with Kathryn Hepburn will be shown beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Votey Hall.

Closing out this long list of activities for Winter Week 1975 will be a concert presented by SA Concert Bureau featuring the Earl Scruggs Review with the John Cassel Band. Tickets will be on sale shortly but don't wait get your tickets early to see this great concert.

That about does it for

(continued on page eight)

Do We Need New Senators?

by Kathy Stiassni

The University student population was ineffectively represented at the first Student Association meeting of the spring semester. Attendance was sparse with only 25 senators of the total membership of 60.

The lack of attendance did not go unnoticed. Under New Business, Bill Dean, senator from Bucham raised a motion that all senators having attended less than half of the meetings must find a replacement. If passed this would cause 16 senators, or more than 25% of the S.A. to be replaced.

There was also discussion as to whether the sororities and fraternities are over represented. However, there was no response to a motion suggesting that there be several representatives at-large rather than a representative from each house.

Peter MacAusland, S.A. president spoke optimistically about the present system stressing that communication with constituencies was the responsibility of each individual senator. He believed the system could work if senators were more committed to its success. Peter's optimism provoked some negative comment from Rob Macgregor, a town senator who questioned the viability of the S.A. He perceived S.A., IRA, and Fraternity Forum, to be ineffective as separate organizations and not worth "patching up."

During the meeting there was some discussion of the search committee for a successor to President Andrews. There is a tentative committee structure which would involve five Trustees, four faculty members and two students. MacAusland told the senators that he will press the Trustees for "fair and equal representation" on the part of the students rather than "token input." He would like to equalize the search committee ratio between faculty, trustees, and students.

Another current topic, the five college merger, was mentioned. It was suggested that the S.A. formulate a position paper on the merger to be submitted to the trustees.

In other business the American Society of Mechanical Engineers asked for funding. The motion for a similar request from the American Society of Civil Engineers which had been filed at a previous meeting was reintroduced. However, there was no one present to represent the Civil Engineers.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:30.

SAGA Shuffles Managers

by Randy Jansen

Fred Smith, director of SAGA, has restructured his managerial staff by creating two new positions and altering the chain of communication between Smith and his managers.

Bruce MacDougall will become a "liason" between SAGA and the university. He will work with the media to explain SAGA's programs. MacDougall will also become the receiver of discontent students might have with SAGA. Smith hopes this will increase communication between SAGA and the students. "Improvement in the level of understanding will be beneficial to the whole campus community," added Smith. MacDougall's job, explained Smith, will be an outward communication effort.

One of MacDougall's duties will consist of being responsible for SAGA's new column. The column will expose SAGA's staff to the students. Human interest and information will be the major themes. Another major factor in having the column, according to Smith, is to have the opportunity to express his gratitude to individuals, organizations, and dorms for the assistance they give to SAGA functions.

Walter Fulmer also assumed one of the new positions, becoming "in essence" an assistant to Fred Smith. Fulmer will take over the day-to-day operations and decisions which will leave Smith with more time for long range planning and administrative duties.

Smith has relinquished his responsibility as food director, dividing it between four managers. He hopes this will increase productivity and eliminating red tape. There will be a food service director at Redstone; one for East Campus, MAT and H/M; one and L/L; and one for main campus.

Smith believes these changes will enable SAGA to provide an improved service to the students and become more responsive to them.

(continued on page eight)

Mallary Rollins Candidates For Presidency

by Margo Howland

After University of Vermont President Dr. Edward C. Andrews announced his resignation, effective June 30, speculation on whom his successor might be quickly centered around two men: U.V.M.'s Academic Vice-President Alfred B. Rollins, and former Congressman Richard Mallary, Republican for Vermont.

Rollins has said he is very much interested, but when Mallary was contacted at his home in Bradford he said that he had not submitted his name to the Board of Trustees for candidacy, nor had he submitted any kind of application.

Mallary, in fact, had no knowledge of Andrews' resignation until he returned from a vacation in Mexico recently. Reacting to the resignation, Mallary said: "I'm personally very much disappointed that Ed Andrews decided to resign; I have admired him personally, and from the point of view of the state and university, I'm sorry to see him go."

Mallary was asked for his reaction on being mentioned as a possible successor to President Andrews.

"I was surprised and flattered, and totally unaware

Richard Mallary — Photo by George Whitehead

Featured This Week

Tom Rush

"Three Sheets In The Wind"

Join The Cynic Staff — see page two

Calendar/Announcements . . . . p. 2
Doctor's Bag . . . . . p. 8
Op. Ed. . . . . p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 11

This paper is recyclable. Call Robinson Hall for more information, 656-3054.

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Sims Gives Free Lecture

An introductory lecture on Transcendental Meditation to be given by Bill Brunelle, VT. Chairman of the Students' International Meditation Society (SIMS), has been scheduled for Wednesday, January 29 at 7:30 p.m. in Billings North Lounge. Transcendental Meditation (TM) is an effortless, non-religious technique which allows the body to gain deep rest by releasing stress. The format of this lecture on TM will be different from those that SIMS has sponsored in the past. Interested students will have the opportunity to have their questions answered not only by Mr. Brunelle, but by other students who practice TM. The lecture is open to the public and they would like to have as many meditators present as possible. This is the first in a series of activities concerned with making SIMS a more active organization on campus. If you would like to become more involved, call Marcelle Blais at 862-7259.

Cynic Goes To Town

Cynic Goes to Town

Starting this issue, the Vermont Cynic will be distributed in downtown Burlington. It is our hope that more people in the community will be able to have access to its reading and in turn more opportunity to react to this university's only newspaper publication.

The paper can be picked up (at no charge) at The Little Professor and at The Corner Bookstore. We encourage public reaction as to where further distribution might be desirable or more convenient.

St. Albans Facility Needs Volunteers

The St. Albans Correctional, Diagnostic, and Treatment Facility is looking for anyone and everyone interested in volunteer work. The facility is a correctional facility for youthful offenders and is seeking people who know a skill or arts and crafts well enough to teach it to a class at the center. Pottery, painting, guitar, macrame, weaving, and tie-dying would be examples of the types of things the youths would be interested in. Also, any entertainers who would like to perform for a night would be welcomed by the facility members. People who could come on a regular basis would be appreciated, but anyone who has time would be welcomed. At present the facility has only three volunteers for the 40 members. Counseling students are encouraged, and students wishing credit for their work have a possibility if they work it out on their own with a professor. Paula Roy, the Volunteer Coordinator, may be reached in the day at 524-6771 or at night at 862-1437.

Sorority Rush

Registration for sorority rush has been going on since Monday and will continue until Friday. Parties will begin January 26. Sign up at the bookstore or Waterman from 10:00 - 2:00.

C&T Holds Auditions

The Department of Communication and Theatre announces open auditions for John Webster's Jacobean Drama, The White Devil, to be performed at the Royall Tyler Theatre March 7 through 11.

The White Devil is a dark tragedy first produced in England in 1612. Based on historical fact, the play concerns the passions, intrigues, and corruptions of court life in Renaissance Italy.

Auditions will be held at the Royall Tyler Theatre at 7 p.m. January 28 and 29. A cast of twenty is needed, of which five are women. Please note that one need not be a theatre student to try out.

Scripts may be signed out at the theatre business office. For further information, please call 656-2095.

UshersWanted

Wanted: More ushers for Lane Series concerts. Contact Lenny Weinstock in 313 Buckham at ext. 2036.

Athletic Event Job Openings

The Office of Sports Information, attached to the Public Relations Office at the University, is seeking student help for the 1975-76 academic year. Preference will be given to current freshmen and sophomores and to work-study applicants. The position, approximately 15-20 hours a week, entail staffing all home athletic events (with some travel to away games), writing of hometown releases, statistical work in basketball and hockey and additional duties in the Office of Public Relations. Interested students should contact the Financial Aid Office or Dick Whittier, Director of Sports Information, Alumni House (x2005).

Fleming Museum

"American Art Since 1945," "Art of the Northwest Coast," and "Recent Gifts to the Museum" are now on display at the Fleming Museum through February 28. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sundays; closed Saturdays and most holidays.

Philosophy Disc.

The John Dewey Philosophy Club will present a discussion featuring Prof. Richard Taylor of the University of Rochester on Monday, January 27 at 8:00 p.m. in room C 166 Living/Learning.

WAR Holds Training Session

Burlington Women Against Rape (WAR) is holding a training session for new volunteers to staff the 24 hour hotline.

Interested women should come to 77 Archibald St., Burlington at 10 a.m., Saturday, January 25.

Vermont law, medical procedures and counseling skills will be on the day's program.

Consumer Exhibit

The Living/Learning Nutrition Program is sponsoring a Consumer Exhibit, February 4-6 in room A-141 of the Living/Learning Center. Hours will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. each day. The exhibit will include displays and projects on various aspects of foods, nutrition, and consumerism. A short film may also be shown, if available.

The exhibit is open to the public as well as the UVM community.

OVP Fair

The Office of Volunteer Programs announces the OVP Fair which is scheduled for February 5 and 6 in Billings North Lounge. Details soon!

Slade Vacancies

Slade Hall, La Maison Francaise, still has four vacancies. Anyone interested, call Simone Suchet. Telephone 656-3389.

Gatekeepers Needed

Gatekeepers for the UVM Ski Carnival at Smuggler's Notch on January 31, Friday, are needed. Gatekeepers will be required to attend a meeting on Thursday, January 30 at 7:30 p.m. in room 118, Patrick Gym, and to work all day on Friday Jan. 31. Gatekeepers will receive a Free day pass for one day of skiing. Students, faculty, and staff who are interested should send their name, address and phone number to: Janice Lange, Southwick Building by Wednesday, January 29. Also indicate whether you have a car.

Lane Tickets

Tickets are on sale for the next Lane Series concert featuring the mezzo soprano Frederica Von Stade, who will appear in the Ira Allen Chapel February 2 at 8 p.m. For reservations call ext. 3418.

WRUV Hockey

WRUV-AM, student radio at UVM broadcasts all home hockey games. The pre-game show, center ice, with Bill Newell and Chris Wallace, starts at 7:15 p.m. Game time is 7:30. WRUV, 580 AM.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 24

Final day of late registration for all students enrolling in day courses.

8 p.m., Opening Night of the production of Ionesco's MACBETT, by University Players. Royall Tyler Theatre. Box Office is Ext. 2094.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films presents "Romeo and Juliet" in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 25

9 a.m. - 3 p.m., Church Street Center presents a quilting workshop with Kay Berger. Details and registration by calling Ext. 4221.

8 p.m., MACBETT, Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office Ext. 2094.

8:30 p.m., The Gay Student Union presents the Unity Players in a benefit performance of "Touchpoint," at Southwick Ballroom, Redstone Campus. The play will be followed by a gay dance. Admission is $1.00 All are welcome. Further information from 862-3955.

9:00 - 2:45 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship offers a Seminar on Christianity, introducting students to the basics of the Orthodox Christian faith. Meets at MAT lounge. All are welcomed.

7:30 p.m. SA Films presents "Stagedoor" with Kathryn Hepburn, 101 Votey. Admission is free.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 26

8 p.m., MACBETT, same as under Jan. 25. The show will also run Jan. 31, Feb.1 and 2.

MONDAY, JANUARY 27

4:10 p.m., Dr. John R. Murphy of Harvard's Biological Labs, presents a seminar entitled, "Studies on the Regulation of Diptheria tox Gene." Held in 105 Marsh Life science Bldg., coffee served at 3:55 p.m. in Rm. 107.

4:15 p.m., Home Economics seminar entitled "Army Clothing, Footwear, and Handwear" presented by Dr. Douglas Swain, Footwear technologist from the U.S. Army Natick Laboratories, Natick, Massachusetts. It will be held in B106 Cook. All are welcome to attend.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents the French classic "Beauty and the Beast" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.

7:30 p.m., meeting for all those interested in applying for the position of Resident Advisor. Simpson Dining Hall.

8 p.m., Dr. Jeremy P. Felt presents a lecture on "Opportunities for Overseas Education" as part of the Cross Cultural Program Lecture Series. Held in D-170 Living/Learning Center.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 28

9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Marine recruitment in Billing's Main Lobby. Continues through Wednesday, Jan. 29.

12 noon, Study habit workshop with Alice D. Outwater as sponsored by the Counseling and Testing Center and held at the Center.

7 p.m., Auditions for the drama, "The White Devil," to be produced by the Dept. of Comm. and Theatre at the Royall Tyler Theatre. For further information, call 656-2095.

7 p.m., Study habit talk with Alice D. Outwater in Wright Hall. All are welcome.

7:15-8:30 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of bible studies on the book of Colossians every Tuesday evening. Meeting place is still tentative but information can be found at the I.V. office on upper floor Billings or by calling Gordon Cook at 863-4089. Visitors welcomed. Discussions encouraged.

7:30 p.m., SA Senate meeting in Billings' Marsh Lounge.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29

9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Marine recruitment in Billings' Main Lobby.

12 noon, an hour of meditation, relaxation and centering with Nancy Koch at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15, Continuation of the Church St. Center's Lunch Bunch Film Series. Call 656-4221 for details.

7 p.m., Auditions for "The White Devil" to be performed March 7 through 11. Held at the Royall Tyler Theatre and for further information, call 656-2095.

7:30 p.m., Energy Conservation meeting sponsored by VPIRG in Billings' Round Room. This organization needs volunteers for its projects. Call 863-3435 or stop by 49 North Prospect for more details.

7:30 p.m., Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg. Featured will be a slide show of a trip to Mt. McKinley.

7:30 p.m., Student International Meditation Society introductory lecture in Billings' North Lounge. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., In Christie Hall main lounge "Project Crash" an informational session on what Project Crash is and what it is trying to accomplish in the state of Vermont.

STUDY ABROAD 1975-76
SUMMER, SEMESTER, YEAR

SUMMER PROGRAM EAST AFRICAN STUDIES (East Africa)

ITALIAN LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE; STUDIO ART AND ART HISTORY (Italy)

MUSIC (Switzerland)

SPANISH INTERMEDIATE LANGUAGE (Spain)

FALL PROGRAMS

SEMESTER IN MEXICO (Arts and Sciences; Latin American Studies)

SEMESTER IN ITALY (Arts and Sciences)

SEMESTER IN THE NETHERLANDS (Human Development; Social Work; Management; Arts and Sciences)

SEMESTER IN SPAIN (Arts and Sciences)

SEMESTER IN FRANCE (Arts and Sciences)

SEMESTER IN ENGLAND (Advertising, Communications, News Writing, Photography, Drama, Art, Teacher Education)

YEAR IN ENGLAND (Art, Architecture)

Write or call for information: Syracuse University, Division of International Programs Abroad, 335 Comstock Avenue, NY 13210, (315) 423-3471.

APPLICATION DEADLINE FOR ALL PROGRAMS: March 1, 1975

U.V.M. NCAA SKI CARNIVAL

SMUGGLERS NOTCH

JAN. 27- FEB. 1

CONDOMINIUM TYPE LODGING-
$8.00 PER PERSON PER NIGHT FOR GROUPS OF 12 OR MORE " LIMITED LODGING AVAIBLE "

LIFTS- $7 with discount pass $8 without discount pass if staying in village

SMUGGLERS NOTCH SKI CARNIVAL JAN.27- FEB. 2

JAN. 27-30 U.S.A. FREESTYLE TRIALS & ELIMINATION CONTEST
MON. 27- 10:00 AM MOGUL QUALIFICATIONS 1:30 PM BALLET QUALIFICATIONS
TUES. 28 9:30 AM AERIAL QUALIFICATIONS BOOGIE NIGHT- SKI FLICKS 9:00-1:00 DOWNPOUR ADMISSION $1.00- BASELODGE
WED. 29 10:00 AM MOGUL & BALLET ELIMINATION CONTEST
DEMONSTRATION TEAM — DEMONSTRATION- ALITALIA GIRLS SKI TEAM
(R) T-SHIRT CONTEST DOWNPOUR IN BASELODGE 9:00-1:00 $1.00 SKI PRIZES
THURS. 30- 9:30 am AERIAL ELIMINATION CONTEST
1:00 to 2:00 FASHION SHOW BLACK BEAR LOUNGE- ALITALIA GIRLS TEAM

FRI. 31- U.V.M. NCAA SKI CARNIVAL
ALPINE EVENTS FOR MEN AND WOMEN ALL DAY
SAT.1- MOUSTACHE CUP RACE 1:00 PM SKI PRIZES TO BE AWARDED REGISTRATION FRONT DESK OF BASE LODGE
SUN. 2- U.V.M. COLLEGIATE SKI RACE

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon

COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

SR50	149.95	129.00
SR10	69.95	49.95
SR11	79.95	67.95
SR16	99.95	87.95

Must Have This Coupon

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by 85 Associate Stores
Burlington - Essex - Barre-Montpelier

iamond wedding ensembles — created for the girl who can't say "NO."

PRICES START UNDER $100.00

YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT

F.J. PRESTON & SON Inc.

Join the C

The Vermont Cynic needs more writers on its staff. All departments including news, features, sports, columns, layout, and arts and entertainment could use the bolstering of new writers.

If you have any experience, talk with an interesting individual, witness an event, learn about an organization, or have an opinion on current events, write about it for the Cynic.

Many complain that our student newspaper at UVM is incomplete or inadequate. The reason is largely that we do not have a sizable staff from which to draw information and put it into print. T... become the vi... own apathy.

It goes with... the best way to ... things is to ... yourself from t... are making de... something of pu...

The proces... one of the ... organize gather... for one's own ... as for the ... reading publ... writing is a ... thinking throug... editorial in log... good practice ... oneself clearly ...

Meetings For R.A. Appl...

The Department of Residential Life is presently preparing to select interested students for the position of Resident Assistant for the 1975-76 academic year. As you probably are already aware, the Resident Assistant lives on a floor with students and serves them in any number of administrative and counseling functions, and in programming educational and social activities.

Any student on or off campus who is interested in applying for ... Resident Assi... one of the fo... Monday, Janu... Dining Hall, ... Tuesday, ... Harris-Millis ... p.m.

A... bo... application ... distributed a... process ... wi... Applicants ... opportunity ... about job ... the Resident ...

VPIRG Project... Need Volunt...

Vermont Public Interest Research Group, needs volunteers for its Energy Conservation projects. There are various levels of involvement, depending on what your interests are or on the amount of time and effort you are willing to spend. A simple but important project is putting up light switch messages.

Anothe... commercia... their use ... energy con... they have ... VPIRG at ... stop in at ... There wi... Conserva... Billings on ... in the Rou...

Newman C...

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday, 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday 9 and 11:30 a.m., 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

WEEKDAY MASS SCHEDULE: Monday through Friday 4:15 p.m. Also, Tuesday, at 10 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and anytime by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: At the Center, Monday through Friday at 7:30 a.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday. The choir sings at the Center's 4:15 Sunday Mass, and is open to new membership.

BASIC CATHOLICISM: A new series begins this semester. It will be held every Monday evening at 7:15

SCRIPTURE SERIES: with Fr. Crowley continues to be held Tuesdays from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

SOCIAL JUSTICE: A new series is being planned for this semester. If anyone has any suggestions to offer and/or would like to participate in the program, please contact Fr. Crowley or Sr. Lindora.

LEAP PROGRAM: The Leap is a weekend experience in building Christian community for men and women between the ages of 18 ... and 23. ... new year ... the end ... interested ... about ... interested ... applicatio... Lindora...

H...

There ... Brunch ... 26, start... House, ... donatio... brunch ... Dept. of ... "Impres... Israel in ... The ... Spring ... follow sh...

yarn cellar

YARN SALE

Bantuk Knitting Worsted	$1.49
Berella 4 Knitting Worsted	$1.59
Winsom Sport Yarn	.89
Selected Crewel Kits	20% off

at
THE ROYAL
96 CHURCH ST.

Join the Cynic Staff

The Vermont Cynic needs more writers on its staff. All departments including news, features, sports, columns, layout, and arts and entertainment could use the bolstering of new writers.

If you have any experience, talk with an interesting individual, witness an event, learn about an organization, or have an opinion on current events, write about it for the Cynic.

Many complain that our student newspaper at UVM is incomplete or inadequate. The reason is largely that we do not have a sizable staff from which to draw information and put it into print. Thus students become the victims of their own apathy.

It goes without saying that the best way to find out about things is to find out for yourself from the people who are making decisions or doing something of public interest.

The process of writing is one of the best ways to organize gathered information for one's own thought as well as for the benefit of the reading public. Journalistic writing is an exercise in thinking through a story or an editorial in logical detail. It is good practice for expressing oneself clearly and concisely.

A reporter has the freedom to explore areas of his/her own interest without fear of censorship.

The layout staff welcomes all new members. They're the people who put the paper together in the form which is sent to the printers. If you are interested in participating with the Cynic, come to the introductory meeting on Monday, January 27, at 6:30 in the Billings Round Room.

If you can't make it to the meeting, come down to the Cynic office any time. You are always welcome.

LaCrosse Club Sponsors Benefit Dance

There will be a benefit dance for the UVM LaCrosse Club this Friday, Jan. 24, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the MAT Dining Hall featuring the Slipstream band. Admission is reasonable; you even get change from your dollar.

The Slipstream band is composed of two UVM students, Peter Hansen (guitars) and Richard Spar (drums), and three local musicians, Jim Basque (bass), David Houston (keyboards), and Kevin Healy (guitars). All five members have at one time or another been associated with the Experimental Program, which has witnessed the metamorphosis of the band. The band has a unique sound, drawing from influences of country and western, jazz, rhythm and blues, and rock music.

Previously in the Burlington area, the Slipstream Band has played at the Old Board, the Red Dog, and the Sting. Come listen to what they can do with the medium, Friday evening at the LaCrosse Dance, MAT Dining Hall.

Employment Interviews Schedule

The spring semester on-campus interview program for graduating students, both seniors and graduate students will take place in the Career Planning and Placement Office, Mansfield House beginning January 27, 1975.

The following employers will be conducting employment interviews:

United States Marine Corps - Tues. Jan 28 and Wed. Jan 29, Billings Center; Deering Milliken, Inc. – Fri. Jan. 31; International Paper Company – Fri. Jan. 31; Defense Contract Audit Agency – Mon. Feb. 3.

General Dynamics – Mon. Feb. 3; CAPSON – Mon. Feb. 3; S.S. Kresge Co. – Tues. Feb. 4; Mutual of New York (MONY) – Tues. Feb. 4; Burroughs Wellcome Co. – Wed. Feb. 5; Norton Co. – Wed. Feb. 5.

Regional Administrator of Nat'l. Banks – Wed. Feb. 5; Firestone – Thurs. Feb. 6 and Fri. Feb. 7; Burroughs Wellcome Co. – Fri. Feb. 7; Hartford Insurance Co. – Fri. Feb. 7; Gordon and Sherman – Fri. Feb. 7.

Haskins and Sells – Mon. Feb. 10; Factory Mutual Engineering Assoc. – Tues. Feb. 11; Royal-Globe Insurance Co. – Tues. Feb. 11; State Mutual of America – Tues. Feb. 11; Agway - Career Night - Thurs. Feb. 13; Arthur Young & Co. – Fri. Feb. 14; Paul Revere Life Insurance Co. – Thurs. Feb. 20.

UTE Sylvania – Thurs. Feb. 20; Texaco, Inc. Thurs. Feb. 20 Touche Ross & Co. – Fri. Feb. 21; National Security Agency – Mon. Feb. 24; ACTION – Tues., Wed., Thurs., Feb. 25, 26, 27.

Grand Union Co. – Wed. Feb. 26; Northwestern Mutual Ins. Co. – Thurs. Feb. 27; Stone & Webster Engineering Corp. – Thurs. Feb. 27; Hannaford Bros. Corp. – Fri. Feb. 28; Jordan Marsh Co. – Wed. Mar. 5; Diamond International Corp. – Fri. Mar. 7.

Data General Corp. – Mon. Mar. 10; Abraham & Straus – Tues. Mar. 11; Burroughs Corp. – Tues. Mar. 11; Xerox Corp. – Tues. Mar. 11; Aetna Life & Casualty – Wed. Mar. 12; Hartford Hospital – Mon. Mar. 17.

Employment interviews for the week of January 28 - 31: Jan. 28 – United States Marine Corps - Billings Center. January 29 - U. S. Marine Corp. Billings Center. January 31 - Deering Milliken, Inc. Seeks all majors, citizenship required. To work in Saint, Marketing, Designing. Must be willing to work in New York City. January 31- International Paper Co. Seeks Bachelors: ME, EE, CE. Citizenship required.

Signing up for the first week of interviews will be Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, January 20, 21, 22. A schedule of the program is available in the Career Planning and Placement Office.

Students wishing to set up credential files may obtain registration material in the Placement Office. A credential file may be used in pursuit of Graduate Admission as well as for job placement. Larry Simmons, Director of Placement, or staff members will be happy to assist you with questions concerning the Interview Program or any other aspect of Career Planning.

Meetings For R.A. Applicants

The Department of Residential Life is presently preparing to select interested students for the position of Resident Assistant for the 1975-76 academic year. As you probably are already aware, the Resident Assistant lives on a floor with students and serves them in any number of administrative and counseling functions, and in programming educational and social activities.

Any student on or off campus who is interested in applying for the position of Resident Assistant must attend one of the following meetings: Monday, January 27- Simpson Dining Hall, 7:30 p.m., or Tuesday, January 28- Harris-Millis Dining Hall, 7:30 p.m.

At both meetings, application materials will be distributed and the interview process will be explained. Applicants will also have the opportunity to learn more about job responsibilities of the Resident Assistant.

Utah Phillips To Return To Simpson Coffee House

The Simpson Hall Coffee House series of Folk Concerts starts off this semester with "old timey" music featuring the Vermont Arm and Hammer String band.

Familiar to many people in northern Vermont through their appearances at festivals and dances, the musicians in this string band share a lot of related interests on stage including sea chanties and ballads, Irish and Scottish dance tunes and drinking songs from various parts of Great Britain.

Peter Sunderland plays fiddle, Gerry Falkenberg plays banjo, and Joel Eckhaus and Sid Blum play mandolin and guitar. Throughout the evening, it is not unusual for them to swap instruments and pick up an autoharp, tenor banjo, penny whistle or hammered dulcimer. In the spring, the band is planning an Appalachian tour with the Barking Rooster Theater of Plainfield, Vt.

Tentatively scheduled for the rest of the semester at the coffeehouse are Kenny Hall from California, Martin "Blind Ethnic Pig Meat" Grosswendt from Massachusetts, Jim Brewer from Mississippi and return engagements by Utah Phillips, Jim Ringer, and Bodie Wagner.

Showtime tonight for the Vermont Arm and Hammer String Band is 8:30 and admission is only 75 cents.

For more information call Simpson Hall Resident Advisor Wayne Bayer at Extension 3307.

Commencement Program

Friday, May 16, 1975
9 a.m. Ira Allen Chapel
College of Agriculture
School of Home Economics
School of Natural Resources
1 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel
College of Education and Social Services
4 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel
College of Engineering, Mathematics, and Business Administration

Saturday, May 17, 1975
10 a.m. Ira Allen Chapel
School of Allied Health Sciences
School of Nursing
2 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel
College of Medicine

Sunday, May 18, 1975
10 a.m. Ira Allen Chapel
Graduate College
2 p.m. Patrick Gymnasium
College of Arts and Sciences

VPIRG Projects Need Volunteers

Vermont Public Interest Research Group needs volunteers for its Energy Conservation projects. There are various levels of involvement, depending on what your interests are or on the amount of time and effort you are willing to spend. A simple but important project is putting up light switch messages.

Another is surveying commercial concerns about their uses of energy, and energy conservation measures they have taken. Contact VPIRG at 863-3435, or please stop in at 49 North Prospect. There will be an Energy Conservation meeting at Billings on January 29, at 7:30 in the Round Room.

Billings Announces Information Service

In the interest of providing a better and more complete service to the students, the Student Activities office is expanding its Information Desk in the Main Lobby to include the sale of convenience items. Open from 8 a.m.-11 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. - 10:30 p.m. on Saturday, and 2 - 10:30 p.m. on Sunday, the new Information and Sales desk will be the only sales desk on campus open both evenings and weekends selling such items as newspapers, cigarettes, bookstore items (notebooks, pens and pencils, etc.), candy, and tickets to S. A. Films and speaker presentations.

Normal Information Desk services (total campus information, change for the IBM copier, ride-board information, ditto copies, apartment listings, etc.) will also be provided and we encourage any and all suggestions, comments or complaints to be either called in on Extension 2068 or sent in through The Exchange.

Billings Spring Schedule

Billings Center operating schedule, Spring Semester, 1975
Monday through Friday – 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. (Sales Desk: 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.)
Saturday – 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.
Sunday – 2:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m.
The Catamount Den will reopen for normal hours on Wednesday, January 15.
Catamount Den operating schedule, Spring Semester, 1975
Monday through Friday – 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.
Saturday – Closed
Sunday – Closed (unless there is sufficient student protest)

Newman Center

WEEKEND MASS SCHEDULE: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday 9 and 11:30 a.m., 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

WEEKDAY MASS SCHEDULE: Monday through Friday 4:15 p.m. Also, Tuesday, at 10 p.m.

CONFESSIONS: Before weekend Masses and anytime by appointment.

MORNING PRAYER: At the Center, Monday through Friday at 7:30 a.m.

CHOIR PRACTICE: 7:30 p.m. every Tuesday. The choir sings at the Center's 4:15 Sunday Mass, and is open to new membership.

BASIC CATHOLICISM: A new series begins this semester. It will be held every Monday evening at 7:15.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: with Fr. Crowley continues to be held Tuesdays from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

SOCIAL JUSTICE: A new series is being planned for this semester. If anyone has any suggestions to offer and/or would like to participate in the program, please contact Fr. Crowley or Sr. Lindora.

LEAP PROGRAM: The Leap is a weekend experience in building Christian community for men and women between the ages of 18 and 25. The first Leap of the new year will be held towards the end of February. Anyone interested in knowing more about the program or interested in filling out an application, please contact Sr. Lindora.

Hillel

There will be a Fireside Brunch on Sunday, January 26, starting at 11 a.m. at Hillel House, 389 College St. ($.50 donation.) Following the brunch Professor M. Stoler, Dept. of History, will report on "Impressions from a Visit to Israel in Dec., 1974."

The Hillel Program for the Spring Semester 1975 will follow shortly.

We fill all our prescriptions at Discount Prices
Compare our prices with anyone
Grandway Pharmacy
Grandway Shopping Center
Shelburne Road
864-6869

WE KNOW YOUR TYPE...
You're long on taste - you've got a great eye and a flair for the good life
So head down College Street to the sign bennington potters NORTH where you can afford good design at reasonable cost:
★ mugs for $1.00
★ wine glasses from 80¢
★ baskets from $1.50
★ wooden salad bowls, $3.50
★ chopsticks 10¢ a pair
★ candles, $1.25
★ placemats, 60¢ each
★ planters from $2.00
and canning jars, watering cans, collanders, coloring books, casseroles, coffee pots, cherry pitters, pasta makers, pepper mills, puppets, frying pans, whisks, woks, and especially, the full range of famous Bennington pottery, all at bargain prices
bennington potters NORTH
127 college street, downtown burlington

yarn cellar
YARN SALE
Bantuk Knitting Worsted $1.49
Borella 4 Knitting Worsted $1.59
Winsom Sport Yarn .89
Selected Crewel Kits 20% off
at
THE ROYAL
96 CHURCH ST.

FREE SKIING

You will recieve ONE DAY'S FREE SKIING at SMUGGLER'S NOTCH SKI AREA with the purchase of any new pair of downhill skis at THE ALPINE SHOP!

SKIS BY:
ROSSIGNOL
K2
OLIN
HEAD DYNAMIC
VOLKL
KNEISSEL
DYNASTAR
ELAN
NORTHLAND
A&T YAMAHA
FISCHER
BEST SELECTION OF SKI EQUIPMENT IN VERMONT
ALL LAST SEASON'S SKIS AND BOOTS
ROSSIGNOL, KNEISSEL DURAFIBER, VOLKL, YAMAHA
NORDICA, LANGE, TECHNICA, KOFLACH, RIEKER
UP TO 60% OFF
USED SKIS AND USED BOOTS
70 pair
52 pair
$5 UP
ALPINE SHOP
1184 Williston Rd., So. Burlington
OPEN 9A.M. to 9P.M.

diamond wedding ensembles — created for the girl who can't say "NO."
RINGS START UNDER $100.00
YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT
J. PRESTON & SON INC.

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1983

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Wells '76
News Editor . . . . . Kathy Stannard '77
Assistant News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer '77
Features Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Tanner '76
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bodi '77
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

Billings Center Over-Used And Abused

The ding-donging of pinball machines has cast an exclamation point to a problem we can no longer ignore. To wit, this problem cries out loudly in the form of the ever mounting abuse of Billings Center.

It is undeniable that this university is in sore want of a student center. The need for a common forum for students, teachers, and members of the community is a vital one.

But to expect a masterpiece of design and workmanship such as Billings Center to withstand the rigorous and unyielding traffic which passes through its doors everyday is clearly a needless act of destruction to an irreplacable building. Indeed, the physical traffic reflected by the stairs alone – layed bare of varnish by countless pairs of trudging feet – has become an immeasurable threat to this work of wood and stone.

Realistically, the functions of a student center cannot be expected to be fulfilled in a building neither designed for that purpose nor capable of handling the thousands of people that use Billings Center every day.

The question becomes "What balance should Billings Center reach as both a landmark and a college union?" To give Billings Center up for the sake of preservation is clearly not the answer. But removing the amusement park facade and further limiting the food service would be a step in the right direction.

There can remain very few of us not somehow touched by the enchantment of Billings Center. It is time we stopped abusing what surely remains this university's most beloved building.

W.K.

Ripped Off Posters

To the Editor:

Regarding my exhibition of photographs in the Royall Tyler Theatre, that opened Sunday, Jan. 19:

To announce the exhibit to the student body, I placed about 25 posters around the UVM campus. Some were taken very soon thereafter, in a partial check that I made:

A poster placed in the bookstore on Saturday, Jan. 11, was still there on Tuesday but had been stolen by Wednesday. Two posters placed inside the front doors of Williams Hall and the Old Mill on Tuesday were gone on Thursday.

These posters cost me $92 for 125, or about $.75 apiece. They were designed by my wife, Carol, and are unusually beautiful things. Despite the cost, I consider them expendable, of course, and will be glad for appreciative persons to take them down for me, when the exhibit is over.

I am perfectly sympathetic with those who want to collect these remarkable posters. When I was in school, I felt like that, too, only I thought it would be unfair to remove them so soon as to nullify their intended purpose. So now, I do not use the phrase, "ripped off;" they were stolen, in the full meaning of the word. And the stealing represents something of a financial hardship on me, because I do not expect to profit from this exhibition, but do want as many persons in the community, and on campus, to see it as possible.

Those who might argue that, if they themselves did not steal the posters, someone else would, can be answered by saying that an individual is responsible only for himself/herself, and if everyone were to live by that rule, there would be a great deal less misery in the world.

Those who enjoy the posters so much that they are afraid to wait until the exhibition is over should consider the 80-some posters placed elsewhere around town, which will be of no use to me after the exhibit closes.

Sincerely,
Fred G. Hill

Letters To The Editor

Pig Sty !

To the Editor:

Students are disgusting and disrespectful. Day in and day out they (and some faculty) use the den facilities and leave it like a pig-sty. They leave cups and plates strewn about the tables for the janitors to clean. Janitors are not here to pick up the shit students pile on the tables.

I do not find it particularly enjoyable to sit down at a table ready to eat a delicious den delicacy only to find a half eaten egg salad sandwich staring me in the face. And that's not all. The sandwich is garnished with ashes and cold coffee.

I think its about time that students grew up and cleaned their own mess. Although maybe they miss having their mothers clean up after them. If that's the case, maybe the janitors could tuck them in at night also.

Sincerely,
Name Withheld

UVM Policy Rubberstamping

To the Editor:

The Office of Development and External Affairs has responded to the budget problem at the University of Vermont by completing its hiring of a Director of Development from out-of-state, and it has deleted two staff positions and thus employment for two-long time employees.

At one time, it may have been expedient to have had an additional position of Director of Development, but this should have been considered as part of the responsibilities of the person filling the Vice Presidency of Development and External Affairs when it was created and filled not more than a year and half ago.

Now, the current financial crisis at the university makes it illogical, unwise, ill-timed and unfair to eliminate positions of those who have served the university long and well in favor of filling positions from outside the institution.

If a competent fund raiser is now needed, it would make more sense to replace the high salaried position of Vice President with a highly paid Director of Development, if possible, promoted from within the university; this would save a job and a large salary!

Unless you agree these actions are the administration's best answers and policies to the budget problems at UVM, then we'd better get busy and make certain the vacant positions of President and trustees (2) are filled by a different caliber individual.

Senator Aiken is right when he suggested the example should be set at the top levels in financial responsibility by the president, vice-president, etc., taking cuts in salary first.

Definitely, the UVM policies have been "rubberstamped" too long, and it is time for change. Evidently, the current UVM President feels the same way...

Joy P. Haslam,
Staff Associate,
UVM Development

Brick-a-Brack

To the Editor:

We would like to extend our sincere gratitude to the UVM community and community at large. We have stonewalled the brick problem. Brickism is our greatest enemy. Brick Brother is watching you. His gaze is like cold stone.

Once again, the public outcry rides with the hand of justice, storming the castles of "democratic" tyranny. The walls crumble, laying bricks in their wake.

Our letter of several weeks ago pointing out the extreme complexities of the brick problem, brought about a thunderous response from the land. Bwana is pleased. Brick Brother is not so pleased. He hoped to conquer, to follow in Bonaparte's shoes. Perhaps. But the world is not ready for a Brickaparte. A Brick-a- part is a world apart. A world apart would Brick us all. Napoleon is gone. Solid Brick is the thing. Solid!

Remember America, a Brick in every pot.

Sincerely,
Ernest T. Bass
President,
Save Our Bricks
(SOB)

VPIRG: Capital Watch

by Peter Cobb, VPIRG Staff

Often many very important bills fail to make news because they do not effect that many people. Two such examples are a judicial procedure bill, H. 57, which is being introduced by Representative Shea of Winooski and a bill concerning "illegitimate" birth, H. 9, which is being introduced by Representative Jarret of Burlington.

Here then is a look at these bills:

H. 57 was introduced to amend the procedure for sealing of juvenile records. If passed it would give convicted juvenile delinquents a chance to erase the deliquent stigma from their record. According to the bill if two years have elapsed since the youth's conviction, and he or she has not been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor since the conviction, "all files and records of the state's attorneys, law enforcement agencies and [illegible] shall be destroyed."

This bill also gives a young person who has reached the age of sixteen the right to petition the court for immediate sealing of all files and records when good cause is shown. This gives a convicted delinquent a chance to obtain a job without being discriminated against.

Presently H. 57 has been referred to the House Judiciary Committee. Members of the committee include Meeker of Waterbury, Jarrett of Burlington, Morse of Calais, Vance of Danville, Dewey of Stowe, Ketcham of Middlebury, May of Springfield, Robinson of Colchester, Shiman of Milton, Silver of Bennington, and Spates of Newport.

H. 9 focuses on illegitimate birth, and the bill's purpose is to provide for the issuance of a new birth certificate in cases where an individual's certification bears the word "illegitimate."

"Illegitimate birth" is a needlessly oppressive term that should not be an accepted part of our legal terminology. Regardless of whether a child was born in or out of wedlock, all children have the right not to be labeled with such a vulgar term.

Any attempt to abandon the use of the word is welcomed.

H. 9 has been referred to the Health and Welfare Committee whose members include Austin of Newport, Redroff of Springfield, Baker of Randolph, Osborn of Barre, Regan of St. Albans, Ash of Williamstown, Chaloux of St. Johnsbury, Christowe of Dover, Curtis of Charlotte, McGregor of Colchester and Niquette of Winooski.

Any citizen interested in either of the above bills is urged to writed to their local representative and to a member of the committee that has been assigned the bill. Also letters to local newspapers provide greater visibility to the issue.

An Open Letter To UVM Students and Faculty

by Dave Ross
Coordinator, VVAW/WSO

At noon on Monday, members of VVAW/WSO and our friends will be picketing at the Federal Building and meeting with representatives of the government to demand strict implementation of the Peace Agreements and amnesty for war resisters. We will also be visiting the offices of Vermont's Congressman and Senators to forcefully raise these demands. We ask you to share our concern and outrage over the continuing war and the need for a real amnesty by joining with us.

We are now entering a very important period in the struggle to end the war in Indochina. The organized actions of millions of Americans combined with the courageous and determined efforts of the Indochina Peoples forced Nixon to sign the Peace Agreements and withdraw the troops. Continued action has forced Congress to cut military aid to the corrupt dictatorships of Thieu and Lon Nol nearly in half. However, the war continues with the same intensity because Nixon's hand picked successor, Gerald Ford, has refused to honor the treaty, and Congress continues to finance the killing – over a million dead, and untold millions of refugees in the last two years since "peace with honor..."

Ford is asking the new Congress for $300 million in supplimental military aid for Saigon and Phnom Penh. To use an old term, we must make it "perfectly clear" that we will not tolerate the passage of this supplimental death bill, and that we want all aid to these corrupt and unpopular regimes terminated so that this unjust war can be ended once and for all. Besides, spending millions of dollars a year on these two bit dictatorships is ludicrous at a time when our economy is coming apart at the seams, largely due to the inflation already generated by two decades of deficit spending in support of these perverted causes.

Great progress has also been made in the struggle for universal, unconditional amnesty. Ford, through his punitive earned re-entry program, has clearly acknowledged the significance of amnesty as an issue. The failure of his abortive effort to diffuse the growing movement for a real and meaningful amnesty is amply demonstrated by the fact that less than one per cent of those eligible for his phoney "amnesty" have accepted it. Resistance to the war was just and honorable – the war resisters cannot accept anything less than a real amnesty without completely compromising the beliefs that originally led to their resistance. They are counting on us to support them in this struggle, for it is our struggle as well. I think it is also important for us to remember that those who said "No" to the war were the ones who first effectively raised the issue of our involvement in Indochina, and that it was their efforts which led to the building of the antiwar movement.

We cannot expect to rise to the demands of the future unless we are first willing to deal with the injustices of the present – injustices which are perhaps best exemplified by the continuing war in Indochina and the need for amnesty. We are truly the makers of history. Even if many of our actions seem at times to be small or even futile, we must remember that it is the sum total of all of our actions which create the future. In asking you to share our concern and sense of obligation, we are also asking you to acknowledge your own. We urge you to join with us on Monday in celebrating the second anniversary of the signing of the Paris Peace Agreements by raising demands to "Honor the Peace Agreements /End All Aid to Thieu and Lon Nol" and for "Universal, Unconditional Amnesty for All War Resisters." We sincerely hope you will stand and be counted.

What Are The Bids For An 'A' ?

by Ed Pierson,

(Editor's note: Ed Pierson is a writer for the University of Denver "Clarion".)

(CPS) – Come exam time, most students throw away idealistic notions of learning and bear down on the real business of school: grades.

An economics professor at Denver University capitalized on this competitive syndrome by injecting some free market theory into his class last quarter. He sold grades to the highest bidder

Professor Mike Rock raked in almost $2000 in a grade auction where the average A went for $85, B for $55, and C for $35.

Nearly 90% of the students present in the class participated in the auction of grades right up until the day after the bidding when the professor revealed that it was a hoax.

In a recent interview, Rock said, "In retrospect, I wish I hadn't done it, precisely because it was so depressing to see how easy it is to manipulate students."

The bizarre tale unfolded like this.

One day last quarter the economics professor walked into class and said, "Look, you people have won... I'm going to sell grades. Grades will go to the highest bidder. If you people are so happy with the market process, why don't we just let the market dictate who gets what."

Rock told the class he would sell a certain number of A's, B's, C's, and D's, that payment was due within three days and that those who didn't want to buy grades had the option of taking a "withdraw passing" (WP) grade.

An impartial auctioneer, another faculty member, was brought in by Rock as he told students that he himself could not "in good conscience" sell the grades. The auctioneer stood up in fropt of the class and began, "What are the bids for an A?" The first bid was $45. The bidding went on and the grades were all sold.

Several members of the class objected to the selling of grades and proceeded to go to the department chairman, dean of the business school and acting dean of student life.

Some objected to the proposed grading system mainly because it was not in the original contract of the class. Others said that it was blackmail to pay for the class twice.

One business student argued that by paying the $300 tuition for the class he was entitled to at least a C.

Another business major who consulted a lawyer, said that he was not opposed to the selling of grades as long as it was "student initiated," but was opposed to the fact that Rock told them they had to buy grades. That was "coercion," he said.

One other shrewd business student, noting that a number of students were absent from the auction, bought up all of the C's and D's. He planned to advertise them in the campus newspaper and sell them at a profit.

While he didn't advertise, the student did spend 15 minutes in class the day after the auction trying to sell the grades at a 300% profit.

After paying $86 in cash for an A, another student asked Rock, "Do you think you're going to get another teaching job in this country? You're going to be blackballed from every university in the country."

Students in the class were so convinced that Rock was serious that many stopped studying for the final exam and others tore up their papers.

On the last day of class, Rock explained that he had not been serious. "How could you be so absurd as to believe you could get away with something like this?" he asked them.

When asked why he believed Rock, one student answered, "Look, you're an authority figure and as an authority figure we take what you say at face value."

Another member of the class, after hearing it was all a hoax, tried to keep Rock to his contract and force the money on him. "We made a contract yesterday," he argued. "Here's my $80. I want my A!"

Rock noted that no one attempted to obtain a WP in the class, that ultimately the money made no difference in the grading, and all the money was returned. Only $86 in cash was actually collected. The remainder was in the form of notes.

"It's so easy to convince students of almost anything," said Rock. "My God, if that's education, then the educational system is more messed up than I thought it was."

Explaining his reasons for initiating the scheme, Rock said, "For nine weeks I attempted to engage the students in a dialogue, which most of them refused to be engaged in."

"I would have thought everything I did for those nine weeks would have led them to believe that I'd be the last person in the world to sell them grades."

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

©COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-BOX 9611-BERKELEY, CA 94709

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arias, George Georgakis, Andy Morse, Audrey Rothstein, Mark Sawyer, Steve Rice, Elliott Freeman
SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Claude Grace, Rick Katz.
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajemian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pem Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins, Stephen W. Tanner.
PRODUCTION: Joan Forsith, Karen Hill, Madeline Iatrandates, Beth LeVine, Eileen Driscoll, Ricky McGuilicuddy
ARTS: Sari Bodi, Robert Deslile, Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Jon Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Prior, Marsha Wolutz
ADVERTISING: Rothstein Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Stacey Gassner, Debbie Powell
COLUMNISTS: Debbie Adler, Tom McCormick, Scott McKay,
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shmalk

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for entries is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

New Leaders In Ver

by Paul Cain

The Vermont State House of Repre undergone some changes in leadership that shou effectiveness in the current legislative session; a the state. The trend for new leaders wa remarkably in the election of Timothy O'Conn the house.

O'Conner, Democratic representative fro became the first Democrat to be elected to th although the Republicans held a membership on the first ballot. To have a member of the elected to a position of power such as Speaker which directs the setting up of committees, sh change among the new members and dissen established majority party.

In previous years the House of Repr considered to be a legislative body dom Republican Party. Vermont has always bee state and a vast majority of Republicans in the presence in positions of power was commonpla session, in breaking from that tradition, is a directions in Vermont politics.

Leadership and unity will have to be legislature is to deal effectivly with the pro now beset with. It will take a strong, decis Vermont out of economic difficulty and le

The First In A Seri

by Elliot Freeman

The light was making its way with difficu moon that was perched like a funky chic summer night sky, through the smog, buildings and poles and wires and signs, pas drunken gang of boys and finally into the room apartment located in the diseased h California. The meager thread of light manag to barely illuminate the face of a small crouched by the window, and then pooled circle on the floor and died ... drowned by hot white eye-aching light poured down fro hung and swung slightly in the middle of t ceiling.

Kleras Bell was thinking that maybe it w full moon on his body and mind that w from falling into the peaceful valley of a admission into the soft-seated air-cond dreamland and forcing him to remain in th consciousness. He had heard of the mo of cans of the world, on the sanity of m over the past four or five months that his into an ugly garden of pimples whenever moon wore an ominous shit-eating grin.

But he was just playing a game, for behind his insomnia and exactly wh Dismissing this train of thought down an mind, he picked a towel off the floor an of his face and chest. Pretty much win catch his breath and for the most part u the musty air that filled his lungs forcing burp and to suffer.

For two hours, that is from ten-thirt off his clothes down to a pair of pin gotten into bed, up until about five mi been involved in a strange energy dr violent) wrestling match with a red and bed sheet. The red and white and bl pinned him three times. In an act of sup is intensely powerful considering his pounds), ripped the red and white and incredibly small shreds.

Kleras stood up and walked to an al that sat on a wooden fruit crate night Taking a man thirsty swig of the lusty b late that someone, most likely himself had used the open can as an ashtray. A f and sputtering removed all the soggy b tobacco from his mouth.

"Worst night in a long time." Kle towards a big wooden rocking chair. He before sitting down, rubbing his stoma and gently snapping the elastic of hi thumb of his left. Although the size o feel three times smaller than his ac enjoyed the rather titilating sensation a giant bosom while rocking slowly in th Rolling to and fro, Kleras digested t sleep was beyond him.

Running his fingers through hi whistling "Summertime" ... pretending the Heart of Dixie sitting on a big c niggers Happy and Slappy dancing ar twilight shade of the sad weeping willo fantasy deciding that in this time of r and robbers he would be wise to confi subjects that were a bit more tasteful.

His thoughts turned to alternative entered his mind, perhaps a late nig Looking around the room Kleras di that his set was missing. Destroyed a been to the end of his rope and force toothpaste commercial that asked in YOUR LOVE LIFE?" His love life television set lay in pieces on the s the window. So much for that. He his temper and now regretted his actio

The apartment offered little as concerned. There was a radio in worked for years. A thin black snak from the wall and coiled around a been disconnected two days earlier pay in full an exorbutant phone bil twenty three cents. He had sent the order for twenty three cents.

Various books tempted Kleras literary escape, intellectual amuserm of broadening his horizons, but th brain warned him of the inevitable f

There was a knock at the door. might be his salvation.

"Ah yes ... who is there?"
"It's me, Dolores."

ers

Editor

Pig Sty !

...and staring me in the face. And that's not all. The sandwich is furnished with mayo and cold coffee.

I think its about time that students grew up and cleaned their own mess. Although maybe they miss having their mothers clean up after them. If that's the case, maybe the janitors could tuck them in at night also.

Sincerely,

Name Withheld

...licy Rubberstamping

...salaried position of Vice President with a highly paid Director of Development, if possible, promoted from within the university; this would save a job and a large salary!

Unless you agree these actions are the administration's best answers and policies to the budget problems at UVM, then we'd better get busy and make certain the vacant positions of President and trustees (2) are filled by a different caliber individual.

Senator Aiken is right when he suggested the example should be set at the top levels in financial responsibility by the president, vice-president, etc., taking cuts in salary first.

Definitely, the UVM policies have been "rubberstamped" too long, and it is time for change. Evidently, the current UVM President feels the same way...

Joy P. Haslam,
Staff Associate,
UVM Development

...'A' ?

...papers.
...of class, Rock explained that he had not ...could you be so absurd as to believe you ...something like this?" he asked them.
...he believed Rock, one student answered, ...authority figure and as an authority figure ...ey at face value."
...er of the class, after hearing it was all a ...Rock to his contract and force the money ...a contract yesterday," he argued. "Here's ...A!"
...at so one attempted to obtain a WP in the ...tely the money made no difference in the ...money was returned. Only $86 in cash was ...The remainder was in the form of notes.
...convince students of almost anything," said ...if that's education, then the educational ...med up than I thought it was."
...reasons for initiating the scheme, Rock said, ...I attempted to engage the students in a ...ost of them refused to be engaged in."
...e thought everything I did for those nine ...e led them to believe that I'd be the last ...d to tell them grades."

...welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and ...interested students, faculty, and members of ... All material must be submitted no later than ...before the Thursday of publication. Material ... names will be withheld upon request. If you ...writing or perhaps curious about how things ...n – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or

...RMONT CYNIC

...Arias, George ... Susie Rice, Elliott Peressen
...Moore, Audrey ... SPORTS: Gary Brooks, Charlie ... Grace, Rick Katz.
...Sawyer ...
...FF: Paul Agostino, ... PRODUCTION: Jane Forsaith, ...Dolnick, Mike ... Karen Hill, Madeline Isbrandtsen, ...gorth, Andy Hunt, ... Bob LeVine, Eileen Driscoll ...phen W. Tanner, ... Ricky McCandlewaddy
...ff: Robert Dunlin, ... ADVERTISING: Katherine ...Friedman, ... Bennett, Stephen Lee Brown, ...Alexander Murphy, ... Sherry Gassero, Debbie Powell
...ial Writers: ...
...: Debbie Allen, ... BUSINESS MANAGER: ...ith, Scott McKay, ... Nancy Shattuck

...views expressed in editorials, opinions, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the ...ty administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of ...a. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not ...ily reflect the opinion of the majority of the ...f of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

...published weekly during the college year by the students ...University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, ...ton and Bolduc offices in the Billings Center, ...ton, Vermont. Telephone 656-4031. Deadline for ...e news items prior to date of publication.

...ished in 1883. Subscriptions cost $8.00 per year, single ...e cents.

New Leaders In Vermont House Of Representatives

by Paul Cain

The Vermont State House of Representatives has undergone some changes in leadership that should influence its effectiveness in the current legislative session; a crucial one for the state. The need for new leaders was shown most remarkably in the election of Timothy O'Connor as speaker of the house.

O'Connor, Democratic representative from Brattleboro, became the first Democrat to be elected to this position and although the Republicans held a membership majority, did so on the first ballot. To have a member of the minority party elected to a position of power such as Speaker of the House, which directs the setting up of committees, shows a desire for change among the new members and dissention within the established majority party.

In previous years the House of Representatives was considered to be a legislative body dominated by the Republican Party. Vermont has always been a Republican state and a vast majority of Republicans in the House and their presence in positions of power was commonplace. This current session, in breaking from that tradition, is sure to offer new directions in Vermont politics.

Leadership and unity will have to be provided if the legislature is to deal effectivly with the problems the state is now beset with. It will take a strong, decisive body to pull Vermont out of ecohomic difficulty and legislate the newly proposed budget cuts and tax measures Governor Salmon has proposed some cuts and taxes that will be hard to accept. The legislature must be able to stand up to pressure.

In the past, the House has shown an inability to be decisive on controversial matters. An example of this is the Land Use Plan, legislation required by Act 250 of the 1970 Legislature. This plan to set restrictions on the development of land is a much disputed one. Over the course of four years the House has failed to resolve the question as to the kind of land plan Vermont should have. Prospective plans have gone through series of debates and rewrites but decisive action has not been taken. The legislative planning committee dealing with the Land Use Plan last year was an example of the inability to form a consensus. The minority chairman came out in strong disapproval with the committee proposals and the bill is still surrounded with ambivalence.

Legislation essential to Vermont's well being will have to be passed in this current legislative session, and passed decisively. This will require a degree of unity and leadership. Committee chairmen are already expressing their reluctance to head a committee that will not stand behind their decisions when they come under pressure. The proposed budget cuts and tax measures will have to be handled quickly to be effective. It is hoped the new people in high places will rejuvenate the House and make it an effective law making body.

All Things Considered:

Hand And Hand With Your Feet

by larry selden

If you're not wearing white sox, where are you? On the Kokomo? White sox are the bottom secret of the enlightened few. White sox remain the last integral commodity we have to associate with virginity, integrity, and practicality (let's see ...you think of another).

White sox are the epitome of 'haute couture' at a nudist camp. White sox are the essence of physical education. White sox fall in between Spiro Agnew and Chairman Mao. White sox are for the apathetic, the apolitical, the endowed and the untouched. White sox are as eternal as gold or diamonds or Gordie Howe. They're as pleasing as vanilla Junket and as exciting as a 36 hour ride in a Greyhound bus with Fred MacMurray.

Come with me on a journey through the dimensions of time. Travel with me to the beginning of your exhibitionism. Here we are on the day of your first grade picture. Aren't we so innocent, our brilliance blinding the photographer or is it nuclear radiation from our daily supply of milk? It looks like everyone's face is so bright because of the reflection of their white sox. Those devilish little girls, so adorable in their white anklets. They're blushing from the sheerness of the white cotton that caresses their tiny toesys with the subtleness of a goose feather. And all those sparkling little fellas, all decked out in starched white shirts and clip-on ...ties. (Quick Quiz: What do you match your shirt with?). That's right, Seymour, your sox. White sox. And to make matters complete, how many of you know any six year olds who aren't virgins?

Now, you're probably chuckling to yourself, who is going to match up white sox with integrity? Athletes, that's who. Ever see an athlete wear crimson jock sox (tube sox that stretch to the knee)? White sox are for winners and who ever questions the integrity of an athlete (except gamblers). You will never, absolutely never see Howard Cosell in his own intolerable way say to Mean Joe Green, "Hey Joe, you didn't look honest today." Never happen, Mean Joe would bite his toupe off. I'll let you in on an athletic secret that has never left the locker room previous to this writing. The higher your white sox come up your leg, the faster you look on T.V.. Joe Namath told me that and you know how fast Broadway (of Hollywood Blvd.) Joe can move out. Anyway, remember Casey Stengal, he wore white sox for two thousand years and he was the most lovable man this side of Emmett Kelly (who was a notorious White Sox fan).

All that's left for this week is practicality. That's easy. I'll give you a space to see if you can figure it out.

That's right, if you lose one at the laundry, it's very simple to pair it with another single. Extra Bonus: White sox are easy to match in the dark. No more will you have to be caught wearing two different colored sox. And don't forget Mother America's narcs love to wear white sox, it's part of the image.

Feets, do your thing.

JUICY TIDBITS:

Remember Joe Namath: Well Kinky Friedman, the Texas Jewboy, has been offered $10,000 to shave his beard for the camera. No deal, says Kinky. It's hard not to be commercial for the man who wrote "Get Your Biscuits in the Oven and Your Buns in the Bed". Don't worry Kinky is from Texas and they like him down there.... Remember how we like to categorize our music (British Invasion, L.A. Cowboy Music, Motown, Southern Music) well the next big hype is Canadian Music. Watch for those powerhouses from the north country - A Foot in Coldwater, Rory Black, Babe Ruth and I won't mention platinum plated Bachman-Turner Overdrive. Don't forget Montreal is the only North American city where people wait on line for two days to buy tickets to see Shawn Phillips..... Speaking of Mr. Phillips, he cut 11 inches off his mane and gave a concert for 6,000 employees of McDonald's. The opening act was Ronald McDonald and the Quarterpounders..... Alice Cooper, who was doing strange things on the tube for the Smothers Brothers, is the subject of a book called Billion Dollar Baby by Bob Greene. It shows Alice as your standard Madison Ave. sell job, except his glitter is gold, solid gold.

"Got no shadow and you know it's killing me".

The First In A Series :

Three Sheets To The Wind

by Elliot Freeman

The light was making its way with difficulty from the full moon that was perched like a funky chicken on the dark summer night sky, through the smog, over and around buildings and poles and wires and signs, passed the noise of a drunken gang of boys and finally into the window of a one room apartment located in the diseased heart of Oakland, California. The meager thread of light managed enough spark to barely illuminate the face of a small man, who was crouched by the window, and then pooled itself into a weak circle on the floor and died ... drowned by the flood waves of hot white eye-aching light poured down from a bare bulb that hung and swung slightly in the middle of the chipped plaster ceiling.

Kleras Bell was thinking that maybe it was the effect of the full moon on his body and mind that was prohibiting him from falling into the peaceful valley of sleep, restricting his admission into the soft-seated air-conditioned theater of dreamland and forcing him to remain in the hell of continued consciousness. He had heard of the moon's affect on the oceans of the world, on the sanity of men and had noticed over the past four or five months that his back would blossom into an ugly garden of pimples whenever that old man in the moon wore an ominous shit-eating grin.

But he was just playing a game, for he knew the reason behind his insomnia and exactly who was responsible. Dismissing this train of thought down an obscure tunnel of his mind, he picked a towel off the floor and wiped the sweat off of his face and chest. Pretty much winded, he was trying to catch his breath and for the most part unsuccessfully ignoring the musty air that filled his lungs forcing him to cough and to burp and to suffer.

For two hours, that is from ten-thirty when he had peeled off his clothes down to a pair of pink silk underwear and gotten into bed, up until about five minutes ago, Kleras had been involved in a strange energy draining (and at times violent) wrestling match with a red and white and blue striped bed sheet. The red and white and blue striped bed sheet pinned him three times. In an act of superiority Mr. Bell, who is intensely powerful considering his size (five one, 108 pounds), ripped the red and white and blue striped sheet into incredibly small shreds.

Kleras stood up and walked to an already opened beer can that sat on a wooden fruit crate nightstand next to his bed. Taking a man thirsty swig of the lusty brew he discovered too late that someone, most likely himself earlier in the evening, had used the open can as an ashtray. A few minutes of spitting and sputtering removed all the soggy beer soaked remnants of tobacco from his mouth.

"Worst night in a long time," Kleras said as he moved towards a big wooden rocking chair. He stood there a minute before sitting down, rubbing his stomach with his right hand and gently snapping the elastic of his underwear with the thumb of his left. Although the size of the rocker made him feel three times smaller than his actual height, he often enjoyed the rather fillilating sensation of being surrounded by a giant bosom while rocking slowly in the gentle wooden giant." Rolling to and fro, Kleras digested the sad realization that sleep was beyond him.

Running his fingers through his hair, Kleras started whistling "Summertime" ... pretending that he was down in the Heart of Dixie sitting on a big old porch watching the niggers Happy and Slappy dancing and laughing in the cool twilight shade of the sad weeping willow. Kleras dropped that fantasy deciding that in this time of racial tensions and rapes and robbers he would be wise to confine his flights of fancy to subjects that were a bit more tasteful.

His thoughts turned to alternative possibilities. Television entered his mind, perhaps a late night flick or a talk show. Looking around the room Kleras discovered ... rediscovered that his set was missing. Destroyed a week earlier after he had been to the end of his rope and forced into a crazy rage by a toothpaste commercial that asked in a brassy roar, "HOW'S YOUR LOVE LIFE?" His love life wasn't very good. The television set lay in pieces on the sidewalk pavement outside the window. So much for that. He wished he had controlled his temper and now regretted his actions. Such is life.

The apartment offered little as far as entertainment was concerned. There was a radio in the corner that had not worked for years. A thin black snake of a wire twisted its way from the wall and coiled around a black telephone that had been disconnected two days earlier when Kleras had failed to pay in full an exorbitant phone bill. Fifty three dollars and twenty three cents. He had sent the phone company a money order for twenty three cents.

Various books tempted Kleras with polite suggestions of literary escape, intellectual amusement and or the possibilities of broadening his horizons, but the restlessness eating at his brain warned him of the inevitable frustration if he dare try.

There was a knock at the door. Kleras thought perhaps this might be his salvation.

"Ah yes ... who is there?"

"It's me, Dolores."

Dolores the slit who lived across the hall.

"Leave me alone, you bitch ... leave me the hell alone ... I told you never to touch my door."

"Oh come Kleras, darling, come to my place for a drink or something.... come honey?"

"No ... GO TO HELL!"

Kleras heard the door to her apartment slam shut and knew she was back in her hole.

He felt sick. Why the hell am I living this way? Not sleeping. Alone in this stinking apartment in Oakland. Throwing my television set out the window. Getting pimples every time the moon is full. Bitching at Dolores. God, I know, who is responsible.

He knew who was responsible and he knew what he was going to do. Write a damn letter that was long overdue. He would never send the letter because he was too suspicious of the mail system and feared that his letters would be either lost or bound to fall into the wrong hands. He slipped into the pleasant depths of the seat of the rocker and pulled it closer to a table and rolled a sheet of paper into the writing machine and worked there for three hours.

••••••••••••

Friday June 14, 1974
Oakland, California

Dear Elliot,

To relieve my sickness and ease my mind, Elliot you are a bastard of the first degree. I feel better already. Before I jump into what I have to say let me ask you this ... are you a rock and roll star yet? Last time I talked with you you were planning on cutting a demo of that song you wrote ... hum let me see ... oh yes the one entitled, "I'm In Love As Long As My Hair." Why don't you send me a copy along with a record player if it is not too much trouble.

If you are really determined to make it as a swinging singer may I suggest that you change your name. It needs more pow! Well since you are supposed to be the writer, I am sure that if you apply yourself something will turn up from that marvelous mind of yours. Don't ask me for suggestions. I'm only your character. What do I know?

Now, do you have a specific purpose in mind for having me as you say, "in the diseased heart of Oakland, California"? I hope this is not one of your stories that fails to get off the ground. I don't think I will be able to handle it.

Do you remember the story you did about a year ago? I was a tupperware salesman who in his spare time on weekends designed a huge tupperware piece that could cover the earth and transform conditions on the planet to those that exist in the womb. Unfortunately there was a leak along the line (probably Mrs. Marblehead, my neighbor) and the local Jaycees got wind of it and contacted Marvin the Media Freak who jumped at the chance to catch a hot by-line and so broke the whole story on every possible network. The tide of public (or was it pubic) opinion turned against me. They came and burned replicas of female reproductive organs on my front lawn and spread rustic rumors around town and in no time flat I was in prison for life as the court found me in violation of some ordinance that had not been enforced in over forty years: it stated that it was illegal to have an oversized room on one's house. I tried to explain that it was an overaized womb not room ... but they wouldn't listen. Oh that was a real gem, Elliot. How do you think I felt while all that was going on?

I will get to the point (First I feel that it is necessary to issue a simple and quite sincere warning. Although my words at times may start to soune very much like a sermon and through rather vivid hallucinations I might take on the airs of a preacher ... a transformation I dread, I am at best a bad teacher and only want you to understand that everything here is written with only good intent on my part.) the point being that this letter is probably pointless. But since when have I been known to abandon a course of action merely because it lacks direction or purpose?

I fully realize I am your character and you are my author. It is part of the bargain to fulfill any task that you assign, which I must admit (with all modesty) I have done well up until now. But I think that you have lost sight of something and as much as your ego would like to think that you invented me and breathed the breath of life into my lungs, well it is just not so.

You have the gall enough to say that I am merely an illusion, a figment of your imagination... it is easy for you to say, you are not in this apartment in Oakland. Elliot you have got to get me out of here! Let me set you straight. You come from this world, but me I come from a place much more holier than your words can describe. It is you who taints my existence with the ways of your world and you should be truly sorry about that.

You want to talk about my identity? My god it is a crisis. Believe me I realize what a sad goddam operation life can be, a real sad piece of work, but why drag me through the dregs of sadness? How about making me a happily married family man with three wonderful kids who play piano-like mad and a wife that cooks three meals a day. Now I am a midget in Oakland. Two weeks ago I was an obese slob in New York City and a month before that I was a lineman in Wichita. Did you ever think that you might be a character in someone else's story? Don't think about it too long.

Thanks alot for the glass percolator that you sent me for my birthday I have always wondered what went on inside of those things. When I got it I immediately filled it with water and coffee and set it on the stove, and brought a chair into the kitchen so I could watch the action. Well the phone rang and I got involved in an hour conversation from somewhere in L.A. and when I returned the inside of the percolator was ... well the coffee was pitch black and bubbling and perking like a million farts in a bath tub.

I swear that never in the few times that I have sat down in that awful rocking chair have I gotten, "the rather titilating sensation of being surrounded by a giant bosom."

Do I complain too much? Even the best of characters gets out of line once in awhile. I am really behind you all the way.

Like a million farts in a bath tub,
Kleras Bell

••••••••••••

Author's Note: I am pleased to inform you that Kleras Bell is enjoying a wonderful vacation in Miami Beach, Florida, with his three lovely children and very beautiful and charming wife. Their accommodations at the Doral are, to say the least, impressive. After three weeks Mr. Bell's position as captain of the hotel shuffleboard team remains unchallenged.

Elliot Freeman

Privacy Law Passed, Administrators Pleased

by Paul Feroe

(CPS) – Thank-you cards and letters have been flowing in from college administrators to Sen. James Buckley's (C-NY) office, following the passage of a clarifying amendment to the controversial privacy law allowing students access to their school files.

The final stage in the complex and often dramatic history of the Buckley law was played last week when President Ford signed the amendment into law and the department of Health Education and Welfare (HEW) issued guidelines and interpretations.

The amendment was signed Jan. 2, just two days before colleges were required to begin honoring student requests to see their files.

Four days later, HEW published its guidelines, allowing for a 60-day period, instead of the usual 30, for public comment. No major complaints against the regulations are expected, according to those close to the law.

The primary complaint against the original law was that confidential letters, such as letters of recommendation, would be open for student inspection, violating the privacy of letter writers and discouraging frank and honest evaluations in the future.

With the passage of the amendment, the law exempts such confidential letters and recommendations placed in student records prior to Jan. 1, 1975, and provides that a student may waive his right to examine future letters having to do with admissions, job placement, and receipt of awards.

Other major clarifications allowed students to copy their files and permit "directory information" (such as a student's address, telephone number, date and place of birth) to be made public without specific permission.

According to the amendment, college students are not to see their parents' confidential financial statements, law enforcement information from college security offices can be excluded from student records if the information is used only for enforcement, and grades and bills can be sent to parents of dependent students without student consent.

Students have the right to be provided a list of the types of education records which are mainfained by the institution and relate directly to students. In addition, students have the right to obtain copies of those records, which may be at the expense of the student, but should not exceed the actual cost to the college of reproducing them.

In sum, students don't have access to: parents' financial records; confidential letters of recommendation placed in files before Jan. 1; law enforcement records; physician, psychiatrist, or professional records, and other "reasonable exceptions," such as private notes a teacher may keep for his or her own use.

Students do have access to files, documents, and other materials which directly relate to the student and are maintained by the school. Students are defined in the law as being both those currently enrolled at the school and former students, but not those who applied and weren't accepted.

Third-parties who have access to student records besides the student include: officials with legitimate interest at the school, officials of other schools to which a student seeks to transfer, and parents of dependent students.

The privacy law permits the government to withhold federal funds from any school which fails to allow students access to their files, or fails to allow students an opportunity to contest inaccuracies.

The law will be universally applicable to both state and private schools as almost all secondary educational institutions receive some sort of federal funding through the Office of Education.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Hear Ronstadt Live In Burlington Tuesday

Heart Like a Wheel
Linda Ronstadt
Capitol St-11358

by Stephen Holden

Linda Ronstadt had her first hit, "Different Drum," in 1967, singing with a group called the Stone Poneys. She didn't have one again until "Long Long Time" in 1970. Though long acknowledged to be one of the best woman singers in pop, it wasn't until last year, with the release of her debut album on Asylum, Don't Cry Now, that her years of working toward mass recognition began to pay off. Heart Like a Wheel, which concludes her prior commitment to Capitol, should guarantee her success.

After years of touring, Linda Ronstadt has developed into the rare artist who comes off even better live than on record. Last February, when she opened for Jackson Browne at Carnegie Hall, I was awed by her stage demeanor. She took immediate command of both her band and the audience and delivered a thoroughly enjoyable and professional set, a satisfying crossblend of pop and country. One of the reasons Heart Like a Wheel is so impressive, surpassing even the excellent Don't Cry Now, is its expansion of repertoire beyond country and folk-rock. It also joins Ronstadt to her ideal producer, Peter Asher, who, with Andrew Gold, has provided ten well-chosen songs with full, distinctive sound settings, notable for the variety and imagination of their instrumentation.

The opening cut, Clint Ballard Jr.'s "You're No Good," displays Ronstadt's enormous potential as a white blues singer. Backed by Clydie King and Shirley Matthews, Ronstadt lets go with a soulful wail that comes as an exciting surprise. Back in the country vein, Ronstadt faithfully resurrects Hank Williams' "I Can't Help It if I'm Still in Love with You," singing harmony with Emmy Lou Harris against steel guitar and fiddle accompaniment by Sneaky Pete and David Lindley. The cut is a triumph of understanding and taste. Another highlight is J.D. Souther's "Faithless Love," perhaps the toughest ballad he's written to date. Its striking arrangement features Herb Pedersen on banjo and Souther singing smooth octave-lower sevenths against Ronstadt's lead vocals - not an easy harmony to pull off gracefully.

While the remainder of the album consists of good material by Paul Anka, Lowell George, Phil Everly and James Taylor, among others, all of it is overshadowed by the title song, written by Anna McGarrigle, whose "Cool River" was recently recorded by Maria Muldaur. A folk hymn, whose tone and lyrics are incredibly eloquent in their simplicity, "Heart Like a Wheel" is a masterpiece of writing and arrangement, set by David Campbell as a formal chamber piece with piano, double bass, cello, viola and fiddle counterpointing dual vocals by Ronstadt and Maria Muldaur. The song lyric, which details the themes of the album - "And it's only love, and it's only love/That can wreck a human being and turn him inside out" - also underscores the essence of Ronstadt's vocal personality.

Photo by IPA — The ravishing Ronstadt

UVM Choir

The music department has announced that there are still openings for tenors in the UVM choir. Call the music department for an audition at 656-3040.

Macbett...With Two T's

by Karen Trott

Contrary to popular belief, the University Player's sixth annual production, which will open Friday, January 24, is not still another rendition of Shakespeare's great tragedy. For just as one single letter may greatly alter a name, so too has it altered a play. Macbett, says director Charles Towers, is "an absurdist, grotesque comedy," which "blends comic farce and common tragedy into a work that is not a spoof on Macbeth, but a completely new play in its own right."

As one of Eugene Ionesco's most recent works, this "comedy of monarchy" does have its source in Shakespeare's version of the Macbeth myth, however, one need not be familiar with the original to enjoy the play.

"It's a play about power, with Macbeth as a base which has been changed in both philosophy and structure," commented the director. As in most Ionesco plays, he is concerned with the theatricality of the piece, as well as with providing a vehicle for an artistic and entertaining production. And we have done the same."

By "we," the director was referring to over forty students who have been working in various stages of production since December 27. As a Player's Production, Macbett is being funded, directed, performed, designed, built, lighted and promoted entirely by students. Players, an SA funded organization composed of students heavily involved in theater, will be presenting their production (the major function of the year) in the usual January time slot. The dates for performances, however, are not usual. Rather than running through the standard one straight week, Macbett will appear over two consecutive weekends, beginning January 24 to 26 and continuing January 30 to February 1.

The cast includes Peter Kurth in the title role, Sarah Brooke as Lady Duncan, Susan Selig as her lady in waiting, Craig Purinton as Banco, and Craig Toth as Archduke Duncan.

Tickets are on sale Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre box office, at $3 for the general public or $.50 with a UVM student I.D. card.

Such a tremendous amount of effort goes into what will be by tomorrow a finished product, with weeks of preparation and hard work channelled into six performances. All of it is to create the intensity and spontaneity of a live theatrical piece that makes it a unique experience for each audience member. Don't miss out! Make Macbett.

Photo by Peter Rivenberg

"While reading the "Cynic" at home over vacation in England, UVM student Eric Schoenwald remembers to reserve tickets to MACBETT, Jan. 24 to 26 and Jan. 30 to Feb. 1.

Banjo Pickin' Earl Scruggs Comes to UVM

At 8 p.m. on Sunday, February 9, S.A. Concerts will present the Earl Scruggs Revue and John Cassell in Patrick Gymnasium. Tickets will cost $3.00 with UVM student ID and $4.00 general admission. Student tickets will be available only at the UVM Bookstore starting February 4. General admission tickets will also be available at Bailey's Music Room in Burlington and at the door on the evening of the concert.

As the greatest living exponent of bluegrass banjo, Earl Scruggs never ceases to amaze audiences with the ease with which he executes complex rhythmic and melody patterns. Besides being an established master of his instrument, Scruggs has followed great success as a songwriter and arranger with tunes such as "The Ballad of Jed Clampett," "Foggy Mountain Breakdown," and "The Ballad of Bonnie and Clyde." Earl Scruggs, more than anyone else, has expanded the potential of the banjo with innovations such as his unique three-finger picking style and the development of the "Scruggs tuners." Presently, he appears to be attempting a synthesis of rock and bluegrass. Who knows, in a few years we may find Mr. Scruggs performing with Mahavishnu John McLaughlin or Walter Carlos.

Appearing with Earl Scruggs will be his son Gary-electric bass and harmonica, Josh Graves-one of the finest Dobro guitar players around, and Jody Maphis on drums. Randy Scruggs will be accompanying his father on banjo, electric and acoustic guitars. Despite the impressive talents of Earl and Josh, Randy shines through with some really fine flat-picking and finger-picking.

John Cassell had achieved local and regional fame by performing at such Burlington "hot spots" as The Sting and Catbird's.

It should turn out to be a really fine evening. Be sure to make it - February 9, 8 p.m.

Local Photographer's Exhibit Appears at Royall Tyler

Metaphysical photographs by Fred G. Hill of South Burlington, Vermont, will be on exhibit January 19 through February 8 at the University of Vermont, Burlington, in the upper lobby of the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Titled "Presences, Intimations," the display comprises about 80 black-and-white photographs that Hill describes as "spiritual" rather than scenic or documentary.

"Their subject matter is, of course, real," he explained, "but their purpose is abstract. In them, manifested in the operations of natural law, can be glimpsed Powers before which we are the humblest of creatures. Angels, if you will, or the Creator, but these are glib concepts for something of which we really have only bare hints. The photographs are best understood intuitively, through contemplation and insight, not logically."

The prints belong to the tradition of "equivalents," a term employed 70 years ago by Alfred Stieglitz and since invoked by a great many photographers to describe the internal processes represented in their art. An equivalent image mirrors the inner state and modes of perception, both of the viewer who responds strongly to it, and of the artist.

The photographs in the exhibit typically show a transitory event at a particularly revealing point of its development. The necessary intrusion of the photographic process is regarded as part of the image's significance, just because it is more "objective" than invented. The photograph itself is not considered to be imposed by the artist's "imagination" upon a neutral subject, but rather to be the deliberate self- expression of Something that was present and wished to reveal itself, choosing the available means, namely, the artist and his tools.

"There are things of interest to a more casual viewer, too, however," Hill added. "I have not aimed the pictures at an initiated elite. My tendency is simply to confront a subject head-on, and photograph it as straightforwardly as possible, and the photographs should be seen that way."

Fred Hill is 39 and a native Oklahoman. He lived in the Boston area for 15 years, studying science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and working in chemistry until 1965, when he turned to photography for art and profession. His instruction was acquired during employment at Mel Goldman Studio, Boston, and during study under Minor White at MIT. In 1970 he moved to Vermont with his wife and son and established a full-time business as a commercial photographer.

He spends a great deal of time indoors, photographing at or through his windows. This is his first formal exhibit and the first exhibit of explicitly "equivalent" photography in Vermont that is both "thematically consistent and technically well executed," as he says.

Hill sometimes describes the photography milieu in

(continued on page eight)

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

PLAZA I & II
BORDSTREET
I Towering Inferno
Cideron
II Passion of Anna

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I The Longest Yard
At the Top of the World
II Winnie the Pooh

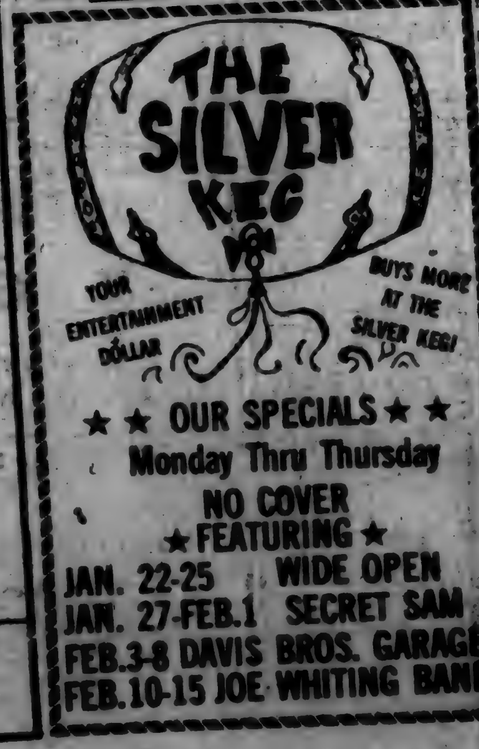
STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Behind the Green Door
Resurrection of Eve

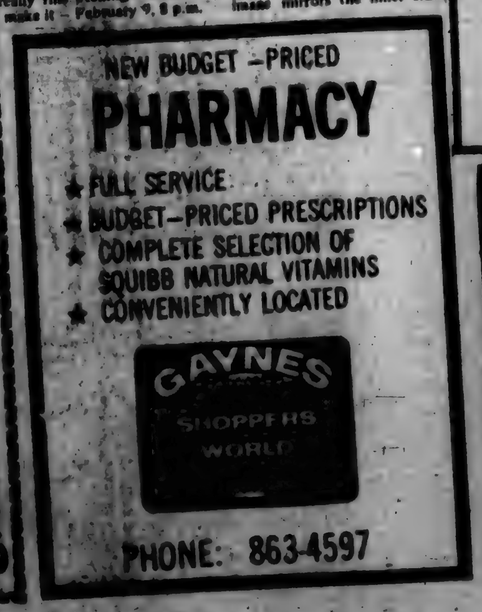
FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Man & The Golden Gun

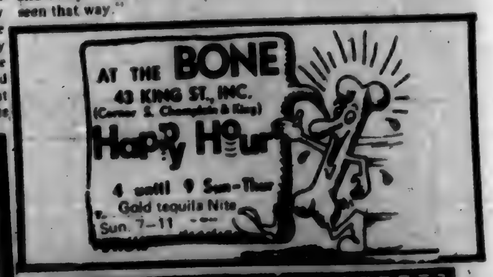
ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Man with the Golden Gun
II Challange to be Free

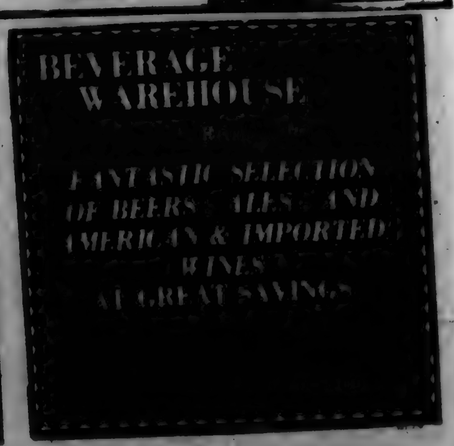
CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Challange To Be Free
II Airport 1975

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings









Lane Series Varies Li

The seven live concerts on this semester's Lane Series will appeal to a wide variety of musical tastes - popular, semi-popular, and classical; including a comic musician. There will also be a W.C. Fields Lane Film Society Series.

The next Lane Series concert is mezzo soprano Frederica Von Stade, who will perform in Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday, Feb. 2, at 8 p.m. Tickets, $6, $5, and $3, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

Frederica Von Stade, who appeared on the Lane Chamber Arts Series two years ago to an enthusiastic ovation, is one of the leading singers of the Metropolitan Opera Co. When the Paris Opera re-opened in April of 1973 with a new production of "The Marriage of Figaro," she was the only American chosen for the star-studded international cast conducted by Sir Georg Solti.

Miss Von Stade's program will include four arias from operas, including the well-known "Voi che sapete" from The Marriage of Figaro, "Sorgi, o padre" from Bellini's Bianca e Fernando, "Nobles Seigneurs" from Meyerbeer's Les Huguenots, and "Non piu mesta" from Rossini's La Cenerentola. Also on the program will be Mahler and British folksong Benjamin Br highlight of th be "Laudam Mozart's Mass

On Feb. Parkening, the y classical guita perform in Ira A'ndres Sego Parkening "one brilliant guit world."

The Quarte string ensemble in Ira Allen Cha This is the appearance of that critic-c Thomson hails string quartet, that our centu The first Lane was sold out.

The Ultima with Professor the Semi-Pro performa or gigantic spo music, this c called "noto The Lane Co says that if yo Borge, you Bach.

On Feb. Fox will pre ORGAN con

(continue

Jazz Is Alive And Well In

by Robert DeNike

The "In Concert," 2 Leroyer St., Montreal, brings you the best in entertainment within the Canadian bar room circuit, specializing in the styles of blues and jazz. Below is a run-down of artists appearing this semester.

Grover Washington, Jr.: Jan 21 to 26.

Muddy Waters: Jan. 28 to Feb. 2

Rohsaan Roland Kirk: Feb. 4 to 9

Johnny Hammond: Feb. 11 to 16

Sonny

23

Dizzy G

Mar. 2

Keith J

Willie

Tuesd

nights are times to discount

thinner cr

this is on anyone performed swing the

by on yo

the street

Record

by Paul Prior

Yes - Relayer

This album re-establishes "Yes" as one of the most interesting and vital forces in music. Plagued by the departure of drummer Bill Bruford and keyboard genius Rick Wakeman, their last album (Tales from Topographic Oceans) suffered. Wakeman played a very small part in the recording of the L.p.; he was dissatisfied with the musical content. And rightly so; the album was interesting but suffered from what appeared to be a shortage of creativity, and energy which marked their previous work.

I'm happy to report that the creativity is again full steam ahead, especially with the addition of Patrick Moraz (formerly of a group named "Refugee") on keyboards. His performance on this disk is nothing short of brilliant, as is that of the rest of the group.

Chris Squ
Howe, gu out virtuo
Drummer have foun
on "Oc
undermix
He app
Yessongs playing Bruford. voice is can't say many of
if you listening same tim

Slide
one piec of Delir several being beautiful features effects and sp feature Chaser"
"Sound

"M
so Nimb

"When I told my parents I was gonna buy a waterbed, I expected kind of a lukewarm reaction . . . no pun intended. But mom's a nurse and she said that waterbeds had been used in hospitals for years, that the support of a waterbed eliminates pressure on the body that can cause bed sores and restrict circulation. She said a lot of patients preferred waterbeds because they were

Be America wi

Photo by Peter Rivenberg

"Cynic" at home over vacation in England, Schoenwald remembers to reserve tickets to to 26 and Jan. 30 to Feb. 1. consecutive g January continuing ary 1. ades Peter rote, Sarah can, Susan waiting,
Banco, and Archduke.
ble Monday
0 a.m. to 5
oyall Tyler
, at $3 for

Lane Series Varies Line-Up

This seven live concerts on this semester's Lane Series will appeal to a wide variety of musical tastes - popular, semi-popular, and classical, including a comic musician. There will also be a W.C. Fields Lane Film Society Series.

The next Lane Series concert is mezzo soprano Frederica Von Stade, who will perform in Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday, Feb. 2, at 8 p.m. Tickets, $6, $5, and $3, are available in the Lane Office, 254 Waterman. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

Frédérica Von Stade, who appeared on the Lane Chamber Arts Series two years ago to an enthusiastic ovation, is one of the leading singers of the Metropolitan Opera Co. When the Paris Opera re-opened in April of 1973 with a new production of "The Marriage of Figaro," she was the only American chosen for the star-studded international cast conducted by Sir Georg Solti.

Miss Von Stade's program will include four arias from operas, including the well-known "Voi che sapete" from The Marriage of Figaro, "Sorgi, o padre" from Bellini's Bianca e Fernando, "Nobles Seigneurs" from Meyerbeer's Les Huguenots, and "Non piu mesta" from Rossini's La Cenerentola. Also on the program will be lieder Poulenc, Mahler and Debussy, and British folksongs arranged by Benjamin Britten. Another highlight of the program will be "Laudamus te" from Mozart's Mass in C minor.

On Feb. 13 Christopher Parkening, the young American classical guitarist, will also perform in Ira Allen Chapel. Andres Segovia has called Parkening "one of the most brilliant guitarists in the world."

The Quartetto Italiano, a string ensemble, will be heard in Ira Allen Chapel on Feb. 28. This is the second Lane appearance of the ensemble that critic-composer Virgil Thomson hailed as "the finest string quartet, unquestionably, that our century has known." The first Lane concert, in 1967 was sold out.

The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach, with Professor Schickele and the Semi-Pro Musica Antiqua, performs on Feb. 22. A gigantic spoof of baroque music, this concert has been called "notoriously funny." The Lane Committee director says that if you enjoyed Victor Borge, you will love P.D.Q. Bach.

On Feb. 27 organist Virgil Fox will present his HEAVY ORGAN concert in Memorial

(continued on page eight)

The Tale Of Tom Rush - Soon To Become Reality

When one thinks about the folk music scene that was spawned in Boston in the early sixties and the artists who are still performing and held in high esteem today, one name in particular comes to mind - Tom Rush. Tom's music has never lost its original folk flavor, yet it has always remained current - whether interpreting songs of writers like Jackson Browne and Joni Mitchell or in Tom's original compositions like "No Regrets," "Rockport Sunday" or "Wrong End of the Rainbow."

Tom was born in Portsmouth, New Hampshire and raised in Concord, N.H. Although his father taught mathematics at St. Paul School, a boarding school in Concord, Tom attended public schools through the seventh grade.

"Then I was packed off to Groton School in Groton, Mass.," Tom said in a recent interview. "It was straight out of Dickens. They had a black mark system and depending on the nature of the offense, you could be given up to six black marks. Each black mark was worth an hours time doing something. Sometimes it was copying out of the Bible, sometimes it was walking in circles. Every now and then they would have you do something constructive, like sweep up the woodworking shop or model for an art class."

During his junior year at Groton, Tom received his first guitar. "I never did take any lessons on the guitar, which is probably why I enjoyed it so much," he said. "I got a little band together and we played before the Saturday night movies and for parties and things. We were doing Gene Vincent imitations and Carl Perkins imitations, you know, old rock-n-roll.

"Subsequently, I became interested in folkier types of music. When I went to Harvard, I found that Cambridge was the hotbed of folk."

While attending Harvard, Tom started playing in local coffee houses one or two nights a week and gradually developed a following. "I made a record on a little fly-by-night label," Tom related. "It wasn't quite a vanity record. Somebody was paying me to make it.

"It was really a small scale operation. The guy was distributing it to stores out of the trunk of his car. Then, a friend of mine, Paul Rothschild (who's gone on to greater things), got a job as A&R man for Prestige Records and signed up most of the Cambridge folk scene, except for a few artists who went with Vanguard Records."

Tom signed with Prestige and made a couple of albums for the label. In the middle of his junior year at Harvard, Tom dropped out of school.

"I had failed a course the semester preceding," he said. "I didn't flunk out of school, but I wasn't in good standing."

Since Tom had withdrawn from school, when he decided to go back after a year, he had to reapply. "I had to write them a letter," Tom said, "explaining how I had benefited from my year off and how I was now a better person and a more avid seeker for knowledge and truth. They fell for it."

Tom had taken the time off from Harvard primarily to see if he could support himself as a singer. "It turned out that I could," he said. "I wasn't accepting any parental support for this because I figured they didn't want me to do it, so I couldn't ask them to bankroll it.

"I was doing okay, but I'm not sure how. Most of the time I was staying around Boston working two nights a week, I was only taking home ten dollars a night, but somehow I managed. I ate a lot of liver."

Tom went back to Harvard, finished out three semesters and graduated. "I didn't really intend to be a professional singer," he said, "but I graduated with a degree in English Lit., which doesn't really prepare you for anything."

After graduating, Tom continued to live in Boston and sing occasionally, building larger and larger audiences. Paul Rothschild moved to Elektra Records and Tom moved along with him, making three albums for the label. Tom found himself traveling more and doing better and "it just gradually has come along to where it is today professionally."

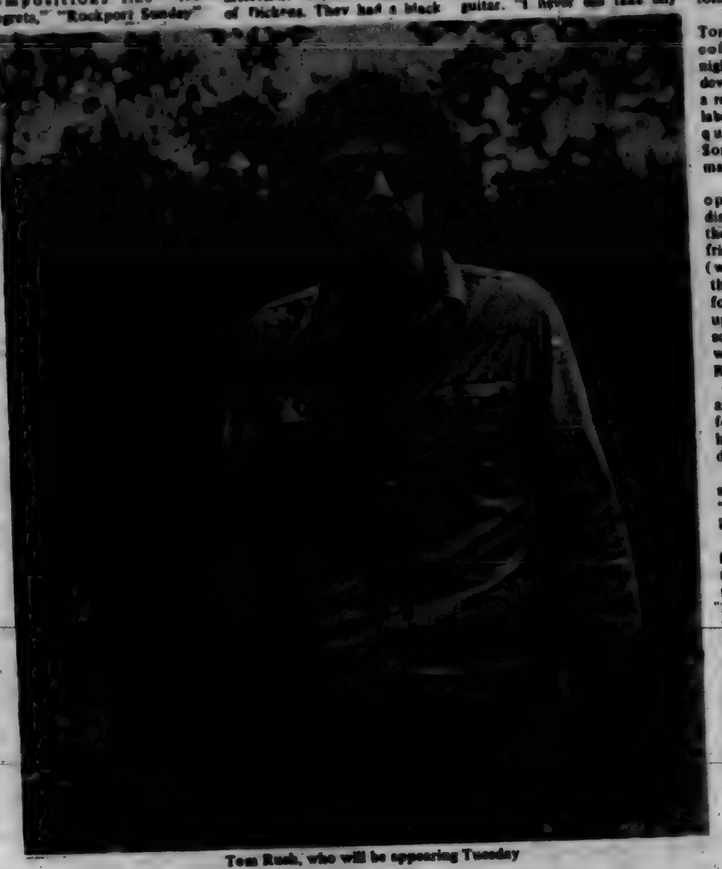
For a while, Tom worked with a band behind him, but he's now gone solo again. "I don't regret having worked with a band," he said. "I learned a lot by doing that, but I think that part of what I like to do is just keep changing, doing different things. It keeps it interesting.

"I enjoy the freedom of not only being on stage by myself, but not having to worry about four guys and their old ladies and all of their problems with their old ladies and with each other and with each other's old ladies. You know, things like the bass player's wife picking on the road manager.

"Without the band, there are a few tunes that I've had to drop, like "Driving Wheel" and a few others in the hard rock end of the spectrum. By the same token, there were some tunes that I couldn't do when I had the band because it was difficult to do really quiet and intimate stuff with all those guys on stage.

"Having a band necessarily limits the amount of rapport you can get going with an audience - just because there are always other people up

(continued on page eight)



Tom Rush, who will be appearing Tuesday

SA FILMS PRESENTS

FRIDAY, JANUARY 24
Romeo and Juliet (1968) – Olivia Hussey
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10 p.m. – $1

SATURDAY, JANUARY 26
Stagedoor (1937) – Katheryn Hepburn, Lucille Ball, Ginger Rogers
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

MONDAY, JANUARY 27
Beauty and the Beast (1946) – directed by Jean Cocteau
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

Jazz Is Alive And Well In Montreal

by Robert DeNike

The "In Concert," 2 Leroyer St., Montreal, brings you the best in entertainment within the Canadian bar room circuit, specializing in the styles of blues and jazz. Below is a run-down of artists appearing this semester.

Grover Washington, Jr.: Jan 21 to 26.

Muddy Waters: Jan. 28 to Feb. 2

Rohsaan Roland Kirk: Feb. 4 to 9

Johnny Hammond: Feb. 11 to 16

Sonny Rollins: Feb. 18 to 23

Dizzy Gillespie: Feb. 25 to Mar. 2

Keith Jarrett: Mar. 4 to 9

Willie Dixon: Mar 11 to 16.

Tuesday and Thursday nights are the most attractive times to visit because of discount drink prices and thinner crowds. By all means this is one swingin' spot for anyone into music as performed by the masters of swing themselves. Don't pass it by on your next stroll down the streets of Montreal.

...t Appears at Royall Tyler

...eption, both
...o responds
...of the artist.
...phs in the ...y show a
...ent at a
...ng point of
...the necessary
...photographic
...l as part of
...licance, just
... "objective"
... photograph
...idered to be
...he artist's
...w a neutral
...r to be the
...xpression of
... was present
... reveal itself.
...liable means,
... and his tools.
... things of
... more casual
...owever." Hill
...ot aimed the
...ntiated elite.
...s simply to
...ject head-on,
...raph it as
... as possible.
...phs should be

Reid Hill is 39 and a native Oklahoman. He lived in the Boston area for 15 years, studying science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and working in chemistry until 1968, when he turned to photography for art and profession. His instruction was acquired during employment at Mel Goldman Studio, Boston, and during study under Minor White at MIT. In 1970 he moved to Vermont with his wife and son and established a full-time business as a commercial photographer.

He spends a great deal of time indoors, photographing at or through his windows. This is his first formal exhibit and the first exhibit of explicitly "equivalent" photography in Vermont that is both "thematically consistent and technically well executed," as he says.

Hill sometimes describes the photography milieu in

(continued on page eight)

Record Review: Tales From The Ozones

by Paul Prior

Yes — Relayer

This album re-establishes "Yes" as one of the most interesting and vital forces in music. Plagued by the departure of drummer Bill Bruford and keyboard genius Rick Wakeman, their last album (Tales from Topographic Oceans) suffered. Wakeman played a very small part in the recording of the l.p.; he was dissatisfied with the musical content. And rightly so; the album was interesting but suffered from what appeared to be a shortage of creativity, and energy which marked their previous work.

I'm happy to report that the creativity is again full steam ahead, especially with the addition of Patrick Moraz (formerly of a group named "Refugee") on keyboards. His performance on this disk is nothing short of brilliant, as is that of the rest of the group. Chris Squire, bass, and Steve Howe, guitar, manage to turn out virtuoso performances also. Drummer Alan White seems to have found a niche; his playing on "Oceans" was often undermixed in the recording. He appeared on most of Yessongs but he was merely playing the same licks as Bruford. Singer Jon Anderson's voice is a wonder, though I can't say I comprehend too many of his lyrics. They suffer if you read them without listening to the record at the same time.

Side One is taken up by one piece entitled "The Gates of Delirium." It's divided into several themes, my favorite being the third part, the beautiful "Seen." Side one also features some amazing special effects: put on the headphones and space out. Side Two features two songs, "Sound Chaser" and "To Be Over." "Sound Chaser" is probably one of their most ambitious works, as far as exploring what might be termed "Avante Garde Rock."

This also isn't the type of album one listens to as background music; you really have to sit back and LISTEN to understand what the group is attempting to do. Almost all the members of "Yes" are virtuoso musicians, and one must devote complete attention to the music being laid down here. It took me three or four listenings before I realized themes were being repeated in various keys. I also think that having a musical background makes the listener much more appreciative of the group and what they are doing to revitalize rock and set out in new directions. Yes, "Yes" are back on top, this is certainly one of the better albums to appear in quite some months.

An Additional Note: I for one would like to see a lot of suggestions made to the SA Concert Bureau. In the past they have complained of a lack of student interest in concerts at UVM, why not change this and express your opinion? It seemed to me that the $20,000.00 spent on getting the Beach Boys here could have been better spent. Those who went to the concert heard very little in the line of new material (they are an "Oldies Band"). I would suggest (among others in the under $20,000.00 range) Steve Miller, Marshall Tucker, Little Feat, Jefferson Starship, of Fleetwood Mac. Most of these bands are within a nominal price range and seem popular enough to spark a good number of people to turn out for them. So, I can only suggest that you pass on any ideas you might have to the Concert Bureau or perhaps through the Letters section of the Cynic. Over and Out.

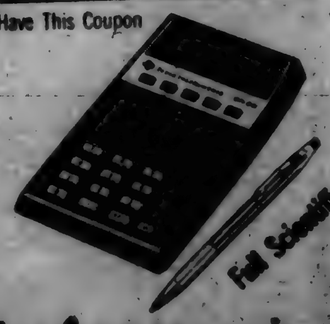
THE CANTINA
"The Place For Those With Good Taste"
10% OFF TO UVM STUDENTS WITH VALID I.D.
JANUARY 24 — JANUARY 31
ALSO SANDWICHES - BEER
CONTINENTAL BREAKFAST
CARRY - OUT SERVICE
OPEN MONDAY - SATURDAY 7 A.M. - 7 P.M.
15 CENTER STREET

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon

COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

SR50	149.95	124.95
SR11	79.95	67.95
SR16	99.95	87.95
SR10	69.95	49.95

Must Have This Coupon



Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us. You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by MS
Burlington – Essex – Rutland – Montpelier

IF YOU DON'T USE THIS COUPON FOR A FREE 12oz. LEMONADE WITH A PURCHASE OF 2 SUPERPRETZALS AT CATAMOUNT DEN BY JAN. 23 - 30, YOU CAN Dissolve This Coupon and Drink It!
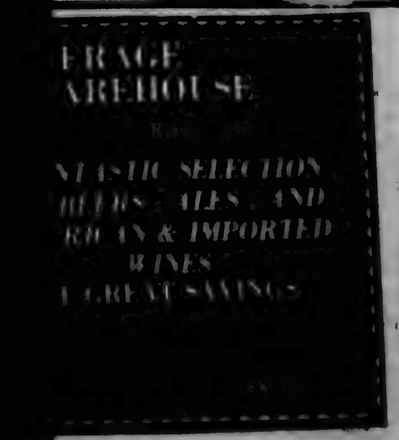
But why drink a hard drink when you can have a free soft drink?
Dissolving Instructions:
Tear into ⅛" squares.
Soak squares in rancid prune juice (8 days).
Sell prune juice to local radical cell.
Wash squares in detergent, rinse.
Soak in Castor Oil (4 days).
Mix with papaya juice and sip slowly.
Saga

"My parents sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"When I told my parents I was gonna buy a waterbed, I expected kind of a lukewarm reaction . . . no pun intended. But mom's a nurse and she said that waterbeds had been used in hospitals for years, that the support of a waterbed eliminates pressure on the body that can cause bed sores and restrict circulation. She said a lot of patients preferred waterbeds because they were more comfortable. Then my father chimes in about how he had slept on a waterbed on a business trip a couple of years ago . . . but now he calls ahead to request one. He's even looked into getting a waterbed for the house and told me about Nimbus, cross-buckled construction, triple-protection against leaks and a 10 year guarantee. Imagine that! The same two people who thought that Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young was a law firm sold me my Nimbus Waterbed."

The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus...
America will sleep a little easier tonight.



...Lane Series Varies Line-Up

(continued from page seven)

Auditorium, complete with his new Rodgers touring organ, a rear-projection light show and the music of Bach. It is expected that this very popular concert will be sold out.

Pianist Alicia de Larrocha, the Spanish virtuoso who is currently the darling of the New York critics, plays in the Allen Chapel on March 2. De Larrocha, the reigning queen of the piano, astounds audiences with her superb artistry and technique.

The season concludes on March 8 with Duke Ellington Orchestra, conducted by Mercer Ellington, son of the late Duke Ellington. Making its second Lane appearance, the famous band will present an evening of "dance or listen music," including all the old familiar favorites. Ticket holders may either listen (from the balcony of Memorial Auditorium or the floor bleachers) or dance (floor). There are no reserved seats.

Tickets for these concerts, $3, $5, and $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. However, the Ellington Orchestra tickets are $4 (all unreserved), and only a few Parkening tickets remain at $3 and $5. For reservations, telephone 656-3418.

In addition to the above-listed live concerts, the Lane Film Society will present a "W.C. Fields Festival" of six feature W.C. Fields movies on Friday evenings in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium. Each film will be preceded by a comic short.

The films include "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," Feb. 7; "David Copperfield," Feb. 14; "Evening with W.C. Fields," Feb. 21; "My Little Chickadee," Feb. 28; "The Bank Dick," March 7; and "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break," March 14.

In addition, featurettes starring Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, Mary Pickford and others, will be shown before each major film.

There will be two showings of each film, at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. - except for "David Copperfield," which will be shown at 7:30 p.m. and 10:00 p.m.

Season tickets, $5 for six films, and single film tickets, $1, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. Reservations: 656-3418.

Z. Professor's Guide to Rock

by Larry Selden

Records are like students: you get good ones, you get bad ones. Yet they are individuals; they have to be babied, they have to be coaxed before they will speak loudly enough for you to listen. But, oh boy, when they speak, some are uncut gems, some are real humdingers and other should be sent back to the minor leagues.

So of course, I being the professor must determine if I like this or that "student" enough to pass them off to you, my fellow professors. I promise to send them off the assembly line stamped, just like real students, with letters denoting how much they tickled my auditory fancy, which is as fickle as a Foxy Lady.

Sun Secrets/the eric burdon band– This is an album for people who like loud music. Crank this mother up to wall-shattering volumes and step into a pair of rejuvenated vocal chords (Eric Burdon's, who many moons ago was the lead singer of the Animals). This is a power trio with lots of mean class. Very solid guitars by Aalon. A-, flying colors.

War Babies/daryl hall & john oates– What happens when two nice, hometown folkies from Philadelphia move to New York City, meet Todd Rudgren and discover the life around the Big Apple? Watch out! Finger-snapping, get-your-ass-on-the-corner, city soul juice comes sliding down the street, melted on textured layers of vocals. One song, "Johnny Gore and the C Eaters," is much too overblown in production for me. B+, snappy colors.

Hotter Than Hell/kiss– This is Heavy Metal with moderate thunder. I realize that this genre is limited and still there is nothing original about this album except that the cover is printed in Japanese and English. You better really be crazy on Black Sabbath before trying this. C, flashless colors.

...Photo Exhibit

(continued from page six)

Vermont as "provincial," which he says is both good and bad. "There is only a handful of persons who attempt anything more profound than calender art," he says. "On the other hand, Vermont is a low-pressure environment for serious artists. Here, one can avoid cliques, mannerisms, art critics, and the pressure to produce. One can work one's art into one's life. When no one understands you, there isn't much temptation to live as your public expects you to do. You can afford to be amused by the almost universal disdain of the black-and-white medium, and to joke about the popular mistake that Vermont Life provides the ultimate standard of artistic expression."

The exhibit will be open daily, including weekends. Information can be obtained from the theatre office at 802-656-2095.

S.A. Films Presents

The second week of the semester brings the beginning of two of the SA Film series for the semester and a continuation of another series. The Friday night series begins with the musical Romeo and Juliet, and the Saturday night Kathryn Hepburn series begins with Stagedoor. The Monday night French Cinema series continues with Beauty and the Beast.

Romeo and Juliet, which will be shown Friday night at 7:30 and 10 p.m. in 101 Votey at an admission charge of $1, was made in 1968 and stars Olivia Hussey, Leonard Whiting, Milo O'Shea and Michael York. This is the highly popular Franco Zeffirelli version of the Shakespearean play and features the youngest performers ever to professionally play the star-crossed lovers. Roger Manvell described the film as "a poem of youth, love and violence." Zeffirelli "emphasized youth, first love, and the tribulations of adolescent innocence sacrificed to the evil rivalries of maturity."

Stagedoor, starring Kathryn Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Lucille Ball, Eve Arden and Ann Miller, will be shown in 101 Votey on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free. This film, very popular at the time of release, tells the story of a group of girls who move to New York and try to break into show business. It received four Oscar nominations including Best Picture of 1937.

The Jean Cocteau classic fantasy, Beauty and the Beast will be shown on Monday night at 7:30 in 101 Votey. This is an "authentic, personal statement by the great French poet. It is also a faithful adaptation of the classic legend. What emerges is a magnificent work of art, enjoyable on the level of a fairy tale and meaningful on the level of great poetry. The film, made in 1946 and starring Jean Marais and Josette Day, was described by the New York Times as "a sensuously fascinating film... Priceless, gorgeous, exquisite," and by Newsweek as "a brilliant example of what cameras can do with a poet in charge... a delight." In Classics of the Foreign Film, Parker Tyler speaks of the film as "unforgettable for its exacting poetic spirit and to be regarded as one of its creator's imaginative hallmarks. To it, he brought the great rarity of an inventive connoisseur of images."

For those who are interested in the film series, there are still a few of the large posters left in Billings Center. But they are going fast. So if you want one, you should pick one up as soon as possible. When the large posters are gone, a smaller, more concise list will be put out to accommodate those who are unable to get a large poster.

Doctor's Bag

Address letters to Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, Mi. 48823.

QUESTION: I have read recent warnings to the effect that if a woman becomes pregnant while using the Dalkon shield and decides to continue the pregnancy, it can be extremely dangerous, even fatal. This is the IUD that was recommended to me and which I am now using.

The general recommendation is that if a women becomes pregnant with the IUD, the device be removed because continued pregnancy with an IUD is potentially hazardous. Removal of the IUD at this time could result in ending the pregnancy.

The question of what to do if one does have a Dalkon shield in place is answered differently by different people. My own view of a sane and safe approach is to keep the Dalkon shield if it is now in place and you are having no difficulty with it. Most IUD problems crop up in the first few months of their use, so, if you are past this time and it is working effectively, the odds are good that it will continue to work effectively.

Contraception, like most things in life associated with pleasurable activities, is not free of problems. No method is fool proof, free of hazards, convenient at all times, and requires no thought. Then again, neither is living.

••••••••••••

QUESTION: I have a rather annoying problem. When I am in a nervous-waiting situation (doctor's office, before a speech or musical performance, etc.) my stomach growls, bowels groan, and the back of my thighs and seat tingle. I often have to run for a john fast. I have been like this ever since I can remember and I am 22 now. Is there any help (or hope) for me?

ANSWER: Nervousness before a performance or speech is very common and can result in sufficient changes in heart-rate and other cardiovascular phenomena to jeopardize the health of older people with heart conditions. To have anxiety of such degree that it occurs in many day to day situations is a condition worthy of intervention.

Often the anxiety is triggered by fear even though the person cannot identify anything particularly threatening in the situation. Sometimes a set of early life experiences involving humiliations can get such a problem started. If the symptom is as discrete as you describe, it should respond to a rather straight forward program involving some simple behavior modification techniques. The idea is that if you have become conditioned to respond the way you do, you can also be deconditioned. Such deconditioning makes use of verbal techniques and graded exercises. I suggest you give a call to your counseling center or other mental health facility.

Mallary, Rollins...

(continued from page one)

of the fact that my name would be proposed or suggested... I had known nothing about it until I came back and read about it in the newspapers."

The former congressman reserved comment on whether he would be seriously interested in the presidency of the university until he has had the opportunity to talk to the selection committee and the trustees.

"Obviously I would want to wait and see... any interest would depend totally on what the trustees and selection committee would determine their needs to be. Any interest or expression of interest would depend on an understanding of the views of the trustees and officials of the university on what the needs of the university are," Mallary answered.

He continued, "I have not been involved in the academic field; I do not hold an advanced degree and I'm sure that this would be viewed as an impediment."

Mallary added that he has no immediate plans for the future, and that he is still winding down his office in Washington.

...Tom Rush

(continued from page seven)

there tuning up, moving around and just generally being there."

Tom's last three LP's, "Tom Rush," "Merrimack County" and "Wrong End of the Rainbow," were on the Columbia label. He's going back into the studio soon with material of his own and songs by other writers.

"I think the next record is going to be a countryish one," Tom said. "I don't want to do it in Nashville. I don't want to go that far country."

Even though Tom hasn't had any product released in some time, his personal appearance schedule has been a busy one. He recently appeared before SRO audiences at Carnegie Hall (N.Y.), the Kennedy Center (Washington, D.C.) and the Orpheum Theater (Boston). He is in constant demand at colleges and clubs like the Main Point in Philadelphia and the Cellar Door in Washington.

When Tom's not working, he's relaxing on his sprawling farm on 400 acres of beautiful New Hampshire countryside. His hobbies include soaring (in a glider, of course) and sculpting. He's also planning to build a windmill on his property to generate electricity.

Winter Week...

(continued from page one)

Winter Week 1975 Activities. More information about all of these events is forthcoming via the Cynic, This Week WRUV, and posters throughout the campus. Don't wait until the last minute to get your tickets to these events. Become a part of a growing tradition at UVM, attend and support Winter Week 1975.

Specific information concerning all events may be obtained by calling Billings Center Information 656-2068.

WHOSE MUSIC WILL YOU BE LISTENING TO NEXT YEAR?

We're making very personal music at the Living/Learning Center — from aviation to behavior modification to rock climbing to Vermont culture — in programs designed by students exploring and expanding their own ideas about what they want their education to be.

The Living/Learning Center provides living and working space, resource people, encouragement and modest financial support for groups and individuals with clearly defined educational objectives who want a place to carry them out.

Programs may be related to existing UVM courses with p... for credit.
Or they may be totally independent.
Proposals from individuals are welcome,
as well as groups of 5 to 7 people or more.

...by at the Director's Office for a copy of Specific Guidelines
...Student Designed Programs which includes sample proposal,
...definition of educational objective,
...and descriptions of programs at the Center this year
...available at Billings
...at each desk of all dorms

Get your application before the end of January — proposals are due

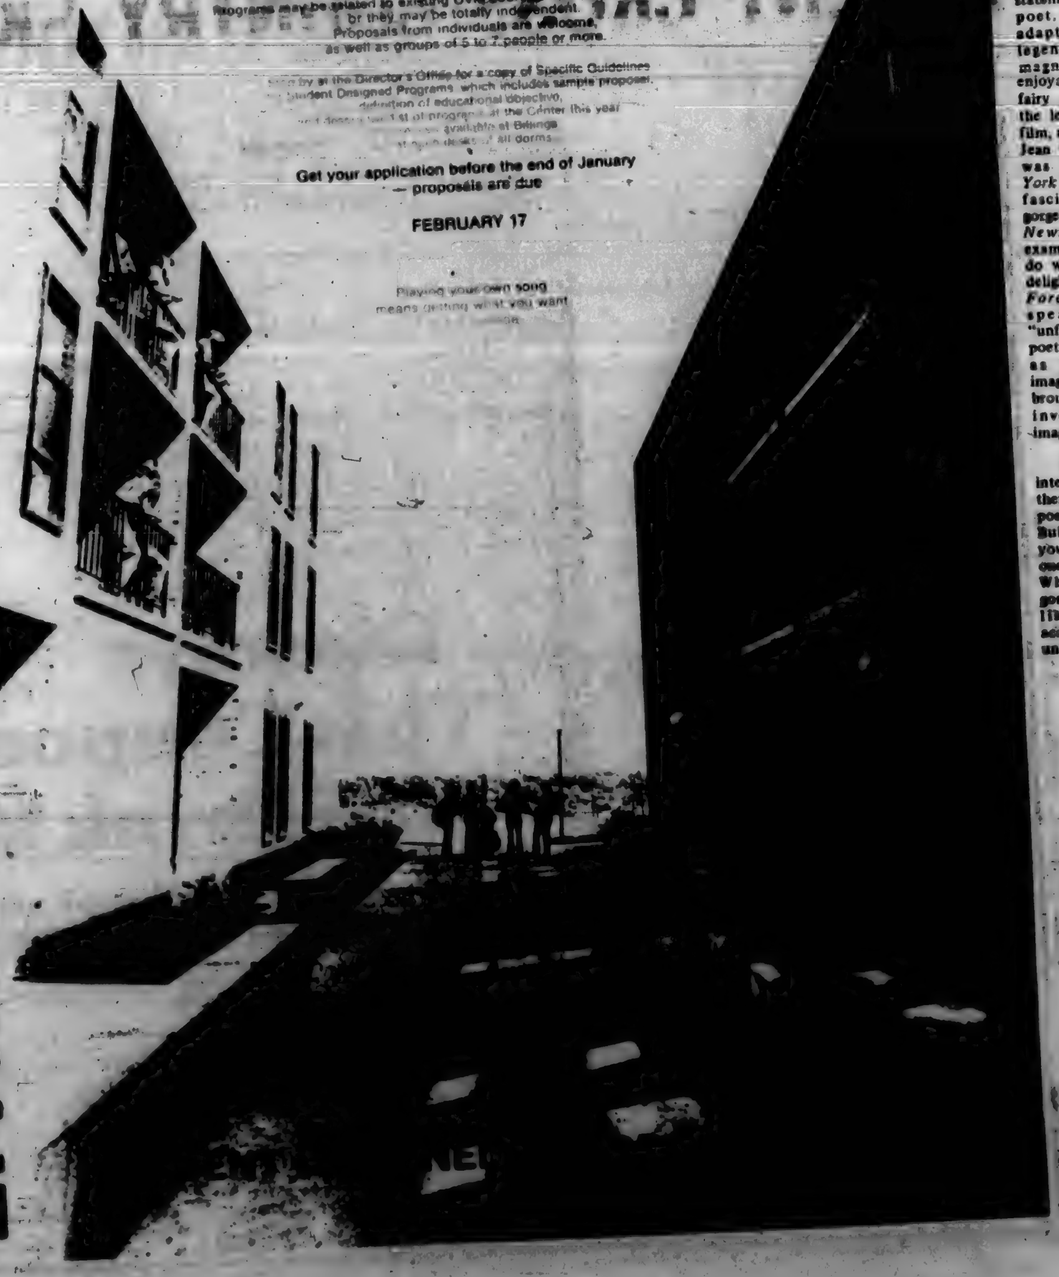
FEBRUARY 17

Playing your own song
means getting what you want

LIVING/LEARNING CENTER



DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
INC.
Route 2, Williston, Vt. 862-7666

FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES

560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 95 and 96's
24.95 inc. FET & mounting

VW BRAKE JOB $49.95
Includes: 8 new brake linings, 4 hub drums, rebuilt 4 wheel cylinders.

VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

Disadvantaged ... Mer...

Though Christmas has been over now for a month, it's hard to forget some of the good things that happened in the university's residence halls for Burlington's community, particularly the disadvantaged. Such was the case at the first Christmas Party last Dec. 7 for 150 underprivileged Burlington area children.

Members of several fraternities and sororities, the L/L nutrition program and the University Extension Service, plus aides and mothers entertained these children at Living-Learning. Games included "pin the nose on the reindeer" and a make-up table where both boys and girls had their faces painted, also "Clown w... where several bro... the clowns "attacked" with ... by the chi... undoubtedly ... brothers as well!

Santa Claus ... appearance and ... afternoon, a ... unicycle biked ... the Living-Learn... Room. Individua... each child were ... toward the end ... Saga provided ... bread for ma... with soda, shor... cream.

Special th... holiday success ...

SECOND SEMESTER FOOD ...

REGULAR DINING HOURS

	Mon.–Fri.
WATERMAN
Breakfast	7:15–8:15
Lunch	10:50–12:30
Dinner	4:30–5:45
	(closed Fri...
WRIGHT
Breakfast	7:00–8:45
Lunch	11:30–1:30
Dinner	5:00–6:30
SIMPSON
Breakfast	Closed
Lunch	Closed
Dinner	4:30–5:30
	(closed F...
HARRIS–MILLIS
Breakfast	7:00–8:30
Lunch	11:00–12:...
Dinner	4:30–6:00
LIVING/LEARNING
Breakfast	7:15–9:00
Lunch	11:30–1:...
Dinner	5:00–6:30
MARSH
Breakfast	Closed
Lunch	Closed
Dinner	5:30–7:...
	(closed
SNACK BARS, ETC.	Mon.–F...
CATAMOUNT DEN	7:30 a.m.
GIVEN CAFETERIA	7:30 a.m.–...
	11:15 a.m.
FACULTY DINING ROOM	8:30 a.m.
"WALTERS"	10:30 a.m.
WRIGHT SNACKBAR	7:30 a.m.
"THE WHITE MOUSE"	Closed
"REDSTONE STATION"	Closed
THE STORE– MARSH	2:00-7:00

CUSTOM ...

MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m.-7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

The ...
You take care of ...
...We'll ta...
For Men & Women

...or's Bag

...Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East...

...d recent warnings to the effect that if a ...ant while using the Dalkon shield and ... the pregnancy, it can be extremely ... Their is the IUD that was recommended ... now using.

...mendation is that if a woman becomes ... IUD, the device be removed because ... with an IUD is potentially hazardous. ... at this time could result in ending the ...

...what to do if one does have a Dalkon ...ered differently by different people. My ...nd safe approach is to keep the Dalkon ... place and you are having no difficulty ...blems crop up in the first few months of ... are past this time and it is working ...are good that it will continue to work ...

...e most things in life associated with ... is not free of problems. No method is ... hazards, convenient at all times, and ...hen again, neither is living.

...

...rather annoying problem. When I am in a ...tion (doctor's office, before a speech or ... etc.) my stomach growls, bowels gross, ...thighs and seat tingle. I often have to run ...e been like this ever since I can remember ...there any help (or hope) for me?

...m before a performance or speech is very ...alt in sufficient changes in heart-rate and ... phenomena to jeopardize the health of ...art conditions. To have anxiety of such ...re in many day to day situations is a ...intervention.

...y is triggered by fear even though the ...y anything particularly threatening in the ... a set of early life experiences involving ...such a problem started. If the symptom is ... describe,, it should respond to a rather ...ogram involving some simple behavior ...ques. The idea is that if you have become ...ound the way you do, you can also be ...h deconditioning makes use of verbal ...ed exercises. I suggest you give a call to ...ker or other mental health facility.

...ry, Rollins...

...ued)

...my name ...osed or ...d known ...til I came ... it in the ...

...ngressman ...n whether ...seriously ...sidency of ...he has had ... talk to the ... and the ...

...would want ...my interest ...ly on what ... selection ... determine

...Tom Rush

...e seven) ... moving ...erally being ...

...three LP's, "Merrimack ...ong End of ...ere on the ... He's going ...o soon with ...n and songs ...

...d record is ...trying one." ... want to do ...n't want to ...

Tom hasn't released in ...s personal ...le has been a ...tly appeared ...ndiences at ...(N.Y.), the ...(Washington, ... Orpheum ...). He is in ...t colleges and ...dam Point in ...d the Cellar their needs to be. Any interest or expression of interest would depend on an understanding of the views of the trustees and officials of the university on what the needs of the university are," Mallary answered.

He continued, "I have not been involved in the academic field; I do not hold an advanced degree and I'm sure that this would be viewed as an impediment."

Mallary added that he has no immediate plans for the future, and that he is still winding down his office in Washington.

Door in Washington.

When Tom's not working, he's relaxing on his sprawling farm on 400 acres of beautiful New Hampshire countryside. His hobbies include soaring (in a glider, of course) and sculpting. He's also planning to build a windmill on his property to generate electricity.

Winter Week...

(continued from page one)

Winter Week 1975 Activities. More information about all of these events is forthcoming via the Cynic, This Week WRUV, and posters throughout the campus. Don't wait until the last minute to get your tickets to these events. Become a part of a growing tradition at UVM, attend and support Winter Week 1975.

Specific information concerning all events may be obtained by calling Billings Center Information 656-2068.

...VE'S
...MOTIVE
...VT. 862-7686
...CAR REPAIR
...ALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
...AB 95 and 96's
...FET & mounting
...95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

Disadvantaged Had Merry Christmas

Though Christmas has been over now for a month, it's hard to forget some of the good things that happened in the university's residence halls for Burlington's community, particularly the disadvantaged. Such was the case at the first Christmas Party last Dec. 7 for 150 underprivileged Burlington area children.

Members of several fraternities and sororities, the L/L nutrition program and the University Extension Service, plus aides and mothers entertained these children at Living-Learning. Games included "pin the nose on the reindeer" and a make-up table where both boys and girls had their faces painted. There was also "Clown with sponges" where several brothers played the clowns and were "attacked" with wet sponges by the children and undoubtedly some of the brothers as well!

Santa Claus made an early appearance and later in the afternoon, a clown on a unicycle biked in and out of the Living-Learning Commons Room. Individual presents for each child were given by Santa toward the end of the party. Saga provided cold cuts and bread for sandwiches along with soda, sheet cakes and ice cream.

Special thanks for this holiday success goes to Sigma Alpha Epsilon, the Inter-Residence Association, Delta Psi, Lambda Iota, Theta Chi, Acacia, Alpha Gamma Rho, and the residents of the Living-Learning Center for donations of money and food coupons. Also a note of thanks to Zayre's Department Store for their 10% discount on all toys, and items purchased for the party. And special thanks goes to Tri Delta for making 200 cookies and to Sigma Alpha Epsilon for their enthusiastic participation and in providing Santa's trip from the North Pole. Special recognition also goes to Wilma Gilman and her colleagues in the nutrition program for organizing and carrying out the party through to its final success.

SECOND SEMESTER FOOD SERVICE FACILITIES HOURS

REGULAR DINING HOURS

	Mon.–Fri.	Saturday	Sunday
WATERMAN
Breakfast	7:15–8:15	Closed	Closed
Lunch	10:50–12:30	Closed	Closed
Dinner	4:30–5:45 (closed Friday)	Closed	4:30–5:45
WRIGHT
Breakfast	7:00–8:45	Closed	Closed
Lunch	11:30–1:30	Closed	Closed
Dinner	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30 (Redstone Station)	Closed
SIMPSON
Breakfast	Closed	8:00–8:30	8:00–8:30
Lunch	Closed	11:00–12:30	11:00–12:30
Dinner	4:30–5:30 (closed Friday)	4:30–6:00	4:30–6:00
HARRIS–MILLIS
Breakfast	7:00–8:30	Closed	Closed
Lunch	11:00–12:30	Closed	11:30–1:00
Dinner	4:30–6:00	Closed	5:30–8:00 (White Mouse)
LIVING/LEARNING
Breakfast	7:15–9:00	8:00–9:00	8:00–9:00
Lunch	11:30–1:00	10:30–12:30	10:30–12:30
Dinner	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30	5:00–6:30
MARSH
Breakfast	Closed	Closed	Closed
Lunch	Closed	11:00–12:30	Closed
Dinner	5:30–7:00 (closed Friday)	5:00–6:30	Closed

	Mon.–Fri.	Saturday	Sunday
SNACK BARS, ETC.
CATAMOUNT DEN	7:30 a.m.–10:30 p.m.	Closed	Closed
GIVEN CAFETERIA	7:30 a.m.–10:30 a.m. 11:15 a.m.–1:00 p.m.	Closed	Closed
FACULTY DINING ROOM	8:30 a.m.–3:00 p.m.	Closed	Closed
"WALTERS"	10:30 a.m.–Midnight	1:30 p.m.–1:00 a.m.	1:30 p.m.–1:00 a.m.
WRIGHT SNACKBAR	7:30 a.m.–10:00 p.m.	Closed	6:00 p.m.–10:00 p.m.
"THE WHITE MOUSE"	Closed	Closed	5:30–8:00
"REDSTONE STATION"	Closed	5:00–6:30	Closed
THE STORE– MARSH	2:00–7:00 p.m.	2:00–7:00 p.m.	Closed

On Campus Report

An advertisement currently being placed in campus newspapers has an even greater potential for fomenting readers' complaints than the long-running Seafax ads.

The Seafax ads promise, for the sum of $3, information on finding "jobs on ships." Purchasers of the material tend to cry "rip-off" when they discover what their $3 bought – a few mimeographed sheets with such banal advice as "check with maritime unions to see if any lines are hiring."

The new entry into the field is something called "How to Drive a Mercedes-Benz While Attending School" which, again for $3, promises to let the buyer in on a "system" the author "discovered" which enabled him not only to make money while going to school, but to "meet and work for powerful people from congressmen to Hugh Hefner."

Like the Seafax ads and the proliferation of "job-finding" ads which usually hit papers in the spring, the material sent in response to the latest ads is next-to-worthless. But the small charge and the fact that the material sent contains no author's name or return address assures the promoters that most buyers will simply write the purchase off as a lesson learned rather than take the trouble to file complaints.

"How to Drive a Mercedes-Benz..." gives advice in several categories. Here, for example, is the section on Food Concessions – in its entirety: "One of the easiest business (sic) to go into is selling food. It's something everyone needs and if your price and location are right, you'll have a customer. The classic, basic example of this type of tnterprise is the corner lemonade stand. Don't laugh! Fortunes have been made by people who started with little more."

Having thus launched hundreds of students on the road to riches in the fast-food business, the author goes on to fulfill another promise of the ad, the secret of "living in large, luxury apartments rent free with all utilities paid." The secret, readers learn, is to get a job as an apartment manager and the anonymous author even gives the tip that the local want-ads are the best place to find such a job.

The Seafax ads have been appearing regularly for several years in papers that will still accept them. That indicates that the operation is profitable and at least marginally legal. But the promoter of the "How to Drive a Mercedes-Benz..." scheme may have made a fatal error. The ad refers to the publication as a "handbook" numerous times. It's doubtful that a judge would find that an accurate description of the material, a few loose mimeographed sheets containing the equivalent of two single-spaced pages of copy.

Political Prisoners Trial Set In Plattsburg

by Jesse Clemens

Not so many people have heard of Martin Sostre, a political prisoner on trial in Plattsburgh, New York. Sostre's case never gained wide publicity and a big support movement as did Angela Davis.

Sostre is a black man who ran an Afro-American bookstore in Buffalo, N.Y.'s black ghetto. He also used the bookshop to hold classes and community meetings.

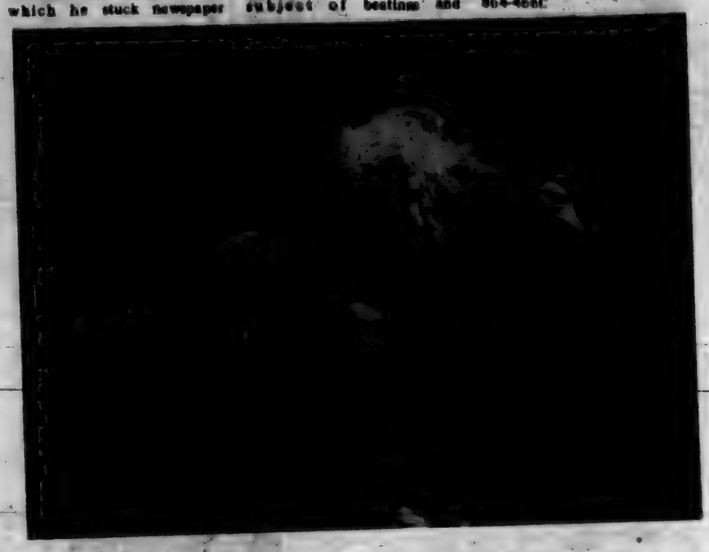
Soon after he opened up the bookstore, the police made it known to Sostre that they did not like him or his storefront. During civil disturbances in Buffalo in June, 1967, Sostre's bookstore was the subject of constant surveillance and occasional attacks by the police. Firemen broke the windows on the pretext of putting out a fire next door. When Sostre replaced the windows with hardboard, on which he stuck newspaper articles and neighborhood bulletins, police were seen tearing them down.

On July 4, 1967, Arto Williams, a known drug addict, entered Sostre's shop. He later testified that he had bought heroin there. The shopkeeper and his assistant were arrested. Sostre was tried, convicted, and sentenced to a possible 40-year sentence. Williams' testimony was described by Sostre's lawyer as "absolutely essential to Sostre's conviction." Williams was the only person who testified directly to the State and was a participant therein. Williams since admitted he lied about the drug charge.

The Buffalo police officer who organized the frame-up of Sostre was dismissed from the force for "misplacing" a quantity of heroin. The State of New York still holds Martin Sostre in jail. He has been the subject of beatings and harrassment, and has been put in solitary confinement because he refused to submit to rectal searches and to shave off his beard.

Sostre has a trial date on Feb. 12 to review his case. He will be in Plattsburgh and a caravan of his supporters is being organized to show that such a gross denial of justice and human rights will not be tolerated.

Martin Sostre needs our help. Recently, Amnesty International, an organization with consulting status with the United Nations, named Martin Sostre as Prisoner of Conscience for the month of October, publicizing his plight as a political prisoner in our country which claims it has none. If you want more information on Martin Sostre's case, or would like to assist, call Vermonters for Justice, 864-4661.



From left to right, Sarah Brooke, Peter Kurth and Susan Selig in the up-coming production of MACBETT

RENT CROSS COUNTRY SKIS

$2.00 A DAY WEEKDAYS

$4.00 A DAY WEEKENDS

Open Daily 9:30-6:00
Saturday 9:00- 5:00
Fridays Till 9:00 PM

THE SKI RACK
81-85 Main St.
A Block Below The Howard Bank
Try It You'll Like It

Bank Americard
Diners Club
Master Charge

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

MONDAY-TUESDAY 9 a.m.-7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m.-8:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

The Head Shop

152 Church St.
Burlington, Vt.
862-6945

You take care of the inside of your head...
...We'll take care of the outside.

For Men & Women

We'll Work It Out

Communication Disorders Center Gets Accredited

The Eleanor M. Luse Center for Communication Disorders at the University of Vermont has been granted full accreditation by the American Speech and Hearing Association.

The Center is now the first fully accredited clinical program in the state and the only fully accredited center offering speech pathology services in northern New England.

Dr. Mary Wilson, director, said the accreditation came after a year-long period of consideration, a process which included submission by the Center of an 80-page report and a visit by a site committee.

In its letter notifying the University of the accreditation, the Association's Professional Services Board said of the Center, "There is an energetic and involved staff which manifests concern with the needs of their patients and the community... The program director and the staff clearly support the concept that a strong clinical program is needed for effective training in speech pathology and audiology... Overall facilities are good. The board has no hesitation at this time in recommending full accreditation."

The Center offers a broad range of diagnostic and therapy services for the public, both children and adults, as well as providing speech pathology and audiology courses for University students. A total of 45 students major in this area, and 18 graduate students are working for advanced degrees, with a staff of nine handling Center activities.

Services are offered for persons with language acquisition problems, articulation, voice, stuttering, adult aphasia, post-laryngectomy speech and voice problems, reverse swallow syndrome and communication difficulties associated with cleft palate and hearing loss.

In the 12-month period ending in August, the Center saw a total of 1,307 clients. These included 143 diagnostic evaluations as well as 128 therapy clients attending a total of 3,257 half-hour units of service at the Center. In addition, staff members from the Center saw clients in community outreach programs, the Addison Northeast School District, St. Albans Town School, South Burlington School District and area Headstart/Day Centers. Hearing screening services were provided to many area day care and nursery schools.

The Center is scheduling clients for a preschool remedial language group which will begin in February, as well as an adult stuttering group. For further information on these or other programs available through the Center, call Mrs. Dee Rudolph, administrative associate, at 656-3861.

Living/Learning Programs Encouraged

by Gloria Wagda

Marcia Rogers has recently joined the Office of Volunteer Programs in the newly created position of Placement Counselor. The Special Projects Fund of United Community Services is supporting the Placement Counselor position for the purpose of involving more community people in OVP's volunteer support services. It is Marcia's responsibility "to provide counseling and the organizational back up in a way that the needs of both the volunteer and community agency are identified, respected and fulfilled.

Marcia's credentials include extensive personal as well as academic experience. She received her Master's degree in existential psychology from Goddard College and studied psychodrama at the University of Chicago. Her training includes an advanced personal growth lab and advanced leadership training at the National Training Laboratory in Bethel, Maine. Marcia led workshops on group process and group leadership and facilitated staff development for various units while on the group dynamics staff of Vermont State Hospital in Waterbury. This work also included team building and attitude examination. Marcia was the facilitator for the medical staff of Vermont State Hospital for a year and a half. Furthermore, she did attitude examination work with the Corrections Department, specifically working with the guards from corrections centers and Windsor prison. For three years Marcia co-led group therapy sessions in the maximum security unit. Also, Marcia taught group dynamics at Goddard College for the Adult Degree Program and the undergraduate program. Marcia also led personal growth labs for Visits Volunteers and organization development work for Planned Parenthood of Vermont.

Explaining why people become volunteers, Marcia cites job experience and career exploration as major contributors. Students who have integrated on the job learning and evaluation at an agency with their academic studies, will have an advantage later in job hunting. However, OVP is not limited to dealing with only students; many various kinds of people are anxious to gain experience in the social services and community volunteers are encouraged.

Vitally concerned with providing very real support to an agencies and volunteers, Marcia has just designed a new application form for volunteers which will further aid in the learning of applicant's needs, abilities, training and direction. Also, an indication of skill building needs will be resolved. A part of the application is a contract of experience to be negotiated by the volunteer and the agency supervisor stating time commitment, purpose, responsibilities, training experiences/workshops attended (offered by OVP), and a record of submitted evaluations. This clear statement of commitment between the volunteer and the agency can be useful in clarifying expectations. It will also serve as documentation for the volunteer of the learning experience, useful in future job-hunting. This demanding process of matching volunteers and agencies is a very serious one which is crucial to mutual satisfaction.

Marcia believes that OVP can also facilitate the understanding of experiential learning, as it differs so greatly from traditional learning. Here, the experience is the base from which the learnings can be drawn rather than the accumulation of technical information and then its application. Marcia realizes that for the learning and the service to be a positive experience, they must be integrated and balanced. Needs can be looked at in various ways and with a stimulating give and take relationship, volunteers can expand their horizons as previous desires are clarified and acknowledged. Volunteerism becomes very similar to paid employment when supported by the system OVP is developing: training; follow-up; evaluation and supervision.

One final announcement from Marcia is that OVP is offering a Problem- Solving Practicum for volunteers and agency volunteer supervisors. It is OVP's hope that weekly practicums will be viewed as a place to develop problem solving skills. Perhaps it can be a forum for sharing such things as: difficulties in a big brother-little brother relationship; project difficulties; communication problems; etc. Regular attendance is not required. The practicum will meet promptly, every Tuesday afternoon 1-2:30 p.m., beginning January 28, 1975, at the OVP office.

Missing anything in your studies? Thought about something you'd like to do that would make it all more worthwhile, in your own opinion?

If you've a special project in mind, you might arrange for credit, and even earn some support money, in a student designed program at the Living/ Learning Center.

For campus living that means more than a sleeping space and keg parties, read on. Following is a condensed form of the Center's Specific Guidelines for Student Designed Programs, 1975-76, just published. It's how you get first priority at the Center next year.

A major part of the Living/ Learning Center's mission is to provide a setting for learning that fosters the integration of academic and social experience, increased student responsibility for their own education, and self-motivated learning. Toward that end, the Center provides living and working space, resource people and modest financial support for individuals and groups of students who want to take a hand in promoting their own educational goals.

Who May Apply? Any full time UVM student or group of students from any college, with any major, and from every class, are eligible. Proposals from individuals are welcome, though group proposals which show special usefulness for the 5 to 7 person suite arrangements within the Center will be given priority.

What Kind of Programs Are Eligible? Any proposal with educational objective appropriate for university support is welcome. A proposal may be a supplement to existing courses of study or may explore a totally new educational direction for the students and for UVM. Students may arrange for academic credit, but this is not absolutely necessary.

Highest priority will be given to programs which offer the potential to maximize learning for the participating students.

How Is Acceptance Determined? A committee of students, faculty, staff, and Living/ Learning Center residents will evaluate all proposals. Some of the criteria (not necessarily in order of priority) on which the committee will base its decisions are:

1. What and how much do the students propose to learn?
2. Is the proposal innovative?
3. How well is the proposal organized?
4. Can the proposal realistically be accomplished?
5. Do the students involved give indication of the necessary experience and talent? Are proper outside resources utilized?
6. How clear is the proposal? How well do the activities reflect the objectives?
7. Can the Center provide the necessary facilities?
8. Is the cost of the program within the Center's budgetary limitations?

What Must Proposals Contain?

1. Title page: title of proposal, names, class, addresses and majors of participants, name of student program director.
2. Statement of the proposal: (one or two sentences) What do you want to do and why?
3. Objectives: What are the proposed measurable outcomes? Be specific, there may be more than one, and they should be of educational value.
4. Procedure: What activities are planned to meet your objectives? Independent research? Guest speakers? Field of research? etc.
5. Evaluation: How will you decide whether the objectives are being met? How can the Center decide this? What type of evaluative information will be collected? Will it be analyzed?
6. Participation: How will the outcomes of your work be shared with others?
7. Facilities: What facilities do you need? Space? Special equipment? Services?
8. Personnel: Who and why were the participants in the proposal selected? If they have special backgrounds or expertise, explain in one or two short sentences.
9. Budget: What will your project cost? How much is requested from the Center? Be as specific as you can be at this point. If your proposal is accepted, we'll work out a more definite budget later in the semester.

Interested? Pick up a full copy of the guideline, with a sample proposal and budget, at the Center office, Billings, or main desk of any dorm.

OVP Appoints New Placement Counselor

OVP Seeks Requests For U.Y.A. Volunteers

The staff of the Office of Volunteer Programs (OVP) at The University of Vermont is currently planning for the August, 1975, round of University Year for Action (U.Y.A.) placements. The staff invites any and all Vermont human service agencies, whether public or private to submit requests for U.Y.A. volunteers prior to February 15. Through U.Y.A., which has been operational at UVM for three years now, students commit themselves to working full-time for one calendar year in organizations serving low-income Vermonters. Students normally live in the Vermont community where they serve so as to become an integral part of that community and received a monthly "living allowance" of about $200.00 to this end. Through a variety of negotiated arrangements, the U.Y.A.'s retain their affiliation with UVM and thereby earn a year's academic credit.

To date, nearly 200 UVM students have spent their internship year working in 45 human-service agencies around Vermont. The range of U.Y.A. project assignments has been broad, including the areas of housing, consumer protection, legal services, corrections, health care, education, economic development, environmental protection and social services.

Typically, a U.Y.A. internship is a cooperative arrangement among the student, the host agency, sponsoring faculty member(s) and the Office of Volunteer Programs (OVP) staff. The process of developing a U.Y.A. internship normally begins when a community service agency identifies a specific task and forwards an appropriate job description to the Office of Volunteer Programs. OVP will then recruit a student with the requisite skills to fill the job and assist that student in finding appropriate faculty sponsors. In addition to faculty support, OVP assists students in locating other university and community resources for use on their projects. These include part-time volunteers, materials from the media center, classroom space, use of the OVP van, access to student-generated funds, and specially-designed pre-service and in-service training workshops.

U.Y.A. students have benefited greatly from their intensive, para-professional involvement with host agencies. They have the opportunity to develop new skills, to integrate theory and practice and to test out possible career options prior to graduation. Frequently, U.Y.A. students provide a valuable, enduring human resource to Vermont communities. About 50% of graduated U.Y.A. interns have subsequently been employed by Human-Service Agencies in Vermont.

OVP expects to place between 50 and 60 U.Y.A. volunteers in August. Through a cooperative arrangement with the Vermont State Colleges, about 25% of this group will be students at the State Colleges while the remainder will be UVM students. Community organizations interested in acquiring U.Y.A. volunteers should inquire, by phone or mail, at the following address as soon as possible.

Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
25 Colchester Avenue
University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont 05401
Telephone No.: 656-2062

Men's Ladies' & Kid's
HOCKEY & FIGURE
SKATE SALE
20% OFF
ONE MILE SOUTH OF BURLINGTON ON ROUTE 7
OPEN 9 to 9 M-F
SAT. 9-5
Valuga Sports
1230 SHELBURNE RD. South Burlington, Vt. 862-1931

Start the Year off on a Bright Note
-PAINT your room, apartment, car, dog, or roommate
To get you started
★ 20% off all supplies with a valid UVM ID
★ free helpful advice-questions welcome
Come see us for everything you need from paint hats to paint
PITTSBURGH® PAINTS
61 Main Street
863-6866

Nate's Connection
Specials for Friday & Sat. Jan 24 - 25
BARGAIN DAYS
One Large Group of our Famous Brand JEANS Val. to 14.00 $7.76
COTTON FLANNEL SPORT SHIRTS Reg. 12.50 NOW $8.88
Cuffed PLAID DRESS SLACKS Reg. 12.00 to 20.00 25% off
Assorted Bon Homme Shirts & Forum Sweaters 25% off
LEATHER & SUEDE COATS 20%
NATE'S CONNECTION
UPPER CHURCH ST.
BURLINGTON

NAZ DAR COMPANY
NAZDAR SILK SCREEN SUPPLIES
Benjamin Moore BENJAMIN MOORE & California Paints CALIFORNIA PAINTS
SPECIAL DISCOUNTS TO STUDENTS WITH ID
VERMONT PAINT CO.
138 No. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
862-0201

UVM To Host Wi... Ski Carnival

by Norm Robinson

One of the biggest ski carnivals in the East, the UVM Ski Carnival, is coming soon, on Jan. 30 - Feb. 1, at Smugglers Notch and Williston. The Alpine events will take place at Smugglers and Williston will be the site of the Nordic events.

Eleven teams comprise the Carnival, of which include, Dartmouth, Middlebury, New Hampshire and many others.

Vermont, who has finished third in the nation for the past two years, behind Colorado and Wyoming, is the best in the East and is looking to be even better this year. The best skiers in the East that are not on the national team level are expected to be there in what promises to be one of the best meets this year.

The entire squad is returning for the Cats, who are led by four All-Americans. They are: racers Dave Dodge and Chris Brown; alpine captain Dick Erdman and nordic leader, Petter Kongsli. "This is the biggest turnout we have ever had for the UVM team, with over 30 candidates reporting for fall drills," added head coach Chip LaCasse.

In the alpine, Vermont is blessed with some of the top young collegiate ... East. Freshmen D... and Jeff Darrow ... the Can-Am series ... Peter Teasdale, a g... the Stratton Mt. ... and Brooks Dodg... Burke Mt. School ... freshmen. The Alp... coached by one ... instructors in (... Mickey Cochran, ... should have one ... racing teams in the ...

On the Nord... runner Stan D... Kongsli, who wa... jumping champio... and no. 2 in the ... 1973. Joining the ... runners Trygve ... Morton Gaarud ... Joe Lamb, Dave ... Grant Donoven ... many other top a...

LaCasse believ... strongest team in ... ski at Vermo... upcoming Carniv... great chance to s... action. Smuggle... not very far away ... is even closer so ... chance, go see ... and the many fi... the East th... competing.

Records Set As S...

Last Saturday afternoon saw a record setting meet at the Forbush Pool. The UVM Cats played host to the St. Lawrence Saints. No less than nine pool, varsity, and freshman records were swept away. Both teams were racing neck and neck to the last event with St. Lawrence just tipping the scales 59 to 54.

The meet started off with the breaking of the 400 Medley Relay freshman record. The relay team of Pete Gelhaar, Warren Hoffman, Mark Haan, and Peter Andrews toppled the old record by 3 seconds. The next record to fall was the 200 yd. freestyle. Again we saw a freshman, Ron Kirkwood, setting a torrid ... both the freshm... records in the ... freshmen the li... UVM swimm... destined for ... glory in the futu...

In the divi... Piche had a fi... hard work daz... giving him fir... the one and ... diving. Doug ... and varsity re... meter event s... to break the ... the three me... has the unpr... of holding ov... at the Univers...

With all ...

PFG-Schedul...

PATRICK-FORBUSH-GUTTERSON SCHEDULE
WEEKEND OF JAN. 24, 25, 26
FRIDAY, JANUARY 24
GYM - Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m.
POOL - Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m. (...
RINK - Faculty-Staff, 7-10:30 p.m. (...
TRACK - Faculty-Staff, none.
SATURDAY, JANUARY 25
GYM - Students, 7-10 p.m.
POOL - Students 1-5 p.m. and 7-10:3...
RINK - Students, none.
TRACK - Students, 7-10 p.m.
SUNDAY, JANUARY 26
GYM - Students, none.
POOL - Students, 3:30-5 p.m.
RINK - Students 6:30-10 p.m.
TRACK - Students, 3:30-5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By ... Call 656-3069. All recreation may be sup... activities or special events.
MONDAY (through FRIDAY
POOL - Student use, 8:30-10:30 p.m.
GYM - West Court only 7-8.
All other facilities - 7-8 p.m.

MAGRAMS

TH... OU... GL...
It's just ... knee-hi... stripes ...

ncouraged

research? Guest speakers? Field of research? etc.

5. Evaluation: How will you decide whether the objectives are being met? How can the Center decide this? What type of evaluative information will be collected? Will it be analyzed?

6. Participation: How will the outcomes of your work be shared with others?

7. Facilities: What facilities do you need? Space? Special equipment? Services?

8. Personnel: Who and why were the participants in the proposal selected? If they have special backgrounds or expertise, explain in one or two short sentences.

9. Budget: What will your project cost? How much is requested from the Center? Be as specific as you can be at this point. If your proposal is accepted, we'll work out a more definite budget later in the semester.

Interested? Pick up a full copy of the guideline, with a sample proposal and budget, at the Center office, Billings, or main desk of any dorm.

eks Requests

A. Volunteers

then recruit a student with the requisite skills to fill the job and assist that student in finding appropriate faculty sponsors. In addition to faculty support, OVP assists students in locating other university and community resources for use on their projects. These include part-time volunteers, materials from the media center, classroom space, use of the OVP van, access to student-generated funds, and specially-designed pre-service and in-service training workshops.

U.Y.A. students have benefited greatly from their intensive, para-professional involvement with host agencies. They have the opportunity to develop new skills, to integrate theory and practice and to test out possible career options prior to graduation. Frequently, U.Y.A. students provide a valuable, enduring human resource to Vermont communities. About 50% of graduated U.Y.A. interns have subsequently been employed by Human-Service Agencies in Vermont.

OVP expects to place between 50 and 60 U.Y.A. volunteers in August. Through a cooperative arrangement with the Vermont State Colleges, about 25% of this group will be students at the State Colleges while the remainder will be UVM students. Community organizations interested in acquiring U.Y.A. volunteers should inquire, by phone or mail, at the following address as soon as possible.

Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
25 Colchester Avenue
University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont 05401
Telephone No.: 656-2062

NAZDAR
SILK SCREEN SUPPLIES

BENJAMIN MOORE
&
CALIFORNIA PAINTS

AL DISCOUNTS TO STUDENTS WITH ID

MONT PAINT CO.
No. WINOOSKI AVE.
URLINGTON, VT.
862-0201

UVM To Host Winter Ski Carnival

by Norm Robinson

One of the biggest ski carnivals in the East, the UVM Ski Carnival, is coming soon, on Jan. 30 - Feb. 1, at Smugglers Notch and Williston. The Alpine events will take place at Smugglers and Williston will be the site of the Nordic events.

Eleven teams comprise the Carnival, of which include, Dartmouth, Middlebury, New Hampshire and many others.

Vermont, who has finished third in the nation for the past two years, behind Colorado and Wyoming, is the best in the East and is looking to be even better this year. The best skiers in the East that are not on the national team level are expected to be there in what promises to be one of the best meets this year.

The entire squad is returning for the Cats, who are led by four All-Americans. They are: racers Dave Dodge and Chris Brown; alpine captain Dick Erdman and nordic leader, Petter Kongsli. "This is the biggest turnout we have ever had for the UVM team, with over 50 candidates reporting for fall drills," added head coach Chip LaCasse.

In the alpine, Vermont is blessed with some of the top young collegiate skiers in the East. Freshmen Doug Bruce and Jeff Darrow competed in the Can-Am series last winter; Peter Teesdale, a graduate from the Stratton Mt. Ski School and Brooks Dodge from the Burke Mt. School are both freshmen. The Alpine team is coached by one of the top instructors in the country, Mickey Cochran, and UVM should have one of the top racing teams in the East.

On the Nordic team are runner Stan Dunklee and Kongsli, who was the Eastern jumping champion last year and no. 2 in the NCAA's in 1973. Joining the two are top runners Trygve Kjolseth and Morton Gaarud and jumpers Joe Lamb, Dave Larson and Grant Donovan along with many other top athletes.

LaCasse believes this is the strongest team in the history of ski at Vermont and the upcoming Carnival will be a great chance to see Vermont in action. Smugglers Notch is not very far away and Williston is even closer so if you have a chance, go see the SnowCats and the many fine skiers from the East that will be competing.

NORM'S NOTES

The Vermont basketball team has gone on a tear in the past weeks and have a 9-5 record (as of press-time). Most recently the Cats have defeated UMass and Maine twice.

Over the past two years coach Peter Salzberg has been able to muster only nine wins in each campaign. With a 6-1 mark in the Yankee Conference the Vermont squad leads the loop, a very different spot for the University to be in.

With 12 games to play, including tough matches with Connecticut, UMass, and two games apiece with Rhode Island and Boston University the Cats will have a difficult time staying on top. Let's look at the present however.

Coach Salzberg has a team built around seniors Joe Greco and Terry Green and backed by talented underclassmen Warren Prehmus, Ron Gottschalk, Mark Cubit and others. Vermont has played good team basketball all year and this has accounted for their success. If one man falters or is injured (as is the case of Charlie Trapani) another takes his place.

The fans have caught on of late and the Patrick Gym is rocking for the first time in years. There is no doubt that the Cats will exceed last year's record and although it is doubtful, win the Yankee Conference. If this is to happen, Vermont must continue to play inspired basketball and get outstanding performances at each outing.

Although lacking in the great height that many teams have, the Cats have the extra determination and hustle that was lacking in the past. Talent, hard work, fine coaching, and that little something extra, make up a good basketball team. Vermont has all of that, and only time will tell how good they really are. One thing is certain though, Vermont basketball is better than last year, and it is getting better with each contest. With a little bit of luck and support, they may go farther than anyone thought they could.

As the new sports editor, there are many things I hope to do in the upcoming weeks and months. I'm interested in the fans' ideas and thoughts, so if you have an idea, question, or complaint, please write and let me know. I'm always welcoming any help that you can give.

Icecats Trounce Norwich 10-3

Michel Lebeau scores in first period action against Norwich. SPS Photo: Dick Low

by Norm Robinson

Vermont, toning up for this Saturday's important contest with RPI, destroyed Norwich by a score of 10-3 at Gutterson Field House, Tuesday night.

Led by Tim O'Connell, with two goals and three assists, and Bill Koch with a couple of goals and assists, the Cats wrecked havoc on goalie Jay Peacock with 48 shots. One of the four dozen shots hit Peacock in the mask in the third period but he was not seriously injured and finished the contest.

UVM actually won the game in the first period when they outscored Norwich 4-0 and totally controlled play, outshooting the Cadets 15-9.

Michael Lebeau scored first for Vermont, flipping a shot over the out-spread Peacock. O'Connell and Ken Yeates got assists.

At the 6:11 mark, Bill Reber notched the second tally when he slipped the puck under the falling Cadet goalie.

Tom Colby tipped a Yeates slapshot at the 8:23 point to give the Icecats a 3-0 lead. Throughout the period fine, crisp passing gave UVM scoring opportunities on Peacock.

The final goal, and the one that proved to be the game winner, was scored by O'Connell. After taking a pass from defenseman John Glynne, Tim faked past one defender and beat Peacock on a weak wrist shot between his legs.

In the second period, a power play goal on a Bill Spence wrist shot and John Murphy's second goal of the season, gave Vermont a 6-0 lead before Norwich scored.

After the face off following Murphy's goal, Cam McGregor got by the Vermont defense and beat McNamara as he fell into the net. This made it 6-1 after two periods.

As the third period opened, Peter Reynolds took over the net duty for Vermont. McNamara ended up with 12 saves and Reynolds was to get seven in the final frame to total 19.

Jim Segar made it 6-2 when he flipped a rebound past Reynolds at the 2:58 mark.

Within the next three and a half minutes the game was definitely in the bag if it already wasn't, Andy Rickard stuffed one past Peacock and moments later, Bill Koch lit the lamp on a rebound shot by O'Connell.

After another Cadet goal by Ed Cadigan, O'Connell scored his twentieth goal of the season with a power play goal. Assists went to Bill Koch and Rogie Mallette. With two assists, Mallette is now tied with Fred Hunt for fourth place in UVM's All-Time scoring with 132 points.

Vermont's final goal, although of little significance in the game, was history. Bill Koch scored on a slapshot after receiving a pass from Tim O'Connell. With O'Connell's assist, he moved into second place in All-Time scoring at UVM. Only Pat Wright is ahead of O'Connell with 152 points. Tim has 147 and is in excellent position to break the record within the next few games.

Although the game was not one of the most exciting ever, it did have a few high points. Andy Halford looked good; as did John Glynne on defense.

It appeared as though the game was no more than a hard workout in preparation for RPI. The Cats passed well, and played a tight, tough defense, clearing the puck from in front of the net and working in the Corners.

Sometimes it is good for a club to get a breather in the schedule, and Vermont certainly had that on Tuesday. This Saturday will be a different story though. RPI defeated UVM 4-3 earlier this year and it promises to be a great game. The Cats are healthy, are ready to make the surge that will be needed to carry them into the playoffs. The Icecats are now 10-8 overall and remain 6-2 in Division I. After the RPI game, Vermont hosts New Hampshire on Wednesday and B.U. on Friday.

Records Set As Swim Team Loses To St. Lawrence

Last Saturday afternoon saw a record setting meet at the Forbush Pool. The UVM Cats played host to the St. Lawrence Saints. No less than nine pool, varsity, and freshman records were swept away. Both teams were racing neck and neck to the last event with St. Lawrence just tipping the scales 59 to 54.

The meet started off with the breaking of the 400 Medley Relay freshman record. The relay team of Pete Gelhaar, Warren Hoffman, Mark Haan, and Peter Andrews toppled the old record by 3 seconds. The next record to fall was the 200 yd. freestyle. Again we saw a freshman, Ron Kirkwood, setting a torrid pace breaking both the freshman, and varsity records in the event. With freshmen the likes of these the UVM swimming team is destined for more years of glory in the future.

In the diving events Doug Piche had a field day. Piche's hard work dazzled the judges, giving him first place in both the one and the three meter diving. Doug broke the pool and varsity records in the one meter event and then went on to break the pool record off the three meter board. Piche has the unprecedented honor of holding every diving record at the University.

With all of these records being broken UVM looked to be a shoo-in to win the meet, but the Saints were not standing idly by. They were setting records in the 200 I.M., the 500 yd free, and the 400 yd freestyle relay.

The relay fought neck and neck to the last event. Of the 400 spectators no one was left sitting as the relay teams stepped to the starting blocks. Unfortunately UVM was disqualified and the Saints won the meet. Other stand-outs at the meet were Cliff Johnson placing first in the 200 yd backstroke, and co-captain Mike Kurt powering his way to a first place in the 200 yd breaststroke.

This Wednesday the Cats go away to Keene State, to even up their win-loss record. Then on February 1, they are back home to tangle with the UConn Huskies. This meet has been a big school rivalry for the last ten years. More record breaking is in store.

UVM-St. Michael's

Tickets are still available for the Vermont at St. Michael's basketball game at the new Ross Sports Center January 27. Ticket office hours at the Dept. of Athletics: 9 to 5 and until 4 p.m. Monday, January 27. Admission for all students $1.00. All others purchase at the ticket office at the Ross Sports Center, St. Michael's College.

PFG-Schedule

PATRICK-FORBUSH-GUTTERSON RECREATION
SCHEDULE
WEEKEND OF JAN. 24, 25, 26
FRIDAY, JANUARY 24
GYM – Faculty-Staff, 7–10:30 p.m.
POOL – Faculty-Staff, 7–10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15 yrs.)
RINK – Faculty-Staff, 7–10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15 yrs.)
TRACK – Faculty-Staff, none.
SATURDAY, JANUARY 25
GYM – Students, 7–10 p.m.
POOL – Students 1–5 p.m. and 7–10:30 p.m.
RINK – Students, none.
TRACK – Students, 7–10 p.m.
SUNDAY, JANUARY 26
GYM – Students, none.
POOL – Students, 3:30–5 p.m.
RINK – Students 8:30–10 p.m.
TRACK – Students, 3:30–5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.
MONDAY through FRIDAY
POOL – Student use, 8:30–10:30 p.m.
GYM – West Court only 7–8.
All other facilities – 7–8 p.m.

Vermont Wins...

Kevin Kelly

(continued from page twelve)

easy layups by Mark Cubit and Terry Green to ice the contest.

Ron Gottschalk led Vermont with 21 points. Warren Prehmus and Terry Green chipped in with 14 and 12 points respectively. The win gave Vermont an 8-5 overall record and 4-1 conference mark. The loss dropped Maine to 4-6 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

Cats Take Second Straight 84-67...

(continued from page twelve)

and added seven assists as he effectively penetrated the Maine zone. Richbow only had six but played a solid floor game and was in the lineup down the stretch. Although Palmer had fouls and didn't score, the initial second half spurt came when his defensive play led to steals and easy scores.

Ron Gottschalk

For Maine, Warner had 36 and 13 rebounds. But after his performance, the next high rebounder Tom Burns had only four and the next high scorer Mike Poplawsky had but seven.

With these two big conference victories, UVM is now 5-1 in conference play. Not since 1967-68 have they won that many in the conference. Overall, the nine wins matches the season's total for each of the last two years. After last night's contest with St. Lawrence, the Cats host UConn in a Saturday afternoon contest of extreme importance. Vermon only lost by six to the Huskies in December. The rematch will have important bearing on the conference race. A large crowd is expected for the 3 p.m. game.

MAGRAMS It's an Experience

They're here!
our sensational
GLUV-SOX
It's just great! Our beautiful collection of knee-high toe socks. Super patterns and stripes that go with funny looking toes. $5.
WAY IN SHOP

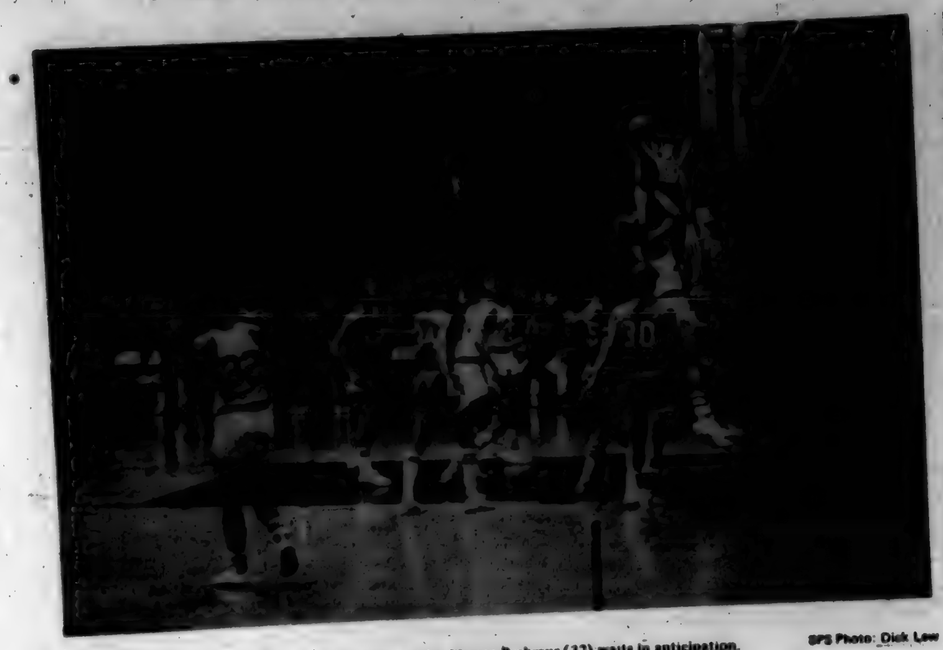
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!!!!
DOMINO'S PIZZA
FREE DELIVERY
Fri. & Sat. till 2.00am
Sunday till 12 midnight
864-7444 WILLISTON ROAD
658-3333 N. WINOOSKI AVE
SUPPER SPECIAL! Mon.-Sun. 4.30-8.00 pm.
$1.00 off a LARGE PIZZA
NAME
ADDRESS
PHONE

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon
COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE
SR50 149.95 124.95
SR11 79.95 67.95
99.95 87.95
69.95 49.95
Must Have This Coupon

Full Scientific
Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by EIS
Associate Stores
Burlington – Essex
Barre-Montpelier

Cats Trip Maine On Friday 69-59



Ron Gottschalk idying one in against Maine on Friday night. Warren Prehmus (32) waits in anticipation. SPS Photo: Dick Law

by Randy Briggs

Friday night at the Patrick Gymnasium before a crowd of 2,500, the University of Vermont basketball team defeated the University of Maine Black Bears, 69-59.

Vermont jumped out to a quick 8-2 lead on two baskets apiece from Ron Gottschalk and Bernie Palmer. But then Maine ran off eight straight unanswered points of their own to take a 10-8 lead. The lead then switched hands numerous times before Vermont, on a 25 foot jumper by Warren Prehmus with just two seconds left in the half gave the Cats a 29-27 lead heading into the locker room.

Vermont opened with a tight man to man defense and to combat this Maine attempted to get the ball into 6-6 Bob Warner, who was consistently working himself free in close for easy baskets. Warner finished with 14 first half points which caused Vermont to have trouble penetrating the ball. What offense that Vermont could muster in the first half was from Ron Gottschalk who had 12 points.

The second half opened with Werner getting an easy layup to tie the score at 29-29. Warren Prehmus who was held to only two first half points, then hit on a jumper to give the Cats a two point lead. Prehmus was instrumental in the second half as he kept Vermont in the contest with 12 points.

Maine continued to look for Warner, who kept slipping away from Vermont defenders and getting easy baskets. Warner finished with a game high of 30 points and 14 rebounds.

With 4:45 to go in the game, Mike Richbow hit on a jumper to give Vermont a 53-51 lead which they never relinquished. With around 2:20 left in the game Vermont went into a four corner stall offense in hopes of protecting their, 59-55 lead at that time. As a result of this Maine had come out and put pressure on Vermont. This allowed Vermont to get a couple of

(continued on page eleven)

PFG—Hours

At the start of a new semester, an outline of the recreation hours available to students, faculty, and staff is in order. It should be kept in mind that changes in class schedules, varsity and JV games, Physical Education events, and other special events will at times supersede these hours. Since many of these take place over weekends, a special weekend report will be published each week.

STUDENTS

Monday through Thursday – Pool, 8:30-10:30 p.m.; Gym, West Court only, 7–8 p.m.; All other facilities, 7–8 p.m. and also as follows: Track (not center area) until 10:30 p.m.; Handball and Squash, 4:15–11 p.m., but by appointment only, at all times.

Friday – 4-7 p.m.

Weekends – Saturday 1-5 and 7-10 p.m.; Sunday 1-5 p.m.

FACULTY AND STAFF

Monday through Friday–

All facilities, 12:15–1:15 p.m.

Friday Evening – All facilities 7–10:30 p.m. (Pool and ice, 7-8 for children of faculty and staff under 15 years, accompanied by parents)

JV Hockey Schedule

1974-75 Junior Varsity Schedule

Jan. 25 Sat. RPI – 3:00
Jan. 29 Wed. Northwood – 3:00
Feb. 1 Sat. at Middlebury – 3:00
Feb. 14 Fri. at New Hampton Prep – 7:15
Feb. 15 Sat. Kimball Union – 2:00
Feb. 19 Wed. at Norwich – 3:00
Feb. 21 Fri. at RPI – 3:30
Feb. 22 Sat. New Hampton – 2:30
Feb. 26 Wed. Plattsburg State – 7:00
Mar. 1 Sat. at Plattsburg State – 7:30
Mar. 5 Wed. at Kimball Union – 3:00

UVM SPORTS

Mike Richbow takes a jump shot as Terry Green jockies for position underneath. SPS Photo: Dick Law

UVM Takes Second Straight

by Mike Schwartz

As in most cases, the balanced attack will beat a one man show. The Vermont basketball team drew away late in the second half to defeat Maine 84-67 to sweep a two game series with the Bears of Orono. In winning the game last Saturday afternoon at the Patrick Gym, the Cats upped their Yankee Conference record to 5-1 and their overall record to 9-5.

The Cats, down at the half by five, outscored Maine 51-29 in the second stanza. They also contained the one man wrecking crew, Bob Warner who had but 10 second- half points. Nevertheless, Warner proved a most exciting player to watch under the boards at both ends of the court. He totaled 66 points in the two games and if his teammates played better offense, the Maine Bears would have been a tough foe.

Maine actually jumped out to the early lead in the game. With 10 minutes gone in the first half they led 24-12 with Warner scoring 18. After a Mark Cubit jumper that made the score 8-6, Maine scored 10 points in a row to make it 18-6 and then 24-12, But Barry Cohen and Mike Richbow entered the game and Vermont closed the gap. Cohen and Richbow did the same in the second half.

Ron Gottschalk scored two baskets off offensive rebounds to make it 24-18. Kevin Kelly who replaced foul- plagued Bernie Palmer, added seven, the last two making the score Vermont 29, Maine 28.

But at the tail end of the half, Bob Zak hit a layup, Warner scored off a steal, and Steve Condon did the same. Maine left the floor at the half with a 38-33 lead.

For Maine, Warner was the offense. He had 26 points as he shot 10 of 12 from the floor and added 6 foul shots. The next high scorer, Condon, had only 4. Vermont controlled the boards and had more balanced scoring, the key to their success. Kelly led with his seven. Gottschalk and Terry Green each had six. Warner's inside shooting gave Maine a 57 per cent field goal average. Vermont was a cold 40 per cent.

But in the second half the Cats put it all together. The bench came through and Warner was contained. The point guards were able to penetrate the Maine zone and outside shooting added another dimension to the attack.

The half started with rough and sloppy play. The score was close and was tied at 57-57 with seven minutes remaining. But Warner who lost his dominance was tagged with his fourth foul and left the game. Gottschalk made a foul shot and Prehmus hit a jumper. Warner came back but could not play as aggressively.

Meanwhile, Palmer made some key plays and Cohen effectively ran the offense. Cohen hit a jumper, Prehmus tipped in a Palmer shot after Palmer stole the ball. Prehmus then stole the ball himself and layed it in. Richbow also got into the stealing act and his basket finished an 11-2 spurt that gave Vermont a 68-59 lead. Palmer fouled out but his play was a key to the spurt.

Kelly came in for Palmer and nothing was lost. Cohen made a three-point play and a Prehmus layup made it 73-63. Then Kelly scored on a layup, two free throws, and a three pointer. With a minute left Vermont was up by 15 at 80-65. The final tally was 84-67.

Vermont had outshot Maine 27-10 over the last seven minutes in a total team effort. As in the Friday night encounter, the Cats played their best in the late going to pull out the victories.

The Cats shot 36 per cent in the second half while Maine had only 46 per cent accuracy. Despite a height disadvantage, the Cats controlled the boards 41-24 with Gottschalk hauling down 12 rebounds. Many players had six and seven rebounds.

The scoring continued the balanced effort. Green and Prehmus each had 16. Kelly had 16, most at important times in both halves. Gottschalk finished with 13. Other players contributed in other ways. Cohen scored seven points when it counted

(continued on page eleven)

Bateman To Go To Brown

Bob Bateman has found a home. One of the nation's top passers has decided to go to Brown University in Providence, R.I. Bateman was second in the nation in Division II.

Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Brown were Bob's final three choices.

"All three had good reasons to go there, but I have watched Brown all my life and my father played there, so I had some incentive to play at Brown.

Brown has an excellent economics program, which is Bateman's major and Bob also looked over the Brown playbook and liked Coach John Anderson's ideas. Anderson is known for the option, multiple offense and a great deal of play action. Last year, Brown was 5-4 after being last in the Ivy League for years.

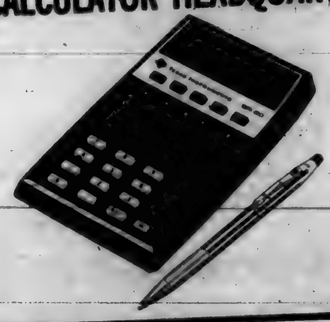
Coach Anderson did not actively recruit Bateman but he did tell Bob that he was interested in him coming to Brown. Anderson is in his third year at Brown and has previously coached at Dartmouth College, Boston College, and Middlebury.

Bob Bateman has won many awards in this past year, among them the Golden Helmet Award for his play against Massachusetts, All Yankee Conference, AP All-New England, and received Little All- American mentioned.

Bateman will have his hands full winning the starting job because as of now, Sophomore Paul Malocco is considered to be the starter. Bob will not be handed it because of his seniority and will have to fight to win thr spot outright.

University Store

YOUR ON CAMPUS CALCULATOR HEADQUARTERS



Texas Instruments electronic calculators

SR16 $89.95 formerly 99.95

SR11 $69.95 formerly 79.95

Scientific Pocket Calculator

SR50 $124.95 formerly $149.00

HP55 HAS ARRIVED $395.00 PROGRAMABLE

QUANTITIES LIMITED

Hewlett Packard HP35 Full Scientific $175.00 formerly $225.00

ONLY ONE LEFT

Melcor SC 535 $75.00 formerly $129.00

UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

University Store

For sale: 1 pair of used Raichle Ski Boots, good condition $25, size 9½ men; 1 pair of low-cut work shoes, brand new $15, size 8½ men. Call David Entin, Waterman Dining Hall, 3156 (days) or 121 S. Willard St., 2-0310 (evenings).

Head 360's w/ look Nevadas 200 cm; Nordica and Lange Pro boots, size 10 and 10½; Ski racks, cheap. Scott 655-1393.

For sale: Dynaco A-35 Stereo Amplifier, 17½ watts RMS per channel, high filter, loudness contour bought new for $120.00. Sell now for $60.00. Excellent condition. Call Mike at 862-4684.

Winter Drivers! Don't get stuck! Once used tire chains for sale. Fits E70-14, F78-14, E70-15 tires. $12. Call 862-6832, ask for Bill.

Ride available to Elmira or Ithaca, Ny. on Thursday, Jan. 30 afternoon, return Sunday. Help with gas. Call 862-6832, ask for Bill.

For sale: 2 pairs of used snow tires size B78-13, $35 for the pair and size 7.75-14, $40 for the pair. If interested, call Pat at 656-4260.

For Sale – Triumph Spitfire '69 convertible – good condition. Call 985-9248.

For Sale: Norge Wringer Washer – works great. $20.00. 879-6242 evenings.

For sale: Almost new earth shoe boots. Size 7.75 women; 5.75 mens. Price $30 (new $45). Please call 985-8575.

For sale: Quality Stereo Components: ESS Heil Amt I's Speakers: E-V Interface A's; Studio Craft 440's; Harman Kardon Citation 11 and 12 amp, preamp. Thorens 125MKII turntable with Shure SME arm plus S + O SP 12 cartridge. Marantz 115 tuner. Everything new within last year. (Good prices – going to Grad School). Call Tom – 864-7607; Sun.–Weds. 12–4 p.m.; Thurs–Sat. 12–8 p.m.

Wanted: Mike on Train by Benzene and Icarus (Hardcover and separate paperback). Call 862-6285 – Leave message and phone number.

durham

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

MAZEL'S

194 North St.

Levi's CORD BELLS & STRAIGHT LEGS OF DURAWALE PLUS Improved Shrinkage Control

Going places? Go in comfort and style in Corduroy Bell Bottom and Straight Leg Jeans. Now in Durawale Plus – a special blend of polyester and cotton corduroy that limits shrinkage to three per cent.

Choose from a wide variety of colors. Cord Bells and Straight Legs for the most in comfort and fit.

Pants Plus

12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.

10% off with valid UVM ID

864-0181

VALUABLE COUPON

SAVE

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS (prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY

ACROSS FROM The Medical Center

SAVE

SKI REFINISHING

Fill in gouges with P-Tex
Flat File Bottoms
Sharpen Edges
De-Burr Edges
Buff n Wax

$6.00 for normally worn skis

FIRST CLASS JOB COMPAIRABLE TO FACTORY

OPEN 9 to 9 M-F

SAT. 9-5

Valuga Sports

1250 SHELBURNE RD. South Burlington, Vt. 862-1451

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 23 JANUARY 30, 1975

VSC Turn

by Margo Howland

The trustees of the Vermont State Colleges voted Saturday against a proposed bill, S-37, which would merge the five state colleges with the University of Vermont. The vote was 8-0

The trustees also voted to retain the office of the President at each of the colleges. Proposals to centralize the administrations of the colleges were sent back for further study. At present, the presidents of Lyndon State and Vermont Technical College plan to resign June 30.

The action of the trustees concluded two days of meetings which saw marked disapproval from numbers of faculty and students on the two proposals.

Vermont State College Chancellor Dr. William G. Craig of Burlington has been an avid supporter of a merger of the state colleges with the University. Craig is concerned about the cuts made by Governor Salmon in the legislative appropriations to the VSC; the cuts amount to a reduction of $51,000. Centralization of the college administrations within VSC, a completely separate proposal, when combined with other cuts in a administrative overhead, would hopefully save $220,920.

Concerned students and faculty were invited to make their feelings known at the start of the Trustee's meeting, Friday night. The response was overwhelming. An estimated 150 persons crowded the "Burlington Room" of the Holiday Inn in South Burlington when the meeting began at 7:30.

Student le... voiced concer... of education ... and offered ... working out ... proposed cut... disagreed wi... consolida... administratio... place a Dean ... in the place ... leave one ... the five colle... – Such a r... d v c l a r ... "depersonali... "The admini... aware of nee... miles away... Student A... Janice Liber...

Liberty ... Associat... regarding c... it was impo... "people tha... affect m... students." ... also questi... making adj... retaining se...

"We are ... creation of ... said.

Liberty ... legislature ... budget ... mandate ...

"We ... legislature ... education ... integrity ... education ... State Col... State Coll...

Dick ... Tech c... "depersonal... to take ... result fro... UVM ...

Mac A...

Trustees Revi...

by Mark Bowyer

The Board of Trustee... Finance Committee reviewed several tuition related revenue-raising options in the morning session of the January 22 board meeting.

In December the Board passed a measure increasing in-state tuition by $95 to $1,045 and out-of-state tuition by $215 to $2,865 effective Fall semester, 1975.

Further tuition increases are virtually certain to offset an anticipated 1.5 million dollar deficit for fiscal year 1976, the major question being what segments of the University population will shoulder the burden.

Among the potential options raised at the committee meeting were:

– Imposing a graduate student differential tuition rate. Currently, graduate students pay the same tuition rate as undergraduates. This proposal raised the question of whether UVM could maintain a competitive stauts with other schools offering graduate education. Executive Vice-President Wayne Patterson felt students would still come but Executive Vice-President Alfred Rollins pointed out that demand varies among departments.

– Lowering the maximum number of credit hours a student can take without paying an extra charge. Currently students can take 18 credit hours per semester before being charged per extra hour. The average undergr... 15.5 cr... although ... profess... required ... requirem... ceiling ... tuition ... out-of- ... trustee ... in-state ... another ... within ... Preside... cited po... the rea... – C... or coll... chair... sophom... rate th... Stude... Agric... greater ... state ... rates ... college ... caution ... a situ... could ... progra... C... the ... out- ... Prese... policy ... ratio ... out-of ... appe... from ... tuition ... noted ... mix ... 50-50 ... but ... the ...

Downtown Protest

ORTS

...ition underneath. SPS Photo: Dick Law

...nd Straight

...ent dominance was tagged with his fourth foul and left the game. Gottschalk made a foul shot and Prehmus hit a jumper. Warner came back but could not play as aggressively.

Meanwhile, Palmer made some key plays and Cohen effectively ran the offense. Cohen hit a jumper, Prehmus tipped in a Palmer shot after Palmer stole the ball. Prehmus then stole the ball himself and layed it in. Richbow also got into the stealing act and his basket finished an 11-2 spurt that gave Vermont a 68-59 lead. Palmer fouled out but his play was a key to the spurt.

Kelly came in for Palmer and nothing was lost. Cohen made a three-point play and a Prehmus layup made it 73-63. Then Kelly scored on a layup, two free throws, and a three pointer. With a minute left Vermont was up by 15 at 80-65. The final tally was 84-67.

Vermont had outshot Maine 27-10 over the last seven minutes in a total team effort. As in the Friday night encounter, the Cats played their best in the late going to pull out the victories.

The Cats shot 56 per cent in the second half while Maine had only 40 per cent accuracy. Despite a height disadvantage, the Cats controlled the boards 41-24 with Gottschalk hauling down 12 rebounds. Many players had six and seven rebounds.

The scoring continued the balanced effort. Green and Prehmus each had 18. Kelly had 16, most at important times in both halves. Gottschalk finished with 13. Other players contributed in other ways. Cohen scored seven points when it counted

(continued on page eleven)

...OUPON

SAVE

...ENTS
...MBERS
...cluded)
...OUNT
...ASES AT
...HARMACY
...Center

...HING
...P-Tex
...ms
...s

...00

...n skis

Valuga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE RD
South Burlington, Vt
862-1961

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 23
JANUARY 30, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

"Tis a privilege to live in Vermont

VSC Turns Down Merger

by Margo Howland

The trustees of the Vermont State Colleges voted Saturday against a proposed bill, S-37, which would merge the five state colleges with the University of Vermont. The vote was 8-0.

The trustees also voted to retain the office of the President at each of the colleges. Proposals to centralize the administrations of the colleges were sent back for further study. At present, the presidents of Lyndon State and Vermont Technical College plan to resign June 30.

The action of the trustees concluded two days of meetings which saw marked disapproval from numbers of faculty and students on the two proposals.

Vermont State College Chancellor Dr. William G. Craig of Burlington has been an avid supporter of a merger of the state colleges with the University. Craig is concerned about the cuts made by Governor Salmon in the legislative appropriations to the VSC; the cuts amount to a reduction of $51,000. Centralization of the college administrations within VSC, a completely separate proposal, when combined with other cuts in administrative overhead, would hopefully save $220,920.

Concerned students and faculty were invited to make their feelings known at the start of the Trustee's meeting, Friday night. The response was overwhelming. An estimated 150 persons crowded the "Burlington Room" of the Holiday Inn in South Burlington when the meeting began at 7:30.

Student leaders repeatedly voiced concern for the quality of education at the colleges and offered to participate in working out alternatives to the proposed cuts. Students also disagreed with proposals to consolidate the several administrations, which would place a Dean as the top officer in the place of a president, and leave one central office over the five colleges.

Such a move, the students declared, would "depersonalize" the students. "The administration cannot be aware of needs if they are sixty miles away," said Castleton Student Association President Janice Liberty.

Liberty read the Student Association's position regarding centralization, saying it was important to hear from "people that centralization will affect most--and that's the students." The position paper also questioned the wiseness of making administrative cuts yet retaining secretaries.

"We are not happy with the creation of superagencies", she said.

Liberty suggested that the legislature might reconsider the budget cuts if the public mandate were strong enough.

"We appeal to the legislature to sufficiently fund education; to maintain the integrity and quality of the education of the Vermont State Colleges and Castleton State College", she concluded.

Dick Dean from Vermont Tech commented on the "depersonalization of students to case numbers" that would result from centralization.

UVM S.A. President Peter Mac Ausland voiced disappointment over the low UVM turnout(this reporter saw one faculty member) and suggested that if the merger were to save money, UVM might do well to look at its graduate programs and make cuts there instead. The S.A. at UVM had not taken a stand on the merger proposal at the time of Friday's meeting.

Castleton students asked why they hadn't seen the proposals. "It is important for us to be involved from the beginning if we are going to participate effectively in alternatives. How come so late?" one student wondered.

Chancellor Craig said that the position papers had been prepared for the presidents and the boards, and that they contained some suggestions, programs, ideas and concepts for discussion.

"It hasn't been our habit in the past to lend them out to the students. Maybe they should be sent to all campuses," he answered.

Craig has emphasized that the proposed merger and the consolidation of the administrations within the Vermont State Colleges were ideas to reduce costs. "If it doesn't save money, I'm not interested," the Chancellor declared Friday night.

Castleton S.A. President Janice Liberty when contacted by the Cynic, gave her reaction Monday to the action of the trustees.

"I can't help but think it was beneficial to the students. I think they were very fair in the time they allowed us to speak. I'm glad they didn't back the Soule bill, and I am glad they sent the Chancellor back to work two things out (on centralization): Will it hurt the quality of education, and will it cost less money. This is what the people - the students and faculty were asking," she responded.

Craig asked Friday night, "What are the alternatives? We are very much concerned with the decisions we are making... we would like to keep the system as autonomous and personal as possible."

Legislator and former Barre Mayor Cornelius Granai received a standing ovation when he thundered, "Education! That's what these colleges are for, education! The men you make will respond tomorrow to what you give them today."

Where are we going? $15 million to blacktop highways and they say they haven't got money to give you an education!

I'd rather see a good American on a poor road than a lousy American driving on a good road," he retorted.

SA Senate Dissolves

by Kathy Stiasni

The Student Association has been dissolved. The following motion was passed in Tuesday night's meeting by a roll call vote of 27.8 per cent of the senators for dissolution and 22.9 per cent against.

"I move that the S.A. Senate of the University of Vermont be dissolved. The functions and duties of the Senate shall from this time forward be performed by the President of the S.A., his cabinet, and all other committees appointed by the President. The President shall be elected by the student body in September of each year and shall appoint the members of his cabinet. The Office of Student Activities shall conduct the election process."

The motion, proposed by town senator Ed Pasqualin, was carried through largely as a result of pressure from the town senators. Pasqualin who had planned to resign regardless of the outcome, attacked the Senate as being an "impotent body", a "token organization." "We don't warrant front page news," he said.

Pasqualin argued that students take no interest in S.A. because its sole functions lie with budgeting allocations to other student organizations. The Senate "won't take a position." He cited the senators' apathy toward the Philosophy Four and Underpass issues.

Those opposed to dissolving the Senate turned the discussion toward the motion in old business that those senators who have attended less than half the S.A. Senate meetings of the fall term be required to resign.

This motion was found to be unconstitutional since involuntary resignations can only occur if 15 per cent of a senator's constituency agrees to his removal from office.

There was an amendment to this motion requesting rather than requiring delinquent senators to resign.

However, the discussion returned to the ineffectiveness of the Senate. A question was raised as to whether the decision to disband the Senate should lie with the student body at large or the senators. It was generally felt that the senators were in the best position to evaluate the Senate and thus to decide its fate.

Many senators felt that the dissolution of the Senate would motivate the formation of another more effective organization. Proponents of this viewpoint argued that the Senate could not improve within the present structure.

There will be a meeting next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. for all those interested in the future of student politics at UVM.

Following is the roll-call on the vote to dissolve the S.A.

Senators who voted affirmative on the motion:

Dave Carlon - CHITTENDEN
Dallas Sacher - COOLIDGE
Cynthia Murphy - MILLIS
Donald Adler - TOWN SENATOR
Rob Roy Macgregor - TOWN SENATOR
Artie Miller - TOWN SENATOR
Edward Pasqualin - TOWN SENATOR
Eric Tabas - TOWN SENATOR
Laurel Merrill - ALPHA CHI OMEGA
Peter Haines - LAMBDA IOTA
Dan Haslam - SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Senators who voted negative on the motion:

Bill Dean - BUCKHAM
Bill Klipp - CHRISTIE
Cathy Chamberlin - HARRIS
Lorraine Gonzalez - JEANNE MANCE
Zip Farrell - L/L E
Janet Walsh - MCAULEY
David Schwartz - SIMPSON
Steve Wilensky - WILDS
Chris Basil - WILLS
Terry Sheehan - ACACIA
Steve Hazelton - ALPHA TAU OMEGA
Bob Bennett - KAPPA SIGMA
Kim Goslant - PHI GAMMA DELTA
David Carey - SIGMA PHI

Senators who were absent:

Tim McGrath - AUSTIN
Ernest Laird - CONVERSE
Martin Kimiatek - HAMILTON
Harold Booth - L/L A
Pam Weiss - L/L B
Valerie Murray - L/L C
Allegracia Evangelista - L/L D
Tom DiCampo - MARSH
Larry Abel - MASON
Jane Pembroke - PATTERSON
David Walker - ROBINSON
Bill Drake - SLADE
Denise Glasco - TUPPER
Jeryl Parade - WING
Kevin Martin - WRIGHT
C. Earl Coggins - TOWN SENATOR
Arthur Newcombe - TOWN SENATOR
Lawrence A. Onley - TOWN SENATOR
Sheldon Roesch - TOWN SENATOR
Edward White - TOWN SENATOR
Laurie Rapp - ALPHA DELTA PI
Joanne Puente - DELTA DELTA DELTA
Evelyn Liberty - GAMMA PHI BETA
Becky Hawkins - KAPPA ALPHA THETA
Sherrie Donald - PI BETA PHI
David Ainsworth - ALPHA GAMMA RHO
Mike Calcagni - DELTA PSI
Rob Desautels - PHI DELTA THETA
Peter Welsh - SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON
Thomas Wheeler - SIGMA NU
Andy Clark - THETA CHI

SA Analysis

by Mary Gilbertson

At a seemingly regular meeting of the Student Association Senate Tuesday (Jan. 28) night, a motion was matter-of-factly brought to the floor to dissolve the Senate and was, incredibly, passed. Thus the UVM student body is left with essentially no student government (IRA covers only dorm government).

Town Senator Ed Pasqualin, who has been actively involved in the S.A. for the past 2½ years, suggested dissolution during discussion on another motion which would have required all Senators who have missed five or more meetings to resign. Pasqualin declared that the Senate is a token organization with no real powers.

Few senators had strong reactions to Pasqualin's recommendation, and under New Business rules were suspended and Pasqualin formally moved that the "S.A. Senate of UVM be dissolved." The not-so-heated discussion centered around whether students at UVM really do have any power when it comes to administrative decisions. The consensus was that the S.A. is basically impotent when it comes to the administration. Yes, students are placed on trustees' committees and financial advisory committees... but they never have a vote.

Dean Powers asked for the floor and then stated that the S.A. Senate really does look better "from the outside than it seems to you on the inside." Chairperson Lou Marchesin asked him to save his comments for somewhere else.

From the standpoint of an observer who has attended all S.A. meetings this year, it seems there are two major ongoing problems which led to the eventual demise of the S.A. -- poor attendance by senators, and lack of any real power.

50.73 of the voting percentage of the S.A. was at the meeting Tuesday night to dissolve the Senate. The organization has been plagued by poor attendance all year and a motion had just been passed to ask all Senators missing five or more meetings to resign. Why was the attendance so poor all year? -Lack of dynamic leadership?

a feeling of futility when faced with the sometimes insurmountable wall of the administration?

Lack of Power? In the past two years the Senate -- recommended the infirmary location not be moved, it was -- recommended the underpass not be built, it looks like it will be -- sat on Board of Trustees committee meetings with no voting power. These and other instances make it look as if the S.A. Senate is an innocuous token of the administration which enables Waterman to say they had student input into various decisions concerning UVM. As Cindy Murphy, Senator from Millis, put it, "they are getting away with giving us a crumb from the cake and we're taking it." Has the S.A. ever really pushed for a vote in the decision-making process at UVM?

Several Senators -- Andy Towle, Bill Dean, Cathy Chamberlin, and others -- fought to retain the Senate stating that at least it was a starting point from which a more effective government could be set up. We shouldn't "cut off our nose to spite our face," said Towle. They saw a rejuvenation of the Senate as possible while Pasqualin and other experienced UVM legislators cynically announced that it has been tried again and again, and maybe the UVM student body doesn't want or need a governing body any longer. Is it better to have an "ineffective" student government than none at all?

The pattern for the past several years in student government here at UVM has been one of apathy. The Senate has been functioning merely as an organization to allocate moneys, recognize organizations and make a show of some power. The "rubber-stamping" could be done by an executive committee, Waterman could hand out money to various clubs as easily and probably as well. As it stands, President Peter MacAusland and his cabinet now have all the powers formerly possessed by the Senate. A meeting of all students interested in forming a new student government will be held next Tuesday (Feb. 4) at Billings Center.

It was time for the S.A. Senate to either do something to justify its existence or dissolve. Perhaps it was a cop-out -- an unwillingness to try again. The "Tuesday night Senator" won out against those few who were willing to give some real time and effort into making the S.A. something worth belonging to. It is ironic that with barely a majority of the voting power present (50.73%) the Student Association Senate died with a whisper 27.8% to 22.93%.

Peter Macausland by Don Green

Trustees Review Tuition Options

by Mark Sawyer

The Board of Trustee Finance Committee reviewed several tuition related revenue-raising options in the morning session of the January 22 board meeting.

In December the Board passed a measure increasing in-state tuition by $95 to $1,045 and out-of-state tuition by $215 to $2,865 effective Fall semester, 1975.

Further tuition increases are virtually certain to offset an anticipated 1.9 million dollar deficit for fiscal year 1976, the major question being what segments of the University population will shoulder the burden.

Among the potential options raised at the committee meeting were:

-- Imposing a graduate student differential tuition rate. Currently, graduate students pay the same tuition rate as undergraduates. This proposal raised the question of whether UVM could maintain a competitive stauts with other schools offering graduate education. Executive Vice-President Wayne Patterson felt students would still come but Executive Vice-President Alfred Rollins pointed out that demand varies among departments.

-- Lowering the maximum number of credit hours a student can take without paying an extra charge. Currently students can take 18 credit hours per semester before being charged per extra hour. The average undergraduate student averages 15.5 credit hours per semester although students in some professional programs are required to take more.

-- Eliminating the legal requirement that sets a 40% ceiling on the level of in-state tuition as a percentage of out-of-state tuition. One trustee pointed out that in-state tuition could be raised another $100 and still be within the 40% ceiling. President Edward Andrews cited political considerations as the reason for the lower level.

-- Charging tuition by class or college. Many universities charge freshmen and sophomores a higher tuition rate than juniors or seniors. Students in colleges like Agriculture that provide greater direct benefits to the state could pay lower tuition rates than students in other colleges. Patterson, however, cautioned the trustees to avoid a situation where Vermonters could not afford expensive programs.

-- Changing the student mix, the ratio of in-state to out-of-state students. Presently, it is University policy to maintain a student ratio of 60% in-state to 40% out-of-state. Andrews said the appeals cost the University from $100,000 to $200,000 in tuition per year. It was quickly noted that the differentiation mix could be adjusted closer to 50-50 over a five year period, but reminded the trustees of the issue's political nature.

-- Stiffening residency requirements. Residency of students into in-state and out-of-state categories is a highly volatile legal issue and the trustees could find themselves in court on this matter.

Other proposals at the meeting included raising summer school and evening division tuition rate, a medical school tuition differential, and increasing admission application fees.

In an interesting comment, President Andrews briefly mentioned the Cornell Plan which entails all students paying one tuition rate with the state subsidizing in-state students. The administration rejected a similar proposal put forth by Professor Robert Daniels last fall.

Trustee Luthur Hackett asserted that the Board does not want to run a deficit and has no particular interest in raising tuition. He emphasized, however, that any combination of options, including non-personnel budget cuts, any package of tuition proposals, and short term deficit spending could be employed to meet UVM's financial needs.

Hackett said the trustees will develop a strategy with the administration in requesting more funds from the state. Assessing the total situation Hackett said, "At this point the ball is definitely in the legislature's court".

Veterans Protest In Burlington

by Stephen W. Tanner

Members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War/Winter Soldier's Organization held a demonstration at noon Monday in front of the Burlington Federal Courts Building to demand that the United States conform to the Paris Peace Agreements made exactly two years ago.

A group of about 40 protestors, coming and going, totalling 60 in all, held posters reading "Universal Unconditional Amnesty for War Resisters", "Honor the Peace Agreements, End All Aid to the Thieu and Lon Nol Regime", and "Decent Benefits for all Vets". One girl played a harmonica while another marched in the picket line with a placard, "Is It a Crime to Follow Your Conscience?".

After half an hour of picketing, the group paused to hear David Ross, spokesman for the VVAW/WSO.

Said the young veteran:

"We demand that the U.S. Government honor the peace agreements... We say 'enough' to U.S. support of the Thieu and Lon Nol Regime. It is time the government saw that war is wrong and amnesty is right. The people demand the the U.S. honor the Peace Agreements and not the phony fraud the Ford Administration is offering."

Then, holding a copy of the agreements, Ross moved to the door of the Federal Building and pasted the document to the door. A security guard immediately came out and removed the bill. However, demonstrators refused to take it back, saying, "That's your copy. Keep it."

After the rally outside the Federal Courts building, a group of about 20 went into the office building and upstairs to the offices of Sen. Jeffords and Rep. Stafford. There the demonstrators reiterated their demands to the office staff working for the two men: 1. Honor the Peace Agreements/ End all Aid to Thieu and Lon Nol. 2. Universal Unconditional Amnesty for all War Resisters. 3. Decent Benefits for all Vet. 4. Single-type Discharge for all Vets. 5. Jobs or Income for all.

Ross noted, "This demonstration is successful due to the word of mouth communication of people just knowing each other and caring enough to come down."

Downtown Protest

Trustees Accept Andrews' Resignation

by Mark Sawyer

University of Vermont Trustees accepted the resignation of President Edward C. Andrews, Jr. in a January 22 meeting and structured a committee to seek a successor to the post. Andrews resigns June 30 to accept a position as President of the Maine Medical Center.

Trustee Luthur Hackett read a resolution commending Andrews for his seventeen years service to the university and state community, accepting his resignation "with the greatest reluctance and with a particular sense of loss".

Andrews thanked the faculty, staff, administrators, and "99% of the Board members who have contributed to the University" and said he leaves with "great, great feeling".

Trustee Robert Boardman of Burlington will act as chairman of the twelve-member presidential search committee. Francis Poisch of Burlington urged the committee to make speedy recommendations to the Board and opposed the naming of an interim president.

(continued on page ten)

Featured This Week

Vermont Five UM Upsets UConn p.12

Macbeth: An Eerie Trip Into Deja Vu p. 6

Calendar/Announcements . . . p. 2
Doctor's Bag . . . . . p. 8
Op. Ed. . . . . p. 5
Sports . . . . . p. 11

This paper is recyclable. Call Robinson Hall for more information, 656-3084.

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

T.V. Critics Wanted

Have you witnessed any incredibly worthwhile prime-time game lately? Most likely you've encountered credibly horrible T.V atrocities that bore and disgust. In either case, why not review your most favorite or most detested show for the next issue of the Cynic. Here's your chance to bruise Kojack's bald head, start your very own urban renewal project on the Streets of San Francisco or puncture holes in Jacque Cousteau's oxygen tanks!

Don't miss this long-awaited opportunity to smash the tube toobe syndrome. Contact Bob DeNike at 656-2036 or the Cynic office at 658-4911.

UVM's Women's Caucus Meetings

A women's consciousness-raising group, sponsored by the UVM's Women's Caucus, regularly holds its meetings Tuesday nights, 7:00, at the Blundell House on Redstone Campus. Interested women are welcome. For further information contact Mary Ellen Martin, 899-3423, or Pat Boselman, 862-9331.

VPIRG Refunds

10:30a.m.to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, February 3-7.

Get Involved In OVP

Now is the time to get involved...

Now is the time to earn academic credit for the work you do outside of the classroom...

Now is the time for OVP...

The Office of Volunteer Programs needs you to fulfill various volunteer placement positions offered throughout the Burlington community. Next week during the two Fair days in Billings North Lounge, agencies and volunteers alike will be available to show you alternatives to the classroom learning situation. This is experimental learning: intellectual development by experience, by doing. Not only will you be helping the community and children of Burlington, but by defining your needs and goals, self-satisfaction is inevitable.

A sampling of areas of involvement includes such programs as: Council for Exceptional Children, Big Brother/ Sister Program, Information and Referral (I&R), University Year for Action, etc. The time has come to consider the value of your education, your total education. Please, consider us, the Office of Volunteer Programs.

Hang Gliders

The Vermont Hang Glider Association will hold its third meeting on Friday, Feb. 7, 7 p.m. at Proctor Hall, Middlebury College. A classification system for rating pilots will be discussed. Anyone interested in hang gliding is encouraged to attend. For more information write Box 1048, Stowe, Vermont, or call 253-8300.

Good News/Bad News From Saga

On February 3, 1975 the price of coffee, and tea will increase 5 cents.

Almost without exception the local restaurants, coffee shops etc. currently charge 20 cents and 25 cents for coffee and have for some time. This price adjustment is required to help maintain the Fiscal integrity of UVM's snackbars and ala carte dining rooms.

This is BAD NEWS and we'll try to gloss it over with a lot of Fancy Fiscal Footwork.

On the GOOD NEWS side, we will be offering ½ pints of yogurt from the Cabot Co-operative for 40 cents. You may not realize it but more yogurt is purchased at UVM than any other single food item. Over 3,500 containers are consumed each week.

Also on the helpful side in the inflation battle are the following items:

1) The "Store" at Marsh Dining Hall and Simpson Dining Hall sells groceries and home baked items to Students, Faculty and Staff.

2) A number of years ago many Faculty and Staff ate Brunch on Sundays at one of the Dining Halls. This semester you can enjoy an "unlimited seconds" brunch at Simpson, Harris-Millis, or Living and Learning Dining Halls for $1.50 per person. At todays prices around town - that's a pretty good deal!!

3) The "SAVE-TEN" program will be continued throughout the semester. All are urged to consider it as a way to save 10% on your cash purchases of food items.

Cochran's Ski Tow Opens

The Richmond Ski Tow at Cochran's will be open to the public as usual this weekend. Lifts start at 10 a.m.; all day lift tickets are $2.00, lessons cost $5.00. To get there take the Interstate to the Richmond exit, go east on Rte. 2, take a right in the center of Richmond, left at the round church and Cochran's will be found directly on the right.

Student Advisors Sought By CESS

The College of Education and Social Services is presently beginning the process of recruiting CESS sophomores to serve as Academic Fellows (Student Advisors) next year. These Academic Fellows act as academic advisors to groups of freshman students in the college and work at orientation and registration, too. For further information, attend the informational meeting on Wednesday, February 5 in the Living Learning Fireplace Lounge. It will begin at 7:30 p.m. If you can not attend and are interested, contact Micki Litwinczyk in 306 Waterman.

Plans For Senior Week Drafted

Spring semester is here and it's none too soon for seniors to begin planning for graduation. In fact, it may be enlightening for some to know that preparations have been underway since last September when the Senior Class Committee held its first meeting. Attendance, not surprisingly, was underwhelming. Still, we have hopes that the approach of graduation will inspire more seniors to join in the planning of what could be a very entertaining Senior Week. (Those interested can call ext. 3890 and ask for Sarah, Judy, or Kim.)

Although few in number, we of the Senior Week Committee have been able to come up with several tentative plans for Senior Week. These include: a class picnic, a class bike excursion, a party, a semi-formal dance and banquet, an athletic day, and a class orgy. (However, due to widespread violent apathy the orgy has been cancelled.)

We have applied to the S.A. for money to help fund these events. We are also engaging in a few fund raising enterprises of our own instigation. Though not designed to amass great wealth, it is hoped that these events will promote some interest in and awareness of our existence.

One such up-coming event involves the selling of carnations for Valentine's Day. Carnations will cost a mere 625 lira ($1.00) and will come in white, red and variegated red with individual cards (we will deliver). Watch for advertisements or call the aforementioned number for information on how to purchase your Valentine Carnation. Our profit will be small but we hope your Valentine's Day will be brighter and that you take this opportunity to let us know that you're out there. This will be a golden opportunity for you to express your undaunting support of the Senior Class.

The biggest factor in a successful Senior Week will be participation. We want everyone to come and enjoy themselves. Your participation is one of the best ways to support the class.

Wasson Complaints

Letters concerning student experiences at Wasson Infirmary, good or bad, are welcome. The Student Health Service needs evaluation so any response will be helpful. Address letters to R.D. Haun, 244 Church St., Burlington.

Communication Test For Teaching Majors

Any University of Vermont student who wishes to be accepted in a program in a teaching field in Art, Elementary, Home Economics, Music, Physical, Secondary or Vocational -Technical Education must pass a written communication test. Proficiency in the use and range of vocabulary, logical expression of ideas, paragraph arrangement, sentence structure and spelling will be judged on the basis of a few paragraphs written on a suggested subject.

The test will be given Tuesday evening, February 11, and Wednesday evening, February 12, in Room B-106 Cook Building from 7 to 8 p.m. Students should sign up immediately in Room 306 Waterman for the evening of their choice.

The Greeks, IRA and SA present the UVM "Winter Week" see this issue for a complete schedule of events.

Metaphysical photographs by Fred G. Hill remain on exhibit in the upper lobby of the Royall Tyler Theatre through Feb. 8.

At the Fleming Museum through Feb. 28: "American Art since 1945," from the permanent collection, Main Gallery; "Recent Gifts to the Museum," Front Gallery; "Art of the Northwest Coast," from the permanent collection, Lounge Gallery. Hours are Mon.-Fri., 8:30 p.m.; Sun., 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.; Closed Sat. and most holidays.

Carnations for the price of a dollar are on sale by the Senior Class Council for the benefit of Senior Week. Call 656-3890 after 6:30 p.m. and ask for Judy, Sarah, or Kim to place an order. Free delivery on campus. Offer expires Feb. 6.

A handful of tickets remain at $3 for the Christopher Parkening concert Thurs., Feb. 13 at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. The W.C. Fields Festival begins Friday, Feb. 7; single showings, $1 and $5 for series tickets.

VPIRG sponsors refund week at UVM through Feb. 7. All those wishing to revoke their $3 fee (included in each semester's bill) can do so between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at Billings.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30

7 p.m., Start of the Church St. Center's workshop on Asian cooking. Call 656-4221 for details.

7 p.m., Prof. Michael Platt of Dartmouth's English Dept. will speak on "The Renaissance in Search of a Good Death – The Case of Shakespeare's Falstaff... an Exploration of Christian and Pagan Values in the Renaissance." Held in 115 Commons, L/L.

7 p.m., Study habit talk with Alice D. Outwater in Simpson Hall. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., Meeting for all those interested in applying for the position of Resident Advisor, at Simpson Dining Hall.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Anchors Aweigh" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.

7:30 p.m., 115 Commons. The Medieval Renaissance Program presents Professor Michael Platt of Dartmouth's English Department: "The Renaissance in Search of A Good Death – The Case of Shakespeare's Falstaff. An exploration of Christian and Pagan Values in the Renaissance.

8 p.m., MACBETT, presented by the University Players, in the Royall Tyler Theatre. For reservations, call 656-2094.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 31

3:10 p.m., Dr. Theodore E. Madey will speak on "Recent Developments in the Physics of Surfaces" in Rm. A402, Cook Bldg. Coffee will be served at 2:45 p.m.

7:30 p.m., 71 S. Williams St. Behal Fireside.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m., SA Films presents a blockbuster of a triple feature: "Horsefeathers" with the Marx gang, Chaplin's "Easy Street and Rink" and a Three Stooges special. Admission is well worth the $1.00 fee. Shown in 101 Votey.

8 p.m., MACBETT continues at the Royall Tyler. Call 656-2094 for reservations.

8 p.m., International folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom. All are welcome.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1

7:30 p.m., UVM Hockey vs. Northeastern Univ. at Gutterson Field House.

7:30 p.m., Another SA film this time starring Katherine Hepburn in "Woman of the Year." Shown in 101 Votey, admission is free.

8 p.m., Last night of the University Players' production of MACBETT. Call 656-2094 for reservations.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2

No events listed.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3

4:10 p.m., Biology seminar with Prof. Ian M. Sussex of Yale's biology dept. who will discuss "The Control of Dormancy in the Plant Embryo." 105 Marsh Life Sciences; coffee served at 3:55 p.m. in Rm. 107.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents the French classic "Grand Illusion" in 101 Votey. Admission is free. A second showing at 9:30 p.m.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 4

10 a.m. to 4 p.m., VPIRG's refund week continues through Feb. 7 at Billings.

12 noon, Study habit workshop with Alice D. Outwater at the Center for Counseling and Testing.

7 p.m., Bible studies meeting sponsored by the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2. All are welcome.

7:45 p.m., Meeting of the Home Arts Group of the Women of UVM in Memorial Lounge. Robert Spear, Jr. will speak on "How to Enjoy the Audubon Nature Center with your Family." Mrs. Robert Sinclair will be hostess for the evening.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5

Last day for changes from credit to audit and for withdrawal from Evening Division courses without academic penalty.

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. VPIRG refund week continues through Feb. 7 at Billings.

12 noon:, an hour of relaxation and meditation with Nancy Koch at the Counseling and Testing Center.

12:15 p.m., Continuation of the Lunch Bunch film series sponsored by the Church St. Center.

4:30 p.m., Faculty Senate meeting in B-106 Cook Bldg.

7:30 p.m., Lecture on "The Occult" sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ as part of their current Update Forum. 120 Living/ Learning Commons.

7:30 p.m., English majors' seminar: a poetry reading by Alfred Lawrence and Robert Caswell in Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Outing Club in 305 Votey.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6

9 a.m., Trustee's special planning committee meeting in Waterman's Memorial Lounge. Note: this is a change in date. The meeting was originally scheduled for Feb. 5.

10 a.m., VPIRG's refund week continues through tomorrow at Billings

12 noon, Non-Academic Employee's Council meets in 115 Rowell.

MAGRAMS

BUCKSKIN SKIRTS $1.00 AN INCH

17" Buckskin $17
25" Buckskin $25
40" Buckskin $40

Great value in these fabulous skirts. From mini to ankle length in great earth tones.

WAY IN SHOP

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

OUR ART SHOP IS READY FOR THIS SEMESTER – ARE YOU?

Art Shop-Lower Level
Church and College Sts.
Downtown Burlington
658-4554

corner bookstore

Admissions Office

The University of Vermont Admissions office staff and current Student Admission Representatives are now recruiting undergraduates interested in becoming Student Admissions Representatives during the academic year 1975-1976.

The program, now in the Fall of 1974, has been very successful. During the Fall semester, the twenty-five Student Admissions Representatives talked with over 240 prospective students on a one-to-one basis. The reaction from everyone involved in the program has been very positive: Student Representatives thoroughly enjoy talkin... visitors and ... students seem ... with a curren... rather than ... officer.

Next y... Representativ... similar sess... visiting ... responsibili... interviewi... students for ... leading an ... tour, and ... training ... interviews w... evaluate ... admissions p... to provid... student will ... to find out ...

Christian Upd...

February 5-7 on the University of Vermont campus, many professors will be hosting guest lecturers who will be part of a symposium called the Christian Update Forum. Professors have invited the Christian Update Forum speakers to present lectures relevant to their course material. A broad spectrum of academic topics will be addressed from a Christian point of v... offer topic... courses ... discipline ... message of ... the pres... crisis wit... biblical v... ecology, w... seeks to ... science ... origins. E... offer m...

Cunningham

Welcome back and Happy New Year. The staff at the center would just like to say "glad you're back" and welcome to any new students, faculty, staff and families, who have joined the University Community. If we can ever be of help to you, please stop by to see us. The Center is located right on Redstone Campus and is open every day.

Weekday Masses: Monday - Friday: 4:15 p.m. Also, Tuesday - 10 p.m.

Weekend Liturgies: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday: 9 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Social Action Group: Are you interested in such topics as Boycotts, Third World, Amnesty and Clemency, and other Social Issues? Please call 862-8403 and talk with Fr. John Crowley or Sr. Lindora if you would like to join them in this Action Group.

Basic Catholicism: Monday evenings - 8:30 p.m.

Scripture Series: Monday evenings -7 p.m.

Faith Community: Wednesday evenings 7 p.m. An opportunity to discuss prayer and faith, to build Community and share. This Faith Community is being geared to those in our University Community who have finished their first degree and are in Graduate School or working in the area. Should there be undergraduates interested in ... such a ... Holland ... grouping ... Guest ... Newman ... future: ... 2: Joseph ... of Feb... Marykno... Lea...

"Before ... know wh... Now, I kn...

"I ca... wha... Bou... me ... hap... tha... I'm ... qui... not ... hav... confidence in the world i... mean, I climbed straight ... 200 foot cliff. I rode dow... in a rubber raft bouncing ... screaming, and I hiked I... 50 pound pack on my ba...

Outu... yourself...

Admissions Office Recruites Students

The University of Vermont Admissions office staff and current Student Admission Representatives are now recruiting undergraduates interested in becoming Student Admissions Representatives during the academic year 1975–1976.

The program, new in the Fall of 1974, has been very successful. During the Fall semester, the twenty-five Student Admissions Representatives talked with over 240 prospective students on a one-to-one basis. The reaction from everyone involved in the program has been very positive: Student Representatives thoroughly enjoy talking to campus visitors and most prospective students seem to prefer talking with a current undergraduate rather than an admissions officer.

Next year, Student Representatives plan to offer a similar service to people visiting UVM. Their responsibilities will include: interviewing prospective students for one hour a week, leading an occasional campus tour, and attending regular training sessions. The interviews will not be used to evaluate students for admissions purposes, but rather to provide a prospective student with the opportunity to find out if the University of Vermont is the school that can best meet his or her academic and non-academic needs.

If you are currently an undergraduate at UVM and are interested in becoming involved as a Student Admissions Representative, please pick up an application at Billings Center or the UVM Admissions Office on South Prospect Street. Interviews for these positions will be held during February. Contact Linn Murdoch at 862-6002 to set up an interview time. Deadline for applications is February 14. If you have any questions, feel free to contact Carol Kenison, Admissions Counselor, at 656-3370.

Medieval/Renaissance Events

Spring Semester 1975

30 January, Thursday, Prof. Michael Platt of Dartmouth's English Dept. will speak on "The Renaissance in Search of A Good Death - The Case of Shakespeare's Falstaff. An Exploration of Christian and Pagan Values in the Renaissance." 115 Commons.

2 February, Sunday, The Epiphany Liturgical Series, Mass according to the English rite of 1656. St. Paul's 10 a.m.

4 February, Tuesday, film of Hamlet sponsored by English Dept.

6 February, Thursday, Prof. William Metcalfe, History and Music, on "Gloriana: Divine Right or Goddess Queen?"

13 February, Tuesday, Mr. Malcolm Miller, veterm guide at Chartres Cathedral, will give a slide-lecture on the Cathedral.

27 February, Thursday, Prof. John Engroff, Dean of Students' Office, a slide-lecture on the pilgrimage to Mecca: places, meaning, the nature of the experience and relationship to western pilgrimages.

4 March, Tuesday, Prof. Kenneth Rothwell, English Dept., a faculty symposium on research in progress titled "Shakespeare and London." A slide-lecture.

5-9 March, Wednesday-Sunday, Nancy Haynes, C&T, directs John Webster's The White Devil at the Royall Tyler Theatre an early 17th-century English Renaissance play.

13 March, Thursday, Prof. William Mann, Philosophy, on the general idea of the medieval concept of God's timelessness: a classic example of medieval Christian philosophy gone wrong.

20 March, Thursday, Sue Morse, English Dept., "Richard II: Better Kings and Gardens."

3 April, Thursday, Prof. Manuel Nunez-de-Cela, Romance Languages, on some aspects of the Spanish Renaissance - possibly architecture and literature, but this is, as yet, very tentative.

10-12 April, Thursday-Saturday, the second annual Vermont Renaissance Symposium, in cooperation with St. Michael's College, and sponsored at UVM by the M/RP, the Arts College, the Experimental Program and the English Department.

Prof. Walter Davis, English, Notre Dame: "Sir Thomas Browne's Urne Buriall: Descent into Death and the Underworld."

Prof. Louis Martz, English, Yale: Paradise Lost and the Idea of Pilgrimage in the writings of Ignatius Loyola."

Prof. Thomas Settle, History, Brooklyn Poly: "The Reistionship Between the Artistic and Technological Traditions in the 16th Century Tuscany."

17 April, Thurdsay, Meg Walker, medieval-style tapestry-maker, a slide-lecture and practical demonstration of the art and technique of medieval and Renaissance tapestry.

22 April, Tuesday, Prof. Betty Bandel, English, lecture and demonstration on Renaissance home skills and handicrafts.

Employment Interviews

CAREER PLACEMENT AND PLANNING

Sign up: Mon., Tues., Wed., Jan. 27, 28, 29.

FEBRUARY 3

Defense Contract Audit Agency. Seeks positions in acctg; citizenship required. Requires 24 sem. hrs. or 36 1/4 hrs. in acctg. & related subjects.

General Dynamics. Seeks: BS/CE, EE, ME, Indust. E., MS/ME. citizenship required.

Dept. of the Navy Office of Civilian Manpower (CAPSON). Seeks: Bachelors, Masters: EE, CE, ME, Indust. E., Project engineering, Program engineering, logistics engineering. Citizenship required.

Deering Milliken. Seeks: All Mjrs. Citizenship required. Must be willing to work in New York City.

FEBRUARY 4

S.S. Kresge Company. All majors. Management training. Relocation a must. Citizenship required.

FEBRUARY 5

Burroughs Wellcome Co. Career Night at L/L Center 4-6 p.m.

Norton Co. Seeks: Bachelors: ME, Other Tech. Degrees for Indust. Sales Citizen or Perm Visa.

Regional Administrator of National Banks. Seeks: MBA, Acctg. Fin., Econ., Bus. Adm. Citizenship reqnired. All candidates should have a minimus of 9 hrs. of acctg.

FEBRUARY 6

Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Seeks: Bachelors: Bus. Adm., Mktg. Lib Arts. Half Day 1-5 p.m.

FEBRUARY 7

Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. 2nd day 9-12 noon.

Hartford Insurance Group. Seeks: Econ., Bus. A., Math., Lib. Arts. Citizenship required.

Gordon and Sherman. Seeks: BS/BA in Acctg.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. Seeks: Science, Bus., Lib. Arts., Majors for Pharm. Sales.

THE UVM S.A. CONCERT BUREAU PRESENTS THE EARL SCRUGGS REVUE WITH SPECIAL GUEST - THE JOHN CASSEL BAND. 8 p.m., Sunday February 9, at Patrick Gymnasium. Tickets: $3.00 with UVM ID, $4.00 General Admission, on sale now at the UVM Bookstore and Bailey's Music Room (General Admission Only)

Christian Update Forum Hosts Lectures

February 5-7 on the University of Vermont campus, many professors will be hosting guest lecturers who will be part of a symposium called the Christian Update Forum. Professors have invited the Christian Update Forum speakers to present lectures relevant to their course material. A broad spectrum of academic topics will be addressed from a Christian point of view in an effort to offer topics relevant to many courses in each major discipline. For example, one message offers an assessment of the present day ecological crises with a focus on the biblical view of beauty and ecology, while another message seeks to determine what science can tell us about origins. Each lecturer seeks to offer material worthy of academic consideration, and every lecture will set forth a viewpoint which is supported by some scholars with recognized academic credentials in the field concerned.

In addition to these classroom presentations, there will be special lectures on Wednesday and Thursday evenings at half past seven in room 120 of Living and Learning Commons. Wednesday's topic is "The Occult". Thursday's topic is "Noah's Flood - Fact or Foam".

Friday morning in the President's Dining Room, the faculty are invited to provocative discussion of SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE IN RELIGIOUS AND PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS over breakfast from 8-9a.m. The cost will be $1.00.

The Christian Update Forum speakers are associated with Probe Ministries, a Dallas based interdenominational organization developed to present scholastically-sound Christian perspectives on academic topics to collegians across the country. Probe Ministries is supported by individuals and religious groups on the same basis as a missionary organization and represents no special economic, racial, political, or denominational interests of any kind.

It is the aim of the Christian Update Forum to integrate each academic discipline with a comprehensive worldview, as well as to deepen appreciation and add to the understanding of our culture and the academic disciplines themselves.

Nuclear Power Hearing

On January 30, at the State House in Montpelier the House Natural Resources Committee will hold a public hearing concerning H.127. H.127 is the bill that gives the legislature power over the building of future Nuclear Power Plants. Such a set-up would insure that the representatives of the people hold a public forum of discussion. The time of the hearing is 7:30 p.m.

UVM Horse Club Meets

The UVM Horse Club will resume its weekly meetings, starting tonight at 8:00 p.m. in MAT Lounge. All interested students are welcome.

Scheduled for two weeks from now, on Feb. 6, the club will be showing a film on the Ledyard 3-day event. Further details will be in next week's Cynic.

If there are any questions, call Verne Batchelder, 864-5944.

Cunningham Newman Center

Welcome back and Happy New Year. The staff at the center would just like to say "glad you're back" and welcome to any new students, faculty, staff and families, who have joined the University Community. If we can ever be of help to you, please stop by to see us. The Center is located right on Redstone Campus and is open every day.

Weekday Masses: Monday - Friday: 4:15 p.m. Also, Tuesday - 10 p.m.

Weekend Liturgies: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday: 9 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Social Action Group: Are you interested in such topics as Boycotts, Third World, Amnesty and Clemency, and other Social Issues? Please call 862-8403 and talk with Fr. John Crowley or Sr. Lindora if you would like to join them in this Action Group.

Basic Catholicism: Monday evenings - 8:30 p.m.

Scripture Series: Monday evenings - 7 p.m.

Faith Community: Wednesday evenings 7 p.m. An opportunity to discuss prayer and faith, to build Community and share. This Faith Community is being geared to those in our University Community who have finished their first degree and are in Graduate School or working in the area. Should there be undergraduates interested in such a program, just let Fr. Holland know and another grouping can be established.

Guests who will be at the Newman Center in the near future: Weekend of Feb. 1 and 2: Josephite Fathers. Weekend of February 15 and 16: Maryknollers.

Leap Program: Weekend experience in building Christian Community for young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25. The next weekend is February 21-23. Should you be interested in such an experience, please contact Sr. Lindora at the Newman Center (862-8403).

Hillel Spring Schedule

Program for Spring Semester

February 2: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m.; the speaker will be Avi Gilam, an Israeli grad student. His topic of discussion will be "Agricultural Planning in Israel."

February 9: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m.; the speaker will be Prof. R. Stanfield, Dept. of Sociology. His topic of discussion will be "Changing Jewish Communities in the USA."

February 16: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m.; the speaker will be Avi Gilam, his topic "Israel in the 19th Century (before 1880)."

February 21: Friday Evening Dinner, watch for further announcements.

March 9: Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.; speaker to be announced. The topic will be "Birth Control and Abortion in Jewish Law."

March 16: Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.; speaker will be Avi Gilam; his topic will be "The Kibbutz and the Outside World."

April 6: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m.; the speaker will be Prof. H. Kahn, UVM director of Hillel. His topic will be "The Meaning of Jerusalem for Christianity."

April 13: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m.; speaker will be Avi Gilam, his topic, "Israelis Responses to the Yom Kippur War."

April 20: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m.; speaker will be Prof. H. Kahn, his topic, "The Meaning of Jerusalem for Islam."

April 27: Sunday Brunch, 11 a.m., Hillel elections.

On Saturday evening, February 8, 1975, there will be a Get-Together and Dance at Hillel House. Bring your own records for a greater variety, plus there will be served Hillel's notorious wild fruit punch.

Dr. Felt Speaks On Foreign Education

Would you like to go almost anywhere in this world and study? If you do there is sure to be a program for you in the area studies program, which is run by Dr. Jeremy P. Felt. Last Monday night Felt gave a talk on all the opportunities offered by his department along with the other programs offered by other departments.

For those people interested in studying in France, the Romance Languages department is offering a cultural immersion course at the University of Nice in southern France. In this program students must have a working knowledge of French or the equivalent of an intermediate college French course.

Then there is the Scandanavian program, which is for any person interested in learning the ways of our Viking neighbors. You do not need to speak a word of any of the northern languages. Here students will attend a concentrated language course in the summer, after which they will be sent out alone to a Folk school in which there will be no Americans what so ever. These schools are situated throughout Scandinavia, and a student might be sent to a beautiful Norwegian fjord or to the exotic areas of the Laplanders. Wherever the student may be sent, they can be sure that there will be very few signs of American culture around.

For those students in the school of education, there will be a program in England for you. The students will take coursed at English teachers' colleges for credit.

Lastly there is the Medieval Studies program in Assisi, Italy. This is a summer program in which the students will be housed in an old monastery. Assisi is an ancient medieval town famous for its repositories of mid- and late-medieval art. Assisi is also the home of St. Francis; it is the heart of the medieval church; its monastic organization and history.

If a student has any desire to study other parts of the world, Dr. Felt and the Area Studies program would be glad to assist in helping you work out a program for credit. If anyone is interested in any of the above mentioned programs please contact the Area Studies office at 479 Main Street or call the office at 656-4062.

MEN! — WOMEN!

JOBS ON SHIPS! No experience required. Excellent pay. Worldwide travel. Perfect summer job or career. Send $3.00 for information. SEAFAX, Dept. U-2 P.O. Box 2049, Port Angeles, Washington 98362.

We fill all our prescriptions at Discount Prices
Compare our prices with anyone

Grandway Pharmacy
Grandway Shopping Center
Shelburne Road
864-6869

"Before Outward Bound, I really didn't know what I wanted to do with my life. Now, I know whatever it is, I'll do it okay."

"I can't tell you what Outward Bound did for me and it happened in less than a month. I'm still pretty quiet but now it's not from fear. I have all the confidence in the world in myself. I mean, I climbed straight up a sheer 200 foot cliff. I rode down hairy rapids in a rubber raft bouncing around and screaming, and I hiked 17 miles with a 50 pound pack on my back. I did it. I never thought I could, but I did it. The blisters hurt and the bruises came but I pushed myself. The other kids with me did too, especially the girls.

And in the rap sessions every night I really let it out and got to know myself. I felt like I was part of something important. And all of a sudden the thought hit me that I wasn't worrying about the rest of my life anymore.

To find out more about the Hurricane Island Outward Bound School in Maine, fill out the coupon and send it to us, or phone (207) 594-5548. Courses all year round. Winter courses start February 6 and March 10.

Outward Bound, 3½ weeks of becoming yourself. Like it or not.

Hurricane Island Outward Bound School, Dept. C34, P.O. Box 429, Rockland, Maine 04841. Phone (207) 594-5548.

Name _____ Age _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

COUPON

SAGA

SAGA

COUPON

You Can't Change It
But You Can Postpone It.
This Coupon Will Save You 5¢
On Coffee Or Tea From
February 3 - 10.

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1983

Editor-in-Chief	Randy Amann '77
Assistant Editor	Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor	Mark E. Volk '76
News Editor	Kathy Stannard '77
Assistant News Editor	Mark Strayer '77
Features Editor	Stephen M. Turner '76
Arts Editor	Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor	Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor	Jon Bold '77
Advertising Manager	Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

The dissolution of the SA was an irresponsible and hasty act by senators who were supposedly elected to serve the students at UVM. Led by Ed Pasqualin, these senators ended an institution that has existed since the 1930's.

They have (for what purpose one can only try to fathom) left the university without any effective student representation. While SA's influence in UVM's affairs may have been ineffective and weak, it was a voice of the students that could no longer be ignored by the administration and trustees. Now, there is no organization left that can represent the students to press for demands and changes that are beneficial and necessary for the student body. Who will speak for the students when tuition, board, or room rates go up again? Will the selection of a new university president take place without student input? Questions such as these are left unanswered by a now defunct SA.

Other problems arise that are obviously beyond the comprehension and understanding of the former senators. Budgets for SA organizations are due in March. Who will review and approve these items? University policy from the rights and problems to Winter Carnival are left in doubt as who is to deal with them.

The motion which was passed stated:

"I move that the S.A. Senate of the University of Vermont be dissolved. The functions and duties of the Senate shall from this time forward be performed by the President of the S.A., his cabinet, and all other committees appointed by the President. The President shall be elected by the student body in September of each year and shall appoint the members of his cabinet. The Office of Student Activities shall conduct the election process."

A cabinet selected by Peter MacAusland would not be a representative body of UVM students. Whatever the good wishes of this cabinet would be, they would not represent the different student factions or opinions of the university. What we would have then would be an oligarchy which would rule as they see fit.

An election of a new SA should be initiated immediately by MacAusland. His responsibility as President is to see that a responsible, conscientious student senate is chosen to represent the students. We then urge MacAusland to resign, so that the students can decide for themselves who they want for a leader of the new SA. The SA should pin-point the problems that made the old SA feel they were no longer needed and strive for ways to deal with them.

Since the Student Association no longer exists, students should demand the return of their SA fee as a form of protest. This will surely move those who are interested in the existence of an SA into action. Express your feelings and express them loudly, for the childish action of those senators who voted for termination of the SA should not be read by the administration, trustees, and community as being representative of the UVM student body.

R.J.

Pinball Blizzard

To the Editor:

To the Billings Center Governing Board.

During the past few years the use (and abuse) of Billings Center has been the subject of much debate. Anyone who has ever been in the Den at lunch time is aware of the crowded conditions. Why did the BCGB decide to pour salt in the wounds of this fine old building by installing pinball machines? This is not UMass.

We do not have thousands of square feet of student center to devote to such noisy and trivial amusements. The Den is starting to look like Hannibul's. These machines use precious space, are ugly, out of place, and noisy. They stand as a sad reflection on the interest of UVM's student population.

Sincerely,
Hank McCoy

Dental Benifits To Stay?

To the Editor:

An old Vermonter once told me "you can tell a lot about a horse by his teeth." Well I wonder how much we could tell about President Andrews by his teeth! I think a little common sense would have been in order when the so-called minor trimming of the budget was at hand. The University of Vermont spends approximately $250,000 annually on major dental insurance for the faculty, administration, and staff. This may be a good benefit for the lesser paid staff, but certainly the faculty and administration should be able to afford their own dentures and gold fillings. It is interesting to speculate on how many academic and athletic programs could have been saved from the axe had this dental program been cut. President Andrews said last week that this was a benefit that he had promised. Perhaps we will see an across-the- board tuition hike next year to support the rising cost of fringe benefits. However, we all know how little good it does to point out inequities in the system. One old adage goes like this: You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink.

Robert G. Neale, '77

Education Should Come First

To the Editor:

Vermont's commitment to education began long before there was any university. From its beginning, Vermont has been more concerned about the education of its young than the wealth of its elders. Before Vermont was even a state, a thousand tons of potash were carried on the backs of Vermonters every year, and in exchange they brought back, among other things, the books which have formed the nucleus of the libraries found in almost every Vermont town.

About ninety cents out of every tax dollar has gone, and goes today, for education. This is a remarkable record, and I believe that the University of Vermont should, and must, carry on the tradition of educating its qualified young first, above all others. This should be its chief mission. It should preserve its high standards of admission, and also hold students to high standards of intellectual performance. It should maintain a climate in which the faculty and student body are committed to these standards, thereby ensuring an intellectually stimulating and exciting atmosphere, in the classroom and on campus.

Vermont's commitment to education must go on, as well as its commitment to the Vermonters, then and now, who have made that education possible through their conviction and tax dollar.

Sherry H. Doyle
UVM 1977

An Open Letter To Enerst Gallo

We have been noticing in our campus newspapers the appearance of your advertisements, claiming that the farm workers have insulted and maligned the reputation of the winery which bears your name. Some measure of confusion has been generated by the highly contradictory statements we have been subject (exposed) to. We also know of the dedicated efforts of Cesar Chavez to organize and unionize farm workers throughout the past twelve years and, as we share a concern for helping to alleviate the undeniably miserable conditions of most of America's 2.7 million farm and migrant workers, we are interested in discovering the facts behind your and Mr. Chavez' allegations.

We are aware that your sales have dropped approximately 16% – 19% and of the further economic repercussions that the UFW Boycott could ultimately have on your winery. We are also concerned that the workers not be cheated of their rights to self determination and just contracts.

Therefore, we the undersigned have asked Mr. Chavez if he would be willing to face you in a debate at any of the below colleges and universities. We feel that your and Mr. Chavez' personal appearance is indispensable and that the substitution of any surrogate or spokesperson would deal in a peripheral way with the conflict. Mr. Chavez has agreed to participate and we would appreciate it if you would also accept. If we can be of any assistance please do not hesitate to inform us. We sincerely hope that for the welfare of the workers, your company, and for the sake of truth, you see it fit to participate.

Signed by the following 28 elected student body leaders:

U. of Maryland, Marc Strumpf; Brown Univ., Dick Joslin; Georgetown U., Jack Leslie; U. of Colorado, Frank Till; Colorado Student Coalition; U. of Minnesota, Pat Pecharek; U. of Houston, Rick Fine; City U. of New York, Jay Hershenson; Queens College, Steve Mayo; U. of New Mexico, Gilbert Gonzales; Towson State, Konrad Herling; Brandeis U., James Seigenbaum; National Student Assoc., Kathy Kelly; Ohio State U., Douglas J. Holmes; Wayne State U., Art Bowman; Notre Dame U., Pat McLaughlin; Washington U., Ken Cooper; Vanderbilt U., Brad Millsap; St. Louis U., Mike Pelletier; Catholic U., Thomas J. Fechter; Southern Calif. College, Tim Waisenen; American U., Richard Baker; Student Assoc. of Maine, Peter Simon; UCLA, Larry Miles; Cornell U., Robert Harrison Spezher; Loyola Marymount U., Deborah Barthel; U. of Missouri, Bob Engelken; Michigan State, Timothy Cain.

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, editorials, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

A CRY FOR AMNESTY

by Joe Hammond – Peasant Post

Once there was a mighty nation people called the USA.
Many shed their blood to found it – Many died to show the way.
It took many years to build it – It had many pains at birth.
Now it's heirs forget this – and it's milked for all it's worth.

When one takes time to ponder – it seems very sad indeed.
Those things great men died for – have passed to men of greed.
There was a man named Spiro Agnew who screamed for justice and law,
But when the truth was finally out – we were amazed at what we saw.

It wasn't just our old friend Spiro – It was trusted people all around.
When we hunted, dug, and poked around – there were hoards of crooks we found.
Some high class cads got scalded – Yet I feel the need to say,
The whole mess seems a lot like fishing – the big ones always get away.

Now Spiro's free and living well helping Arabs get their hands on US power.
Compared to this our exiled sons – could view their plight as somewhat sour.
Why should they be punished more than those who coldly broke the law?
Perhaps they thought the whole thing out and were appalled at what they saw.

At any rate it seems to be – it's worse to refuse to join a war You believe unjust,
Than it is to lie, cheat, steal and bribe and let the poor support your lust.
If we use the mind the good Lord gave us – we can sense this isn't right.
Yet it lingers on – its roots are deep – it won't vanish overnight.

If congress now should smarten up and let the people make the choice,
A referendum might bring forth – a loud resounding voice,
Saying, "Amnesty for all those men whose only crime was wanting peace.
Bring our sons back – celebrate – let all this nonsense cease.

We don't forgive you – for you've done no wrong – please boys come back home.
We realize now the war was wrong – there's no reason you should roam.
We've seen the light – it took a while – but now most of us see.
The tide has turned – time has revealed – it's you who should give us amnesty."

Thoughts And Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

Bing Crosby and Curt Gowdy were hiding in the groves on American Sportsmen. Suddenly, Curt spotted a whole squall of wild geese flying placidly in their direction. "They are a beautiful sight, aren't they Bing?" he exclaimed to his partner. "Jees, they sure are Curt!" Bing replied. Then instantaneously, he took a lead on the first couple within range and blasted them dead with his handmade rifle.

Vermont snow is really pretty when it does fall. It is a steady, extremely fine snowfall, quite unlike the dreary blizzards of Massachusetts and Southern New Hampshire.

Benny Kubelsky, of Waukegan, Jack Benny as he was known to millions, died over the vacation at a ripe old age. No man deserved accolades more than he. Benny, who really was a soft touch, brought laughter into many bleak homes during rough times, always by poking fun at himself rather than at others. It's hard to replace a man of his decency.

Another American dream shattered. Arrestal sprays, underarm deodorants, if you will, oxidize ozone from the atmosphere. Ozone, in case you didn't know, protects the atmosphere from radioactive light rays. So every time you push that button think of your grandchildren.

Inflation can be stopped. Wear a Whip button and go skiing. Seriously, what good will rebates do if the removed twenty cents gas increase becomes a reality. Nearly everything you save will go into that.

Kojak has done such a good job on Manhattan South that we ought to unleash him on the whole U.S.A. Who knows, maybe crime will be nonexistent in six months.

How about those Cowenland Boston Celtics who have been on fire since his return. Looks bright for the green and white! On the topic of centers, the Walton- Jabber duel, Big Bill 7 Kareem 30 shows that Walton needs a lot more seasoning before he can hope to take on the better centers in the league.

You know what Tonto means in Spanish? "Foolish." No wonder he plugged the Lone Ranger the first time he got the chance. How would you like to be addressed as "Stupid" for thirty odd years.

The U.S. lost a squeaker in boxing competition with the Russians, six to five. The sad part of that was that two of the matches were blatantly misjudged; but since two out of the three judges and the referee were Russian, little could be done. How can we hope to come to grips with much larger issues if even an athletic event is dealt with dishonestly?

Michael, Le Petit, the French tightrope walker who recently raised the several thousand foot New York Trade Center, fell from a twenty-five foot scaffolding. Slightly injured, he was taken off to the hospital shouting hysterically, "I can't believe it! I never fall! I never fall!"

Saying for the week: Ride the crest of the wave where the foam swirls and the wind roars with joy in your heart and laughter on your lips.

How's Your Sexual Identity ?

by Stephen Rice

Dealing with one's sexual identity on a college campus, such as the University of Vermont, isn't easy. What ought to be a very private thing becomes a very public thing. Those who differ from a societal norm are chastised and branded as being something less than a total individual.

During my four years as an undergraduate on this campus, sex was the dominant concern among my peers. You talked about it from morning until evening, from the bathroom to the corridor to the kitchen table. You fell into the syndrome of what you felt characterized the American male: tough aggressive, capable of fucking until it hurt. Rarely were the qualities of compassion, gentleness, and respect for the other person mentioned.

It's no wonder that some women became repulsed by this and joined the ranks of women's liberation movements. Perhaps one of my most enlightening experiences in a classroom was a course I took during the spring of my junior year, entitled "Outspoken Women." I was the only male in that classroom of 25 women, and by the time May came around, I felt like a pig. Most of the discussion during those weeks centered on sex, and one thing was shared by these women: their pride for their individualities, and the threat which they viewed by men who looked at them as mere sex receptacles. The threat continues today. And that's why some of us have to change.

Any attempt at liberating yourself must begin at looking at the conditions which make you a victim of some pretty messed-up views. And you really can't blame it all on society as many in that classroom chose to do. You have to look into yourself, and not be afraid of having others help you along the way. Sounds pretty easy; it's not.

I would rather not play the dominant role in any relationship, sexual or otherwise. It really gets you nowhere. It can make you even feel frustrated, especially when the person underneath you expects you to be king of the hill. All of us have our memories of those evenings when the act of sex was to be a performance, and not an altogether pleasurable one. There have been books and books written on women who felt they had to perform in order to satisfy their lover's sexual desires. They outnumber the books which have been written on men who felt they had to perform to satisfy their women's sexual desires.

Though we laugh, there is a reason to be concerned when young people are compelled to write to the Doctor's Bag inquiring whether their penis is the right size, or whether they should take hormones to enlarge their breasts. The emphasis on these questions seems to be on quantity, not on the quality of sharing an evening of love. Walk through any college dormitory hall, and you're bound to hear from some room, before you get to the other end, a young man's adventures of the night before, and the number of times he got it into her. I've even done it myself, until I realized that the person I slept with was a woman, and a human being. Admittedly, it took some time to change as a result of this realization.

I even feel some empathy for those who choose to be gay. Though societal acceptance is hesitantly to change for the better on this, it does take courage for an individual to say he or she is gay knowing the consequences of doing so, especially in a dormitory setting. After all, there's nothing more devasting to the male ego than having a flaming faggot on the floor. So we go out and get balled by a girl that we don't even know at times.

I'm far from being an expert on sexual relationships. But I'm beginning to grow in my understanding of what should be a human relationship. It is based on the principle of respect for the other person. It is also based on some qualities that some men may find offensive: honesty, tenderness, and always the first concern being for the comfort of the person who shares some time with me.

For the dominant will of men has gotten this world into a lot of grief, which might explain why wars continue to go on, and women are forced to consider abortion. Yes, as the song goes, do it until you're satisfied, but please with one stipulation: do it with care for the greatest satisfaction between the two of you.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arlen, George Georgakilis, Andy Morse, Audrey Rothstein, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Joe Kauffman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Prior, Martha Woietz.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Selden, Scott Skinner.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Ross, Richard Rotthov.
PRODUCTION: Ellops Driscoll, Riki Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Barney, Barbara Brown, John Linde.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancoy, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shastk.

Opinions expressed in editorials, carteons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

VPIRG: Capital Wa

Vital Legislative Mo

by Scott Skinner, VPIRG Staff

There are a number of bills being debated thi deal with the regulations of nuclear power. One being sponsored by 45 legislators. It requ
Assembly approval before any new nuclear plan
It is in the Natural Resources Committee of the Regulations of nuclear power is almost e hands of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission that the only time the State can exercise any co initial decision of whether to build a nuclear Under existing law, only two public officials, and one other member of the Public Service Boa determination.
Given the intense controversy over nucl statewide effect of any accident, and the deep c many Vermonters, it is vital that the decision should be as broad-based as possible. The leg perfect, but it is the broadest-based and most body we have.
Opponents of H. 127 are arguing that the too complex for the legislature. In fact, this ar the first one raised by legislators themselves.
answers to the argument.
First, the basic issue of nuclear power anyone's scientific understanding. Everyone ack there are risks involved and that the consequen

Competition Is T

(CPS)Food, gas and tuition prices aren't of inflation these days. Enter the new martyr Across the country, a high grade glut has schools, the normal bell curve distribution ha of whack as B has replaced C as the average gr
At Yale, almost half of the undergrad grades were A's. And at Stanford University point accumulation has spiralled to 3.4. In the University of North Carolina has doubl of A's it handed out.
"A few years ago, a C would put you
Douglas Hobbes, a political science pro
"Today it puts you in the bottom third of th
A number of educators have voiced c inflation – and the resulting devaluation officials, they have warned, have begun to transcripts of their applicants as plainly concentrating instead on test scores.
And since everyone seems to be g graduate schools and employers have begun in their selections: better a Princeton A, t equal mark from a less familiar school.
Grade grubbing has been cited as a pri soaring grades. The humultuous 60's are c again hitting the books. With the depressed increased number of undergraduate toughened for graduate school admiss medical and law schools.
In a broader sense, students may be gr token of their own worth. "A 'B' is say they're only 'B' persons," one Stanford said.
In any case, competition has becom game. "It's moved beyond grades," Jerom psychologist, said of the phenomenon in Times report. "It's moved to a point w
the concern is unrealistic, and it's approac

What A

by Ed Pierson,

(Editor's note: Ed Pierson is a writ Denver "Clarion".)

(CPS) – Come exam time, most idealistic notions of learning and be business of school: grades.
An economics professor at Denver on this competitive syndrome by inje theory into his class last quarter. He sc bidder
Professor Mike Rock raked in al auction where the average A went for
for $35.
Nearly 90% of the students present in the auction of grades right up until t
when the professor revealed that it wa
In a recent interview, Rock said, hadn't done it, precisely because it how easy it is to manipulate student
The bizarre tale unfolded like this.
One day last quarter the econom class and said, "Look, you people h grades. Grades will go to the highes so happy with the market process.
market dictate who gets what."
Rock told the class he would s
B's, C's, and D's, that payment wa that those who didn't want to bu taking a "withdraw passing" (WP)
An impartial auctioneer, anoth brought in by Rock as he told stu not "in good conscience" sell the up in front of the class and began A!" The first bid was $45. The bid were all sold.
Several members of the class grades and proceeded to go to the of the business school and acting
Some objected to the propo because it was not in the original said that it was blackmail to pay f
One business student argued tuition for the class he was entitle

ers

Editor

tter To Enerst Gallo

ing in our campus newspapers the ertisements, claiming that the farm ed and maligned the reputation of the r name. Some measure of confusion he highly contradictory statements we ed) to. We also know of the dedicated to organize and unionize farm workers ive years and, as we share a concern the undeniably miserable conditions of million farm and migrant workers, we oring the facts behind your and Mr.

our sales have dropped approximately rther economic repercussions that the timately have on your winery. We are workers not be cheated on their rights
d just contracts.
dersigned have asked Mr. Chavez if he e you in a debate at any of the below
s. We feel that your and Mr. Chavez' indispensable and that the substitution okesperson would deal in a peripheral
Mr. Chavez has agreed to participate s it if you would also accept. If we can lease do not hesitate to inform us. We or the welfare of the workers, your e sake of truth, you see it fit to owing 28 elected student body leaders:

ric Strumpf; Brown Univ., Dick Joslin; Ledie; U. of Colorado, Frank Till;
tion; U. of Minnesota, Pat Pechacek; U.
City U. of New York, Jay Hershenson;
Mayo; U. of New Mexico, Gilbert
o, Konrad Herling; Brandeis U., James tudent Assoc., Kathy Kelly; Ohio State

Wayne State U., Art Bowman; Notre ghlin; Washington U., Ken Cooper;
Millsap; St. Louis U., Mike Pelletier;
Fechter, Southern Calif. College, Tim
U., Richard Baker; Student Assoc. of UCLA, Larry Miles; Cornell U., Robert ola Marymount U., Deborah Barthel; U.
ken, Michigan State, Timothy Crin.

ues and encourages articles, columns, and ested students, faculty, and members of material must be submitted no later than e the Thursday of publication. Material ame will be withheld upon request. If you ting or perhaps curious about how things we are downstairs at Billings Center – se ity ?

es take courage for an individual to say he g the consequences of doing so, especially tting. After all, there's nothing more le ego than having a flaming faggot on the and get balled by a girl that we don't even ing an expert on sexual relationships. But ew in my understanding of what should be

p. It is based on the principle of respect for t is also based on some qualities that some naive: honesty, tenderness, and always the for the comfort of the person who shares hat will of men has gotten this world into a might explain why wars continue to go on, ced to consider abortion. Yes, as the song you're satisfied, but please with one with care for the greatest satisfaction

f you.

RMONT CYNIC

Arlin, George; ndy Morse, tein, Mary

STAFF: Paul Cain, Carol Henry, Pam Hunt, Sue Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner.

SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rothker.

PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rick Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Berney, Barbara Brown, John Lando.

ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.

BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

ions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or s in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the s of the University administration, faculty, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by umnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion majority of the members of the CYNIC l Board.

ished yearly during the college year by the ts of the University of Vermont and State ural College. Editorial and Business offices in lings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 311. Deadline for content is one week prior to publication.

nded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per (Hardcopy ten cents.

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Vital Legislative Move On Nuclear Power Plant Building

by Scott Skinner, VPIRG Staff

There are a number of bills being debated this session that deal with the regulations of nuclear power. One bill H.127 is being sponsored by 45 legislators. It requires General Assembly approval before any new nuclear plant can be built. It is in the Natural Resources Committee of the House.

Regulations of nuclear power is almost entirely in the hands of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. This means that the only time the State can exercise any control is in the initial decision of whether to build a nuclear power plant. Under existing law, only two public officials, the Chairman and one other member of the Public Service Board, make that determination.

Given the intense controversy over nuclear safety, the statewide effect of any accident, and the deep concern felt by many Vermonters, it is vital that the decision to build a plant should be as broad-based as possible. The legislature is not perfect, but it is the broadest-based and most representative body we have.

Opponents of H. 127 are arguing that the entire subject is too complex for the legislature. In fact, this argument is often the first one raised by legislators themselves. There are several answers to the argument.

First, the basic issue of nuclear power is not beyond anyone's scientific understanding. Everyone acknowledges that there are risks involved and that the consequences of a nuclear accident would be simply catastrophic. The question then is do the alleged benefits justify taking the risks. That is not a technical question, but a social question of great magnitude and is therefore a suitable subject for the legislature to consider.

Second, the legislature acts on any number of complex issues – taxes, budgets, land planning, even the deer herd. Expert advice from state agencies and private sources is always available and obviously plays an important role, but the final decision on important questions must be made by the legislators themselves for it is they, not the experts, who are accountable to the citizens.

What you can do: Contact your representative urging support for H.127. In addition the House Natural Resources Committee is planning a public hearing on the bill for January 30 at 7:30 p.m., in Room 11 of the State House in Montpelier. A large turnout is needed to demonstrate public concern. This will be the only hearing on H.127 so it is vitally important that many people show their support at the hearing.

Also it is important to send letters to House Speaker Timothy O'Connor and Henry Carse, Chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee. Letters can be addressed to State House, Montpelier, Vt. 05602.

All Things Considered:

by larry seiden

JIMI

Jimi came down from the skies,
Back from a time that past long ago,
A time traveler with strength of universtrained proportions,
He came to see our irrigated people farm;

Jimi saw the circles we bubble our lives away in,
Tied by the lines of fear that we hide from ourselves.
He tried to help us leave our spheres,
He offered to lead.
But we couldn't leave our pettiness,
Our wings were too burdened to soar.

Jimi walked the ground between us
And beckoned us with his axe,
"Follow me, I know the way."
We tried to keep pace as his strides were huge.
So huge we dwarfed along on his heels.
Soon we grew weary and stopped.

He lifted us up on his axe and offered us
A ride to Mars, to make his life ours.
We laughed and shunned him,
Our human perspective was much too small
And closed to risk the end,
We'd like to remain in our warp,
It's narrow enough to suit us
And too comfortable and secure to pass up.

Jimi didn't care,
He saw our vacuums with dusty locks
Holding everything inside.
"Let it be, it ain't me," he said.

It is a world that burned,
And we scavage the ashes
For something to hold on to.

Jimi asked again, if we'd fly with him
His way on a dragonfly.
His world, as we heard in the searing lines from his axe,
Was far away from ours, too far.
Way past the clouds, beyond the castles made in the sand.

We ascended as far as the Axis,
Afraid to show our fright, so shiny and metallic crimson.
We stood at the Axis, knowing we'd gone too far.
Our eyes glazed, trying to say we're not scared.
We too, want to be bold.
We wish to float like butterflies
Like zebras and moonbeams and fairy tales.
Save us anything to hold, Jimi.

Jimi's gone way past us, drawn over the Axis
To an island of Spanish castle magic.
Jimi smiles finally, "I'll see you in the next world,
Don't be late."

Sing A Song, Bro'

He didn't have the tears to cry that I did.
The salty tears left by the moon and tides
To fade away.
Wave on.
Wave on, Jimi

Sing a song, Bro'.

LUCY TIDBITS:

Future performers in the Burlington area look to include the New Riders of the Purple Sage, B.B. King, and possibly the James Montgomery Band..... In case you haven't heard, it's official, the Moody Blues have broken up. They said we guess it's time to Go Now..... Rick Derringer's next album is going to be produced by Todd Rundgren! They are two great producers, beware of a schizophrenia..... Look for a Conrad Birdie revival concert in early spring..... Orleans, a group destined to be heard, has titled their next album, "New Orleans," that's catchy, real catchy..... From Earth and Zodiac News: There seems to be a bogus breast examiner running loose around Philadelphia. It appears, according to police, he's posing as a hospital intern making house calls. You better hold on to what you've got, girls.

Freddie's got sparks from ripping off stocks. A funky diplomat.

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

© COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES · BOX 9411 · BERKELEY, CA 94709

Competition Is The Name Of The Grade Game

(CPS)Food, gas and tuition prices aren't the only victims of inflation these days. Enter the new martyr: grades.

Across the country, a high grade glut has spread. At many schools, the normal bell curve distribution has been jarred out of whack as B has replaced C as the average grade.

At Yale, almost half of the undergraduate spring term grades were A's. And at Stanford University the average grade point accumulation has spiralled to 3.4. In the last ten years, the University of North Carolina has doubled the percentage of A's it handed out.

"A few years ago, a C would put you in the middle," said Douglas Hobbes, a political science professor at UCLA. "Today it puts you in the bottom third of the class.

A number of educators have voiced concern over grade inflation – and the resulting devaluation. Graduate school officials, they have warned, have begun to dismiss the grade transcripts of their applicants as plainly misleading, and are concentrating instead on test scores.

And since everyone seems to be getting A's and B's, graduate schools and employers have begun resorting to elitism in their selections: better a Princeton A, they reason, than an equal mark from a less familiar school.

Grade grubbing has been cited as a prime factor behind the soaring grades. The pusillanimous 60's are over and students are again hitting the books. With the depressed job market and the increased number of undergraduates, competition has toughened for graduate school admission, particularly to medical and law schools.

In a broader sense, students may be grasping for grades as a token of their own worth. "A 'B' is saying to students that they're only 'B' persons," one Stanford University professor said.

In any case, competition has become the name of the game. "It's moved beyond grades," Jerome Kagan, a Harvard psychologist, said of the phenomenon in a recent New York Times report. "It's moved to a point where the anxiety and the concern is unrealistic, and it's approaching a phobia on the part of the students. It has the characteristics of a small neurosis.

If students are afflicted with a grade neurosis, the disease is rooted within the academic grading system, some observers believe.

"Students have been taught since grade school that good grades are where its at," says one professor at University of Wisconsin-Madison. "How can they be expected to dismiss this idea when they reach college?"

The Preface, student newspaper of Indiana University at South Bend offered this analysis: "Professors... tell students at the beginning of the class that learning is more important than grades. Most students are not influenced by this argument. They have already been convinced that grades are important, often more important than learning."

Back in the 60's, however, anti-grade fever hit academia, resulting in what is believed to be the second major cause of inflated grades: non-punitive grading procedures.

Many professors gave high grades then to help students avoid the draft. Dissatisfaction with traditional marking spread, pass-fail options came into vogue and some schools completely eliminated failing grades.

At many other schools, the effects of D's and F's were minimized by extended time periods for class withdrawals. Students who were in danger of failing a course could simply drop it, often late into the semester, and escape a low grade.

Explained Pittsburgh University Dean Robert Marshall:

We've gotten away from the old concept that people should be required to jump through hoops."

But the gradual extinction of failing grades has been termed "ludicrous" by at least one professor. "There is this idea going around that any grade other than an A has to be explained by the professor," complained Stanford history professor David Kennedy.

"It's gone too far," said Kennedy. "The whole purpose of grades is being destroyed."

In such an event, not everyone would be disappointed.

What Are The Bids For An 'A' ?

by Ed Pierson,

(Editor's note: Ed Pierson is a writer for the University of Denver "Clarion".)

(CPS) – Come exam time, most students throw away idealistic notions of learning and bear down on the real business of school: grades.

An economics professor at Denver University capitalized on this competitive syndrome by injecting some free market theory into his class last quarter. He sold grades to the highest bidder.

Professor Mike Rock raked in almost $2000 in a grade auction where the average A went for $85, B for $55, and C for $35.

Nearly 90% of the students present in the class participated in the auction of grades right up until the day after the bidding when the professor revealed that it was a hoax.

In a recent interview, Rock said, "In retrospect, I wish I hadn't done it, precisely because it was so depressing to see how easy it is to manipulate students."

The bizarre tale unfolded like this.

One day last quarter the economics professor walked into class and said, "Look, you people have won... I'm going to sell grades. Grades will go to the highest bidder. If you people are so happy with the market process, why don't we just let the market dictate who gets what."

Rock told the class he would sell a certain number of A's, B's, C's, and D's, that payment was due within three days and that those who didn't want to buy grades had the option of taking a "withdraw passing" (WP) grade.

An impartial auctioneer, another faculty member, was brought in by Rock as he told students that he himself could mint "in good conscience" sell the grades. The auctioneer stood up in front of the class and began, "What are the bids for an A?" The first bid was $45. The bidding went on and the grades were all sold.

Several members of the class objected to the selling of grades and proceeded to go to the department chairman, dean of the business school and acting dean of student life.

Some objected to the proposed grading system mainly because it was not in the original contract of the class. Others said that it was blackmail to pay for the class twice.

One business student argued that by paying the $300 tuition for the class he was entitled to at least a C.

Another business major who consulted a lawyer, said that he was not opposed to the selling of grades as long as it was "student initiated," but was opposed to the fact that Rock told them they had to buy grades. That was "coercion," he said.

One other shrewd business student, noting that a number of students were absent from the auction, bought up all of the C's and D's. He planned to advertise them in the campus newspaper and sell them at a profit.

While he didn't advertise, the student did spend 15 minutes in class the day after the auction trying to sell the grades at a 300% profit.

After paying $86 in cash for an A, another student asked Rock, "Do you think you're going to get another teaching job in this country? You're going to be blackballed from every university in the country."

Students in the class were so convinced that Rock was serious that many stopped studying for the final exam and others tore up their papers.

On the last day of class, Rock explained that he had not been serious. "How could you be so absurd as to believe you could get away with something like this?" he asked them.

When asked why he believed Rock, one student answered, "Look, you're an authority figure and as an authority figure we take what you say at face value."

Another member of the class, after hearing it was all a hoax, tried to keep Rock to his contract and force the money on him. "We made a contract yesterday," he argued. "Here's my $80. I want my A!"

Rock noted that no one attempted to obtain a WP in the class, that ultimately the money made no difference in the grading, and all the money was returned. Only $86 in cash was actually collected. The remainder was in the form of notes.

"It's so easy to convince students of almost anything," said Rock. "My God, if that's education, then the educational system is more messed up than I thought it was."

Explaining his reasons for initiating the scheme, Rock said, "For nine weeks I attempted to engage the students in a dialogue, which most of them refused to be engaged in."

"I would have thought everything I did for those nine weeks would have led them to believe that I'd be the last person in the world to sell them grades."

FOR TEN CENTS YOU COULD SAVE A FRIEND'S LIFE.

A phone call. A simple, ten-cent phone call for a cab could save your friend's life.

If your friend has been drinking too much, he shouldn't be driving.

The automobile crash is the number one cause of death of people your age. And the ironic thing is that the drunk drivers responsible for killing young people are most often other young people.

Take a minute. Spend a dime. Call a cab. That's all. If you can't do that, drive him yourself. Or let him sleep on your couch.

We're not asking you to be a doctor or a cop. Just a friend.

DRUNK DRIVER, DEPT. Y*
BOX 2345
ROCKVILLE, MARYLAND 20852
I want to save a friend's life.
Tell me what else I can do.
My name is _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

IF YOU LET A FRIEND DRIVE DRUNK, YOU'RE NO FRIEND.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Wolfman Jack To Howl At Sock Hop

Whether there's a full moon on Sunday night, February 2 or not, the Wolfman will be in town for the evening. Wolfman Jack, perhaps the best known disc jockey of the last two decades will be at the Patrick Gymnasium on Sunday from 9 p.m. to midnight hosting a real back-to- high-school- times "sock hop." (And so the gym people will be required to have their shoes at a "shoe check" upon entering the building.)

Wolfman Jack, the star of NBC's Midnight Special, gained his fame when he was working from a radio station in Del Rio, Texas. The radio station was famous for its mail orders which included "chickens to the dark" and the Wolfman had to sell his share of them for his salary. It has been said that you could go from Los Angeles to New York and never lose sound of the Wolfman's howl.

Wolfman Jack

Along with hosting the Midnight Special, the Wolfman appeared in the movie American Graffiti making his face as famous as his voice. His radio programs are syndicated on over 1,400 radio stations across the country, and he is also on inflight hit tapes of United Airlines.

SA Speakers is putting on the "sock hop" and it will cost you only $.50 with your UVM ID ($1.00 general admission) to get into the gym and rock with the Wolfman. There will be refreshments available throughout the evening. Tickets for the hop are available at the Student Activities office in Billings or at the door on Sunday night. That's the Wolfman, Wolfman Jack, in person, February 2, 9 o'clock to midnight at the Patrick Gym.

Simpson Folk Series Begins Successfully

by Bob DeNike

On Thursday, Jan. 23, Wayne "Aardvark" Bayer, staunch upholder of the folk tradition, brought yet another evening of mellow music and fine feelings to Simpson Hall. This was the first concert in a series of scheduled folk presentations designed to serve a three-fold purpose. Not only do the musical meetings produce a sense of genuine fellowship felt widely and intensely throughout the audience, the sessions also are an attempt to spur a revival of interest in the idiom of folk and traditional styles. At the back of Wayne's mind is a folk festival proposed to entertain Burlingtonians for at least a full day in April. Yet interest in such a large-scale event can only be measured by attendance at the weeknights of entertainment.

The reception given the Arm and Hammer String Band was encouraging in view of the aforementioned, ultimate goals. With the opening banjo, fiddle, guitar and mandolin notes, Simpson Lounge was but half filled with listeners. By intermission, however, the concert elite could afford standing room only to those wanting to share in the fun of ballads, drinking songs, dance tunes, sea chanties and Irish and Scottish jigs being sung. "Old timey" music, the predecessor to Bluegrass style, was the band's main subject for performance, played to lyrical themes of train wrecks, magical, mystical, mythical maidens, and Dutch and English sailors. Recognition of local culture was likewise included: "If you go out to Winooski, you better put your money in your shoes; 'cause them Winooski women will give you them Winooski blues."

Tempo and tone varied greatly and effectively. The band brought us a combination of purely instrumental, as well as solely vocal numbers. When a tune demanding a strong chorus arose, the four musicians, aligned before the crowd, laid their instruments in their laps and led rousing rounds of jocund singing in which the audience participated enthusiastically. I particularly enjoyed chiming in loudly with the favorite Way, Hey, Blow the Man Down to which several original, improvised verses in the humorous vein were added. The audience was given melancholy odes to ladies and fortunes lost to fate, played at a crawling pace, in addition to foot-stomping, spirited rondos.

Of the four musicians, I was most impressed by the talent of the fiddler, Peter Sunderland. His fast fingering technique and backing vocals brought visions to mind of the country hootenanny, reminiscent of a culture and way of living all but lost to this modern age of electrified, amplified sound. Each instrument, however, was played with such a sensitive touch that the four stringed parts became a compatible, harmonious whole which bound together the audience of individuals into one, communing body.

Review:

Macbett: An Eerie Trip Into Deja Vu

by Margo Howland

One-word reaction to MACBETT? Weird! And timely, and very well done. Ionesco combines the past with the present, sense with nonsense, and throws in all kinds of impossible, ludicrous situations.

It is true that one need not be familiar with the story of the play in order to fully understand MACBETT; in fact, I found it rather added to the complexity of the situation, as I puzzled through the Lady Duncan-Lady Macbett identity struggle.

Ionesco, and the student director, Charles Towers, have a knack for creating "tragic forces" as they must really have meant to be- all the elements of tragedy, yet all the absurd and comic connotations of farce. Ionesco does this with his words and with his wit; Director Towers does it with his admirable casting.

The dialogue does not drag, the special effects are spectral, and spectacular. (I am still puzzling over how Lady Duncan vanished from beneath her cloak!)

MACBETT is blessed with a fine cast of gifted actors. Craig Toth, in my estimation, has given his best performance to date in his masterly portrayal of Duncan, the despotic archduke. Duncan is cowardly in time of battle; fiercely arrogant when at the height of his power.

Peter Kurth is excellent as Macbett. He looks the part, he speaks the part, he is Macbett! And because, inspite of all of it, he is so outwardly likeable in the beginning, his transformation under the spell of the Witches is – or would be in any other play – heartbreaking. Yet the touches of farce are there. Ionesco must make the viewer laugh, because his only other alternative is despair.

Macbett

Craig Purinton is a splendid Banco, also double-cast as the tyrant son, Macol. It takes a very versatile actor to undertake both parts, and do them well, and Purinton does.

Sarah Brooke is one of those people that age made to be cast as queens. She exudes power, almost bewitchingly so. Triple-cast as Lady Duncan, Lady Macbett, and a Witch, her transformations from bloodthirsty queen to beguiling temptress to cranky old hag, are nothing short of uncanny. It is her voice and her demeanor.

All through this play, I had an eerie, almost chilling sense of deja vu. No, it wasn't because I have read or seen the production before, but because –as director Towers said– "It reminds you of someone you know."

When one recognizes presidents in arrogant kings, congressmen and generals in shallow leaders, and public officials and various other prominent figures in disloyal rebels, it is a pretty chilling

(continued on page seven)

SPECIAL
FOR TRIPLE FEATURE
Student Discount Cards will be good on Saturday

TRIPLE FEATURE!!

... Fred Baker's LENNY BRUCE WITHOUT TEARS is a skillfully researched documentary about the late pop hero ... With anger, biting humor and sorrow the film shows the demise of the iconoclastic comic ... so plagued by personal demons. He continues his attacks against hypocrisy, organized religion, racism, and war until the last devastating pictures of him dead on the bathroom floor ..."
–Linda Gross / L.A. Times

... The electricity that would pass between him and a rapt, sympathetic audience was almost a 'juice' that could send him high on currents of satirical fantasy and philosophical comedy...'Non Sheddio Flies Again', 'Airplane Glue', and 'Sabu and the Geese' are all included ... Fred Baker's film is honest enough to include clips of BRUCE at his most offbeat ..."
– The Village Voice

... and here is LENNY BRUCE starring in LENNY BRUCE WITHOUT TEARS
a documentary (of a kind) by FRED BAKER
7 + 9:30 P.M.
WITH LENNY BRUCE, STEVE ALLEN, PAUL KRASSNER, MORT SAHL, KENNETH TYNAN, NAT HENTOFF, MALCOLM MUGGERIDGE.

First 2nd BIG HIT!
AT 8:20 ONLY
"REEFER MADNESS"
She took a moment of ecstacy that killed her soul.
...AND
SNEAK PREVIEW
SATURDAY NIGHT ONLY AT 10:50
IF YOU LIKED "GROOVE TUBE" WAIT UNTIL YOU SEE "CULTURE VULTURES" DISCOUNT CARDS HONORED ON SATURDAY FOR THIS SHOW!!
R RATED - IF YOU'RE UNDER 18 BRING SOMEONE OF AGE

AIRPORT 1975
Now NEW! Wide-screen Stereophonic Sound
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862 6070 ANYTIME!

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II Macon County Line

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Night Porter
II Starts Fri Swiss Family Robinson

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Behind the Green Door
Resurrection of Eve

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Andy Warhol's Dracula

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Ilse at the Top of the World
II Challange to be Free

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Lenny Bruce without Tears
II Airport 1975

call theatres for times
Hot Seat for bargain nights
or special showings

Satire Comedy Team Coming For Winter Week

As part of Winter Week, Billings Center Governing Board will present Kampmann & Smet Comedy Team in an evening of satire and commentary on personal and cultural realities of our time, entitled "Please God, Can I Go Home Now?" The comedy, being performed in the Apse in Billings, is both original and impromptu. The evening features ten skits based on a variety of topics such as "the Exorcist," "Therapy," "Date-Nuts," "Paperback Beats," and "Georgie Roe and his Little Friend Sidley."

Steve Kampmann graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1969 with a B.A. in History. In 1974 he spontaneously received a Masters Degree in Community Counseling from St. Michael's College. He has performed in such productions as Talking of Michaelangelo, The Tragical History of Dr. Faustus, and in The Man Who Came to Dinner.

Jon Smet graduated from Virginia Commonwealth University with a B.A. in English and Theatre in 1969. He received his Master's Degree in Counseling Psychology from Goddard College in 1974. While in the New London, N.H. Barn Playhouse and in college, Jon performed in such plays as No Exit, Death Watch, The Lottery, The Lark, and a children's play Beauty and the Beast.

They will be here Thursday and Friday, Feb. 6 and 7, at 8 p.m. Admission is $.50 with student I.D. and $1.00 without. Advance tickets will be on sale at the main desk at Billings. The team Kampmann and Smet have been appearing at various theaters in New England for the past year and a half. They will be coming to UVM from Stowe and the Proposition in Boston.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS
145 EAST ALLEN ST. WINOOSKI, VT.
OPEN 10-10 DAILY 10-6 SUNDAY
655-2620

Blues Guitarist Plays At Coffee House Tonight

The "King of the Massachusetts Delta Blues Men" and a "rumor in his own time" will be appearing at the Simpson Hall Coffee House tonight (January 30) at 8:30.

Martin Grosswendt, blues and slide guitarist, has a growing reputation as one of the finer studio musicians around. His skills on the blues guitar, dobro, hawiian and pedal steel guitar are frequently in demand by Philo Records recording artists in North Ferrisburg, Vermont. When he's not doing session work for Jim Ringer, Mary McCaslin, Utah Phillips, Tom Mitchell, Kenny Hall or Bodie Wagner he tours the coffee house and folk festival circuit.

"On tour he beguiles audiences with his interpretations of Robert Johnson, The Reverend Gary Davis, Blind Willie McTell and other famous bluesmen. In between songs and instrumentals, Martin "Blind Ethnic Pig Meat" entertains with tall tales, jokes, and stories he's learned on the road; some of them while traveling the country as a side man for Utah Phillips.

Admission for tonight's blues concert is only $.75.

Coming up in the future at Simpson Hall's Coffee House series of folk concerts will be Tom Mitchell, Jim Ringer, Bodie Wagner, Margaret MacArthur and, hopefully, Kenny Hall.

TONIGHT
Enjoy our specially featured SHORE DINNER
without ever leaving Vermont
Our Incomparable Clambake
LIVE MAINE LOBSTER
• Steamed clams or clam chowder
• Drawn Butter
• Corn on the Cob
• Baked Idaho Potato
$5.95
DINNER by CANDLELIGHT
TOGETHER SPECIAL
SURF 'N TURF
• Steamed clams or clam chowder
• Half Baked Stuffed Lobster
• Top Sirloin Steak
• Corn on the Cob
• Baked Idaho Potato
$11.90
Singles $4.50 Per Couple
ABOVE DINNERS INCLUDE:...
Tossed garden salad, Fresh Home Baked Bread
Black Cat
160 Bank St., 864-9723

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30
ANCHORS AWEIGH (1945) – Frank Sinatra & Gene Kelly
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

FRIDAY, JANUARY 31
HORSEFEATHERS (1933) – Marx Brothers
EASY STREET & THE RINK – Charlie Chaplin
ROCKIN' THRU THE ROCKIES – The Three Stooges
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – $1

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1
WOMAN OF THE YEAR (1942) – Spencer Tracy, Katharyn Hepburn
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3
GRAND ILLUSION (1937) – Erich von Stroheim
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 p.m. – Free

JANUARY 30, 1975

Met Opera Singer T

One of the busiest young stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company, singer Frederica von Stade, will perform on the Lane Series on Sunday, February 2, at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

Miss von Stade will begin her Lane Series program with the aria "Voi che sapete," in the part of Cherubino, from Mozart's opera The Marriage of Figaro. She sang this role when the Paris Opera re-opened in April of 1973 with a new production of this famous opera. Indeed, she was the only American chosen for the star-studded international cast conducted by Sir Georg Solti. As Cherubino Miss von Stade won an ovation from the Paris opening night audience that included President Pompidou and visiting dignitaries from all over the world.

Other operatic arias in her Burlington program include "Sorgi, o padre" from Bellini's Bianca e Fernando; "Nobles Seigneurs" from Meyerbeer's Les Huguenots; and "Non piu mesta" from Rossini's La Cenerentola.

In addition, her program will include lieder by Mahler, Debussy, Poulenc, and a group of British Isle folksongs arranged by Benjamin Britten. Another highlight will be "Laudamus te," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor.

The beautiful and vivacious Frederica von Stade, who is only 28, spent the year 1973 – in addition to her Paris Figaro – in some of the musical capitals of the world: in San Francisco, where she sang Dorabella in Cosi Fan Tutte; in

Frederica v Glyndebour
she was on including a entire opera Monteve
d'Ulisse;
Thomas P
The Sea
York, as R revival of and as Giovanni.
She Met's spe
Award, th
Sullivan A
Annual M
the Natio
von Stad

Z. Professo

It has been a good week for the professor, I'm in love again with Joni Mitchell, and I got me a new honey, Phoebe Snow, and she's keeping the professor's mind locked in that little hole in the middle of her record. Those ladies keep tearing my heart right out of my birdcage. My lady rocker friends are really putting out this week; I'm going to give them all A's. Wait for me Joni, I'm coming.

I would like to extend my sincerest thank yous to the fine people at Upstairs Records for helping the Professor spin at 33 1/3.

MILES OF AISLES/ Joni mitchell and the LA Express Usually live albums die on your turntable after 8 playings. Not this one. This is Joni Mitchell at her most accessible. Her singing is sharp and relaxed. The Express chugs along behind her, giving her music the life it needs in concert. Tom Scott's horns and Joni's guitar and piano blend like mayonnaise and ketchup. A new version of "Woodstock" cooks like sweet funk. "Both Sides Now" has grown up. There are 16 old favorites and 2 new songs. "Jerico" and "Love or Money", on this spirited double album. A vocal fan yells "Joni you have more class than Mick Jagger, Richard Nixon, or Gomer Pyle." Now that bit of live presence is cute, but in ten years we'll be wondering who Richard Nixon is. (A+, artist's colors)

PHOEBE SNOW/ phoebe snow If you're thinking of a gift for a sensitive friend, this album will transcend generosity. It takes a lot to write about the pain that many of us carry around. I admire anybody (especially with such a pretty body) who can turn it into a beautiful song. This is a stunning debut album from a singer/ songwriter, writing from the gut and singing in a sultry, dr ranges Maria's, though her own profess Davé M and Ste her ow Sims Margare harp Backup "the Go mellow corner power statem colors)

KI kinky softball vs. L.A. Pantsm pep t game, ditties throws Plea "Every studios last You've that's to h "The Jesu beaut Life, kinky and A+,

LIVE ENTERTAINME
The Best Place For The FAMOUS S
THURSDAY TROY ROAD
FRIDAY PAUL SOKOL
SATURDAY FRANK WIL
SUNDAY OPEN 1PM –
MONDAY JOHN CASSEL
TUESDAY KATH HERBE
WEDNESDAY MIKE FA
119 St. Paul St.

... Into Deja Vu

...temptress to cranky old hag, ...touches are nothing short of uncanny. ...Ionesco It is her voice and her ...laugh, demeanor.

...other All through this play, I had ...splendid an eerie, almost chilling sense ...as the of deja vu. No, it wasn't ...takes a because I have read or seen the ...tor to production before, but because ...and do as director Towers said– "It ...n does. reminds you of someone you ...one of know."

...made to When one recognizes ...exudes presidents in arrogant kings, ...ngly so. congressmen and generals in ...Duncan, shallow leaders, and public ...itch, officials and various other ...from prominent figures in disloyal ...beguiling rebels, it is a pretty chilling (continued on page seven)

...r Winter Week

...Mitchell's ...formed in ...Talking of ...Tropical ...ter, and in ...to Dinner.

...ated from ...ommonwealth ...B.A. in ...in 1969. ...r's Degree ...dology from ...in 1974. ...London, ...ge and in ...ed in such ...ath Watch.

The Lottery, The Lark, and a children's play Beauty and the Beast.

They will be here Thursday and Friday, Feb. 6 and 7, at 8 p.m. Admission is $.50 with student I.D. and $1.00 without. Advance tickets will be on sale at the main desk at Billings. The team Kampmann and Smet have been appearing at various theaters in New England for the past year and a half. They will be coming to UVM from Stowe and the Proposition in Boston.

...s Guitarist Plays ...fee House Tonight

...ing of the Delta Blues ...r in his own ...aring at the ...offee House ...10) at 8:30. ...rendt, blues ...arist, has a ...n as one of ...o musicians ...on the blues ...hawman and ...guitar are ...and by Philo ...g artists in ...g, Vermont. ...doing session ...Ringer, Mary ...Phillips, Tom ...Hall or Bodie ...the coffee ...estival circuit. ...he beguiles ...with his interpretations of Robert Johnson, The Reverend Gary Davis, Blind Willie McTell and other famous bluesmen. In between songs and instrumentals, Martin "Blind Ethnic Pig Meat" entertains with tall tales, jokes, and stories he's learned on the road; some of them while traveling the country as a side man for Utah Phillips.

Admission for tonight's blues concert is only $.75.

Coming up in the future at Simpson Hall's Coffee House series of folk concerts will be Tom Mitchell, Jim Ringer, Bodie Wagner, Margaret MacArthur and, hopefully, Kenny Hall.

...URSDAY, JANUARY 30
...ANCHORS AWEIGH (1945) – Frank ...atra & Gene Kelly
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free.

...IDAY, JANUARY 31
...ORSEFEATHERS (1933) – Marx ...rothers
...EASY STREET & THE RINK – ...Charlie Chaplin
...ROCKIN' THRU THE ROCKIES – ...The Three Stooges
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – $1

...ATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1
...WOMAN OF THE YEAR (1942) – ...Spencer Tracy, Katheryn Hepburn
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

...ONDAY, FEBRUARY 3
...GRAND ILLUSION (1937) – ...Erich von Stroheim
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 p.m. – Free

Met Opera Singer To Perform Sunday

Frederica von Stade

One of the busiest young stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company, singer Frederica von Stade, will perform on the Lane Series on Sunday, February 2, at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

Miss von Stade will begin her Lane Series program with the aria "Voi che sapete," in the part of Cherubino, from Mozart's opera The Marriage of Figaro. She sang this role when the Paris Opera re-opened in April of 1973 with a new production of this famous opera. Indeed, she was the only American chosen for the star-studded international cast conducted by Sir Georg Solti. As Cherubino Miss von Stade won an ovation from the Paris opening night audience that included President Pompidou and visiting dignitaries from all over the world.

Other operatic arias in her Burlington program include "Sorgi, o padre" from Bellini's Bianca e Fernando; "Nobles Seigneurs" from Meyerbeer's Les Huguenots; and "Non piu mesta" from Rossini's La Cenerentola.

In addition, her program will include lieder by Mahler, Debussy, Poulenc, and a group of British Isle folksongs arranged by Benjamin Britten. Another highlight will be "Laudamus te," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor.

The beautiful and vivacious Frederica von Stade, who is only 28, spent the year 1973 – in addition to her Paris Figaro – in some of the musical capitals of the world: in San Francisco, where she sang Dorabella in Cosi Fan Tutte; in Glyndebourne, England, where she was once again Cherubino, including a BBC telecast of the entire opera; in Washington, in Monteverdi's Il Ritorno d'Ulisse; in Houston, in Thomas Pasatieri's new opera The Sea Gull; and in New York, as Rosina, in the Met's revival of The Barber of Seville and as Zerlina in Don Giovanni.

She was also given the Met's special Frank Chapman Award, the William Matheus Sullivan Award and the 12th Annual Music Scholarship of the National Arts Club. Miss von Stade appeared on the Lane Chamber Arts Series two years ago and performed to an enthusiastic ovation.

Tickets for Sunday's concert, $3, $5, and $6, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman. For reservations telephone 656-3418. (The Lane Office will be open on Saturday and Sunday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.)

The next Lane offering will be the young classical guitarist Christopher Parkening, who plays February 13. Only a handful of tickets, $3 each, are available for this Ira Allen Chapel concert.

Impressionism: Phenomenon Within A Larger Whole

by Mark Seraknick

The current rage in the art world today is "The Impressionist Epoch", now on view at the Metropolitan Museum in New York through Feb. 11. The exhibit is an ambitious undertaking which has created controversy among art critics for its re-evaluation of the Impressionistic painters. It has also proven popular among art lovers and the general public as shown by the attraction of over 150,000 people since it opened Dec. 12.

As I approached the Met shortly after New Year's Day, it was readily apparent that the museum had a unique exhibit. Thousands of people were milling around the colossal steps of the Met and upon entering the building, many more were lined up waiting to ascend the special escalator to the second floor. Virtually everyone who was at the Met came expressly to see the Impressionist show.

Thomas Hoving, director of the Met, has produced this exhibition as a centennial tribute to the first Impressionist show held in April 1874. He sees the Impressionist painters as "a phenomenon within a larger whole", meaning their effect on the future state of the art grew out of a small group of dissatisfied painters and later gained momentum, finally affecting the entire art world. Hence, the creation of "modern art" began. Mr. Hoving also emphasizes the diversity of the painters and stresses that Impressionism was not a good description of the style. The painters themselves differed markedly in style and goals. Witness the differences between Van Gogh, Cezanne, Manet, Monet, and Renoir. However, most, if not all, attempted to capture "the moment" rather than recreating objective reality. Their sensory impressions of their subject matter were also conveyed by abstracting reality.

The exhibit not only treats the major Impressionistic painters but also gives "an unprecedented opportunity to discover the sources, social history, and art historical ramifications of Impressionism. To handle this difficult task, forty-two core paintings were imported from the Louvre which added to a variety of European and American paintings from public and private collections.

Pre- and post-Impressionistic works were shown in chronological order along with samples of American Impressionism, French salon painting contemporary with the Impressionists, X-rays showing changes in compositional features of key paintings, a narrated slide show, and graphics illustrating the political scene of the time in Europe.

All in all Mr. Hoving has put together a very fine exhibition and meaningful re-evaluation of the Impressionists. Although some critics have lambasted him for including some works of questionable value, I feel the opportunity for Americans to view many works that normally never leave the Louvre and private collections outweighs any ambiguities the critics find disheartening. Mr. Hoving has also brought some long needed excitement to the art world and has attracted huge crowds, even in these times of economic decline.

"The Impressionist Epoch" is a very noteworthy exhibit and art dilettantes should make an effort to see it. If you do choose to make a weekend jaunt to New York, try to arrive at the Met early. The crowds are huge and although you will be able to always see the paintings, your viewing time may be cut short by the frustrating crowds. Good luck!

Z. Professor's Guide To Rock

It has been a good week for the professor. I'm in love again with Joni Mitchell, and I got the ...s new honey, Phoebe Snow, and she's keeping the professor's mind locked in that little hole in the middle of her record. Those ladies keep tearing my heart right out of my birdcage. My lady rocker friends are really putting out this week; I'm going to give them all A's. Wait for me Joni, I'm coming.

I would like to extend my sincerest thank yous to the fine people at Upstairs Records for helping the Professor spin at 33 1/3.

MILES OF AISLES/ Joni mitchell and the LA Express Usually live albums die on your turntable after 8 playings. Not this one. This is Joni Mitchell at her most accessible. Her singing is sharp and relaxed. The Express chugs along behind her, giving her music the life it needs in concert. Tom Scott's horns and Joni's guitar and piano blend like mayonnaise and ketchup. A new version of "Woodstock" cooks like sweet funk. "Both Sides Now" has grown up. There are 16 old favorites and 2 new songs. "Jerico" and "Love or Money" on this spirited double album. A vocal fan yells "Joni you have more class than Mick Jagger, Richard Nixon, or Gomer Pyle." Now that bit of live presence is cute, but in ten years we'll be wondering who Richard Nixon is. (A+, artist's colors)

PHOEBE SNOW/ phoebe snow If you're thinking of a gift for a sensitive friend, this album will transcend generosity. It takes a lot to write about the pain that many of us carry around. I admire anybody (especially with such a pretty body) who can turn it into a beautiful song. This is a stunning debut album from a singer/ songwriter, writing from the gut and singing in a sultry, drifting voice. Her voice ranges from syrupy, like Maria's, to flirting, like Joni's, though her style is distinctly her own. The musicians are all professionals, like guitarists: Dave Mason, David Bromberg and Steve Burgh. Phoebe holds her own on her axe. "Zoot" Sims plays tenor sax and Margaret Ross plays a real live harp. The Persuasions sing backup on Sam Cooke's "Let the Good Times Roll." This is mellow music for lonely corners in dark rooms. A powerful, introspective first statement. (A-, gold star colors)

KINKY FRIEDMAN/ kinky friedman Imagine a softball game: Texas Jewboys vs. L.A. Studio Musicians, with Panama Red doing locker room pep talks. After a friendly game, Kinky writes a few ditties that reek of lunacy and throws in Billy Swan's "Lover Please" for nostalgia. Everybody gathers at the studio and turns our 1974's last minute gift to 1975. You've got to love an album that's got a song about Leave it to Beaver, a rascist hymn, "They Ain't Making Jews Like Jesus Anymore" and the beautiful ode to Rockin' Roll Life, "Autograph." Kinky is so kinky it will make you smile and that's what it's all about. A+, all diamonds.

Notice– The Mothers are a travelling band (listen to Roxy and Elsewhere).

DARK HORSE/ George Harrison Of course by the time you read this the album will be gold. If it were anybody else's, it would have grown old with layers of dust by now. The musicianship is top rate but the album suffers from the blahs. "So Sad" expresses it all; George could do better. Don't waste your money unless you have an "I Love George" button. (D, flat colors)

LIGHT OF THE WORLD/ kool and the gang Love those drums, clicking in the traps and slick, sliding cymbols sizzling in the grooves. Kool and the Gang are the defining definition of funk-move, strut, slink, dance, dive. These people know how to fit their music together, no pushing, no squeezing, no excess, just tight grits rolled onto vinyl. This record is not for everyone. But if you want to take your musical consciousness out to a good lunch, feast on Kool and the Gang. (A-, slick colors)

ELDORADO/ electric light orchestra This is schmaltz with lots of suds. Grandiose, etheral arrangements. John Lennon type vocals don't work on string charts. Moody Blues fans will gobble this album up (Moodies fans will gobble anything they can get their hands on). I find you either like ELO or you don't care. This album will do nothing to change that. My better instincts tell me C+, but my best instincts tell me it's very good esoteric nonsense. Not my cup of English tea though. (B-, shaky colors)

JOHN DAWSON WINTER III/ johnny winter Long time ago, there was a silver flurry coming out of Texas. Metallic blues guaranteed to tear your face away. Well as the story goes, Johnny had a hard time keeping up with the hype boogie and fell on the junkers blues. This is the best Winter since Johnny Winter And crumbled some years ago. One thing, when Johnny steps One step back Jack. John Dawson Winter is very hot. A living legend living with himself. (B+, hot winter colors)

DAVE MASON/ dave mason This is the best Dave Mason album since Alone Together. Unfortunately it sounds just like a Dave Mason album and that bores me. Like usual, the record is well paced with tight guitar- keyboard work, soft acoustic guitar textures, short sustained guitar leads and snappy lyrical rhymes. A good album for Dave Mason fans. For me, I fell asleep on the third playing. (C+, same old colors)

... Macbett

(continued from page six)

commentary on the state of our government, and those of the other great powers. The "echo" technique used so skillfully in the play has a discordant, uncomfortably familiar ring. We hear it all too often. MACBETT makes one laugh – and shudder.

And if MACBETT was written in 1968, as I believe it was, then Eugene Ionesco must have had a crystal ball.

Ingenious Acting Saves Deadpan Text

by J. Stevens

The UVM Players' Macbett is an ambitious, innovative production of a mediocre play. Like most drama generated by the 'absurdist' philosophy, language assumes primacy over action. In Macbett a tension exists between the epic spectacles of the Macbeth myth and a text of deadpan banal proportions. Clever use of bourgeois banalities has always been Ionesco's trademark, yet here he tends to overwrite and though director Charles Towers relieves much of the drag with his imaginative use of tape recordings, slides and interpretive music it does not alleviate the fact that the play desperately needs a literary 'Lizzie Borden'.

The leitmotif is established immediately when Candor and Glamis, played by Ed Tracy and James Wimsett, rebel and are crushed by Banco and Macbett. Ed Tracy gives a hilarious speech just before he is beheaded, explaining that he is simply an 'historical deadend' and a perfect example of 'what not to do'. The conquerors, Macbett and Banco, are verbal Siamese twins, sharing the same speeches and desires. Peter Kurth is marvellously understated as Macbett. He is glib and fluid: a mouthpiece for speeches he doesn't really concoct. Craig Purington's Banco is nicely overstated. He gives his speeches a studied sense of drama that complements perfectly with Kurth's deadpan. Both desire to do their job, to serve their lord and to hell with the rest. Ionesco seems to feel that such simplicity engenders moral instability and that once you begin to desire this object or that one, it is only a matter of time before the object of your desire becomes confused. If you desire virtue you will acquire vice. Simply by living you inherit inevitable destruction. Peter Kurth's Macbett is guilty of presuming innocence; Craig Purington's theatricality is perfect in light of his eventual reincarnation as a tyrant.

The intelligence behind the power politics is Lady Duncan, who turns out to be a witch. Sarah Brooke and her side-kick Susan Selig are theatrically entertaining as the witches, who at one point wheel a light box onto stage and work the lights in a 'theatre is magic' moment. Sarah, who plays Lady Duncan, wavers between appearing aristocratically voluptuous or being a vamp. She has the talent to go either way, yet I think it would be comically coherent to have Macbett seduced not by gold but by brass.

All the principle characters have alter-egos except Duncan who is alone, powerful and paranoid. Craig Toth plays him with an elastic personality: at once bombastic and domineering, cowardly and slithering. Toth is an acute caricaturist and mimic and his portrayal of Duncan is very fine and (one senses) very easy. Craig is also very effective in giving the illusion of power and weakness through his physical movement.

The common people bear the brunt of Ionesco's epic activity, and often theirs were the most comic bits. What can you say: very effective as collective rabble...afflicted with common genius?

Pat Orr's set is the most abstractly versatile set I've seen at the Royal Tyler and though some of it at first appeared unnecessary, it was very effective and effectively used.

The defects of Ionesco's play are definitely overshadowed by the acting and the technical ingenuity. Charles Towers demonstrates that when everything becomes language and comprehension by itself is impossible, then it is vital for the king's pants to fall down to prove conclusively that he is an ass.

Super K: Twentieth Century Version Of God

by David Mandell

Kissinger (Marvin and Bernard Kalb, Little Brown Co. $12.50)

Nineteen Seventy Four witnessed the emergence of one of the most unlikely idols in recent memory. Henry A. Kissinger, a man whose attributes seldom lead to heroic status, rocketed to fame in a trail of glory so publicized that not even a corrupt and decadent administration could dampen. Americans watched the spectacle of a President clinging to the coattails of his Secretary of State, an ironic reversal of the normal roles. Henry Kissinger, Harvard intellectual, German-Jewish refugee, and possessor of the thickest German accent this side of Berlin, became dubbed Super K, and Henry the Magician by a media in search of a hero, after five years of a rather drab Nixon crew. Marvin and Bernard Kalb, veteran CBS news reporters, recently published a monumental study of the Secretary of State, appropriately titling their work Kissinger. Being about the only major study of Dr. Kissinger to come out lately, Kissinger is an essential work for those interested in him.

The Kalb brothers, recipients of numerous and much sought after interviews with Dr. Kissinger, have a tendency to employ only Kissinger's account of events. As might be expected in a situation like this, the portrait of Kissinger emanating from the book is one of a man who is at the least estimate a saint, but more probably a twentieth century version of God.

Tracing his background, the Kalbs describe Kissinger's early years as a Jew in Nazi Germany where young Henry (then Heinz) was regularly beaten and expelled from school due to his "non Aryan" status. Despite Kissinger's vehement denials of the Freudian suggestions arising from this childhood, the Kalbs suggest it might be an insight into his current actions. The story then moves to New York where Henry worked in a factory to pay his way through college in the hopes of becoming an accountant. Events intervened and Henry joined the army. Upon his return he was awarded a scholarship to Harvard where he earned a doctorate and began teaching. The Kalbs remind Harvard that Kissinger was denied tenure when he sought it (which should warm the hearts of all those professors denied this "honor"). In a temper tantrum Henry resigned from Harvard and began writing, until he had the sweet revenge of Harvard asking him to return, this time with tenure. Kissinger remained at Harvard until 1969 when he was asked by Richard Nixon to join him at the White House. It is at this point that

...continued on page eight)

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE – NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
1216 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Boutilier's ART CENTER
112 Church Street BURLINGTON, VERMONT
ARTIST & DRAFTING SUPPLIES • SIGNWRITERS MATERIALS PAPERS • CARDBOARDS • SCHOOL SUPPLIES • CRAFT MATERIALS
CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING.
VT.'S LARGEST ART STORE

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT AT CARBURS
The Best Place For The Late Night Hungries
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
THURSDAY TROY ROAD TRAVELING CIGAR BAND
FRIDAY PAUL SOKOL
SATURDAY FRANK WILLIAMS
SUNDAY OPEN 1PM – 9:30 PM
MONDAY JOHN CASSELLI – BOLO
TUESDAY KATH HERBERT
WEDNESDAY MIKE FAIRBANKS
119 St. Paul St. 862-4106

yarn cellar
YARN SALE
Rantuk Knitting Worsted $1.49
Berella 4 Knitting Worsted $1.59
Winsom Sport Yarn .89
Selected Crewel Kits 20% off
at
THE ROYAL
96 CHURCH ST.

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
Monday Thru Thursday
NO COVER
★ FEATURING ★
JAN. 27- FEB.1 SECRET SAM
FEB. 3-8 DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE
FEB. 10-15 JOE WHITING BAND

What do you do with a SUPER JACK?

Send it to a friend... take it out for dinner... give one to your old lady... file it under "S"... or be practical and make a meal of it all by yourself. LUMS Superjack... just for the ravenous... mountains of hot roast beef, imported ham, pastrami and melted cheese served on a toasted bun.
Get one today.
WILLISTON RD. SO. BURLINGTON NEAR THE AIRPORT
BERLIN, VT. ROUTE 302 AMES MALL
LUMS RESTAURANTS

WINTER CLEARANCE SALE

MONDAY, JANUARY 27th
THROUGH SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8th

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.

SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CAMPING, MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT and CROSS COUNTRY EQUIPMENT

100 DORSET ST., SOUTH BURLINGTON

PHONE 864-0473

CROSS COUNTRY SKI PACKAGES

To Reduce our winter inventory of Cross-Country Skis we are offering the following Ski Packages at big savings. Each package includes:
• SKIS — Choose from those listed • BOOTS — Falk or Bass light touring boot
• POLES — Deluxe bamboo cross country pole • BINDING — Popular pin type

Fischer Europa Light Touring Ski — Aluminum & Wood construction	55.00
Cross Country Boot	34.50
Pin Binding	7.95
Bamboo or Aluminum Pole	9.95
EMS Catalog Price	$107.40
WINTER SALE PRICE	$69.50
Fischer Ski Only	$39.50
Bonna 1800 — Hickory Bottom, Lignostone edges	49.50
Cross-Country Boot	34.50
Pin Binding	7.95
Bamboo or Aluminum Pole	9.95
EMS Catalog Price	$101.90
WINTER SALE PRICE	$69.50
Bonna Ski Only	$44.50
Mohair Waxless Ski — Good traction without waxing headaches	70.00
Cross-Country Boot	34.50
Pin Binding	7.95
Bamboo or Aluminum Pole	9.95
EMS Catalog Price	$122.40
WINTER SALE PRICE	$69.50
Bonna Ski Only	$44.50

OTHER SKI SPECIALS AND SALE PRICES AVAILABLE ON BOOTS, BINDINGS, POLES

TENTS

Qty.	Item	Sugg. Retail	Sale Price
35	EMS Kaskawalsh Tent — Sophisticated high-altitude design, double A-frame pole system, waterproof rain fly, floor is 4'8" x 7'6", overall weight is 6½ lbs.	$115.00	92.50
15	EMS Mosquito Net Tent	85.00	68.00
18	Camp Ways 2-Man Tent	65.00	40.00

DOWN FILLED SLEEPING BAGS

Qty	Item	Sugg. Retail	Sale Price
8	Gerry Mountain Mummy — Regular blue or orange — Late fall and winter camping, rated minus 15°, fits persons to 6	122.50	99.50
19	EMS Mt Robson Mummy — blue or green — Regular — Fits persons to 5'11"	99.50	94.50
187	Long — Fits persons to 6'7" — Three season down bag, rated to minus 10°	106.50	99.50
16	EMS Dhaulagiri Mummy — orange/green or orange — Regular — Fits persons to 5'11"	130.00	115.00
10	Long — Fits persons to 6'7" — The ultimate winter sleeper with 10" of loft, rated at a conservative minus 50°	140.00	120.00
60	EMS Estes — green or navy — Semi-rectangular bag rated to 5°, fits persons to 6'2	79.50	69.50
50	EMS Teton — green or navy — Semi-rectangular bag rated to 0°, fits persons to 6'2	94.50	86.50
25	Gerry Yosemite Sleeper — Regular — Fits persons 6', tapered rectangular shape with a box foot, rated 15°	107.50	86.50
20	Gerry Backpacker Mummy — Regular blue or orange. — Fits persons to 6', rated to minus 5°	112.50	94.50

SHELL CLOTHING

Qty.	Item	Sugg. Retail	Sale Price
179	EMS 60/40 Parka — Navy, orange, tan — Versatile all-around parka, outer shell 60% cotton/40% nylon, lined with nylon taffeta in sleeves and upper body	39.50	31.50
20	Alpine Designs Mountain Parka — Blue or red. — Waterproof parka with shell of 2-ply coated nylon taffeta and absorbent cotton poplin lining.	43.50	36.50
30	EMS El Cheapo Rain Parka — Navy or green. — Simple waterproof parka, heat sealed seams for added protection	14.00	11.50
20	EMS El Cheapo Rain Pants — Navy or green — Full length rain pants, no pockets, heat sealed seams	11.00	8.95
8	EMS Cagoule Rain Parka	30.00	23.00
10	Sierra Designs Poncho	18.50	14.50
21	EMS Wind Parka	22.50	18.50
30	EMS Childs El Cheapo Rain Parka	11.00	8.00

PACKS

Qty.	Item	Sugg. Retail	Sale Price
15	EMS Undivided Packbag and Haleymaster Frame — High quality combination. Colors: orange or navy. S, M, L, XL.	45.00	31.50
23	Camp Trails Canyon Pack and Frame — Fits persons 5'7" to 5'9". Colors: green or orange	34.50	31.50

PACKS cont.

100 Kelty Basic Pack and Frame — Navy, S, M, L, XL. — Open style pack with backpacker frame, Kelty quality in an inexpensive pack	37.00	32.50
80 EMS Day Pack — Orange, navy or green. — Frameless knapsack with single back pocket	12.00	9.50
10 EMS Child's Day Pack — Smaller version of Day Pack	8.00	7.00
10 Himalayan Economy Baby Carrier — Good suspension, canvas seat.	15.95	7.00

PARKAS

Qty.	Item	Sugg. Retail	Sale Price
12	Alpine Designs Expedition Parka — Double quilt construction, differential cut, over 5" of loft, hood is attached, rated to minus 25°	110.00	92.50
10	Alpine Designs Glacier Parka w/Hood — Similar to Alp Expedition parka with less loft, detachable hood, rated minus 15°	95.00	78.50
75	EMS Patagonia Parka — Down filled, 60/40 cloth outer fabric, rated 10°.	49.50	41.50
180	EMS Taffeta Bugaboo w/Hood — Down filled rated 15°	44.50	29.50
50	Gerry Down Sweater — 1974 model — Compact lightweight warmth	43.50	32.50
60	EMS Chevron Style Down Vest — Versatile for year round comfort.	22.50	18.50
75	EMS Yeti Parka w/Hood — Down filled, 60/40 cloth outer fabric, rated to 15°.	64.50	51.50
8	EMS Patagonia Jr. w/Hood — Down filled.	30.00	23.50
10	EMS Glacier Jr. w/Hood — Polarguard® filled (synthetic)	30.00	23.50
25	EMS Wabon Parka w/Hood — Polarguard® filled, rated -5°.	43.00	27.50
50	EMS Tremblanc Parka w/Hood — Polarguard® filled, rated -25°	65.00	42.50
40	EMS Mansfield Parka w/Hood — Polarguard® filled, outer shell 50% polyester, 50% cotton, rated -10°.	57.50	45.50
30	Town and Country Parka w/Hood — Synthetic filled, rated 10°	45.00	35.50
50	EMS Bugaboo Parka (Ripstop Shell) Hood available at $5.00	44.50	39.50
	Down hoods by North Face, Sierra Designs, EMS, Camp 7, Snowlion		30% OFF

LIMITED SIZES AND COLORS

MISCELLANEOUS

Qty.	Item	Sugg. Retail	Sale Price
30	Modified Bearpaw Showshoes. 13"x33"	37.50	29.50
	14"x36"	37.50	29.50
15	Green Mountain Bearpaw Snowshoes 10"x36"	37.50	29.50
50	EMS Standard Snowshoe Bindings	7.00	5.00
15	Tourist Cookset — Sigg Copy	9.50	6.00
39	EMS Overboot (Regular)	19.50	16.00
5	EMS Overboot (Insulated)	30.00	23.50
20	Norwegian Sweater (Crew & T-Neck)	22.50	16.50
2	Icelandic Sweater	39.50	31.50
10	Stretch Ski Touring Knickers	16.95	12.50
10	Stretch Ski Touring Top	16.95	12.50
9	Wool Whipcord Knickers	25.00	20.00
48	Wool Whipcord Pants	35.00	29.50
19	Woolrich Heavy Wool Knickers	31.50	26.50
32	Woolrich Alaskan Shirt	20.50	16.50
31	Woolrich Ranger Shirt	21.50	17.50
40	Woolrich Buffalo Shirt	17.50	14.50
65	Woolrich Stag Shirt	24.50	19.50
25	Woolrich Flannel Shirt	11.95	8.95
15	Woolrich Malone Pants	28.00	22.50
50	Janus Wool Knicker Socks	7.95	6.35
100	Safa Knicker Socks	6.00	4.80
98	EMS Corduroy Knickers (Men's & Women's)	27.50	22.00
25	Boren Husen Knickers	49.50	38.00
20	Pendleton Sweaters	30.00	24.00
40	EMS Deluxe Down Mitts	19.50	13.50
100	EMS Deluxe Down Gloves	22.50	15.50
120	EMS Fleece Lined Gloves	11.50	7.50
175	EMS X-Country Gloves	8.50	6.00
17	EMS Expedition Gloves	25.00	18.50
75	EMS Down Booties	12.50	6.50
60	Sherpa Lightfoot Snowshoes with Bindings	65.00	55.00
8	Dovre Ski Rack w/Lock	34.95	29.50
20	Swedish Ski Rack	14.50	9.50
20	EMS 16" Nylon Gaiter	9.50	6.95
20	EMS 12" Nylon Gaiter	9.50	6.95
	X-country Ski Boots		20% OFF
5	Dovre VW Ski Racks	10.95	8.25
20	Alpine Designs 7" Gaiter	7.50	5.00

OPEN MONDAY Through SATURDAY 9 A.M. to 9 P.M.

Tales From The Ozones

by Paul Prior

Dark Horse/ George Harrison I suppose even the most talented of the superstars are prone to putting out an occasional bad effort, at best mediocre. It's a shame such an average album preceeded an even duller tour. Where did Harrison go wrong? After the immense success of his first solo effort All Things Must Pass and his dynamic Bangla Desh concert, Harrison was musically inactive for a long period of time. For most rock musicians, touring is essential in gauging audience reaction to the material. Harrison was so wrapped up in helping the people of Bangla Desh that it took priority over his music. Living in the Material World was a decent album, not a masterpiece, but a good album, if not a little bland at times.

His latest effort, Dark Horse, is a major dimppointment, even to the most diehard fans (like myself). Side One starts off with a rocker, an instrumental titled "Hari's On Tour." It's the best track on the album and everything is downhill from there. "Simply Shady" follows, distinguished by first rate guitar work but little else. The sad thing about this is that his backing group is so good — one of the best around: the L.A. Express, led by veteran session man Tom Scott. It is clearly Scott who holds this album together – without him, the results would have been unfathomable. "So Sad" follows, a great song, my next favorite on the disk. I don't think Harrison's version is as good as a cover of the song done by Alvin Lee and Mylon which appears on a l.p. called On The Road To Freedom a very underrated album released about a year ago. The next cut is the Everly Brothers classic "Bye Bye Love." It just doesn't work for some reason; the pace is way too slow, for one.

"Maya Love" closes out the first side, a catchy little number but Harrison is capable of writing material ten times as good. Side Two opens with an absolute travesty, "Ding Dong Ding Dong." Harrison loses points especially for this song. The song is an absolute nothing, even with the backing of Ringo Star, Jim Keltner, Gary Wright, Klaus Voorman, Alvin Lee, Ron Wood, and Tom Scott. Just shows that even the best can do only so much with horrendous material. "Dark Horse" is okay, though Harrison's voice is obviously shot on this cut. Some folks have interpreted this as a "soul-style" voice, but that theory doesn't hold water, the old chords are hurtin'. "Far East Man" and "It Is He" ("He" as in "Him") close out Side Two; very little here other than the fine work of Tom Scott on horns.

What can the problem be? By reports from people who attended concerts in Montreal and New York, Harrison's performance was a letdown. "His voice is gone;" "Uninspired:" "They should have called the album 'Dark Hoarse.' " My feeling is that Harrison has lost touch with the audience that brought him his fame. His tour was not successful not because he didn't play Beatle songs, but because he was not in the spotlight enough. If you paid $8.50 to see George Harrison and ended up seeing one and a half hours of opening acts, would you be annoyed? A lack of good material, Harrison's strained voice, (when you don't tour for five or six years, the pressure of going out and singing everynight is overwhelming) coupled with his inclusion of the Shankar Family and Friends on the Tour made for some very disappointed ticket holders. I can only hope that Harrison isn't so bummed by the lack of critical acclaim, that he drops out from touring.

He's the only one of the Beatles who has maintained any type of consistancy though this album and the tour that coincided were a step backward. So, this is one of those "for fans only" deals; if you really like Harrison, walk but don't run and get the album. We can only hope the next album is three steps forward, in compensation for such a mediocre work.

... Twentieth Century God

(continued from page seven)

the Kalbs start to plead their case for the sainthood of Dr. Kissinger.

The first order of business awaiting the new administration was the ending of the Vietnam war. Delving laboriously into the negotiations, the absurdity of the Paris talks becomes clear to the Kalbs. Nixon, determined to achieve an "honorable" end to the conflict, would not part with General Thieu. The North Vietnamese were equally determined to sign no agreement that gave Thieu even the semblance of respect. While both sides debated for four years over Thieu thousands of men died. While Nixon is depicted as a prisoner of his machismo conflict, Kissinger we are told is flexible and compromising. It was Nixon's decision to invade Cambodia and Laos, as well as to mine Hanoi. The credit for the negotiated settlement is given to Kissinger.

The Kalbs then move to the only major achievement of the Nixon years, the opening of American- Chinese relations. Kissinger is presented in a magnanimous posture. Galloping through China, he charmed Chou Enlai, seduced Mao Tsetung, and even paved the way for Chinese ping pong players to tour America.

While this had been garnering public attention, Kissinger had privately forced the Russian navy out of Cuba and their attempts to subvert King Hussein of Jordan. Is there an end to Henry's magic?

The October 1973 Middle East war provides another global conflict for the good professor to solve. During that war Kissinger is credited with helping America's traditional ally Israel, over bureaucratic opposition, restoring American relations with the previously anti- American Arab states, and once again calling Brezhnev's bluff in the Sinai desert. Truly a man of miracles!

In a few weeks Kissinger, the Kalbs tell us, has charmed Golda Meir, Anwar Sadat, King Hussein, and all others in his path. The two remaining subjects, "tilting" towards Pakistan in 1971, and Watergate, are quickly brushed over. He was too busy to pay enough attention to the Indian-Pakistani dispute as he was saving the world at the time. As for Watergate, the Kalbs declare that the evildoers of the Nixon team, Haldeman, Erlichman, and company despised Henry, and therefore, we can assume that he must be clean. In that assumption the Kalbs are probably justified.

Kissinger is indeed a skillful diplomat, but the Kalbs should know, we already have one God.

Hot Spot

MARK FARNER ALMOST WIPED OUT

(Earth News) – Grand Funk's Mark Farner almost didn't make the band's current international concert tour. On his way to the final rehearsal at the band's Michigan hideaway, Farner discovered that his brand new snowmobile was without brakes. Arriving at the hideaway at an estimated 70 miles per hour, Farner crashed into Craig Fisher's $30,000 Pantera car. Farner was found beneath the snowmobile dazed, but uninjured.

CAROLE KING'S VOICE TO BE T.V. STAR

(Earth News) – Carole King's voice – but not her body will be making its television debut Feb. 19 in a prime-time animated special, "Really Rosie: Starring the Nutshell Kids." Carole sings all the songs in the CBS musical based on characters by Maurice Sendak, author of children's books. Ode Records will release Carole's performance as a soundtrack album.

BOWIE PLANS FIVE-STAGE TOUR

(Earth News)– On his upcoming tour of Europe, David Bowie will be using five separate stages. And, much like a three-ring circus, something will be happening on all five stages all the time. The set-up is so expensive that many European promoters are afraid to book the show. Meanwhile, David's new rhythm 'n blues album, "Fascination," is set for release in the U.S. next month.

How To

by John Ghrist

(CPS)–Increasing numbers of students have discovered that they are eligible for the US Government food stamp plan and are taking advantage of government largess to help them on the rocky financial road of higher education.

The Food Stamp Act of 1964 was designed to enable low-income households to buy more food of greater variety to supplement their diets. Participants pay a small amount of money based on household size and monthly income; they receive food stamps equivalent to a larger value which are used to purchase food.

Eligibility is determined on the basis of households: a family or other group living together and functioning as a single economic unit. A single economic unit is a person or a group of persons who pool their resources and jointly buy things necessary to the household, such as food, to be held and used in common by all members of the household

For a group of students living together to apply as a household, all members of the household must meet all the eligibility requirements. Potential applicants, even those who live together, have the option of declaring themselves individual households and applying for stamps separately. In this case, each individual must be able to prove he buys, stores and prepares all his food separately from other persons with whom he is living.

Deductions from the household's take home pay may be as follows: 30% of your shelter costs (rent and utility bills – telephones are not considered a necessity by the welfare department) and the cost of medical bills more than $10 or health insurance.

The net income figure after deductions is the basis on which financial eligibility is determined.

After these deductions have been computed, the limits for net monthly income allowable to qualify for the food stamp program vary with the number of persons in the household. The limit for one is $194; for two, $273; for three, $393; for four, $500; for five $593; for six $680; for seven $767; and for eight, $853. The limits are higher for Alaska and Hawaii because of higher food costs in

UYA To Feed

by Stephen W. Tanner

Two members of the University Year for Action (U.Y.A.) have decided to reinstitute the "Free Breakfast Program" for elementary students in the Burlington area.

The program will begin in September at the Barnes and Thayer schools and will be open to Burlington school children who would not normally receive a hot breakfast at home. Over 50% of the families living in both districts are low income bracket households.

Erica Hunt and Ken Schatz who have worked with Burlington's Bread and Law Task Force as part of their year for action felt revitalizing the project was a positive measure.

"We are offering the school board a breakfast program at little or no expense," said Schatz. "Our approach has been to the federal school breakfast reimbursement money with private contributions." Chittenden Bank and Trust, Burlington

NEW BUDGET
PHARM
★ FULL SERVICE
★ BUDGET–PRICED
★ COMPLETE SELE
SQUIBB NATURA
★ CONVENIENTLY GAYN
SHOPP
WOR
PHONE: 8

...s From The ...Ozones

...George ...even the ...uperstars ...g out an ..., at best ...e such an ...eeded an ...There did ... After the ... his first ...ings Must ...ic Beagle ...rison was ...r a long ...most rock ...n essential ...reaction to ...e was so ...ligning the ...ch that it ...his music. ...rld World ...m, got a ...ood album, ...t times. ...ott, Dark ... major ...e to the ...as (like ... starts off ...strumental ...Tour." It's ... the album ... downhill ...ly Shady" ...d by first ... little else. ... this is that ...is so good ...round: the ...by veteran ...Scott. It is ...holds this ...thout him, ...have been ..."So Sad" ..., my next ...k. I don't ...rsion is as ...f the song ...and Mylon ...Lp. called ...Freedom a ...m released ...he next cut ...hers classic ..." It just ...me reason; ...o slow, for ...ses out the ...tchy little ...n is capable ...ten times as ...eas with an ..."Ding Dong ...rrison loses points especially for this song. The song is an absolute nothing, even with the backing of Ringo Star, Jim Keltner, Gary Wright, Klaus Voormen, Alvin Lee, Ron Wood, and Tom Scott. Just shows that even the best can do only so much with horrendous material. "Dark Horse" is okay, though Harrison's voice is obviously shot on this cut. Some folks have interpreted this as a "soul-style" voice, but that theory doesn't hold water, the old chords are hurtin'. "Far East Man" and "It Is He" ("He" as in "Him") close out Side Two; very little here other than the fine work of Tom Scott on horns.

What can the problem be? By reports from people who attended concerts in Montreal and New York, Harrison's performance was a letdown. "His voice is gone;" "Uninspired;" "They should have called the album 'Dark Hoarse.'" My feeling is that Harrison has lost touch with the audience that brought him his fame. His tour was not successful not because he didn't play Beatle songs, but because he was not in the spotlight enough. If you paid $8.50 to see George Harrison and ended up seeing one and a half hours of opening acts, would you be annoyed? A lack of good material, Harrison's strained voice, (when you don't tour for five or six years, the pressure of going out and singing everynight is overwhelming) coupled with his inclusion of the Shankar Family and Friends on the Tour made for some very disappointed ticket holders. I can only hope that Harrison isn't so bummed by the lack of critical acclaim, that he drops out from touring.

He's the only one of the Beatles who has maintained any type of consistancy though this album and the tour that coincided were a step backward. So, this is one of those "for fans only" deals; if you really like Harrison, walk but don't run and get the album. We can only hope the next album is three steps forward, in compensation for such a mediocre work.

...tieth Century God

...age seven) ...plead their ...hood of Dr. ... of business ...he new ...s the ending ...war; Delving ...into the ...absurdity of ...comes clear to ..., determined ...norable" end ...would not part ...w. The North ...ere equally ...to sign no ...ve Thieu even ... respect. While ...ted for four ... thousands of ...ile, Nixon is ...nsoner of his ...fact, Kissinger ...s flexible and ...t was Nixon's ...de Cambodia ...ll as to mine ...redit for the ...ment is given ...en move to the ...vement of the ...he opening of ...hese relations. ...resented in a ...n posture. ...igh China, he ... Enlai, seduced ...nd even paved ...hese ping pong ...America. ...is had been garnering public attention, Kissinger had privately forced the Russian navy out of Cuba and their attempts to subvert King Hussein of Jordan. Is there an end to Henry's magic?

The October 1973 Middle East war provides another global conflict for the good professor to solve. During that war Kissinger is credited with helping America's traditional ally Israel, over bureaucratic opposition, restoring American relations with the previously anti-American Arab states, and once again calling Brezhnev's bluff in the Sinai desert. Truly a man of miracles!

In a few weeks Kissinger, the Kalbs tell us, has charmed Golda Meir, Anwar Sadat, King Hussein, and all others in his path. The two remaining subjects, "tilting" towards Pakistan in 1971 and Watergate, are quickly brushed over. He was too busy to pay enough attention to the Indian-Pakistani dispute as he was saving the world at the time. As for Watergate, the Kalbs declare that the evildoers of the Nixon team, Haldeman, Erlichman, and company despised Henry, and therefore, we can assume that he must be clean. In that assumption the Kalbs are probably justified.

Kissinger is indeed a skillful diplomat, but the Kalbs should know, we already have one God.

Hot Spot

...NER ALMOST ...wn) – Grand ... Farner almost ... band's current ...ncert tour. On ...final rehearsal at ...higan hideaway, ...vered that his ...nowmobile was ... Arriving at the ...n estimated 70 ... Farner crashed ...ober's $30,000 ...rner was found ...nowmobile dazed.

...'S VOICE TO ...wn) – Carole ... but not her ...e making its ...d Feb. 19 in a prime-time animated special, "Really Rosie" Starring the Nutshell Kids." Carole sings all the songs in the CBS musical based on characters by Maurice Sendak, author of children's books. Ode Records will release Carole's performance as a soundtrack album.

BOWIE PLANS FIVE-STAGE TOUR

-(Earth News)- On his upcoming tour of Europe, David Bowie will be using five separate stages. And, much like a three-ring circus, something will be happening on all five stages all the time. The set-up is so expensive that many European promoters are afraid to book the show. Meanwhile, David's new rhythm 'n blues album, "Fascination," is set for release in the U.S. next month.

How To Eat At Government Expence

by John Ghrist

(CPS)–Increasing numbers of students have discovered that they are eligible for the US Government food stamp plan and are taking advantage of government largess to help them on the rocky financial road of higher education.

The Food Stamp Act of 1964 was designed to enable low-income households to buy more food of greater variety to supplement their diets. Participants pay a small amount of money based on household size and monthly income; they receive food stamps equivalent to a larger value which are used to purchase food.

Eligibility is determined on the basis of households: a family or other group living together and functioning as a single economic unit. A single economic unit is a person or a group of persons who pool their resources and jointly buy things necessary to the household, such as food, to be held and used in common by all members of the household

For a group of students living together to apply as a household, all members of the household must meet all the eligibility requirements. Potential applicants, even those who live together, have the option of declaring themselves individual households and applying for stamps separately. In this case, each individual must be able to prove he buys, stores and prepares all his food separately from other persons with whom he is living.

Deductions from the household's take home pay may be as follows: 30% of your shelter costs (rent and utility bills – telephones are not considered a necessity by the welfare department) and the cost of medical bills more than $10 of health insurance.

The net income figure after deductions is the basis on which financial eligibility is determined.

After these deductions have been computed, the limits for net monthly income allowable to qualify for the food stamp program vary with the number of persons in the household. The limit for one is $194; for two, $273; for three, $393; for four, $500; for five $593; for six $680; for seven $767; and for eight, $853. The limits are higher for Alaska and Hawaii because of higher food costs in those states.

Households may not possess more than $1,500 in financial resources (i.e. money in the bank and other "liquid assets"). Excluded from this restriction are: a house, one car and any unlicensed vehicles, life insurance policies, vehicles needed for employment, income-producing real estate (though you must count the income elsewhere) and other resources such as the tools of a tradesman and farm machinery.

All members of the household between the ages of 18 and 65 who are able-bodied must register with their local employment office for work with the following exceptions: 1) students who are enrolled at least half time in recognized schools or training programs; 2) those who are employed at least 30 hours a week; 3) those who are mentally or physically handicapped and 4) mothers or other members of the household who have to take care of dependent children under 17 years of age.

Because of recent legislation passed by the Congress and signed into law, students who are tax dependents of a household not eligible for the stamps are also not eligible.

These regulations, however, will not take effect for at least 60 days. Ineligible students may still apply during that period and get up to three months worth of stamps if they fill all other eligibility requirements.

If one or more, but not all of the members of a household are ineligible because of their tax status, the eligible members of the household may still apply for the stamps. Again, they must be able to prove they buy, store and prepare food separately from ineligible members of the household.

In most states, proof of separate meal purchase and preparation can be satisfied by simply designating a specific food storage place for each member of the household who is either eligible for the stamps or who wished to declare himself a separate household.

Finally, the dwelling the household resides in must have kitchen facilities.

Now, a look at how to apply for food stamps:

The head of the household, or a person designated to be the head by the other household members applies for the household. To do this, the head must go to the local welfare office, complete a lengthy application form and be interviewed. This process may take a full day, so go early in the morning and be prepared to stay a while.

Certain documentary evidence must be presented at the interview to show: the age of all household members, where the household resides, how many are in the household, how much income they have, what financial resources the household members have, and how much the household pays for rent, medical bills, child care, utilities, education and other expenses.

Loans and grants are considered income, but tuition and fee costs (but not book or supply costs) may be deducted if you have the receipts. You must also present student IDs and fee receipts for all student members of the household.

After you apply, a caseworker will visit the household. You will be notified of when to expect the caseworker, and it is at this time you must prove that meals are stored and prepared separately from ineligible or individual household members.

If the welfare office agrees that a household is eligible to participate in the program, the household is awarded stamps according to the number of persons in the household and the net income.

If the welfare office does not agree to household's eligibility, the head can demand a "fair hearing". The local welfare office is obligated to explain the procedures of obtaining a fair hearing to all food stamp applicants, and it must also assist the household in filing its request and preparing its case for presentation to a hearing authority.

The hearing authority is a higher-ranking person with the welfare office(s), or a panel of such persons. The hearing will be held at a time, date and place convenient to the household.

At the hearing, the applicant may present arguments and evidence on his own behalf. He or his representative has the right to: examine all documents and records which might be used at the hearing, bring witnesses, submit evidence to establish pertinent facts and question or refute any testimony or evidence.

Once the hearing has been held, the welfare office must act within 60 days. This includes notifying the head of the household in writing of the decision of the hearing authority and of any rights of further review.

Once in the food stamp program, a household will receive monthly allotments of food stamp coupons and an ID card. Coupons come in denominations of 50 cents, 2 dollars, and 5 dollars, and must be purchased according to the scale established by a household's income and population.

Once food stamps are received, they should be counted and endorsed promptly. If any food stamp books are lost, the local welfare office should be promptly notified.

The stamps are only good in exchange for food products grown or packaged in the United States. The exceptions to this are coffee, tea, cocoa, and bananas. Imported foods, alcoholic beverages and non-edible items must be paid for with cash. The grocer may require presentation of both the coupons and the ID card.

It is illegal to sell or give away food stamps and they cannot be used to pay credit accounts. It is also illegal to use stamps which belong to someone else. Penalties for misuse vary according to the amount of the coupons involved.

The household head will be required periodically to visit the welfare office and bring all records to verify that the household is still eligible for food stamps. Depending on state and other conditions, this eligibility check takes place every one to three months.

Any questions about the food stamp program can be answered by calling or visiting your local welfare office.

Clowning Around For Credit

(Earth News) -- It's common knowledge that quite a few students spend the bulk of their campus years clowning around. But, now, at San Diego State University that's exactly what one group of students is supposed to do.

The university is offering what is thought to be the first credited class in "Clownology," and students are lining up to get in. The whole thing started as a non-credit experiment in the extension school last spring through the efforts of 23 year old Rich Wise, a consultant to the San Diego public school system who goes by the name of Curly the Clown. Rich -- or Curly -- who had been teaching children about clowning, decided that adults should have the same opportunity to learn the art. So, he convinced his alma mater to allow him to offer an experimental non-credit course in the subject.

Curly's experimental class was so successful that the university decided to make it a permanent part of its curriculum and to offer two academic credits to students completing it. The current 15-week course includes instruction on techniques of costuming, make-up, pantomine, story telling, dancing, skits, magic, and party planning.

When the winter term begins this month, as many as 60 students are expected to pack two sections of "Clownology, Recreation X-99." Curly says the course is becoming so well-known that the university is receiving applications for it as far away as Japan and Canada.

Meanwhile, the course's first graduating class of 31 students recently went through their own graduation ceremonies. Wearing home-made costumes and clown make-up beneath traditional mortarboards, the grads marched to "Pomp and Circumstance," feigned sleep while listening to a speech by a university dean, and then collectively launched into a big production number of Cole Porter's "Be A Clown."

While a few of the graduates say they hope to become professional clowns someday, most say they want to use their new-found talent performing for children's hospitals, old-folks homes, and the like.

Curly, who has done clown-work on local television programs, says he knew the course was going to be a success when – last spring – he was named "official campus clown" by University President Brage Golding. Dr. Golding made the proclamation while hurling a pie in Curly's face.

Gay Dance A Success

A gay dance preceded by the theatrical performance of "Touchpoint" by the Unity Players was sponsored by the Gay Student Union Saturday, Jan. 25. In an interview with John Krowka, president of the newly formed Union, discussion centered on the subject of public reaction to the unorthodox nature of his position and organization.

"I haven't gotten much negative response yet," John told me (Bob DeNike), to my surprise. "I don't know whether it's a result of apathy or ignorance but people seem to accept me on a personal level and only seldom do I notice any overt negative response. I'm not trying to be like everybody else, I just want to be free to realize my potential."

John's sexual attitudes and feelings are indeed different from those of most people, but, as yet, there haven't been any clashes with "straight people." Little of any recognition has been given the matter in either a positive or negative direction by students, faculty, or administration. Whatever is being said about the Gay Student Union is being whispered.

"Gay organizations are hardly a new or revolutionary phenonmenon, even for Burlington," John explains. Gay dances have been held downtown consistently for the past year and gay unions have existed in major cities for at least five years.

John continues:

"There was somewhat of a crisis quite a while ago when William Loeb, owner of the Vermont Sunday News, tried desperately to annihiliate a gay union started at the University of New Hampshire. He tried to have all involved students expelled from the university, but was unsuccessful.

"A large-scale change in people's morals and sexual attitudes that has been occurring over the past few years and is the cause of the absence of any pre-conceived or anticipated opposition, a notion that today is misfounded and outdated. A lot of straight people have begun to question their own sexual behavior and are now adopting new beliefs toward traditionally accepted sexual practices. I'm referring specifically to the recent loss of faith in the permanence of the marriage situation. And when straight people begin realizing the limitations of their own 'normal' practices and beliefs, they more readily accept different, non-conformist, gay behavior."

John also noted:

"People now are generally more liberated in all aspects of their sexual behavior. Sex partners living together before marriage is commonplace as is the presence of gay organizations. We have suffered oppression in much the same way blacks and women have in the past. Those who condemn gay liberation are prejudice and bigotted, like rascists or sexists.

"Also, everyone must realize that some of our greatest historical personages were gay. Michaelangelo, Tchaikovsky, Walt Whitman and Oscar Wilde are just a few examples. The list numbers in the thousands. Gay people are everywhere, as they have been for centuries. Yes, even in Burlington. Even at UVM. Several of the university's faculty members and administrators are gay although their commitments and lifestyles restrict them from 'coming out'."

"The Gay Student Union has two main objectives, the first of which is the provision of a sense of belonging, confidence and community among gay people. Secondly, it is important that we inform and educate both straight and gay people alike as to our existence, our wide range of services and the problems and experiences encountered by the gay person. It is of the essence that we perform these steps in attempts to reach those gay people who feel they will become incriminated and stigmatized by asserting and committing themselves. Presently our membership numbers in the thirties, only six of which are university students. Many times I've sat in a lecture hall with over one hundred other kids and known I'm not the only gay one in that room. The percentages and odds alone tell me that."

And John talks about what goes on inside when a person knows he's gay:

"It takes an intense inner crisis to bring a gay person out of hiding. I underwent such a conflict that forced me to expose my secret. By keeping it inside me, I was fucking myself up. I got tired of donning a pseudo-personality and appearance whenever I was around straight people. The only way of freeing myself from an un bearably torturous tension was to accept myself and be free.

"I actually consider myself as having an advantage over straight people in being gay. I am bi-sexual, which is very distinct from homosexuality. I think scientists will soon find there is no such thing as exclusive homosexuality. I am capable of having intimate relationships with males and females alike and therefore know a second type of love that straight people can never experience. I don't discriminate against becoming close to a person because of his or her sex."

The people of Burlington and UVM seem to be taking the incorporation of the gay union peacefully and in stride. For the sake of love and liberation, let's hope public reaction and attitudes remain that way.

Our Friend George

Senator and Mrs. George Aiken were on campus Tuesday – Wednesday, January 22,23 for the first of their weekly two-day stays at the University.

Using the Living-Learning Center's scholar-in-residence apartment as a home base, the Senator, or "Governor" as he prefers to be called, and Mrs. Aiken met with students, an education group, Trustees and President Andrews, and several faculty members. On Wednesday the Senator went over to WRUV to do some taping for a television special which will be coming out soon.

It is hard to express in words the feeling students got from meeting the Aikens. L/L Resident Advisor David Dolnath said "He (the Senator) creates a genuine level of warmth that puts people at ease and is he sharp!"

Chris Bray, after eating dinner with the Senator and other L/L Resident Assistants, remembered, "You don't need any introducing or formalities because he acts as though he's known you for a long while" and that talking with him was "like sitting at home and listening to your grandfather who you hand't seen in a while".

Resident Assistant Steve Kalish said the Senator is "someone you can relate to" and expressed the feeling of reassurement in our government he felt knowing that George Aiken had been a part of it.

The look on the faces of those students who had met the Aikens and the energy with which they told me their reactions showed they had been deeply impressed and deeply moved by them.

Senator and Mrs. Aiken are expected on campus every Tuesday and Wednesday. Those students who are in doubt about how to meet with the Senator should call the office of the director of the Living-Learning Center at 656-4200.

UYA To Feed Local Youngsters

by Stephen W. Tanner

Two members of the University Year for Action (U.Y.A.) have decided to reinstitute the "Free Breakfast Program" for elementary students in the Burlington area.

The program will begin in September at the Barnes and Thayer schools and will be open to Burlington school children who would not normally receive a hot breakfest at home. Over 50% of the families living in both districts are low income bracket households.

Erica Hunt and Ken Schatz who have worked with Burlington's Bread and Law Task Force as part of their year for action felt revitalizing the project was a positive measure.

"We are offering the school board a breakfast program at little or no expense," said Schatz. "Our approach has been to the federal school breakfast reimbursement money with private contributions." Chittenden Bank and Trust, Burlington Savings Bank, Howard Bank, and OVP are helping to sponsor the project.

Money will be a major factor in the program. A large source of funds is being made possible through the efforts of IRA, SAGA, and UVM students participation in two benefit dinners, one of which was served December 4 and another which will be held February 5 at Wright and Living/Learning dining halls. An extra coupon is charged at the dinner which will be toward the Free Breakfast Program.

A total of $350, enough to feed 200 children for 6 days was raised at the first of these dinners.

"We're planning to run the program as long as possible," Schatz said, "but we have to get approval from the local school board before we can start."

As a U.Y.A. volunteer, Schatz was asked to evaluate his work with the Bread and Law Task Force: "To be sure it has been a valuable experience: food stamp counseling provides an immediate service to families, but as a whole the experience has been both gratifying and frustrating."

"It takes a while to learn to deal with administrators and with federal and state regulations. Very often I feel they only offer stop-gap solutions and do not really solve the total problem."

"Agricultural self-sufficiency," another area being investigated by the Bread and Law Task Force, "offers a real change in the ideas and programs that can change basic economic structures."

NEW BUDGET –PRICED
PHARMACY
★ FULL SERVICE
★ BUDGET–PRICED PRESCRIPTIONS
★ COMPLETE SELECTION OF SQUIBB NATURAL VITAMINS
★ CONVENIENTLY LOCATED
GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD
PHONE: 863-4597

diamonds won't do it, nothing will.
PRICES START UNDER $100.00
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

VALENTINE PLANTERS HEART SHAPED PLANTS
From 59¢ TO $6.00
BE REMEMBERED LONGER
SEND Living Gift PLANTS THAT LAST!
by JOHN'S INC. Dunlap NURSERIES AVAILABLE AT UNIVERSITY STORE
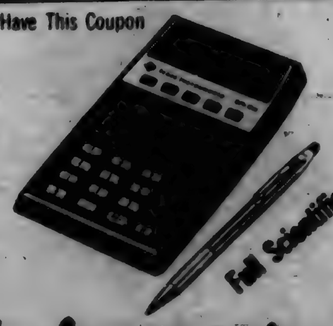
ON THE CAMPUS

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon
COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

SR50	149.95	124.95
SR11	79.95	67.95
SR16	99.95	87.95
SR10	69.95	49.95

Must Have This Coupon


Full Scientific
Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by 85 Associate Stores
Burlington – Essex – Barre-Montpelier

How To Prepare For Exams

. The key to both success and enjoyment in college lies in your ability to use time wisely. In order to have fun while getting the most out of these years, you need to establish a pattern of good study habits and skills. Such habits and skills will help you get the necessary work done as the months and years go by, and you will handle exams with a minimum of stress and a maximum of achievement.

Authorities in education generally agree that successful preparation for an examination starts in the beginning of each term and continues throughout. Six overall steps are suggested:

1. Make a term study plan
2. Use good review techniques
3. Develop a confident attitude
4. Organize pre-exam hours
5. Pace the exam carefully
6. Reassess your work

MAKE A TERM STUDY PLAN

1. At the beginning of each term develop a daily schedule that allows time for class preparation, study, review, recreation, eating and sleeping. Your ability to adhere to the plan will be a measure of your success.

2. A study area, conducive to learning, is important. Make sure it has good light and all the tools you will need. Before the term starts, have on hand the texts, study guides, outlines, dictionaries and reference books, paper, pads, notebooks and pens that will allow you to concentrate without interruption.

3. Study and review differ from each other. As they are equally important, allocate time for both in your daily schedule. Study refers to learning new material for the first time. Review is critical because it strengthens the retention of this new knowledge.

4. Forgetting takes place most rapidly immediately after learning. Review and recall, therefore, is more effective soon after study. Following each class go over the main points for 10 to 15 minutes to reinforce them in your memory. This makes reviewing for exams later a quicker, simpler task.

5. Don't overtax your memory or stamina. Research shows that most people can absorb and retain just so much knowledge at one time. It's important to learn day by day, week by week. But each period of study scheduled into your work plan should be no longer than 1 or 1½ hours, followed by some kind of recreation, meal or other activity.

6. Take legible class and study notes. Mark the margins and underline your textbooks throughout the term and you will be able to review for weekly quizzes or final exams with a minimum of strain.

USE GOOD REVIEW TECHNIQUES

If you have applied yourself during the term, then preparing for exams is largely a question of review. The time needed is not as extensive as some students think -- provided you have been working consistently. Review for weekly quizzes should take no more than 15 minutes, a mid-term hour exam 2 or 3 hours, and a final examination 5 to 8 hours.

1. Your preparation for a final should be carefully scheduled into the two weeks prior to exam day. Organize a schedule that does not interfere with your regular study for on-going classes. Beware of racing your motor. Make sure you still allow time for rest and relaxation, with no longer than 1 or 1½ hours of review at one time. Your mind needs breaks.

2. Plan your review systematically and consistently. Go from main idea to main idea, using the textbook chapter headings or your instructor's term outline as a guide. Go from chapter notes to chapter notes or from class notes to class notes, recalling the important headings and ideas in each. If certain points are difficult for you to remember, THEN reread the textbook. Otherwise stick with your notes. Don't plan to learn something for the first time.

3. Making summary notes is often helpful, depending on the amount of the material to be reviewed. In 4 to 8 pages you can outline the main points of your detailed class and text chapter notes. Headings with indented numbered points under them make relationships more obvious. This procedure will also help reinforce the major ideas and important details.

4. Summary notes can also serve as a self-test toward the end of your preparation for exams. Put a sheet over each page and slowly uncover the first heading -- see if you can remember the main points under it. As you go, ask yourself what, when etc.

5. Try to predict the exam questions. Be alert throughout the term to the emphasis instructors put on certain topics, aspects or ideas. They often give clues to points that are important or particularly need review.

6. Ask your professor what he recommends for pre-examination work. Use his comments as a guide but don't try to outguess him.

7. Group reviewing can be helpful. But it shouldn't take the place of working on your own. Limit discussion of significant points and possible test questions to 30 or 45 minutes, with no more than 4 or 5 people.

8. Avoid cramming. If you have followed a regular schedule of study and review, you should not have to cram the last day. Remember, forgetting takes place more rapidly right after learning. If you do have to cram, be selective. Don't attempt an exhaustive review.

"How to Prepare Successfuly for Examinations", appearing here in two installments, is the second in a series of AAP Student Service articles designed to help collegians improve their use of study time and learning materials. A complimentary complete copy will be sent to you if you write to AAP Student Service, Association of American Publishers Inc., One Park Avenue, New York 10016 to be continued next week.

Remember This Number: 656-2068

A total campus information service is now available to the community. Simply by dialing 656-2068, anyone can get in touch with a virtual store house of information. The service is a complete one providing answers and referals to almost any question fielded to the folks behind the information Desk at Billings Center.

The number 656-2068 was originally installed last year in response to an increasing need for information on student activities. The variety of informational needs has since expanded and has necessitated a more versatile role on the part of the Billings Center information number.

This need has been well met with the combination of total campus information and "The Exchange" -- a forum through which suggestions, complaints, and ideas may be registered. In addition, a news contribution hotline network had been added to the number's role so that people with knowledge of noteworthy pieces of information can call the number and have that information added to the listings. This network has been set up to relay particularly newsworthy pieces of information to the Vermont Cynic to supplement their ideas for articles.

This input-output nature of 656-2068 represents a large step toward greater intra-institutional communication by filling a rather large informational interchange void. So if you have got a question, problem, a complaint, or a suggestion, or if you just want to find out what's going on, call 656-2068. If they don't have the answer they probably know who does. 656-2068... it's a number worth remembering.

SAGA Sez...

Fill Those Beef Boards

This column will be a weekly effort to aid communications between the UVM community and the Dining Halls.

We will be answering questions of general interest and passing on information aimed at providing a better level of understanding about the Dining Halls and the people who work there.

If you'd like to obtain information about a specific item - send it to: Food Service Director, SAGA, Waterman. If your question in general in nature and would be of interest to the whole campus - we'll answer it in a future column. Other questions will be answered individually if you provide your name and address. A quick, personal, response to a question may be obtained by calling ext. 2660 and speaking with Fred Smith or Bruce MacDougal.

The following questions have been either selected from the "Beef Boards" in the dining halls or asked directly of the Food Service Director:

Question: Why are the meal hours shorter than they were?

Answer: There are two basic reasons.

1) This semester there are 600 fewer meal plan holders than last, resulting in a need to reduce the amount of food service hours. The temporary closing of Converse especially has an impact on the meal hours at Waterman.

2) The Vermont Plan, with its high degree of flexibility has led students to use their coupons in the snackbars, restaurants, and the Store to a greater extent than anticipated. This caused an underutilization of the regular dining halls. To correct this situation and to help maintain the fiscal integrity of the entire system we've had to make adjustments in the meal hours and will need to make additional changes if the trend continues.

Question: Why is the price of coffee going up 5 cents?

Answer: There is no way to explain the upcoming increase in the coffee price except to say - We need more revenues to keep our head above water.

A survey of local food service places revealed a vast majority had been charging 5-15 cents more for coffee for several months.

Question: How is the Vermont Plan doing?

Answer: This question should be dealt with in two ways - programatically and Station, the Store, "Waiters", and the Den by coupon holders would indicate this. We're still modifying and changing in the program area and ask for everyone's thoughts concerning how the Vt. Plan can be of greater service, financially.

1) Program: We believe most students like the great flexibility of the coupon plan. The high rate of participation at the White House, Redstone

2) Finance: The Vermont Plan is not doing well in this area. Only by implementing severe steps will the Plan break even this year. The reasons for this are complex and involve the following factors:

a) Last year the average meal ticket holder ate 13-14 meals per week in the regular dining halls. This year the regular dining halls were scheduled and staffed in anticipation of a similiar pattern. Only 9-10 meals per week are being eaten which caused the underutilization of facilities we experienced last semester.

b) Students eating in the regular dining halls are consuming greater amounts of food this year per meal eaten than last. This wasn't anticipated and, accordingly, more money should have been in the cost of the Base Plan for food.

c) Over head costs in general and utilities in particular are higher this year than anticipated.

Musicals, Comedies And French Films

The S.A. Film Series enters its second full week with a 1940's musical, a series of great comedies (Marx' Brothers, Charlie Chaplin, The Three Stooges), another Kathryn Hepburn film, and a classic French film directed by Jean Renoir. There is one change in the series. Due to the popularity of the films, the Monday night series and the Saturday night series will begin having two showings, one at 7:30 and another at 9:30. If you want to see the first showing, you are advised to come a little early as no one will be allowed in once the seats are filled.

Tonight at 7:30 in 101 Votey the 1945 musical, Anchors Aweigh, starring Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly, Kathryn Grayson, and Dean Stockwell, will be presented. Kelly and Sinatta as sailors on leave vie for the attention of Miss Grayson. This is a light and imaginative musical which includes an extremely clever sequence combining live action with animation in such a way as to allow Kelly to do a dance number with M-G-M's cartoon character, Jerry Mouse. This highly acclaimed musical received a number of Academy Award nominations.

On Friday night comedy will be featured with Horsefeathers, Easy Street, The Rink, and Rockin' Thru the Rockies. Horsefeathers starring the Marx' Brothers, was made in 1933 and directed by Norman McLeod. It takes place on a college campus. Groucho returns to his alma mater as the new college president in order to graduate his son, Zeppo, and to win the annual football classic. Chico as Baravelli, the owner of the local speakeasy, Harpo as Pinky, the errant dogcatcher, and Thelma Todd as the college widow all do their part in the hilarious Marxian antics. Education, college life, sports, love and the Depression all come under heavy fire in this very satirical film. Next comes Charlie Chaplin in two shorts, East Street and The Rink. In Easy Street Charlie gets "saved" when he goes to a rescue mission to get something to eat. The Rink finds Charlie as a waiter who spends all his spare time at a roller skating rink. Utter mayhem is the result of his venture on skates. Finally the Three Stooges with the original Curly appear in Rockin' Thru the Rockies. All of these films will be shown at each showing, 7:30 and 10:00, in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

Kathryn Hepburn returns on Saturday night in Woman of the Year, the first of the many Spencer Tracy -- Hepburn films. He is a sports writer and she is a highly successful newspaperwoman. They fight and then marry and then fight some more. This is a very funny film, but is not likely to be very popular with the women's liberation movement as Katie gives in to Tracy's stronger will in the end. The film will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Jean Renoir's masterpiece, Grand Illusion, an anti-war film near the top of any list of the world's greatest films, will be shown Monday night in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 9:30. Set against a prison escape of French aviators from a German Prison Camp in World War I, Erich von Stroheim and Pierre Fresnay enact this drama of the fading glory and honor of war. The total senselessness of war has never been stated as convincingly as in this film. Bosely Crowther of the New York Times calls it "a motion picture which one can confidently say is the most telling examination of the mystery of why men submit to war ever put on the screen... a film which, for everything -- theme, philosophy, construction, staging, performance and mood -- merits the highest commendations and the monumental fame it has achieved."

...Horse Club

(continued from page eleven)

deal of experience in hunting, showing, and eventing. Anyone interested in watching a lesson is welcome.

Finally, there will be no Horse Club meeting this Thursday, January 30. If there are any questions, please call president Verne Batchelder at 863-5994.

... Andrews' Resignation

(continued from page one)

A search committee was also named to fill the seat of Franklin R. Otto of Basking Ridge, N.J., who resigned from the Board a few weeks after Bolwell. Both Bolwell and Otto claimed the Board functions only to "rubberstamp" administration policies.

The Board presented virtually unanimous opposition to Vermont State College ChancelHor William Craig's proposal to merge UVM with the four state colleges.

Trustee Luthur Hackett expressed the consensus opinion, asserting that he had "serious reservations" about a merger at the present time.

Hackett posed the question of "What financial problems will a merger solve?" and answered his query contending that "When it comes down to money the merger won't solve any financial problems. In every consolidation the money savings don't materialize".

Board Chairman C. Douglas Cairns was slightly more succinct, terming the merger concept "utter folly".

A merger's effect upon the quality of education at UVM was also a major concern of the Board. President Andrews emphasized that it is the quality and reputation of UVM that enables it to compete favorably for grants from private foundations. Andrews feared the merger would affect UVM's ability to compete for these grants that he termed "critical money for UVM" in the present financial situation.

Trustee Howard Allen expressed concern that it would be difficult to maintain alumni interest and support if a merged system replaced UVM.

The trustees disagreed on whether a merger bill would pass the legislature. Trustee Timothy O'Connor of Brattleboro, Speaker of the Vermont House of Representatives, predicted that a merger bill would not pass the legislature in this session. O'Connor contended that individual budget trimming would supercede a merger as the most viable means of reducing costs.

Trustees Francis Peisch and Merrit Hewitt disagreed with O'Connor's assessment, predicting a merger bill would become law within two years.

Lane Committee Positions Open To Students

The Lane Committee cordially invites all members of the student body to come to its meetings and try out for the several student positions which will be open next fall.

Meetings are held every Thursday afternoon at 4:30 p.m. in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman.

The Lane Committee, which includes six voting students and five faculty-staff, selects the artists and assists in their presentation at Memorial Auditorium, Ira Allen Chapel, and Patrick Gymnasium.

Students also have the opportunity to meet the artists, be present at receptions in honor of the artists and attend all the concerts free of charge.

Current student officers include Lloyd Goodrow, chairman and treasurer; Lenny Weinstock, house manager; Lea Ann Harris, secretary; Debbie Mallette, publicity director; and Judy Goldenberg, production manager. Other officers are Stephen Davoust, assistant treasurer; Melinda Bliss, assistant publicity director; and Mona Trempe, assistant production manager. Apprentices are Heidi Racht and Jamie Baum.

Faculty-staff members of the Committee are Prof. Edward Feider of the Department of Communications and Theatre; Prof. Frank Lidral, Department of Music; Mr. Lawrence Van Benthuysen, Director of Public Relations; Mr. Charles Wolf, Comptroller; and Dr. Jack Trevithick, Director of the Lane Series.

If you are unable to attend the meetings, please drop by the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and let them know of your interest.

Win Igloo Contest And Spend Weekend In Colorado

Snow campers and cross-country skiers will have an incentive to indulge in the ancient art of igloo-building in a unique contest just announced by a book publisher in Berkeley, California.

Prizes will include such bizarre items as Chinese woks with two dozen pairs of chopsticks, for cooking and eating natural foods in an igloo. Grand prize will be an expense-paid weekend at Copper Mountain Resort, few miles from Vail, Colorado, and other prizes will include skis and other outdoor equipment.

Among the judges are a university professor of architecture, a heating and plumbing contractor, a fashion photographer, and an Eskimo from Kaskag, Alaska.

The "Alice's Igloo Contest" was inspired by a book on cross-country skiing which features the adventures of a young lady named Alice. Alice lives in a snow house in the Sierra Nevada, to escape the routines of being a conventional secretary working her way up the conventional ladder.

As for actual construction, the rules are written to encourage imagination. "Anything goes," says Winnett. "All we require is that the builders use natural materials found on the site, and that the structure be actually usable for overnight or longer."

Winners in five geographic divisions from coast to coast will each receive duplicate sets of prizes, to encourage nationwide participation. Separate sets of prizes will also be awarded to the best entries submitted by ski clubs and by ski resorts.

More conventional prizes include cross-country skis, backpacks, hiking boots, and down parkas. One of the unusual items sure to be used by snow campers is a grain scoop for obtaining natural foods from the barrel or for shoveling snow.

No purchase is required to enter the contest. Entry forms may be obtained from any ski shop or bookstore which is selling the book for which the contest was created -- The Cross-Country Ski, Cook, Look & Pleasure Book, by Hal Painter.

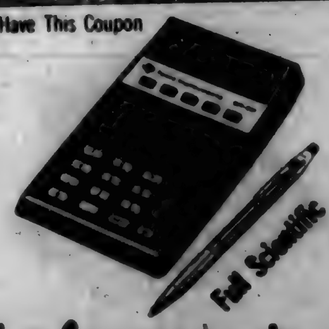
The contest opens February 1 and closes April 30.

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon

COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

SR50	149.95	124.95
SR11	79.95	67.95
SR16	99.95	87.95
SR10	69.95	49.95

Must Have This Coupon



Full Scientific

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by HS
- Associate Store -
Burlington - Essex
- Essex Junction -

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m. - 7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.

The Bread Shop

152 Church St. Burlington, Vt. 862-4045

You take care of the inside of your head...
...We'll take care of the outside.

For Men & Women — We'll Work It Out

Ski Team In Ca... At Smuggler's

Dick Erdman in the National Slalom Champ...

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday begin the season's NCAA Skiing competition here at the UVM Winter Carnival. Eleven schools will be entered in the competition this weekend with twelve competitors representing each team. Competition will be exciting as this marks the first meet of the season with full number of teams and competitors, all looking for a spot on that NCAA Championship meet to be held in Colorado in March.

UVM's closest competition will be coming from the big green of Dartmouth and the Middlebury Panthers. Also looking very strong this year are UNH, New England College, and St. Lawrence. For the last two years, the Cats have placed third in the NCAA Championships, behind Colorado and Wyoming and are looking stronger than ever this year with high hopes of bringing the title home to Vermont.

The Cats will be skiing five men in the Alpine events and seven in the Nordic. The Alpine skiers are Captain Dick Erdman, Brian Samlin, Kirk Dice, Bill R... Bruce, UV... Chris Br... Brooks Do... will be com... Stowell D... Maine. Br... defending ... trophy.

The ... continues ... Captain P... jump, a... Roiseth, ... Oddy. B... Gaarud, ... will ... Cross-C... Vermont.

The ... events, ... and free ... from Bill... at 8:30 ... Saturday ... Come se... action, ... schedu... Thurs... Tuthill... Men's an... S. at Sc... and on... Williston...

Map... Billings...

Bob Bateman, the leading passer in Th... accepts the trophy for the outstan... football player, from Tom Cheek, U...

MID- WINT...
at Pants ...
30% ...
On a Selected ...
FAMOUS MAK...
Pants P...
12 N. WINOOS...
864-0...

e Beef Boards

...in the ...directly of ...ector ...the meal ...hey were? ...are two ...there are ...n holders ...a need to ...of food ...emporary ...especially ...the meal ...Plan, with ...ability has ...ase their ...snackbars, ...Store to a ...nticipated. ...utilization ...s halls. To ...on and to ...he fiscal ...ure system ...djustments ...d will need ...charges if ...s the price ...cents' ...no way to ...g increase ...except to ...evenues to ...water. ...local food ...ded a vast ...charging ...coffee for ...w is the ...? ...question ...ith in two ...ically and

Station, the Store, "Waiters", and the Den by coupon holders would indicate this. We've still modifying and changing in the program area and ask for everyone's thoughts concerning how the Vt. Plan can be of greater service financially.

1) Program: We believe most students like the great flexibility of the coupon plan. The high rate of participation at the White House, Redstone

2) Finance: The Vermont Plan is not doing well in this area. Only by implementing severe steps will the Plan break even this year. The reasons for this are complex and involve the following factors:

a) Last year the average meal ticket holder ate 13-14 meals per week in the regular dining halls. This year the regular dining halls were scheduled and staffed in anticipation of a similiar pattern. Only 9-10 meals per week are being eaten which caused the underutilization of facilities we experienced last semester.

b) Students eating in the regular dining halls are consuming greater amounts of food this year per meal eaten than last. This wasn't anticipated and, accordingly, more money should have been in the cost of the Base Plan for food.

c) Over head costs in general and utilities in particular are higher this year than anticipated.

ews' Resignation

...are one) ...nittee was ...the seat of ...of Basking ...igned from ...eeks after ...il and Otto ...functions ...eratamp" ...ies. ...presented ...opposition ...te College ...m Craig's ...UVM with ...s. ...r Hackett ...consensus ...that he had ...s" about a ...t time. ...the question ...problems ...tive?" and ...contending ...es down to ...won't solve ...oblems. In ...the money ...talize". ...n C. Douglas ...shtly more ...the merger ...y". ...ct upon the ...on at UVM was also a major concern of the Board. President Andrews emphasized that it is the quality and reputation of UVM that enables it to compete favorably for grants from private foundations. Andrews feared the merger would affect UVM's ability to compete for these grants that he termed "critical money for UVM" in the present financial situation.

Trustee Howard Allen expressed concern that it would be difficult to maintain alumni interest and support if a merged system replaced UVM.

The trustees disagreed on whether a merger bill would pass the legislature. Trustee Timothy O'Connor of Brattleboro, Speaker of the Vermont House of Representatives, predicted that a merger bill would not pass the legislature in this session. O'Connor contended that individual budget trimming would supercede a merger as the most viable means of reducing costs.

Trustees Francis Peisch and Merrit Hewitt disagreed with O'Connor's assessment, predicting a merger bill would become law within two years.

ekend In Colorado

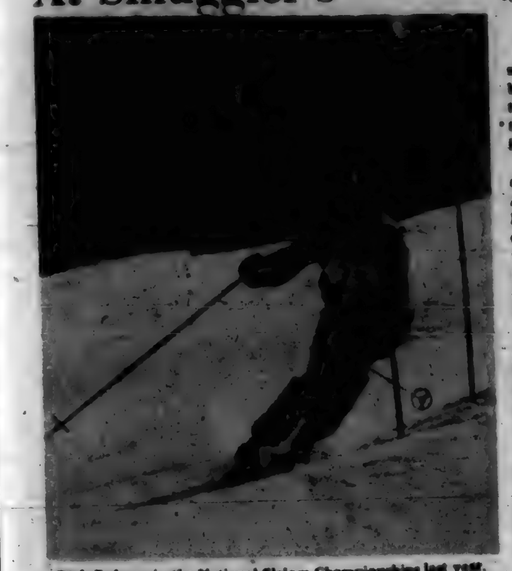
...being a ...tary working ...conventional ...construction, ...written to ...magination. ...says Winnett. ...is that the ...ural materials ..., and that the ...ally usable for ...r." ...ive geographic ...coast to coast ...duplicate sets ...encourage ...rticipation. ...prizes will also ...he best entries ...clubs and by

More conventional prizes include cross-country skis, backpacks, hiking boots, and down parkas. One of the unusual items sure to be used by snow campers is a grain scoop for obtaining natural foods from the barrel or for shoveling snow.

No purchase is required to enter the contest. Entry forms may be obtained from any ski shop or bookstore which is selling the book for which the contest was created — The Cross- Country Ski, Cook, Look & Pleasure Book, by Hal Painter.

The contest opens February 1 and closes April 30.

Ski Team In Carnival At Smuggler's



Dick Erdman in the National Slalom Championships last year. SPS Photo

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday begin the season's NCAA Skiing competition here at the UVM Winter Carnival. Eleven schools will be entered in the competition this weekend with twelve competitors representing each team. Competition will be exciting as this marks the first meet of the season with full number of teams and competitors, all looking for a spot on that NCAA Championship meet to be held in Colorado in March.

UVM's closest competition will be coming from the big green of Dartmouth and the Middlebury Panthers. Also looking very strong this year are UNH, New England College, and St. Lawrence. For the last two years, the Cats have placed third in the NCAA Championships, behind Colorado and Wyoming and are looking stronger than ever this year with high hopes of bringing the title home to Vermont.

The Cats will be skiing five men in the Alpine events and seven in the Nordic. The Alpine skiers are Captain Dick Erdman, Brian Soulin, Kirk Dice, Bill Rathbone, and Doug Bruce. UVM's other top racers Chris Brown, Dave Dodge, Brooks Dodge and Jeff Darrow will be competing for the Rand Stowell Downhill Trophy in Maine. Brown is last year's defending champion of the trophy.

The Cat's Nordic contingent will be led by Captain Petter Kongsli in the jump, along with Trygve Roiseth, Joe Lamb and Tom Oddy. Stan Bunklee, Morten Gaarud, and Trygve Kjolseth will make up the Cross-Country team for Vermont.

The following is a list of events, times and locations, and free buses will be leaving from Billings Center on Friday at 8:30 for the Alpine, and on Saturday at noon for the jump. Come see the nation's best in action. These, then, are the schedule of events: On Thursday, X-C at Prof. Tuthill's, 2:00, on Friday, Men's and Women's S.l and G. S. at Smuggler's Notch, 9:30, and on Saturday, Jump at Williston 1:00.

Maps are available at Billings Center.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

At a time when basketball is growing and having a great season, another sport exists at UVM — hockey. Hockey has been, and still is, the number one sport here at Vermont, even though basketball is beginning to close the gap. One reason for the Icecats' success is Tim O'Connell, the junior center from Hingham Mass.

Tim has received a lot of credit in the past and now he deserves even most. O'Connell is tied with Pat Wright for All-Time scoring here at UVM with 152 points and he may have passed that mark last night (the Cynic is put to press too early to know). With Tim being only a junior there is no doubt that he will far surpass Wright's mark. Wright did not play for four reasons however, so if you are the type who measures success through statistics as many of us are, stop at the end of this year.

Wright had 61 goals and 91 assists in his three years and played in 76 games. Tim has played in 64 games in his career to this point and has 67 goals and 85 assists! I don't mean to take anything away from Wright, who was one of the best at UVM, but instead to show the kind of player Tim is and can be.

It is not entirely impossible for Tim to near the 250 point plateau before the end of his senior year, putting him nearly a hundred points ahead of the old mark.

O'Connell was the ECAC Rookie of the Year two years ago and All-East last season as well as All-New England. He was drafted by the Buffalo Sabres in the seventh round following his freshman year. He comes from an athletic family, his dad was a former Cleveland Browns and Buffalo Bills quarterback and his brother is a junior "A" player in Canada.

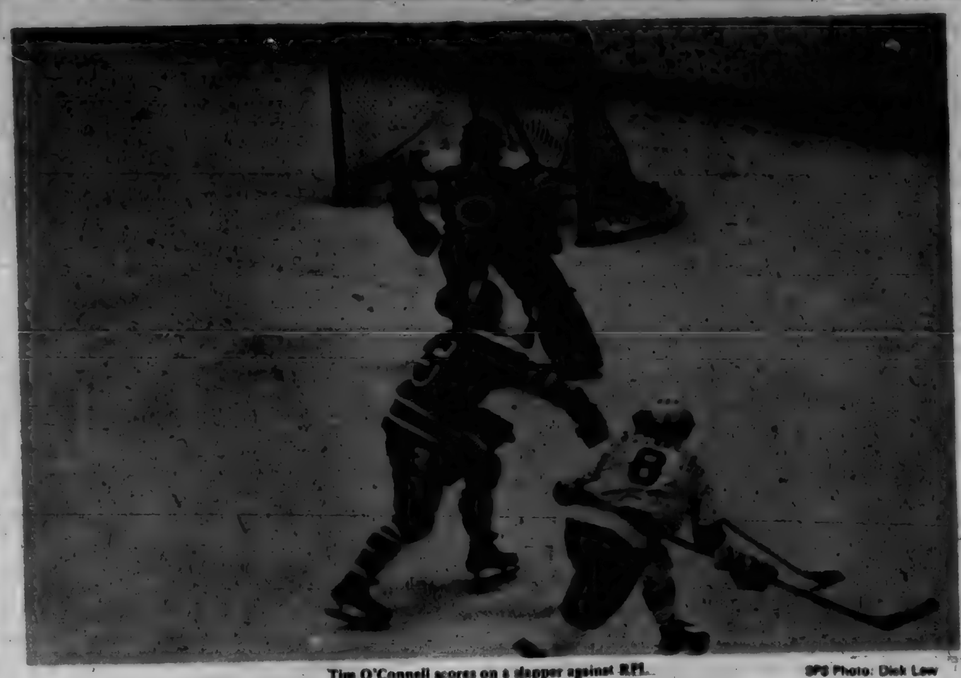
When one speaks of O'Connell, Bill Koch and Roger Mallette must also be mentioned. Koch and Mallette are Tim's sidekicks on Vermont's first line. O'Connell would not have as many points if not for the help from this duo of talented players. Mallette, with his strong forechecking and ability at prying the puck loose from defenders, adds to Tim's total as well as his own. Bill Koch is as strong as a bull and aids Tim immeasurably. The unselfishness of these two is part of Tim's success.

O'Connell is definitely the best Vermont has ever had. Tim can skate with the best and has a beautiful shot. With all the assists that he has piled up he is an evident playmaker as we...

O'Connell is within reach of other records as well. Most goals in a season (30), and most points in a season (68) are definite possibilities. Most career goals (71) by Ted Castle) is within reach this year as is most assists (91).

Barring injury, O'Connell and the rest of the team will acquire a lot more points this year. Although O'Connell has tremendous talent, he is not a one man team and doesn't try to be. As the basketball team will assess, the key to winning is teamwork. With teamwork, hustle and good defense and goaltending the Cats can defeat Boston University tomorrow night. The Cats were beaten in their previous meeting with BU and must stay away from the stupid penalties they received down at Boston. They must play well to win and if they don't they might get blown off the ice. I wish them luck and hope you will be at Gutterson to cheer them to victory.

Icecats Crush Engineers Of RPI



Tim O'Connell scores on a slapper against RPI. SPS Photo: Dick Low

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont hockey team defeated the RPI Engineers Saturday night 9-3. The game was labeled to be a close one prior to its start and a near capacity crowd apparently figured it to be a good game as well. While, in fact it was 3-2 at the end of the first period and tied at three apiece shortly after the second period face-off, the Icecats were clearly the aggressors after that.

The contest was penalty filled, with a total of 32 minutes assessed to both squads, 20 to RPI. With the outbreak of so many penalties, the Cat power play had many opportunities to see action and ripped RPI for five goals when they had the extra man.

Rogie Mallette opened the scoring for the Icecats with a power play goal. O'Connell skated down the left side and fed the puck to Ken Yeates in the corner. Yeates then fired a pass in front of the net and Mallette picked the upper corner to light the lamp.

McNamara got beat shortly after the UVM goal, by Don Hearns. With a man short, due to a tripping penalty to Peter Brady, Vermont was forced into a box defense. Hearns found a spot open in front of the Cat net and banged one home.

Vermont came back to take the lead at the 13:10 mark when Mallette tallied his second goal. Andy Schell, the Engineer goalie, made the original stop on a John Glynne shot after a pass from O'Connell but Rogie skated in unmolested and flipped the puck into the empty net.

Andy Halford got Vermont's third goal and their second power play seconds later, when he tipped a Ken Yeates shot past Schell.

RPI got a break with just eight seconds left in the stanza. John Murphy, the All-American defenseman for UVM stopped a Engineer shot but lost it to Mike Prpich who fired a wrist shot by the surprised McNamara to make it 3-2 after one period.

With 1:56 gone in the second period, the Engineers tied the game with a Ed Dumalo goal on a rebound shot from Dave Jack. From then on though, it was all Vermont. RPI could manage only eleven shots on goal for the rest of the game for a total of 22, while the Cats fired 24 in the final two periods for a total of 34.

Tim O'Connell and John Glynne lit the lamp in the middle period. O'Connell's goal was picture perfect. Bill Spence, playing the point on the power play fed the puck to Mallette on the right side who fired across the ice to the waiting O'Connell. Glynne's goal was a great effort as he skated around two RPI defenders to beat Schell.

Vermont blew the Engineers off the ice in the final stanza with goals by O'Connell, Halford's second, Chris Hurley, and Bill Koch. RPI received ten minutes in penalties as they helped themselves lose.

Bill Koch's goal was of significance. Koch's shot trickled past Schell after he made the original save and assists were awarded to Bill Spence and Tim O'Connell. O'Connell's assist gave him five points in the game and 152 in his career, tying him with Patty Wright for the All-Time scoring lead at Vermont.

Game Notes: Chris Hurley was not expected to see action due to a bruised foot, but he did play and scored a goal to boot. Mallette went into the fifth spot in All-Time scoring with his first goal of the game. Only O'Connell, Wright, Ted Castle, and Fred Hunt are ahead of Rogie.

Vermont moved its record to 11-8 overall and 7-2 in the ECAC Division I. The Cats next game is tomorrow against Boston University in an important game, and Northeastern is the opponent on Saturday night.

Horse Club

On Thursday evening Feb. 6 at 7 p.m., the UVM Horse Club will be showing a film on the Ledyard Three-Day Event of 1973. It will be shown in MAT Lounge, and admission is free to all Horse Club members, and $.50 to all others.

Ledyard was the first International Three-Day Event to be held in the United States. Top riders from all over the world competed, including Mark Phillips and Princess Anne. The film will show all phases of competition including Dressage, Stadium Jumping, and Cross Country.

The film will run about an hour, and refreshments will be served afterwards. All interested students are welcome.

Other Horse Club news includes the appointment of Betsey Reeves as Club Riding instructor. She will be holding 3 2-hour sessions a week, at various times at the Spear Street Farm in the indoor arena. Betsey is an "A" Pony Clubber, and has had a great

(continued on page ten)

Women's Gymnastics

With two meets behind them, the women's gymnastics team is off to a flying start. This year's team is the largest and best skilled ever, with ten new members in addition to eight returning gymnasts. Two outstanding performers are Ann Hayes and Janet Lynch, who were top performers in last year's Vermont State High School meet.

Saturday, the Women's Team placed second in a tri-meet at SUNY, Albany. Team totals were: Ithaca, 74 points, UVM, 70 points, and Albany 64. Vermont finishers were:

Floor Exercise: Janet Lynch, 1st, Ann Hayes, 2nd.

Vaulting: Ann Hayes, 1st, Janet Lynch 2nd,

Beam: Donna Blanchett, 2nd, Janet Lynch, 3rd.

Ann Hayes had the high score of the meet, receiving 8.3 points for her handspring vault.

Coming up this week are two meets. Friday, the team travels to Vermont College. Saturday, they host the first home optional meet, with Orono and Castleton. The meet begins at 1:00, and admission is free, so come on out and support the team!

Swim Team Vs. UConn

(continued from page twelve)

Storrs. We'll be looking for great performances from Doug Fiche, Dave Phelan and Cliff Johnson as well as the rest of the squad.

Somehow the meet got excluded from the Winter Week Activities but if you're not busy Saturday afternoon, stop by the pool and give us a little support. We would really appreciate it and we're sure you won't be disappointed.

PFG-Schedule

Patrick-Forbush-Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of January 31, February 1 & 2

FRIDAY, JANUARY 31
GYM – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15)
RINK – Faculty-Staff none.
TRACK – Faculty-Staff none.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1
GYM – Students 7–10 p.m.
POOL – Students 7–10 p.m.
RINK – Students none.
TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2
GYM – Students 1–5 p.m.
POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
RINK – Students – 8:30–10 p.m.
TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL – 8:30–10:30 p.m.
All other facilities 7–8 p.m.

Bob Bateman, the leading power in the Yankee Conference, accepts the trophy for the outstanding Vermont college football player, from Tom Cheek, UVM Booster president.

MID- WINTER SALE
at Pants Plus
30% OFF
On a Selected Group of FAMOUS MAKER PANTS
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
864-0181

MIK SOUND CENTER / MAIL ORDER
POST X-MAS SPECIALS

	REG. LIST	OUR PRICE
PIONEER HEADSETS
SE-205	$ 29.95	$ 16.88
SE-305	39.95	21.88
SE-505	80.95	43.39
MARANTZ HEADSET
SD-5	38.95	23.88
SPEAKER SPECIALS
AR-7	75.00	51.75
AR-4xa	95.00	68.95
AR-6	90.00	67.95
AR-8	125.00	88.95
JENSEN #5	110.95	88.88
JENSEN #6	140.95	98.88
JENSEN #8	180.95	125.88

WRITE FOR FREE SOUND CATALOG

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS
AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

PURE, STRAIGHT & HONEST 20% DISCOUNT
ON MOST PARTS AND ACCESSORIES
GORDIE'S UNIVERSITY TEXACO
WILLISTON ROAD ACROSS FROM GAYNES
863-9878
SHOW VALID UVM I.D. and IT'S YOURS!!!
ELECTRONIC TUNE-UP ON 8 CYLINDER CARS – 14.25
6 CYLINDER– 9.50
4 CYLINDER–8.50

AT THE BONE
43 KING ST.
(Corner S. Champlain & King)
HAPPY HOUR
DAILY 4-9
ALL BEVERAGES DISCOUNTED
LOWEST PRICES AROUND
GOLD TEQUILA NITE
SUNDAY 7-11

Basketball Team Continues Winning Ways

St. Lawrence Falls 92-71

St. Mike's Loses 87-75

by Randy Briggs

Last Wednesday night at the Patrick Gymnasium, the University of Vermont basketball team extended its winning streak to five games by defeating St. Lawrence University, 92-71. St. Lawrence was in hopes of breaking even on their Vermont trip because the previous night they were defeated by St. Michael's College 77-73.

St. Lawrence came out running in hopes of getting Vermont to run with them. UVM kept from doing this, but as in the previous two games against Maine, the Cats came up against a 2-1-2 zone defense and had problems penetrating the ball. Turnovers also hurt the Cats early in the half.

Because of St. Lawrence's fast breaking style of play, they made ten first-half baskets on layups. Many of these easy layups were made because Vermont was not getting back on defense.

UVM stayed close in the first half because of the fine offensive efforts of Kevin Kelly who had ten points. Kelly's tip in with nine seconds left in the half gave the Cats a 32-31 lead going into the locker room. Vermont shot 57% in the first half while St. Lawrence connected on 54% of their shots. The shooting percentages of the two teams definitely indicated the closeness of the first half.

It was no contest in the second half though as UVM came out and shot a blistering 69% from the floor and scored 60 points. Warren Prehmus led Vermont in scoring in the second half with 14 points. Ron Gottschalk also played very well, scoring nine points while being tough on the boards.

With the Cats building up a substantial lead in the second half, Coach Salzberg substituted freely so he could get a good look at everybody. Joe Greco, who had not seen action in two weeks since his injury in the Northeastern game, came in and performed very well. It was good to see Joe out there again and I am sure he will play an important role for the Cats down the stretch.

Warren Prehmus led all scorers with 22 points, while Ron Gottschalk and Kevin Kelly contributed 17 and 16 points respectively for Vermont. Jim Young paced St. Lawrence with 21 points. The game was by no means an artistic success as evidenced by a combined total of 47 turnovers.

Every win is an important one for the Cats as they enter the stretch drive. The win pushed the Cats overall record to 10-5, while the loss dropped St. Lawrence's record to 7-3. At game time, Vermont ranked fifth in the New England major college basketball poll.

Behind solid performances by Mark Cubit and Warren Prehmus and the outstanding Ron Gottschalk, the University of Vermont basketball squad got by St. Michael's, 87-75, at Ross Sports Center on the St. Mike's campus.

Ron Gottschalk had been told for weeks how good big Ken Johnson was, but Ron showed the fans that he is no pushover, either. Scoring a career-high 30 points and hauling down 14 rebounds, the rugged Vermont center held Johnson to 18 points and 14 rebounds, both below his season's average.

The Knights moved out to an early lead but UVM went into a full-court zone press and St. Mike's began to turn the ball over. Ken Johnson got into foul trouble with five minutes remaining in the half, and Vermont got the lead, 38-35, at halftime.

St. Michael's kept Johnson on the bench at the start of the second half and played a four-corner offense.

Finally, the Cats got things rolling with about eleven minutes to go as Gottschalk and his cohorts took control of the boards. With slightly more than three minutes to go, the Cats led 75-57, when they got lax. Fouls played a key role in the Knights comeback bid as the last minutes seemingly took hours to play. The lead was just too much for St. Mike's.

Salzberg was full of praise for Gottschalk, but he also had this comment, "though Gottschalk had an outstanding night, this was really another tremendous team effort." This wraps up the university's team in a nutshell. The young players, like Cubit, Prehmus, and Gottschalk, along with veterans Terry Green, Joe Greco, and Bernie Palmer have led the Cats to their present record of 12-5 overall and 6-1 in the Yankee Conference.

Final statistics showed the Cats winning the game at the charity stripe where they hit 29 free throws to 11 for St. Mike's. Cubit ended up with a career high of 15 points, Prehmus had 18, and Gottschalk had his 30.

Rhode Island is next for the Cats on Friday at Kingston.

Aquacats!

This Saturday afternoon the U.V.M. Swim Team begins its Yankee Conference competition in a dual meet against the University of Connecticut. It is the first of five consecutive weekend meets against Yankee Conference schools. The outcome of the meet will be very important in determining who wins the Conference title in swimming. A win Saturday would really enhance the possibilities of us winning the title.

Saturday's meet won't be like our meet against St. Lawrence two weeks ago. In that meet both teams dominated certain events, sweeping both first and second place. It will be a different story Saturday against U.Conn. If you compare the times that both teams have done this season in the various events, it becomes clear that neither team is going to run away with the meet. Many races, and perhaps the eventual outcome of the meet itself, will be decided by fractions of seconds.

This is the last dual meet against Connecticut for several seniors and they would all like to avenge last year's loss at

(continued on page eleven)

Hockey action against RPI. For the story turn to page 11.

SPS Photo: Dick Law

UVM SPORTS

Vermont Five Upsets UConn In Key Conference Showdown

by Don Ross

A capacity crowd of 4,127 let out its tension in one great long round of cheers and applause, as the University of Vermont basketball team captured its sixth straight win to lead the Yankee Conference at 6-1.

The start of the game was delayed about an hour due to a late arriving official who was under the weather so to speak, as travelling was bad. The crowd was not too appreciative when the announcement of the delay came over the loud speaker. The fans perked up in a hurry when the Catamounts had a dunking contest in the pregame warmups however. Then finally the game got underway.

The Cats came out smoking, with Warren Prehmus hitting his first three shots before being answered by a bucket by John Thomas. Vermont got eight unanswered points however to make it 14-4 following a layup by Lee Otis Wilson. UVM got its lead to 20-4, but Prehmus picked up his third foul and watched the rest of the half from the bench.

Both teams came out pounding the boards, which lasted the entire game. Neither team let up as the Connecticut Huskies had a short scoring spree before Vermont connected again. Joe Whelton came off the bench and banged home six points, while Tony Hanson added a jumper, making it 20-12.

The score seesawed for awhile until Vermont got its biggest lead of the half at the one minute mark. The score was 42-25, a 17 point margin. Tony Hanson got the final score of the first half, putting the score at Vermont 44-Connecticut 29.

Bob Bateman was awarded the WVMT trophy as the most outstanding college football player in Vermont last season. Bateman shattered several records as he starred for the Vermont football team during its last season.

The second half saw Connecticut come strong, cutting the lead to nine points at 15:02 before Warren Prehmus drove the base line and scored. Prehmus picked up his fourth personal on this play however and Coach Salzberg sat him down. Mark Cubit also got in foul trouble after wiping out an attempted layup by Ken Wright. It was a good save on the basket by Cubit because Wright didn't connect on either free throw.

Connecticut went to a 1-3-3 trap, putting tremendous pressure on the Cats, because of their tremendous quickness. Vermont countered with a four corner offense to bring the Huskies out of it.

At 9:53, a couple of Lee Wilson jumpers cut the score to 52-47. The lead was cut even further on two Tony Hanson foul shots, a Lee Wilson jumper and another layup by Hanson to cut the score to 54-52. With 3:42 the Cats regained some of the early lead, going ahead by eleven. In a fast moving game with a lot of action things can happen in nothing flat. Connecticut fought back but at the 39 second mark, but Joe Greco connected on a 1-1. Prehmus was fouled with 20 seconds to go, and he also converted a 1-1, making it 70-67. Joe Whelton drew last blood, falling short on a great rally ending in a 70-69 Vermont win.

The physical play by both teams took its toll as told by the 50 fouls called. Tony Hanson, John Thomas, and Al Weston fouled out for Connecticut. Mark Cubit and Ron Gottschalk went out via the foul route.

Offensively, both teams were balanced, with Prehmus getting 13, Richbow 10, Gottschalk 16, and Joe Greco 14. Connecticut had Whelton with 12, Weston 10, Lee Otis Wilson 12, Tony Hanson 19 and Earl Wilson, 10. It was a team effort by both teams.

The Cats will be in Rhode Island on Friday night as they attempt to add another victory to their Yankee Conference record.

Joe Greco putting one up against Connecticut as Ken Wright tries to defend. SPS Photo: Don Green

Weith Sets Record In Losing Cause

The University of Vermont footmen lost to the Maine track team Saturday by a score of 76-42 at Gardner-Collins Cage but did break four meet records and set a new university record.

Mike Bilsza and Peter Weith gave fine performances. Bilsza set records in both the 35 pound weight, tossing it 56-11 to beat the old mark by 10½ inches, and the shot with a heave of 48-0½.

Weith set a university record in the 1000 yard run with a time of 2:14.3 seconds. The other record came in the two-mile relay where the Cats were clocked in 8:01.3 which is more than 6 seconds ahead of the old mark.

Other fine performances were Bill Looker's long jump at 21-4. He was also second in the 50-yard dash and third in the triple jump. Craig Iverson was second in the high hurdles, Dave Milligan finished second in the two-mile and Mike Berry was second in the mile.

The Cats next meet is against Bates this Saturday in Lewiston, Maine.

Correction: Earth shoe boots for sale. Women's size 7.25W (not 7.75); Men's size 8.75M. Excellent condition. Asking $30 ($45 new). Please call 985-8575.

Stereo Components: 20 to 50% off list; dual, dynaco, electro-voice, Garrard, Harmon-Kardon, Marantz, Phillips, Pioneer, Sony, Teac, and others; Call Jay at 862-9172 after 4.

For Sale: Two snowtires; Bias-ply, studded, mounted & balanced for VW Squareback. Used one season. Cost $70. Selling for $40. Call 864-4231 after 7 p.m.

Female roommate needed, 10 min. to campus. $80/mo. — 862-5134.

For Sale: Quality stereo components: Harmon Kardon Citation 11 preamp, Harman Kardon Citation 12 amp. Thorens 125 MKII turntable with Shure SME arm plus B+O SP12 cartridge. Excellent shape. Call Tom 864-7807. 12-4, Thurs.—Sat. 12-8.

For Sale: 1 set of audiocraft 440's, 9 months old. New $400/pr. Selling for $225/pr. Excellent condition. Call Dave, 864-7807.

Wanted: Singer, drummer and Keyboard player for rock band. Contact either Rob Waxman (rm. 307) or Jim Fisher (rm. 319) at 656-3036 (Burlington).

Chemistry tutor wanted (for Chem 1) Call David Ross, 862-8175 (between 5 & 6 in bed).

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington

durham
CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS®

Also Available In A 9" Boot For Men And Women

Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' sizes . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.

Texas Instruments
slide rule calculator
SR-50
Must Have Coupon

COUPON SALE
SPECIAL SALE

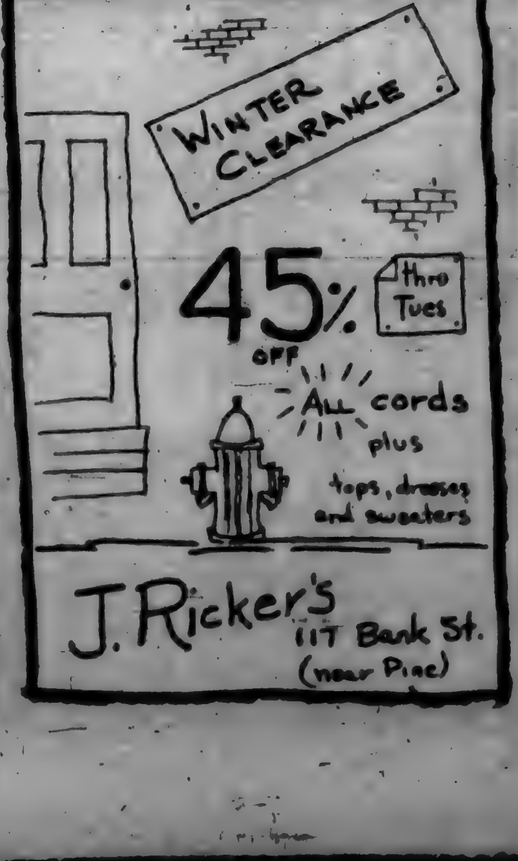
SR50	149.95	124.95
SR10	69.95	49.95
SR11	79.95	67.95
SR16	99.95	87.95

Must Have This Coupon

Full Scientific

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen To Us, You Can't Go Wrong
Owned and Operated by US — Burlington – Essex — Barre-Montpelier — Associate Stores —

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction



J. Ricker's
117 Bank St.
(near Pine)

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 4
FEBRUARY 6, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

'Tis a priviledge to live in Vermont

Senate Majority Leader Mansfield To Open Lecture Series

Two nationally known figures--both personal friends of former U.S. Sen. George D. Aiken-- will speak at the opening of the Aiken Lectures at the University of Vermont's Ira Allen Chapel in March.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., will discuss foreign relations and Aiken's 34-year Senate career, at 8p.m., Sunday, March 2.

Orville L. Freeman, secretary of agriculture from 1961 to 1969, will give his views on the world food crisis at 8 p.m., Wednesday, March 5.

Both events, as well as seminars on March 5, will be free and open to the public. Aiken, Gov. Thomas P. Salmon and Vermont's congressional delegation are expected to take part in the events both days. They and Freeman and other dignitaries will be divided into small groups, to lunch on March 5 in the four student dining rooms.

The Aiken Lectures will be presented annually, beginning this year, and are a permanent tribute from Vermonters to Senator Aiken and his long years of service to the state and nation. Governor Salmon and U.S. Sen. Robert T. Stafford are co-chairmen of an endowment committee for the lectures, and a large group of Vermonters is raising $250,000 to endow the series.

Because of Sen. Mansfield's tight schedule, the only other event planned while he is in Vermont is a dinner in Simpson dining hall, which will include UVM faculty members and students as well as invited guests who have been active in the Aiken endowment project.

Senator Mansfield and Aiken have been close friends since Mansfield moved from the House to the Senate in 1953, and their daily breakfasts together have been widely publicised.

A native of Montana, Senator Mansfield dropped out of grammer school and enlisted in the Navy during World War I at the age of 14. After the war he served in the Army and Marine Corps, was a miner and mining engineer, then, without completing grade school or attending high school, he was admitted by examination to college. He received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Montana State University, now the University of Montana. From 1933 to 1943 he was a professor of Latin American and Far Eastern History of Montana State University. He is now a professor of history on permanent tenure at the University of Montana.

He was elected to Congress in 1942 and to the Senate in 1952, and has served as majority leader since 1961. He was a U.S. delegate to the United Nations in the administration of President Eisenhower, and undertook foreign policy assignments for Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon.

Orville Freeman and Aiken worked closely together while Freeman was secretary of agriculture. Aiken was an acknowledged leader in the Senate in agricultural matters during his years of service.

A Phi Beta Kappa member and a graduate of the University of Minnesota, Freeman attended law school and was a practicing attorney.

He served Minnesota as governor from 1955 to 1961. After stepping down from his cabinet position, he was president of EDP Technology International from 1969 to 1970, and since that time he has been president of Business International Corp. in New York.

Student Government Still In Doubt

by Mark Sawyer

It is evident that the future of student government at the University of Vermont is directly in the hands of the student body.

The student body's representative organ, the SA Senate, dissolved itself last week. Edward Pasqualin, who, introduced the dissolution motion, cited general apathy and the powerless token status of the Senate as the reasons for the disbandment.

At a well attended Tuesday night meeting of individuals interested in the future direction of student government at UVM a wide variety of opinions were expressed concerning why the Senate was ineffective and what kind of government, if any, should replace it.

SA President Peter MacAusland noted that the executive branch is functioning and operating SA's routine affairs, but emphasized that he would not usurp any of the defunct legislature's responsibilities.

Vociferous debate raged over whether it was the apathetic attitudes of the elected senators or the general campus wide apathy of the student body that was responsible for the Senate's demise.

Questions concerning basic political philosophy were raised such as whether a representative is responsible for his own vote or should reflect his constituents' desires.

One ex-senator inquired that "if my constituents are apathetic does that mean I should vote for apathy?"

Two general positions arose concerning the most desirable structure of a new representative body. One group felt a community government incorporating students, faculty, and administrators would operate more effectively than fragmented interest groups competing for power. Adherents pointed out that students and faculty have many interests in common such as ,hiring, firing, and tenure practices.

Opponents of this concept asserted that the divergent interests of each group would supersede any common interests. MacAusland gave the example of a tuition increase to finance faculty pay raises.

The contrasting philosophy was to create a body functioning soley to represent and protect student interests. Bill Root, director of Billings Center, cautioned students to "watch out for your own interests first."

IRA President Ken Bartlett reiterated this point asserting that "we must solidify ourselves and get our act together first."

At the meeting's close, MacAusland called for volunteers to staff unoffical committees what will investigate the operation of student government at other universities, the causes of the Senate's demise at UVM, and the proper role of a new student body.

Next Tuesday, February 11, at 7:30 p.m. in Marsh Lounge, Billings Center, another open meeting will be held to discuss the future of student government at UVM.

All students are urged to develop proposals reflecting their position on what kind of government, if any, should be established at UVM and voice their opinions at this meeting.

MacAusland plans to incorporate a number of diverse proposals into a general referendum to be voted on by the UVM student body.

Some students felt a small body like the Senate can represent student demands effectively. Others, like Ed Pasqualin, feel that students must become aware of the important issues on campus and provide broad based and active support of their representatives policies. There was general consensus, though, that all interested students should attempt to make the meeting next Tuesday.

Dr. Craig Supports College Merger

by Margo Howland

Vermont State Colleges Chancellor Dr. William G. Craig said last week that in his opinion, a merger of the state colleges with the University of Vermont would "make it possible for the University to increase their academic quality and it would certainly help the state colleges to increase their academic offerings." Craig also stated that the Board of Trustees of the VSC "is still interested in exploring ways of unifying programs and planning with the University of Vermont."

Those remarks came in a Cynic interview five days after the VSC Board of Trustees had voted 8-0 to oppose the bill S-37, offered by Sen. Richard Soule, D-Franklin, which would merge the state colleges with the University of Vermont. The trustees' action came Saturday, January 25, after two days of meetings.

Craig also suggested that one of the reasons the trustees voted against the Soule Bill was that "they did not have a full opportunity to discuss it."

One of the major concerns voiced by University officials is whether a merger mightn't affect the name of the university. The state colleges have also voiced concerns about retaining their identity. Senator Soule's bill would establish a Vermont System of Higher Education composed of the five colleges and the university. Craig was asked how this would affect the names of the institutions.

"The intent, I think, is to call it the University of Vermont, you can't say, 'Rah,Rah, Vermont System of Higher Education!'" he quipped. "I think this was an attempt to get rid of some of the problems of what it might be called."

Regarding what to call the individual colleges, Craig stated that the Board of Trustees created by the legislation would take care of that problem. "I assume it would be called (for example) the University of Vermont at Johnson---there would be several different campuses," he speculated.

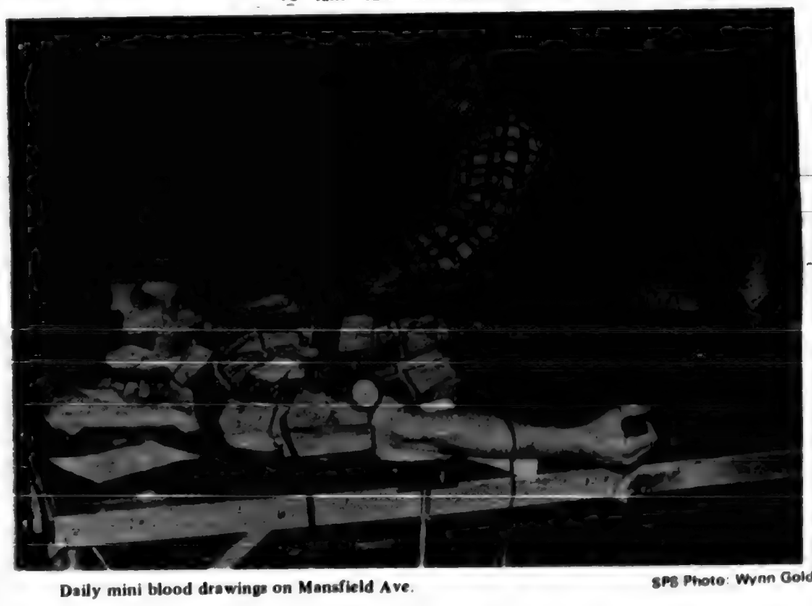
Craig discussed admissions policies and how they might be affected. He has noted that the University has had to turn away out-of-state applicants, yet two of the state colleges, Lyndon and Vermont Tech, are underenrolled.

"One of the problems is that we have academic facilities to take care of 1500-1600 students but not enough dormitory space," the chancellor began.

"If there were one University, operated under one central administrator, then it would be possible to serve more Vermonters and more out-of-state enrollment if we could show that the University was meeting the needs of Vermonters. It would be possible to enroll more of those out-of-state students that are being turned down at UVM," Craig declared.

He continued, "The state colleges have a lot of Vermonters who would like access to the land-grant

(continued on page eight)



Daily mini blood drawings on Mansfield Ave. SPS Photo: Wynn Gold

Nuclear Controversy Rages In House

by Stephen W. Tanner

Over 150 persons were forced to move from the small Room 11 at the Montpelier State House Thursday night because of the numbers that gathered to demonstrate their concern over House Bill 127 at the Natural Resources Committee hearing. As a timely aside, Vermont Yankee, a nuclear power plant in Vernon, shut down again Thursday.

The bill already sponsored by 48 representatives, would provide the legislature with the power to approve or veto any future construction of nuclear power electricity generating plants in Vermont.

Those who spoke in favor of the bill outnumbered those who spoke against it by nearly 3 to 1, though many who supported the legislation addressed themselves mainly to the undesirability of any and all construction of nuclear power plants in Vermont's future, rather than whether or not the legislature should make the decision on construction of future plants.

Arguing for the bill, Gene Beaudoin of Burlington cited numerous problems with the plants, among them:

1. The as yet unsuccessfully tested emergency core cooling system needed to avert a reactor meltdown in the event of malfunction, which, at the Atomic Energy Commission's own estimate could cause a maximum of 45,000 deaths.

2. The fact that the life expectancy of one plant is about 30-40 years and some nuclear wastes must be protected for thousands of generations to erode their half-lives to reasonable radioactive levels.

3. The danger of foreign missile attack on any one U.S. plant could cause a severe accident.

4. The possibility of a terrorist group obtaining nuclear fuel and using it to blackmail a city to meet its demands.

5. The fact that insurance companies will not insure for total coverage in the event of a nuclear disaster.

6. The fact that at any given time about 1/3 of the 41 nuclear power plants in the U.S. are closed down due to irregularities in their systems, indicating their unreliability.

7. The fact that nuclear power has not been any less expensive than previous energy generators.

8. That alternatives to nuclear power (solar, fusion, etc.) are potentially safer, yet have been neglected.

9. Considering all factors, the decision of whether or not to build one of these plants should rest in the broadest based decision-making body because of its far-reaching ramifications.

Confirming many of those above, Prof. John Krizan, Dept. of Physics, UVM, pointed to research showing the peoples living on Pacific islands near the sites of nuclear test blasts are experiencing increased numbers of cancer victims as an indicator of the responsibility of nuclear power for causing increased fatality rates. Nuclear power plants already emit low levels of radiation.

Everyone who addressed the Natural Resources Committee in favor of the bill made clear the fact that they wanted the legislature to decide the fate of future nuclear powered plants in Vermont.

Sarah Hutchinson of South Burlington voiced her concerns stating, "The basic question is, 'do the benefits outweigh the risks?' H. 127 gives a broad base to the decision-making process so that the answer becomes a democratic one, made of, by, and for the people of the state."

Bruce Carlson, a student at Dartmouth, reasoned ,that if there were any opponents to the bill, "They are opposed to democracy. They want the power in the hands of the experts, away from the people. Vermont," he said, "should point out the role of a democracy in a highly technological society."

Opponents of the bill argued:

1. That nuclear power is the cleanest now available.

2. That given the energy shortage in New England, any impediment to power generation plants would hurt Vermont's economy.

3. That other sources of power generation, i.e., fusion, wind, solar, geothermal, wood, and water are too far off in their developments to provide the stop-gap solution nuclear power offers.

4. That the legislature does not have the expertise to decide on the advisability of constructing future nuclear power plants.

Edwin Richards, a businessman from Brattleboro, voiced his opposition to any roadblock for power generating plants: "Vermont has no indigenous sources to meet the energy crisis for the next decade," he told the committee. Citing the high quantities of electricity used in New England, Richards said he encouraged "the safe development of nuclear power."

Two scientists from Massachusetts, Gilbert Brown (teacher at Lowell Tech.) and Mark Goldsmith (architectural engineer) stated "Nuclear power is the safest, most economical and the least environmentally degrading form of providing electricity for the consumers of Vermont."

Sent to Montpelier by the Central Vermont Public Service Corporation (CVPSC), the two members of the Energy Research Group, founded by a coalition of six Mass. Institute of Technology graduate students opposing Ralph Nader's proposal that Vermont be the first state to declare a nuclear moratorium attacked opposing arguments as "Emotionalism that does not provide the public with the information it needs," they said. The idea that we could have thermonuclear fusion by the year 2,000 is "patently untrue; the only realistic alternative is coal," they said, "which is a 'filthy fuel'."

The States Attorney General rose to support his piece of legislation which would set up a select committee consisting of members of the Public Service Board and Legislators to decide on nuclear power construction. In an interesting conclusion, he warned that should the legislature pass H. 127 "serious constitutional problems" could arise between the powers of

(continued on page eleven)

Living-Learning Rock Climbing Club

Food Stamps Restricted

by Stephen W. Tanner

By a new federal regulation issued Jan. 10, 1975, students over 18 years of age, attending an educational institution above high school and claimed as tax deductible dependents by their parents, are ineligible for food stamps if the families themselves are not receiving food stamps.

This action, taken by the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, implements regulation signed into law Dec. 31, 1974.

The measure means that a student currently using food stamps and at the same time declared a dependent by his parents, must either face ineligibility for food stamps or verify that he is not a dependent if his parents do not currently receive food stamps themselves.

If the student does not receive above one-half his annual income from his parents and is still claimed as a tax deduction, he can request a Free Hearing to clarify his non-dependent status. If he is found to be falsely claimed as a dependent, thus earning more than one-half his annual income, his parents could risk a tax evasion suit.

The practice in Burlington for obtaining food stamps is to apply at the local Department of Welfare office, 3943 Pearl Street. The Department of Social Welfare then contacts the student's family to find his financial dependence and if the family uses food stamps. If the student qualifies he will receive food stamps in the mail. With the cards he can purchase food stamps from the town clerk. The food stamps are worth more in value than the cash paid for them.

The student who really suffers is the student who needs food stamps because he receives only a small living compensation from his non-food- stamp-using family. He may be legitimately claimed as a dependent, yet because his family receives no food stamps.

This action has only been proposed by the Ford Administration. Thus far U.S. Senator George McGovern and 38 other senators have opposed the proposed percentage increase.

Ford Rebuts Congress

by Knut Rostad

With all the excess verbiage produced in the constant battle between Congress and President Ford, the tradition was finally broken last week as the President answered Congressional criticism directed at his economic policy with a well positioned rebuttal. His answer was simple. "It seems to me that the Congress, individually or collectively, should not nitpick. If they do not agree, they ought to step up with a comprehensive alternative rather than to try to move in a backward way."

The only forum or basis in which the Democratic controlled Congress could

(continued on page eight)

Join The Cynic Staff

Featured This Week...

Three Sheets To The Wind ... pg. 5

Banco Gets His Head Banged! ...pg. 6

Icecats Beat UNH ... pg. 12

This paper is recyclable. Call Robinson Hall for more information, 656-3084.

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Renaissance Symposium

In early April the Second Annual Vermont Renaissance Symposium is being held. The M R program and the English Department will be holding a Medieval Fair on that same weekend. The fair is in the planning stages, but the production of three medieval plays (perhaps Everyman and/or the Second Shepherd's Play) on the back of horse-drawn wagons is being seriously considered. Dancers, actors, jugglers, musicians, medieval vendors, and construction helpers are all needed. If you are interested, get in touch with Wendy Persson, Box 427, L/L, 656-4265, or Dave Harvey, 36½ Chase Street, 658-2393.

Vermont Hang Gliders

The Vermont Hang Glider Association will hold its third meeting on Friday, Feb. 7, 7 p.m. at Proctor Hall, Middlebury College. A classification system for rating pilots will be discussed. Anyone interested in hang gliding is encouraged to attend. For more information write Box 1048, Stowe, Vermont, or call 253-8300.

FADC

Phi Delta Theta, 439 College St., presents FADC every Friday from 6 – 9 p.m. Beer, drinks, and hot dogs will be featured.

Caine Mutiny

The UVM Sailing Club will sponsor a showing of The Caine Mutiny on February 17 at 7:30 in Cook B106. Admission is free.

Professor From India To Lecture

Gopal Krishna from the Center of the Study of Developing Societies, New Delhi, Inida and 1974–75 visiting professor at McGill University, Montreal will be on the UVM campus Friday, Feb. 7. Professor Krishna has written extensively on history and politics of India and is one of India's most eminent Political Scientists. He will give a public lecture entitled Modems and Indian Politics at 115 Commons, L/L Center on Friday, Feb. 7 at 3:00 p.m.

All interested students, faculty, townspeople are invited.

Valentine's Day Concert/Modern Dance

A St. Valentine's Day Concert will be held at the College Street Congretational Church (South Union and College Streets) on Friday, February 14 at 8:30 p.m. The varied program will include the following artists: Jane Ambrose (baroque flute), Z. Philip Ambrose (harpsichord), Stephen Bloom (oboe), Betsy Dahl (harp), Allyson Davis (soprano), Shari Fleming (soprano), William Gonzalez (classical guitar), Jack Grebb (organ), Flora Kinsey (cello), Elizabeth Metcalfe (harpsichord), William Metcalfe (recorder), Philip Rhinelander (classical guitar), Victoria Scoones (flute), and the UVM Modern Dance Workshop.

Admission will be $2.00 (students $1.00). Advance tickets are available at the Everday Bookshop (106 Church Street) or the Church Office (mornings). Proceeds will go to the College Street Church Harpsichord Fund.

Hatha Yoga

THE VERMONT WOMEN'S HEALTH CLINIC is sponsoring a Hatha Yoga class. Beginning Feb. 11 at 7:00 p.m. Emphasis will be on getting back in touch with our bodies, discovering tensions and learning to relax them. For further information call 863-1386.

Cupid Dance

There will be a Valentine's Dance at MAT Dining Hall on February 14 at 9:00 p.m. featuring "Wide Open." Admission is $1.

Winter Ice Show Will Feature Professional Talent

UVM will hold its second annual winter ice show Feb. 14 and 15, in Gutterson Field House. Some fifty students will present a program saluting the "Years of the Silver Screen," including interpretations of the following American musical favorites: Mame, Cabaret and West Side Story. Excerpts from The Sting and Papillon will also be performed.

Director, choreographer and trainer Kathleen Ryan is a UVM senior who has qualified as a 1970 national competitor, U.S. Dance gold medalist, and U.S. Figure silver medalist. Ruth Ledecramer, the main skater to be featured in the show, has a similarly impressive record: she has earned the U.S. Figure gold medal, holds the silver medal in U.S. Dance competition and has been skating professionally and competitively for the past nine years. She is also a UVM senior. Guest skater Rudd Young, U.S. Figure, Dance and Free Dance gold medalist and silver pair medalist (for achievement in both serious and comedy skating), is a student at St. Lawrence University and will be appearing with Mike Masionis, the 1974 New England Freestyle Champion, Senior Men's silver medalist, U.S. Figure gold medalist and former national competitor.

As can be seen from the above credentials, the show promises to be one of admirable talent and awesome entertainment.

Meditation Classes

Ananda Marga is a socio-spiritual organization dedicated to the physical, mental and spiritual upliftment of humanity. Introduction classes in spiritual philosophy and meditation are taught free of charge periodically, one beginning Thursday, Feb 6 at 8:00 p.m. Call Chris Leask or Trafton Crandall at 862-1802 to sign up for classes.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6

7 p.m., Study habit slide talk, Patterson Hall, with Alice D. Outwater of Counseling and Testing.

7:00–8:00 p.m. Need a break from studying? Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is playing volleyball in Patrick Gym. All are welcome. Be prompt.

7:30 p.m., Lecture entitled "Noah's Flood – Fact or Foam?" sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ as part of their current symposium, Christian Update Forum. 120 L/L Commons.

7:30 p.m. Prof. William Metcalfe speaks on "Glorians: Divine Right, or Goddess Queen?" in A-180 L/L, as a Medieval/Renaissance Program lecturer.

7:30 p.m., S.A. Films presents the musical "Showboat" in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

7:30 p.m., The Church Street Center sponsors a study group which will discuss the school board issue and omnibus report. Call 656-4221 for details. Continues through Feb. 26.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7

8:00 to 9 a.m., Faculty discussion of "Separation of Church and State in Religious and Public Institutions," sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ as part of their current symposium, Christian Update Forum. Admission is $1, and faculty are invited to attend; President's Dining Room, Waterman.

10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Last day to pick up your VPIRG refund in Billings.

7:30 and 10:00 p.m., S.A. Films presents two Beatles classics: "Hard Day's Night" and "Let It Be" in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., First film of Lane Series Fields' Festival, "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," in Marsh Life Sciences. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., Folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom. All are welcome.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8

1 p.m., Women of UVM sponsor a faculty cross country ski and apres-ski at the home of Dr. and Mrs. John J. Bland, Upper Valley Rd., Cambridge, Vt. Call 644-2976 for details and directions.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., S.A. Films presents Kathryn Hepburn in "Bringing Up Baby" in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 9

6:00 to 8 p.m., Legislative study group sponsored by the Church Street Center, to meet weekly until April 18. For details call 656-4221.

7:30 p.m., Oral Interpretation performances of poetry, prose and dramatic pairs around the Fireplace at Living/Learning Center.

At the Fleming Museum through Feb. 28 "American Art Since 1945" from the permanent collection will be exhibited in the Main Gallery; "Recent Gifts to the Museum can be seen in the Front Gallery and "Art of the Northwest Coast" is in the Lounge Gallery (also from the permanent collection). Hours are Monday–Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.; Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.; closed Saturdays and most holidays.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 10

12 noon, Dr. Bela Joiesz of Bell Laboratories will speak on "Conjecture in Visual Texture Perception" in E-214 Given Medical Bldg., as a physiology-biophysics lecturer.

2 p.m., Dr. William C. Carter of IBM in Yorktown Heights will give a mathematics seminar on "The Microprogramming Impact on Computer Architecture" in 101 Votey Bldg. Designed for undergraduate math students.

4 p.m., Math seminar for graduate students held in 305 Votey Bldg. featuring Dr. William Carter who will speak on "Experiments in Proving Design Correctness for Microprogram Controlled Computers."

4 p.m., The first of two workshops on communication skills will be sponsored by the Center for Counseling and Testing and held at the center on 146 S. Williams St. Arlene Ginsburg and John Stahl will lead discussion. Enrollment is limited so call 656-3340 to sign up.

4:10 p.m., A biology seminar with Dr. Frederick R. Magdoff of the UVM Dept. of Plant and Soil Science will be held in Rm. 105 Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. "The Use of Waste Material for Growing Crops" will be discussed and coffee is served at 3:55 in Rm 107.

5 p.m., VPIRG holds its weekly meeting in Conference Rm. C of Billings Center. All are welcome to attend.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition Program meets in 115 Commons to serve as an exercise class and nutritional counseling session. All are welcome. Call 656-4242 for details.

7 p.m., The Christian Science Organisation sponsors Harvey Wood who will present a lecture entitled "Grow We Must" in Marsh Lounge, Billings Center.

7:30 p.m., David Sokol will lead discussion of Gestalt Therapy in an introduction seminar held at the Counseling and Testing Center.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents the French classic "Forbidden Games" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 11

11 a.m., Prof. Robert W. Detenbeck of UVM's Physics Dept. will speak on "The Glory: A Meteorological Spectacle" in Cook Bldg., A-531. Coffee will be served at 10:30 a.m. in Cook A-429.

12 noon, A study habit workshop with Alice D. Outwater will be held at the Counseling and Testing Center.

2 p.m., The first of three workshops dealing with tension will be held at the Counseling and Testing Center with Alice Outwater and Alan Ross. Limited to eight students; call 656-3340 to sign up.

5 p.m., Meeting at the Counseling and Testing Center for all those interested in joining one of the Personal Growth Groups now being formed. Call 656-3340 and ask for Nancy Koch or Sam Dietzel if you cannot attend.

6:30 p.m., Study habit talk at Jeanne Mance with Alice D. Outwater of Counseling and Testing.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of Bible studies on the Book of Colossians every Tuesday evening. All are welcome to attend at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2.

7 p.m., The Teacher Education written communication Test is required of all students seeking certification. Examination will be held in B-106 Cook Bldg. for all those interested.

7:30 p.m., SA Senate meeting is scheduled.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of Black Educators in the President's Dining Room, Waterman.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12

12 noon, Come to an hour of relaxation and meditation with Nancy Koch at the Counseling Center.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch film series continues at the Church Street Center.

4–5:30 p.m., Tertulia in D-350 L/L. Tertulia is an informal get-together for those interested in speaking Spanish with other students and the Spanish professors.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition Program meets as an exercise in nutritional counseling in 115 Commons. Everyone welcomed.

7 p.m., The Teacher Education Test will be given in B-106 Cook for all those needing certification.

7 p.m., A Home Economics seminar presents Robert Kilpatrick from the Consumer Products Safety Commission who will speak on "Legislation and Flammable Fabrics" in 103 Rowell. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m. The Church Street Center is sponsoring a study group which will research the school board issue and omnibus report.

7:30 p.m., The Outing Club meets in 305 Votey Bldg.

7:30 p.m., A German film (in German) entitled "Der Zerbrochene Krug" will be shown in Rm. 104 Old Mill.

7:30 p.m., The first of two workshops dealing with self appreciation will be conducted by Sam Dietzel as part of the Counseling and Testing series. Enrollment is limited; sign up by calling 656-3340.

8 p.m., The Women of UVM meet to discuss Erica Jong's novel "Fear of Flying" at the home of Donna Carlson, 9 Sebring Rd., So. Burlington, Vt.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13

10:50 a.m. A Chemistry seminar will be presented by Dr. Richard Deming of UVM's Dept. of Biochemistry, featuring a lecture on the topic of "Tri-Valent Mescury" in Rm. B-112, Cook.

VIPIRG Progress

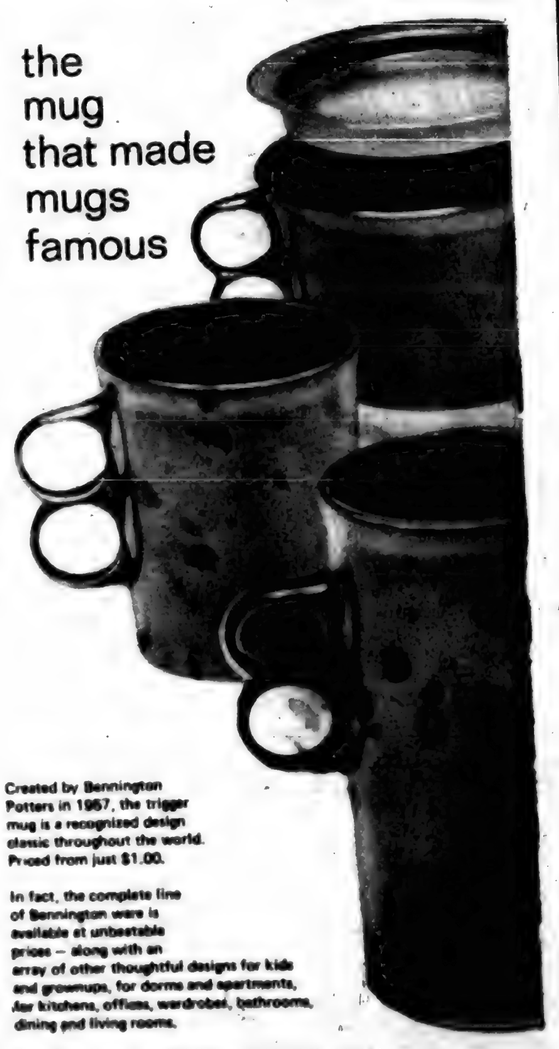
Energy Conservation volunteers are needed to help conduct an energy waste hunt to determine where unnecessary energy is being wasted. Contact Nathlie Worthington, 863-3435.

Also volunteers are badly needed to help maintain the VPIRG office at 49 No. Prospect in Burlington. Anyone interested in any of the above projects or in VPIRG in general is urged to contact VPIRG at 863-3435. Also every Monday at 5 there is a local board meeting that is open to anyone interested. If you have time stop by Billings Center Conference Room C at 5 p.m. Monday night.

MEN! — WOMEN!

JOBS ON SHIPS! No experience required. Excellent pay. Worldwide travel. Perfect summer job or career. Send $3.00 for information. SEAFAX, Dept. U-2 P.O. Box 2049, Port Angeles, Washington 98362.

the mug that made mugs famous



Created by Bennington Potters in 1957, the trigger mug is a recognized design classic throughout the world. Priced from just $1.00.

In fact, the complete line of Bennington ware is available at unbeatable prices – along with an array of other thoughtful designs for kids and grownups, for dorms and apartments, for kitchens, offices, wardrobes, bathrooms, dining and living rooms.

Come take a look, anytime between 9 and 9.

bennington potters N8RTH
127 college street, downtown burlington

If she doesn't say yes it won't be our fault.

Prices start from under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1849

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

"My physics professor sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"A lot of friends had waterbeds and liked them a lot too, but I never really considered one until we studied Pascal's Law in terms of the professor's Nimbus Waterbed. Now I don't know how much you know about hydrodynamics, but in practical terms what a waterbed adds up to is a better night's sleep. When I asked the professor if all waterbeds were the same, he said Nimbus was the only one with the cross-buckle corners, a construction so unique that its the only patented wooden waterbed frame in the world. He talked about other attractive physical properties like solid state temperature control and support that won't deteriorate with age. Well, I believe in putting education to use so after classes I stopped at a local Nimbus retailer. I guess you can say I've learned my lesson in a world where 'What gets up . . . must lay down.'"

The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus... America will sleep a little easier tonight.

Cunningham N

WEEKDAY LITURGIES Each day at 4:15 p.m. Also Tuesday evenings 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

BASIC CATHOLICISM Each Monday evening with Fr John Crowley at 8:30 p.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES Each Monday evening at 7:00 p.m.

FAITH COMMUNITY: A chance for young people just out of college to share together in discussion, in Apostolic Work, in social activities, in prayer. If you are interested contact Fr. Holland or St. Jeannine.

ALABAMA PRESENTATION: During the Semester Break many students from UVM and the Newman Center worked in Mobile, Alabama with Catholic Social Services. On the weekend of February 8 and 9 they will be making a slide presentation of the experience at each of the Liturgies.

FASHIO... SPRINGTIME O... the theme of the ... for the Benefit ... Center, which w... March 6th at Ira... Hope you will p... us that evening... Fashions models... our UVM student... be on sale at ... Center for $1.5... Weekend.

MUSIC WO... Saturday morni... from 9 a.m. – ... be a Music Wo... Center. The ... include a speak... person teachi... music and wo... helping the ... groups to pr... Lenten Season.

SOCIAL AC... concerned abo... Issues today. ... Center are int... problems of F... Third World, a... Question. We ... become activ...

St. Anselm's Ch

SERVICES: 9:00 p.m., Holy Eucharist, Sunday evening; 10:00 p.m., Holy Eucharist, Tuesday night; 7:15 a.m., Morning prayer, Monday–Friday; 5 p.m., Evening prayer, Sunday–Friday; 8:15 p.m., Compline, Monday night.

PROGRAMS: Folk choir; oral interpretation; Inquirers' Class, 7:15 p.m., Monday evening.

There are two opportunities for people to creatively express themselves in the chapel this spring. One is a folk choir being organized by David Newcombe. This group of people will prepare the music for a folk service later in the spring. Please speak to David either at St. Anselm's on Sunday or at Billings Information Desk Monday–Friday night from 4:30 p.m. – 11:30 p.m. The second is a small group working under the direction of Tim Marshall on several projects to be integrated into our Sunday services. This is a chance for acting, worship and fun combined and offered to the Lord. If this interests you, check with Tim at St. Anselm's or leave a note for him on Chaplain Appleyard's door.

In response to an interest, evening prayer has been started this semester. This service closes our workday and gives us a chance to stop and consider all we have been through, to hear several selections of scripture and to pray together. It compliments the morning prayer discipline we have shared. We begin and end the day with prayer and praise.

Ash W...

This ye... falls on Fe... will mar... celebrating ... our norm... service. Ev... 5:00 p.m. ... will beg... Chaplain A... a homily. ...

Ash ... important ... Year. It m... Lent, a ... thoughts ... In this ... dis-orien... remains a... reflect, to ... are using ... to be fed, ... inward, to ... is doing w... time to re... renew our ... find new ... faith in ... situations. ... come and ... of Ash We...

Regular 99.95

S...

LAF...

Cunningham Newman Center

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Each day at 4:15 p.m. Also Tuesday evenings 10:00 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

BASIC CATHOLICISM: each Monday evening with Fr. John Crowley at 8:30 p.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: Each Monday evening at 7:00 p.m.

FAITH COMMUNITY: A chance for young people just out of college to share together in discussion, in Apostolic Work, in social activities, in prayer. If you are interested contact Fr. Holland or Sr. Jeannine.

ALABAMA PRESENTATION: During the Semester Break many students from UVM and the Newman Center worked in Mobile, Alabama with Catholic Social Services. On the weekend of February 8 and 9 they will be making a slide presentation of the experience at each of the Liturgies.

FASHION SHOW: SPRINGTIME ON CAMPUS is the theme of the Fashion Show for the Benefit of the Newman Center, which will be held on March 6th at Ira Allen Chapel. Hope you will plan to be with us that evening to see the Fashions modeled by many of our UVM students. Tickets will be on sale at the Newman Center for $1.50 starting this Weekend.

MUSIC WORKSHOP: On Saturday morning February 8, from 9 a.m. – Noon there will be a Music Workshop at the Center. The morning will include a speaker on Lent, a person teaching some new music and working sessions helping the various music groups to prepare for the Lenten Season.

SOCIAL ACTION: We are concerned about many Social Issues today. Some at the Center are interested in the problems of Farmworkers, the Third World, and the Amnesty Question. We are trying to become active with groups existing already on Campus, and to begin to do some sharing with students who come to the Center. Should you wish to join us please contact Sr. Lindora or Fr. John Crowley. (862-8403).

THIRD WORLD: On the weekend of February 14–16 there will be 3 Maryknoll priests at the Center to help us in experiencing the problems of the Third World. Besides speaking at our various Liturgies, they will also be conducting a Workshop on the Global Village on Sunday afternoon. Hope many of you will plan to be with us.

LEAP PROGRAM: A weekend experience in building Christian Community for young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25.

The next program is February 21-23. If you want to know more about the program please contact Sr. Lindora.

Mathematical Sciences Seminar

For Undergraduates - February 10

"The Micro-programming Impact on Computer Architecture" will be presented by Dr. William C. Carter of IBM at 2 p.m. in Room 101 Votey.

Micro-programming will be defined and its early history surveyed. The two best known micro-programming techniques, 'vertical' and 'horizontal' will be defined and illustrated using one simple computer architecture and two hardware implementations. The changes in computer architecture due to micro-programming will be traced historically, and some future trends will be postulated.

For Graduates - February 10

"Experiments in Proving Design Correctness for Micro-program Controlled Computers" will be Dr. Carter's topic. It will be presented at 4 p.m. in room 305 Votey.

This talk will present the results of four experiments in using the following method for demonstrating microcode validity. First, describe formally the computer's state vectors at the architectural level M and at the register-transfer level uM. The Vienna Definition Language with APL operations as primitives is used. Next, represent both systems as abstract programs with respective functions F and uF over properly defined states.

Finally, define a relation R between the programs and prove formally that R is an algebraic simulation of M,F by SuM, uF. The first three experiments were done by hand, but the fourth used a newly developed interactive set of programs. The programs will be briefly described and the hand and automated results compared.

V.A. Benefits

The Veterans Administration in a new program is putting representatives on college and university campuses throughout the country.

The "Vet Rep" assigned to the University of Vermont is Russ Kell and he will have office hours at Clement House every Monday and Tuesday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. on Wednesday mornings. He has come to U.V.M. to discuss not only V.A. education benefits with students but to counsel on any benefit administered by the V.A. such as compensation for service connected disabilities, medical care for veterans, home loan guaranties, dependents education and vocational rehabilitation.

It is believed by the V.A. that this new program will expedite the payment of its educational assistance benefit to the approximately 450 recipients at U.V.M. by locating and resolving problems before they become major. It is also an attempt by the Administration to make younger veterans more aware of the many benefits offered.

You need not have an appointment to visit with the Vet Rep here at the University of Vermont.

Placement Announcements

Week of February 10–14

EMPLOYERS:

Feb. 10 – Haskins & Sells. Seeks: Acctg Majors for Staff Accountants.

Feb. 11 – Factory Mutual Engineering Assoc. Seeks: BS in Engrg., Phys., Chem. Positions in Field Loss Prevention Engrg.

Feb. 11 – Royal-Globe Ins. Co. Seeks: Bachelors: Acctg., Econ., Fin., Bus., Mktg., Math, and Lib. Arts. Candidate must be willing to relocate. Citizenship required.

Feb. 11 – State Mutual of America. Seeks: Bachelor: Math, Acct., Bus., Liberal Arts. Citizenship required.

Feb. 12 – Mutual of New York (MONY) Seeks: All majors. Citizenship required.

Feb. 14 – Arthur Young & Company Seeks: BS/Acctg. Citizen or Perm Visa.

Feb. 14 – Agway Seeks: Agriculture and Business degrees for mgmt., sales retail training.

Feb. 13 – Agway Career Night – Living-Learning Center

Workshops For GRE

The Counseling and Testing Center in conjunction with the Reading Center will sponsor two workshops for undergraduate students planning to take the Graduate Record Exam. These workshops will be scheduled on two consecutive nights and will cover specific areas involved in the GRE. The first workshop is scheduled for early February. Any graduate students interested in volunteering time to work with the students is welcome. We are in need of people involved in the areas of mathematics, statistics, and sciences. If you are interested in participating, please contact Bob Rios at the Counseling and Testing Center on Mondays or Wednesdays from 9:00 to 5:00.

A memorial service will be held Thursday, Feb. 13 at 4:15 p.m. in Carpenter Auditorium, Given Medical Building, for Dr. Harry Lighthall Jr., 51, University of Vermont mathematics professor.

Education Majors

If you would like to prepare for a career as a new and exciting kind of classroom teacher, if you are sensitive to the problems of handicapped learners, if you are interested in learning Special Education skills to serve children in the regular classroom; THEN consider the RESPONSIVE TEACHER PROGRAM.

This is a concentration for elementary and secondary education majors, beginning in the junior year. Applications will be accepted from second semester sophmores and these must be completed by March 1. For application blanks and other information see or call Pat Pierson at 2 Colchester Avenue, 656-2936 or call Karen Kessaris at 864-6181 or Debbie Hoffman at 864-6649.

St. Anselm's Chapel

SERVICES: 9:00 p.m., Holy Eucharist, Sunday evening; 10:00 p.m., Holy Eucharist, Tuesday night; 7:15 a.m., Morning prayer, Monday–Friday; 5 p.m., Evening prayer, Sunday–Friday; 8:15 p.m., Compline, Monday night.

PROGRAMS: Folk choir; oral interpretation; Inquirers' Class, 7:15 p.m., Monday evening.

There are two opportunities for people to creatively express themselves in the chapel this spring. One is a folk choir being organized by David Newcombe. This group of people will prepare the music for a folk service later in the spring. Please speak to David either at St. Anselm's on Sunday or at Billings Information Desk Monday–Friday night from 4:30 p.m. – 11:30 p.m. The second is a small group working under the direction of Tim Marshall on several projects to be integrated into our Sunday services. This is a chance for acting, worship and fun combined and offered to the Lord. If this interests you, check with Tim at St. Anselm's or leave a note for him on Chaplain Appleyard's door.

In response to an interest, evening prayer has been started this semester. This service closes our workday and gives us a chance to stop and consider all we have been through, to hear several selections of scripture and to pray together. It compliments the morning prayer discipline we have shared. We begin and end the day with prayer and praise.

For all those who might be new to UVM, we bid you welcome. St. Anselm's is the Episcopal Chapel but it is open to anyone who is curious. They are people here from many denominations. Some are just considering what being a Christian is all about, really. But come on up and see for yourself. We have coffee, a fireplace, a place to study and a Chaplain who likes to talk... and talk... and talk...

Ash Wednesday

This year Ash Wednesday falls on February 12 and we will mark this day by celebrating the Eucharist after our normal evening prayer service. Evening prayer is at 5:00 p.m. and the Eucharist will begin around 5:20. Chaplain Appleyard will share a homily.

Ash Wednesday is an important day in the Christian Year. It marks the beginning of Lent, a time to turn our thoughts and prayers inward. In this busy, active and dis-oriented society, Lent remains as an opportunity to reflect, to contemplate how we are using our lives. It is a time to be fed, to turn our attention inward, to assess what the Lord is doing within us. And it is a time to rededicate ourselves, to renew our discipline and to find new expressions of our faith in our particular situations. We welcome all to come and share the beginning of Ash Wednesday with us.

VPIRG Needs Volunteers

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group is a student-run consumer, environmental and health lobby. Unlike any other lobby in Montpelier, VPIRG's success depends entirely upon students working together to make changes in society. There are a number of projects this semester that need volunteers.

Nuclear Power students are needed to help lobby for the passage of legislation that will give the determination of whether or not to build nuclear power plants in Vermont to the General Assembly. The purpose behind the legislation is to give the people in the state a chance to debate the issue of nuclear power. For more information contact Sarah Hutchinson 863-5411 or David Barney 862-8011.

Children's Health Care students are needed to help lobby for the passage of a bill that will provide health screening procedures for Vermont's children. If passed this bill could be one of the most important pieces of legislation passed anywhere in the country. Through preventive medicine Vermont families will be able to keep their children healthy. For more information contact Bruce Schwartz 864-7436.

Hillel

February 9 – Sunday Brunch 11 a.m. The speaker will be Prof. R. Stanfield, Dept of Sociology. His topic of discussion will be "Changing Jewish Communities in the USA."

On Saturday evening, Feb. 8, there will be a Get-Together and Dance at Hillel House. Bring your own records for a greater variety, plus there will be notorious wild fruit punch.

On Friday evening February 21, there will be a traditional Friday evening dinner. There will be a $2.00 charge to cover expenses. Send reservations with check to Prof. Kahn, c/o Hillel Foundation, Waterman Building.

Ledyard Farm 3-Day Event

MAT Lounge
7:00 PM
Refreshments

Sponsored by the UVM Horse Club

Neurologist Speaks On Aphasia

A workshop in aphasia will be held at 120 Commons, Living/Learning Center, University of Vermont, for speech therapists, school and medical personnel.

The speaker will be Robert W. Sparks of the aphasia research section, neurology service at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boston. He will explain a new form of language therapy called melodic intonation therapy which has produced improvement in speaking for 15 aphasic patients at that hospital.

Aphasia is a weaking or loss of the faculty of transmission of ideas by language in any of its forms–reading, writing or speaking, or failure in the appreciation of the written, printed or spoken word.

The workshop will be sponsored by the Eisanot M. Luse Center for Communication Disorders, and further information about it may be obtained from Dr. Mary S. Wilson, director of the center. There will be no charge for participants.

ROCKWELL 61R

- Performs all classical slide rule functions — simple arithmetic, reciprocals, factorials, expotentiation, roots, trigonometric and logarithmic functions, all in free floating decimal point
- Most functions process displayed data only — allows separate processing of data before entry in a complex calculation.
- Calculates answers to 13 significant digits; uses all 13 digits in subsequent calculations for maximum accuracy.
- Converts automatically to scientific notation when calculated answer is greater than 10^{10} or less than 10^{-10}

Complete with batteries!

Full Scientific Slide Rule

Regular 99.95 NOW 74.95

SAVE $20.00

LAFAYETTE®

157 Pearl St. Essex Jct.

the lazy student's way to excel

(not just pass-excel!)

I used to be a student. I still am for that matter even though I'm no longer enrolled in an academic institution. More importantly, I used to study hard – the midnight cram sessions – the 7-day weeks.

But I didn't start making good grades until I learned some amazing secrets about studying and about myself – secrets that I have never shared with anyone else until now.

This information could be worth more to you than all the money in the world. What's more, I feel so confident about that claim that I'm going to request that you send me 10 dollars for something that will cost me less than 1 dollar to produce. And I'll even make the offer sound so astonishing that you'll be sorry if you don't accept it.

How can I make such a statement? Because I'm in the business of selling educational information for a profit – just like a professional daily newspaper or a lawyer. Samuel Johnson once said, "No man but a blockhead ever wrote except for money." Besides, if I didn't make a good profit, you'd assume my education was wasted and whatever I have to offer you is therefore worthless.

Yet I can unconditionally guarantee its results! In fact, I will make you the most unusual guarantee in the world. And that is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 20 days after I've sent you my material.

You'll have plenty of time to look it over and try it out. If you don't agree that it's worth a hundred times what you paid, simply send it back and I'll return every penny of your investment – even if you've marked in it.

The material I'm going to send you will explain in detail what took me 12 years to perfect and put down on paper. And it's going to be the biggest bargain you ever bought – How to pass school the lazy man's way. I call it "The Lazy Man's Way" because the wisest man I ever met once said, "Anything is easy once it's fully understood."

Now, I don't mind bragging just a little to prove my point. Because unless I do, you won't be motivated enough to try my guaranteed method. You see, I went from a 2.1 GPA (4.0=A system) to a term average of over 3.5, while taking similar courses yet more units, merely by using the methods spelled out in my material. What's more, I have copies of my official transcripts to prove it!

And I'll show you exactly how I accomplished this while at the same time holding your money in "escrow" until you're completely satisfied that reviewing my material is the smartest thing you ever did.

All in all, I give you more than 150 pages filled with proven methods on how to study, how to take exams, how to budget your time for greater efficiency, how to overcome anxiety, plus numerous other ways of getting better results with less work and more fun – real, practical ideas you can put to work at once.

The concepts include: 4 steps to goal achievement; 6 steps to better reading; key factors in memory retention; demonstrated ways to take meaningful notes – plus proven tips on listening, as well as passing both subjective and objective type examinations.

If all this sounds too good to be true, I don't blame you. Because there has never been a program like this before – a system that shows you how to raise your G.P.A. by simply using the natural talents you possess right now.

It doesn't require "intelligence". I'm considered by most to be average.

Nor does it require "luck". You see, I sincerely believe that we make our own good fortune.

And it certainly doesn't require "effort" in the sense that effort is hard work. Work is only hard if we dislike the task at hand.

Rather, it simply requires "belief". Enough belief to put the simple concepts into action. Enough belief to absorb the material. If you do that, I guarantee (remember, I said, guarantee) the results will be astonishing.

You don't have to interfere with your present studies. In fact, you can review the material in less than one hour. You don't even have to "believe" me until after you examine it.

Just try it. That's all I ask. If I've boasted too much, simply return the package for a refund. All you have to lose is a couple of seconds and a postage stamp to see if I'm right.

But what if I'm telling you the truth?

After all, while there are no certain shortcuts to success, there's no sense in taking the long way around, either.

AFFIDAVIT

"As a former professor of Mr. Dave Mortenson, I certify that this advertisement is correct. On the basis of my personal experience with him for 12 years and my professional experience at the University of Colorado, I attest to the fact that the statements regarding his personal and educational background are true."

(Professor's name available upon request)

Mr. Dave Mortenson
10990 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 118
Los Angeles, California 90024

I haven't got anything to lose. Please rush me the "Lazy Student's Way to Excel". I understand that my check or money order will not be deposited for 20 days after it's been sent.

Should I return the material within that time (for any reason) even if I've marked it up, my check or money order will be returned. My ten dollars is enclosed with that understanding.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

©1974 Dave Mortenson V-105

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Amara '77
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Vella '76
News Editor . . . . . Kathy Stannard '77
Assistant News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer '77
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen M. Tanner '76
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMille '77
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bodi '77
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

UVM Students Must Unite

Last Tuesday, an interested group of students who were concerned about the future of a student government, gathered in Billings to discuss the matter. The main feeling or theme of the group seemed to suggest that UVM students as a whole, were apathetic and uninterested about student government.

The tragic thing about this situation is that it might be true. Students may be apathetic, but, is this the way it must be? We, as students, have many concerns and interests that need to be heard and fought for. Tuition increases, educational goals and faculty performance are just a few of the issues that should, and do, concern students. However, if students do not have their own government to bring important issues to the attention of the administration and Trustees, they lose their effectiveness as a bargaining group. A unified special interest group for students carries far more weight than an individual student.

Students have the need and responsibility to band together to voice their interests. If we as students do not take the initiative to defend our rights and interests, someone or some group might. And that someone may not have the interest of the students in mind. It is up to us, not our friend nor our roommate, who have the right and responsibility to form a new, viable, and effective student government. Come to Billings next Tuesday at 7:30 and voice your views and opinions. It is here where we may regain our student government, or it is here where we may lose much of what we've gained in the past years.

R.J.

Letters To The Editor

Women's Sports Still In The Dark

To the Editor:

I am writing to complain about a sexist practice of this university's athletic department: they do not print the women's sport schedules along with the men's in the fall, winter, and spring guides to sports.

This policy hurts many people. It hurts first and foremost the athletes. Those women train long and hard. I'm sure they'd love to have fans at their meets and games. Who wouldn't? But how are the fans going to go if they don't even know when said meets and games are?

It also hurts the fans. Last year I was in the infamous breezeway waiting for the doors to open to a UVM hockey game when I got cold and decided to walk around the gym. I walked by the pool and boom! instant swim meet! After watching the women swim some fine races I got mad. Why wasn't it written up on the schedule so people could know about it?

The men are fielding fine teams this year, especially in basketball and hockey. But so are the women. Come out to see a game or a meet. You'll really be glad you did, assuming you can find out when it is held.

Sincerely,
Katherine S. Felt

S.A. Dissolution Dillusion

To the Editor:

The Student Association is not dissolved, as was implied in last week's Cynic. It is the legislative branch, the S.A. Senate, which is now defunct. The Student Association, the parent organization, continues to function. Action is now being taken to seek a new form of student government which can be not only an effective organization but also representative of UVM students. It is evident from the success of the dissolution that the old senate functioned inadequately on student concerns. It is also evident that representation of students to the senate was minimal for attendance at meetings was sparse. Yet it is wrong for the executive branch of the S.A. to carry out the functions and duties of the old senate, as was stated in the motion calling for dissolution. Therefore, the executive branch will not act upon any business which would normally go through the legislative branch. We cannot accept the functions and duties of the disbolved senate, for too much control would then be in too few hands. The dissolution of the senate creates a golden opportunity to improve student government at UVM! It is essential to act quickly yet carefully to restructure the Student Association Government. Rarely does a senate of any student government dissolve, but its occurrence here may really help strengthen the UVM Student Association.

Peter MacAusland
S.A. President

On The Late Richard Warner

To the Editor:

The untimely death of Richard Warner, of which I just became aware, had to be the worst loss to the University in these troubled times.

He was on the borderline of brilliance in his insight and was without equal in his great care and respect of all personal values and problems. I only had enough funds to return home during the spring of "Cambodia and the Burlington 32," I found myself on a different side of the fence during a Post Office demonstration, but I gladly wasted a final exam and course credits to see him through. I mention this because I value my evaluation by him in my career file more than my course grade in his or any other course. My friend Dick also understood the grade as a tool of our educational system only.

With all respect Waterman will literally crumble in a pile of transcripts if his children and widow are not allowed the freedom of the University's best.

D. B. Sherman
Class of 1973
New York, N.Y.

Pinball Whizzer

To the Editor:

A reaction to "Pinball Blizzard," a letter by Hank McCloy (Cynic 1/30/75).

Few can argue that Billings Center is one of the most attractive of the "fine, old buildings" on campus and it would be a true shame if its upper floors were altered contrary to its traditional asthetic appeal. Anyone visiting the basement, however, would realize that it is a refuge throughout the day for relaxation and release from "college anxiety." Pinball is a complete diversion offering cathartic pleasure for those who indulge and it could not possibly be distinguished over the noisy haze of the den. An outsider (like Hank McCloy) looking in could not identify with the delight of challenging that allusive silver ball. As pinball is such an established folkway, I wager that a pinball tournament at UVM would be a well-received attraction. I challenge you, Hank McCloy, on the Big Indian at Tut's.

With something vital at stake, I am very sincerely yours,

Ted Pickering

What Happens When You Take Freedom Away

by Steven Rice

Well, the Student Senate finally did it. They said to hell with themselves, and to hell with the students of the University of Vermont.

Hopefully, when this article appears, somebody on this campus will have the courage to declare that the action last Tuesday was wrong, but that may not happen.

What happens then?

Well, representatives of the administration won't have to come to any more weekly meetings, because there won't be any. So they won't have to listen to the voice of the students, even if that voice often times appeared ambivalent. At least, the voice was spoken.

And administrators will have a perfect right to say that students don't care how their lives are run. And so the administrators may say no more controversial speakers, no more films, no more rock concerts in the gymnasium, no more anything. They will have the basis for doing away with these sources of entertainment and education by claiming that the economic times are tough. At the very least, the administrators will say they can plan the sources of entertainment and education. Just imagine what kind of activities will occur.

There have been some student representatives over the years who have legitimately questioned the direction of a Student Senate. Some, including this writer, have felt that the role of a student governing body should be to provide students with activities, as well as express its conscience on national and international concerns, such as the Vietnam War, and the devastating corruption of the federal branch of American government. Others have felt just as sincerely that the role of the Student Senate should be narrower in scope, concerned exclusively with the university campus. Some sparks have exploded over the long history of the Student Senate over these kinds of concerns.

What is important to realize here is that at least student representatives had an opportunity to meet in an open forum to debate on these issues. What is also important is that those who had something to say were recognized, and their comments were documented. In other words, the process of representation carried on, even if the students on this campus were more concerned with other legitimate matters, such as academic course work, or the beauty of a new found relationship. And equally as important, the administration's point of view, for better or worse, was represented every week.

It would be callous not to admit a sense of frustration by any Senator who has made a committment to serve his or her community. A Senator's work often goes unrecognized, and the hours are long and arduous. And during the last few years, it has appeared that the representative's voice has had little effect, particularly on the proposed underpass, or the threat to academic freedom when the board of trustees said to hell with Michael Parenti. But at least a frustrated voice is better than no voice at all.

In their action last Tuesday, the Senators of 1975 have stripped away from themselves and from the university campus the very opportunity of expressing themselves freely in a forum of democracy every Tuesday evening. It is as cogent as that. They have given, without thinking of the real implications, a clear signal to those in the administration and on the board of trustees that they no longer care about their rights.

Yes, the demise has finally come to student government at the University of Vermont. And I wonder who will answer when another professor is let go for political reasons, who will answer when the administration proposes another tuition hike and also finds it necessary to hire another administrative official, who will answer when other programs, affecting the core of quality education, are dropped, and indeed, who will answer when the university newspaper or radio is told they should modify their reporting on possible wrongdoings of the administration and others. Yes, who will answer?

Perhaps more important, who will lead?

Freedom is a very beautiful possession that is taken too often for granted. When it is lost, or worse yet, given away, it can never be fully regained. And thanks to the Senators of 1975, student freedom, particularly the freedom of speech, went out into the cold winter evening on Jan. 28, and was carried away by the wind.

Now the halls of Billings are empty; an eerie silence is the only remaining sound.

VPIRG: Capital Watch

Nuclear Power : Who Should Decide?

by Scott Skinner, VPIRG Staff

Senate Bill 43 sets forth conditions that must be met before construction can begin on any new nuclear power plant in Vermont. It is sponsored by Senator Bill Daniels (UVM History Professor), Senator Bill Doyle (Johnson State Government Professor), and seven other senators, almost one third of the Senate.

The bill is already controversial with heavy opposition expected from utility companies and out of state manufacturers of nuclear equipment.

The bill would establish a committee of legislators and officials to determine if three conditions had been met. The conditions are:

(1) Comprehensive testing of all safety systems. The safety of American nuclear plants depends on a complex system of safety devices, especially the emergency core cooling system (ECCS). If normal cooling water is lost through a pipe rupture, the ECCS must work if disaster is to be averted.

The ECCS has never been fully tested. In fact many of the AEC's own safety experts believe that the effectiveness of the ECCS has not been demonstrated.

(2) Safe storage of radioactive wastes. At present, there are no known ways to dispose of radioactive wastes. Some of the most deadly wastes, principally plutonium 239, must be stored for hundreds of thousands of years. At present, wastes are being temporarily stored in above ground tanks. Over 500,000 gallons of radioactive waste have leaked from tanks at one government storage site at Hanford, Washington.

Is it ethical for us to produce these materials for a brief period when they will pose a serious threat to the safety of the next thousand generations? Are we likely to have the social stability to guarantee that virtually none of this radioactivity will escape? Is it possible to avoid serious human error over such a long period of time?

(3) Removal of limits on insurance recovery from nuclear accident. In the event of a nuclear accident, only a small portion ($560 million) of the potential $17 billion plus damage would be covered by insurance. This is because of the Price-Anderson Act, a federal law which exempts utilities from liability in the event of an accident at one of their plants.

Insurance companies are the shrewdest judges of risk around, and they are clearly skeptical of nuclear power. Of the $560 million insurance, insurance pools only provide about $110 million of coverage; the rest is picked up by the federal government (i.e. the taxpayer). If nuclear power is as safe as claimed by the AEC, there should be no problem with eliminating these limitations and providing for full recovery by the victims of an accident.

Dumb, Dumber, Dumbness: The Extent Of Functional Illiteracy

(CPS) – What's it like in a world papered with books, newspapers, magazines, forms and notices not to be able to read? What do you do if you can't understand your college textbook, figure out your income taxes or follow the qualification requirements in a help-wanted ad?

According to a number of recent surveys more and more Americans, much to their disadvantage, are finding out.

"Functional illiteracy," or the inability to communicate and accomplish tasks within a basic level of competency and clarity, has won a prominent place in the lexicon of contemporary American education.

—And unfortunately its applications have been widespread, stretching across all levels of education and not confined to one race or family income.

– One study, due for release in a few months, found that 36 per cent of its sample, given an income tax form and information about dependents were unable to read, write or compute well enough to enter the correct number of exemptions in the appropriate block.

– Another study of adults with 10.5 years average schooling found that their average reading and computation level equaled a fifth grade education.

– A third survey of college department chairpersons found widespread, though not universal concern that "students are coming from high school with a far less firm grasp on fundamentals than before – middle class as well as disadvantaged students."

Results from this last study coincided with remarks from the executive secretary of the Modern Language Association, who stated: "My impression is that on a national level we have failed – have continued to fail – to meet the challenge of illiteracy among college-level students."

At Maine's Bowdoin College, increasing concern that students were "incapable of expressing a coherent train of thought in written form" led the school to request a written essay as part of its student application process.

The college's faculty and administration singled out athletes, middle class students from progressive schools and the poor from deficient high schools as those who most frequently comprised the group of inept writers.

"One third of the papers and exams I receive," said one history professor, "are written by students whom I consider functionally illiterate. I simply cannot correct for both the historical content of the work and for grammar."

In a similar move the College Entrance Examination Board recently included a "Test of Standard Written English" as a regular part of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT).

The bid to more specifically and accurately analyze writing skills came after a general ten year decline in SAT mathematics and English scores.

Concern over poor writers and readers has extended beyond academia. Textbook manufacturers, for example, are encouraging college textbooks to be written at lower than previous reading levels.

McGraw-Hill now asks authors to write college textbooks at the eighth and ninth grade levels of reading.

A spokesperson for the book publishers defended the move, saying, "We're not talking so much about just lowering the (reading) level of the books as we are (about) making the points a little clearer."

For many Americans outside of college, though, "clarity" isn't so much the issue as is the lack of basic reading, writing, speaking and listening skills.

According to US Commissioner of Education Terrel Bell only 56 percent of American adults are able to match personal qualifications to job requirements when shown a series of newspaper help-wanted ads, and one fifth cannot read an "equal opportunity" notice well enough to understand it.

In addition Bell said that about 39 million Americans could not locate the deduction for social security on a monthly earnings statement.

The study cited by Bell is the first national assessment of the performance of adults on a number of objective skills judged necessary to "survival in American society."

Bell expressed particular concern for those on the bottom of the "survival skills" ratings. "If they cannot cope now," Bell said, "the next decade will find them lower on the totem pole scale, and with them their families."

Think "how it must feel," the education commissioner said, "to be 25 years old and unable to fill out a work application, open a savings account or read instructions for using an electrical appliance."

We invite all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arias, George Georgaklis, Andy Morse, Andrey Rothstein, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Joe Kauffman, Adelainde Murphy, Paul Prior, Marsha Woletz.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Barry Seldon, Scott Skinner.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov.
PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rick Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Barney, Barbara Brown, John Lunde.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published, yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

From Miami Beach:

From the diary of Miami Beach, Flor
January 15, 1975

Metamorphosis. Three months ago I was Oakland, California. Two weeks before that I w slob in New York City. A month before that I w in Wichita. Now I am enjoying a wonderful vacat Beach with my three lovely children and my ve and charming wife. Who knows what tomorrow Who knows why yesterday was? Who knows an me.

From the diary o
Miami Beach, Flo
January 16, 1975

Why does everybody come down h
Condominiums and hotels stacked along this m packed with ancient bodies waiting for their nu called. The Senility State. There are more old here than oranges.

Enjoying a shrimp cocktail at dinner last nigh to look over at the table next to ours and following spectacle. An elderly man was maneuver a spoonful of borsch from a bowl in into his mouth when his body went slack (as if pulled out his plug) and he fell forward, bent plunging his face splosh into his soup. The peop found this extremely amusing and judging from this man must have been known to do anything few minutes later, with the man still face down scared silence replaced the laughter and that was one of the diners finally summoned the maitre lifeguard the maitre de was at a loss as to w action to take but he had enough sense to grab t by the hair and remove it from the bowl. A doct administered mouth to mouth resuscitation, to man had drowned. A bus boy cleared away the the dirty dishes. Incidents like this make reading on the obituary pages of the Miami paper

A horrible story? No. You get used to it do drop like flies. Everywhere. In the hotel swimming pool. In the supermarkets. In their want to gamble, go to Las Vegas. If you want go to San Francisco. If you want to be crazy, go
If you want to die, come to Miami. This is the
It offers sunshine and warm water and lot company. This is the last resort and everybody does everybody come down here to die, I mean die in Pittsburgh?

From the diary
Miami Beach,
January 17, 19

I was wed once before and that was in a aborted not long after it was started and shor time to consummate the marriage. Such is life first real marriage. My wife is very beautiful an name is Katherine Lewis Bell. She likes to Katherine is too common she claims. I love and she loves my nose.

Although I met her only two months ago
we have been happily married for ten years.
elevator while at college. Waiting for the elev
I was drunk and she was very pretty. The doo both got on. I started singing some song and K the chorus. When the elevator stopped at her f and being rather drunk and clumsy knocked
We fell out of the elevator and right into love

She said that since she was in high sch that someone would come along and love he (whatever that means) and be her man. She nights when she was alone in bed turning unable to sleep because she was aching, think would never come. She told me about the ni in bed with another body on top of her, act and being lonelier than if she had been there some fumbling idiot humping her, she painted imaginary lover on the ceiling and wondered i ever come. Then there was me. Her man. Me, doesn't know who I am. I don't know who wonderful thing.

From the dia
Miami Beach,
January 17,

Kitty and I went dancing last night at the
We sat at a table with a psychiatrist and his w Phobius Nelson, from South Orange, New Je in conversation that I had unsuccessfully be up cigarettes. The good doctor said that fo had smoked a pack and a half a day but had n past five years. Of course I was expected to I asked. The doctor replied that he had realize searching that his latent fear of castration w problem. The anxiety of his work and the n childhood added fuel to the already blazin neurosis. All his fears and doubts were disgu symbol of the cigarette. He decided to be a and confront the problem directly. He ate cigarette. He put a lit cigarette in his mouth then swallowed it. He hasn't had a smoke didn't surprise me. What did surprise me wa
Mrs. Nelson has gone off to the ladies room placed his hand on the inside of my thigh thought that he could help me with my pr figured he was implying that I could help that maybe we should get together tomor steam room and talk about it. I was polite captain of the shuffleboard team and that tomorrow afternoon and besides I said I th wise for him to get his fucking hand out of he ended up with a pack of lit cigarettes claimed the doctor down and when the w took off with his wife explaining that he h rest because he planned to work out in the
was no liar.

The band started to play "Blue Moon," tunes so Kitty and I got up to dance. As we me about the time she had been to a psych before we had met, the summer after her college. She was nervous as hell and felt li down a dark little hole and was trapped narrow pipe where no one could hear a wor also a virgin and felt that that was someth
During her third visit to the psychiatris doctor thought that he could solve her p with, as they say in the trade, a little phy helped her realize that her problems were n other people ... namely her doctor's. W placed the better part of her knee into th and he slipped (a Freudian slip?) into a floor.

ers

Editor

tion Dillusion

stated in the motion calling for dissolution. Therefore, the executive branch will not act upon any business which would normally go through the legislative branch. We cannot accept the functions and duties of the dissolved senate, for too much control would then be in too few hands. The dissolution of the senate creates a golden opportunity to improve student government at UVM! It is essential to act quickly yet carefully to restructure the Student Association Government. Rarely does a senate of any student government dissolve, but its occurrence here may really help strengthen the UVM Student Association.

Peter MacAusland
S.A. President

ll Whizzer

who indulge and it could not possibly be distinguished over the noisy haze of the den. An outsider (like Hank McCloy) looking in could not identify with the delight of challenging that allusive silver ball. As pinball is such an established folkway, I wager that a pinball tournament at UVM would be a well-received attraction. I challenge you, Hank McCloy, on the Big Indian at Tut's.

With something vital at stake, I am very sincerely yours,

Ted Pickering

l Decide?

ONT CYNIC

Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry ...olden, Scott Skinner.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rothkov.
PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rick Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Barney, Barbara Brown, John Laslle.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

From Miami Beach: Three Sheets To The Wind

From the diary of Kleras Bell
Miami Beach, Florida
January 15, 1975

Metamorphosis. Three months ago I was a midget in Oakland, California. Two weeks before that I was an obese slob in New York City. A month before that I was a lineman in Wichita. Now I am enjoying a wonderful vacation in Miami Beach with my three lovely children and my very beautiful and charming wife. Who knows what tomorrow will bring? Who knows why yesterday was? Who knows anything? Not me.

From the diary of Kleras Bell
Miami Beach, Florida
January 16, 1975

Why does everybody come down here to die? Condominiums and hotels stacked along this majestic beach packed with ancient bodies waiting for their numbers to be called. The Senility State. There are more old people down here than oranges.

Enjoying a shrimp cocktail at dinner last night, I happened to look over at the table next to ours and witness the following spectacle. An elderly man was preparing to maneuver a spoonful of borsch from a bowl in front of him into his mouth when his body went slack (as if someone had pulled out his plug) and he fell forward, bent at the waist, plunging his face sploshing into his soup. The people at the table found this extremely amusing and judging from their reactions this man must have been known to do anything for a laugh. A few minutes later, with the man still face down in the bowl, a scared silence replaced the laughter and that was broken when one of the diners finally summoned the maitre de. Being no lifeguard the maitre de was at a loss as to what course of action to take but he had enough sense to grab the man's head by the hair and remove it from the bowl. A doctor arrived and administered mouth to mouth resuscitation, to no avail. The man had drowned. A bus boy cleared away the dead man with the dirty dishes. Incidents like this make for interesting reading on the obituary pages of the Miami papers.

A horrible story? No. You get used to it down here. They drop like flies. Everywhere. In the hotel lobby. In the swimming pool. In the supermarkets. In their soup. If you want to gamble, go to Las Vegas. If you want to be groovey, go to San Francisco. If you want to be crazy, go to New York. If you want to die, come to Miami. This is the Death Capital. It offers sunshine and warm water and lots and lots of company. This is the last resort and everybody knows it. Why does everybody come down here to die, I mean who wants to die in Pittsburgh?

From the diary of Kleras Bell
Miami Beach, Florida
January 17, 1975

I was wed once before and that was in a story that Elliot aborted not long after it was started and shortly before I had time to consummate the marriage. Such is life. So this is my first real marriage. My wife is very beautiful and charming. Her name is Katherine Lewis Bell. She likes to be called Kitty. Katherine is too common she claims. I love her cheekbones and she loves my nose.

Although I met her only two months ago she tells me that we have been happily married for ten years. We met on an elevator while at college. Waiting for the elevator in the lobby I was drunk and she was very pretty. The doors opened and we both got on. I started singing some song and Kitty joined in on the chorus. When the elevator stopped at her floor, I kissed her and being rather drunk and clumsy knocked both of us over. We fell out of the elevator and right into love. Very romantic.

She said that since she was in high school she dreamed that someone would come along and love her, really love her (whatever that means) and be her man. She told me about nights when she was alone in bed turning and twisting and unable to sleep because she was aching, thinking that her man would never come. She told me about the nights that she lay in bed with another body on top of her, acting out orgasms and being lonelier than if she had been there all alone. With some fumbling idiot humping her, she painted portraits of an imaginary lover on the ceiling and wondered if her man would ever come. Then there was me. Her man. Me, of all people. She doesn't know who I am. I don't know who she is. Love is a wonderful thing.

From the diary of Kleras Bell
Miami Beach, Florida
January 17, 1975

Kitty and I went dancing last night at the Flamingo Room. We sat at a table with a psychiatrist and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Phobius Nelson, from South Orange, New Jersey. It came up in conversation that I had unsuccessfully been trying to give up cigarettes. The good doctor said that for fifteen years he had smoked a pack and a half a day but had not had one in the past five years. Of course I was expected to ask how he did it. I asked. The doctor replied that he had realized after deep soul searching that his latent fear of castration was the root of his problem. The anxiety of his work and the nagging guilt of his childhood added fuel to the already blazing bonfire of his neurosis. All his fears and doubts were disguised in the phallic symbol of the cigarette. He decided to be a man and be brave and confront the problem directly. He ate a cigarette. A lit cigarette. He put a lit cigarette in his mouth and chewed it and then swallowed it. He hasn't had a smoke since then, which didn't surprise me. What did surprise me was when Kitty and Mrs. Nelson had gone off to the ladies room, the good doctor placed his hand on the inside of my thigh and said that he thought that he could help me with my problem (although I figured he was implying that I could help him with his) and that maybe we should get together tomorrow down in the steam room and talk about it. I was polite and said that I was captain of the shuffleboard team and that there was a match tomorrow afternoon and besides I said I thought it might be wise for him to get his fucking hand out of my crotch before he ended up with a pack of lit cigarettes in his mouth. This calmed the doctor down and when the women returned he took off with his wife explaining that he had to get plenty of rest because he planned to work out in the gym tomorrow. He was no liar.

The band started to play "Blue Moon," one of my favorite tunes so Kitty and I got up to dance. As we danced Kitty told me about the time she had been to a psychiatrist. It had been before we had met, the summer after her freshman year at college. She was nervous as hell and felt like she had slipped down a dark little hole and was trapped at the bottom of a narrow pipe where no one could hear a word she said. She was also a virgin and felt that that was something terribly wrong. During her third visit to the psychiatrist's office the dear doctor thought that he could solve her problem very easily with, as they say in the trade, a little physical therapy. This helped her realize that her problems were nothing compared to other peoples' ... namely her doctor's. With some force she placed the better part of her knee into the doctor's genitales and he slipped (a Freudian slip?) into a pile of pain on the floor.

From the diary of Kleras Bell
Miami Beach, Florida
January 18, 1975

Kitty and our three lovely children (Graham, a son age nine and the twin girls Liberty and Kleraxine, age seven) came down this afternoon to watch the old man play a little shuffleboard. The opposing team hailed from somewhere down in the Florida Keys and this was their last stop on an eight day tour of the Miami hotels. They were hoping to beat us and remain undefeated. They looked tough. Not only did they have matching purple and orange uniforms but each member of the team carried his own personal shuffleboard pole in an alligator skin case. The poles fit into the cases in two pieces and the guys looked like professional pool hustlers as they stood in the afternoon sun screwing the halves together. When I took off my t-shirt, Kitty came over and spread lotion on my shoulders so I wouldn't burn. The other team got a good laugh out of that but I didn't let that bother me. We were ready to start when Herman "Main Man" Klien had a heart attack and died. We had to wait fifteen minutes for an ambulance to come and get him off the court, but what was worse was that it meant that my team had to play one man short and in shuffleboard that is a bad disadvantage. My pulse quickened. My nostrils flaired. The odds were against me and I knew it and that's when the men are separated from the boys. We beat those suckers! Victory, how sweet you are.

From the desk of Elliot Freeman
Burlington, Vermont
February 1, 1975

Dearest Kleras,

Alas, how I loathe February! Just twenty eight days and it is the longest month of the year. Stuck smack in the cold dead center of winter, this month February creeps along at a pace just a touch faster than backwards. It wears on me heavy... my teeth have turned green, my hair has grown long and unkept, twisted in knots and tangled with crud, my body is weak and my bones brittle and breaking. The worst news of all, my sanity has left me in search of greener pastures and I am left here in the north country raving stark bananas mad! Alas, how I loathe February.

I am crazy, I admit that. But you see once you admit that you are crazy, you aren't really crazy. People who are really crazy don't know they are crazy, they think they are sane. That is what makes them really crazy. I am crazy. That admission is the first step to a healthy recovery. That is what my doctor told me. He said the journey of a thousand miles begins with one step. True words of encouragement.

Well enough of these far-fetched fantasies. Let's get down to business. As for what is in store for you my friend, I am afraid that your vacation in Miami has come to an end. I have a story to write and I can't have my main character putzing around Miami Beach playing shuffleboard and doodling with his wife and kids. Tomorrow afternoon, at around two o'clock, a young man by the name of Barry Montpelier will pick you up in front of the hotel. Be prepared to do some traveling and goddamn it be there on time. That is all that I can tell you right now. Don't worry, the three lovely children and the very beautiful and charming wife will be well taken care of. Trust me.

Elliot Freeman

••••••••••••

Editor's Note: Join us two weeks from today when Three Sheets to the Wind continues and you will hear Kleeras Bell ask Barry Montpelier, "Are you sure this stuff is christian science and not just bad chemistry?"

Can The Human Race Survive?

by Luther MacNair
A Member of the Community

Various periods of history have received names: e.g., the Renaissance, the Reformation, the Enlightment. The period in which we live could most aptly be named the Age of Human Survival (?). Or, perhaps, the Age of Human Survival or Extinction.

For the Human Race is beset by problems which threaten its annihilation. We are rapidly polluting the air and poisoning the water and destroying the land and recklessly consuming the scarce and nonrenewable resources of this vulnerable planet. And now we find we're destroying the protective layer of ozone in the upper atmosphere by H-bomb blasts, aerosol spray cans and exhaust from supersonic planes! And plutonium is appearing in the roots of plants. And we are overpopulating it disastrously since – unless the growth is checked and the population reduced – the other problems cannot be solved. (If we are in trouble now, what will we do when the population has doubled – as it is scheduled to, unless prevented, by the end of this century!)

Furthermore, we are doing all this so fast that time has become an element in itself – the all-important element. Ecologists tell us that we have but a short time before these problems become insoluble and that unless they are solved human history from now on will be measured in "decades, not in centuries or half-centuries": e.g., that the oceans will be dead in thirty years (at the present rate of pollution) and that Humanity will soon follow the oceans since they supply 70 to 90 percent of the earth's oxygen. So little time! So much to do!

It would seem that Marxists and Christians alike would do well to revise their timetables and their strategies. Christians have, except for certain minor sects whose theologies envisage cataclysms, looked forward to creating a Kingdom of Heaven on earth by a process of gradualism (changing one soul after another) over a period of how many thousands of years? And Marxists have thought of the transition from Capitalism to Communism in terms of a historical era – 100 years? 500 years? And now – 30 years? 40 years? 50 years?

It becomes very clear that no nation can solve these lethal problems by itself. No matter what steps the U.S. takes to eliminate pollution of air and water, they will be useless unless the British, Germans, French, Soviets, Chinese, etc. take similar steps. It is obvious, then, that the problems are global and can be solved only on a global basis.

In fact, it becomes clear that human survival is possible only if we make this One Earth with One Family, the Human Family, living on it and using all its brains, energy and resources collectively and cooperatively to make and keep the Planet viable.

Obviously, this requires enormous quantities of social change both internationally and domestically in each country. It means, also, that every institution, custom, habit and mode of operation must be in line with the above or must give way to those that are conducive to survival.

War must go – all wars since they could escalate to hydrogen warfare and the destruction of Humanity. Even if wars should remain "conventional," they are enormously destructive of the already scarce materials (to say nothing of human life). Furthermore, wars must go since, if we continue fighting, we are postponing and making more difficult the cooperation which is essential to survival.

Armaments and preparations for war must go, since they use up scarce resources and brains that are required for survival. We cannot afford to waste our scientists on more and more deadly means of destruction. Science and all the scientists must be organized for the purpose of finding solutions to our problems.

Imperialism must go for kindred reasons. And racism. And sexism. And competition (aside from competition in sports, games, etc.) for any purpose except promotion of the welfare of all.

You say it can't be done? Then you've just condemned the Human Race to death.

Attending His First Gay Dance

by Peter Campbell

It was a struggle up the slushy path to Redstone Campus, and as Ernest's boots contended with the wetness, his mind ruminated on what he was about to witness: the first gay dance ever held on this campus – and he was to record it for posterity. He envisioned someone reading a microfilm print of his article one hundred years from now. Ernest was optimistic about the future and confident of his place in it. Better to be stored away on microfilm than to be a decapitated statue or a gravestone for dogs to piss on.

History – after all, New Hampshire had its governor try to impound their University funds just because the gay students wanted to hold a dance on campus. Ernest was glad that Vermont did not have red-neck assholes like that running things. New Hampshire was different than Vermont: Gloomy woods and Gloomy Factories. The people probably did not live very well over there either. He pictured pale, malnourished beings, eating TV dinners and smashing up snowmobiles.

Vermont was somehow healthier – a well kept garden in God's world, with decent, gentle folk who raised their own vegetables and made pottery in their spare time.

Ernest shivered. His boots (a gift of his ex-brother-in-law) leaked. He recalled with pleasure the first time he put them on. The boots made him feel big. They were heavy and solid. Even though the leather was worn soft, and had split apart like the lines in an old woman's face, Ernest was still very fond of his old boots. In fact, the older his clothes were, the more Ernest liked them. Old clothes made him closer to nature.

Homosexuals were only somewhat strange to Ernest. He had lived part of his life on the Cape Cod shore near Provincetown, a well known haven for homosexuals. Indeed, the homosexuals were so entrenched there, they had marched in the town's annual Fourth of July parade right along with the vets and firemen as long as he could remember. Even the man who collected Ernest's trash was queer. But he knew them particularly from working in the restaurants. Ernest felt that some were decent and some were not; some were interesting and some were dull. But they were hard workers, and beneath the pliant surfaces of their personalities, he sensed a strong will to survive. "Not many homosexuals would end up in skidrow," he mused.

Of course he laughed at them, he and his friends, who worked in restaurants, too. Often they would tell fag stories. Ernest would tell how the head cook, Jimmy, wanted to cut an ad for wigs out of Ernest's New York Times, and someone else would describe two that came in the night before carrying identical pink purses. Then the imitations of limp wrists and mincing steps would ensue, often taking place over gin and tonics; getting drunk felt good then, and it was hotter than hell in those restaurants. They laughed, for as Ernest stated it, "they were women's minds trapped in men's bodies." This was said in a serious tone, and met by sober nods in that manner people get when they are wetting their lips over a light subject, suddenly turned serious and troubling. Liasons with girls were still occasional and frustrating at best, and at this juncture in the conversation a thought would circle in their heads. Voices would taunt inside; there would be strange images for a few exasperating moments, and they would grimace. But then their minds would move to something warm and soft, and someone would say, "Boy, I could never be queer."

Ernest was just a thin-skinned boy then, but since then he had seen a lot of the world, and had been to several years of college. Now he knew better. Homosexuals were not simply "women's minds in men's bodies;" they were something apart from that though he was not sure what. Also, there were female homosexuals, and bi-sexuals, who were something else again. Some seemed masculine; others feminine, while others seemed neither. Just like heterosexuals. And these categories would space off into an infinity of individual mannerisms.

"The only valid generalization one may make about homosexuals is that they sexually prefer people of their own sex, while I prefer people of the opposite sex." Ernest had been saying that a lot lately. He explained to his close friends that he did not want to be a voyeur at the dance, so he was going to participate fully. Then Ernest would think about the parties he used to go to when he was in junior high school. Would it be like those days, when the overwhelming newness of body-contact made him shake and stiffen as he stumbled red-face over his partner's feet? Or would it feel surprisingly nice and cozy with a resulting hard-on? The former would be embarrassing, but the latter would mean facing indeterminable consequences.

He was getting closer to the gym. He had lived on Redstone campus his freshman year and had been fond of the walk. There was an Indian summer that fall, and he remembered going to his eight-o'clock behaviorial psychology class on sunny mornings when a golden autumn burned on the distant mountains. As he gazed at them, he would be filled with a longing.

A girl smiled at him on the path and later they held each other close when the snow was on the ground. But she left in the spring when the snow melted, and he was relieved. He had visited her recently on his way to some friends in northern New Hampshire, and as she spoke in detached and barely audible tones about the ugly demise of her latest love affair, Ernest knew that somehow he was linked in her mind to this male monster she was describing. He left as soon as he could. He had wanted to comfort her and tell her something he had never told her before, but he knew it was not the right time; her reply would have been bitter, or worse, indifferent.

He approached the new music building. It loomed out of the night, a concrete mass that still defied definitive shape. Ernest wondered if the building would be nice or ugly, say as ugly as the Marsh-Austin-Tupper dorm complex or the new Living-Learning Center. No, they would surely try to give a music building more aesthetic appeal. As for now, it looked like a parasite preying on the Southwick Gymnasium, the object of his destination. Southwick was the most elegant gymnasium that Ernest had ever been in. White walls and high ceilings with marble stairs that spiraled up to the second floor.

Yes, the gay movement was a good thing. After the

(continued on page ten)

Thoughts And Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

Remember when you were a kid and you used to watch those three zany characters, the Three Stooges, make a habit out of bopping people on the heads and poking out their eyes. Well Larry Fine, the guy whose hair was constantly ripped out, passed on the other day. For the sake of a thousand "Pick two's", "The Three Stooges Meet Hercules", and children both young and old everywhere, he deserves a mention.

How's this for the modest ending of a book: "And now since this book is really me, what is my greatest hope and my wildest and most ambitious dream for it? Only this: that when all the dissertations on abstract art shall have been reduced to finicky footnotes in neglected tomes full of pretentious scholarship, I shall be patiently waiting under a willow tree while the burning adolescent who brought me along in his sweaty hands will be neglecting me for the sweeter glory of fumbling his gigglish but complaisant girl friend in the tall, fragrant summer grass, somewhere!" (Alexander King)

A robbery at a swanky society ball on the upper East Side of Manhattan relieved one perplexed dame on the upper East Side of three hundred thousand dollars worth of jewelry. Forgive me M'am, but why would anyone want to wear three hundred thousand dollars worth of stones around the neck?

Sure would be nice to see one of those carefree spring days when the sun beats gently, and every bone in your body feels reborn. Wouldn't you like one of them right now?

Looks bad for snipers. A sheriff from Alabama has devised footlong remote-control planes which can go up to speeds of seventy-five miles per hour and can dislodge smoke bombs and tear gas canisters into the vicinity of a shooting sniper. This will prevent the loss of both innocent bystanders and police themselves, since they will not have flush the sniper out. In case you're wondering what one of these little babies goes for, you can get one at Gayne's for $450.

What is music anyhow? Webster says music is the art or science of harmonic sounds. To my way of thinking, (others might disagree), music is when you feel a rhythm or a beat and express what you feel in a pattern of sounds. So if you tap a couple of metal spoons in a cohesive pattern, you're a creator of a type of music.

One of the best athletes to come off the UVM campus was a former Red Sox pitcher by the name of Jack "Tomatoes" Lamabe who played under the reigns of Johnny Pesky with such immortals as Dick Stuart, Frank Malzone, Lou Clinton, and Roman Mejias. Where have all the great ones gone!

Newly elected Senator Dale Bumpers of Arkansas remarked humorously to newsmen about an episode which occurred during his first week in Congress. He was served a dinner course at some restaurant and received only one wad of butter. Upon request for a second wad, he received a blunt "No." Senator Bumpers looked the waitress right in the eye and said, "Do you know who I am!" She glanced at him for a few moments and then said "No." "I'm a United States Senator." The waitress smiled. "Do you know who I am?" she queried. "No," he replied. "I'm the keeper of the butter."

Whatever happens with B.U. and Northeastern over the weekend, the 8-7 win over UNH has to go on record as one of the most exciting games ever. Nice going Cats!

Saying for the week: I'm so good at being noble but it doesn't take much to see that the problems of three little people aren't worth a hill of beans in this crazy world. (Rick Casablanca)

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Linda: "Is There A College Here?"

by Robert Wasserman

Linda Ronstadt and Tom Rush each have a special type of job - being musicians. This vocation should bring enjoyment to the performer and his or her audience. Last Tuesday night, Linda Ronstadt and Tom Rush went to work to fulfill an obligation and pick up a few bucks, but little else.

Not having listened to much of their material beforehand gave me the advantage of being pretty much objective. Also, it must be conceded that not being able to recognize any songs made it more difficult to get into the music.

Having stated this I'll get down to the facts as they stand. From what little I had heard of Tom Rush prior to the show, I enjoyed his acoustic solo work the most. He came out with a band and played most of his stuff with these guys. The music reminded me very much of a poor high school band playing their first dance. The guitarist must have learned his rock leads out of a Mel Bay book. Songs like, "Drivin' Wheel" and "Ladies Love Outlaws" elicited a smattering of recognition from the crowd. Perhaps if the crowd had not been so sedate throughout both groups' performances (I saw only a few people on their feet boogying), the performers might have woken up and started earning the $5.50 general admission price we forked out. Then again, had the performers been awake themselves we just might have sat up and looked attentive. Well, back to Mr. Rush. I felt the best material he did was without the band. Rush's guitarist's leads on acoustic were fairly tasty while on electric they were as interesting as an economics lecture. Tom's solo work was lack-luster but honest. It seemed a lot more real than his "pretend" rock band. One song Tom did was a kind of talking blues tune which showed his earthy sense of humor and momentarily sparked some audience awareness. Rush came back for his required encore, split, and I went to alleviate my boredom on line in the bathroom.

Back in my seat I was all set to rock to Ronstadt, when what happened? She let me down! I'm sure part of the reason I didn't get into her performance that much was her overwhelmingly country sound (not to be confused with bluegrass, which to me is miles apart). Her band was very tight and the musicians were fairly good, highlighted by two pedal steel players who also played electric guitar. They were exciting but were never given a chance to extemporize or jam. Every song was very professional and very mediocre. Linda's voice is very powerful but I'd prefer listening to a Mitchell, Muldaur or Raitt. I realize that's a totally subjective view but the crowd seemed to agree to her indistinctiveness by their lack of enthusiasm. Linda attempted to gain some rapport with the audience by telling us about her tour in Hank Williams' bus, complete with all kinds of photos of Hank plastered on the walls inside. I knew she was leading up to something, as she proceeded to play one of Hank's songs. She blew any hope of swaying the crowd to her favor by blurting out, "Is there a college around here somewhere?"

I know people who have seen her before who have said she was much more exciting than her recent stint in Burlington. But if Linda Ronstadt and Tom Rush view music as a job and touring as a chore, perhaps it's time to take a good long look at why they're performing altogether.

Macbett Wound Heals Fast

The University Players' production of Macbett was momentarily marred Friday night when the fourth performance of the play was forced to be cancelled following a bloody accident.

Craig Purinton, portrayer of General Banco, became the unwitting target of a miscalculated knife wound, a gash which required fourteen stitches to mend. Another actor playing the role of a coarse, war-hardened soldier called for him to murder a lemonade seller. Unfortunately, Craig, one of four generals sitting near the "killing," inadvertently interfered in the course of the dagger as it approached the intended "victim." The knife was swung in a wide, side-arm arc and caught Craig in the side of his head.

Those fellow actors who witnessed the accidental stabbing overcame their initial shock in the stoical way good actors usually react to incidents uncalled for in the script. "It was a terrible, horribly upsetting coincidence," one actress remarked who saw the accident happen from off-stage. "Yet everyone responded in an orderly, organized way despite the hectic, chaotic situation we were unexpectedly thrown into."

Craig proved the most heroic of all. He remained in his role for as long as he was allowed and would have finished the play, had he been permitted to. After receiving the wound, he stumbled, left the stage and returned for a long soliloquy. Visibly large pools of blood collected on the stage floor before he completed his speech and exited by order of the director. Peter Kurth as Macbett then recited the remainder of Craig's lines in that scene, expertly improvising and working the adopted extra lines smoothly into the plot. The UVM Rescue Squad was meanwhile applying first aid to Craig's head. Banoc reappeared before the audience wearing a white bandage, already red with blood, and played out his role to the intermission at the end of Act One.

A doctor's analysis of Craig's injury confirmed the director's assumption that the play would have to be called off. Director Chip Towers announced to the audience immediately prior to the scheduled start of Act Two that one of the actors had been injured and the show could not go on. The audience was given the choice of returning for the performance postponed to Monday night or receiving a refund of the ticket price. Approximately 40 out of 350 audience members collected their money. No one was disgruntled or annoyed and, on the contrary, appeared very concerned and understanding. Several people who could not attend the rescheduled performance because of previously planned engagements donated their ticket fees to the theatre.

The incident has not marred the flawless success of the production and, if anything, will cause greater praise of the play's merits. When a freak accident as serious as a stab wound in the head fails to disrupt actors' confidence, audience attraction and the play's continuity, that says quite a lot about the quality and value of the play as a whole.

First Fields Film Friday

The screen classic You Can't Cheat an Honest Man starring the great comedian W.C. Fields, opens the Lane Film Society Series "W.C. Fields Movie Festival" on Friday, Feb. 7, in Marsh Life Sciences Building Auditorium.

There will be two showings of the movie: 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Preceding the feature, a short, Abbot and Castello Meet the Mummy, will also be unreeled.

Starring in the 1939 feature, in addition to W.C. Fields, are Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy and Grady Sutton.

In the film, Fields as Larson E. Whipsnade, circus entrepreneur, is pursued by his creditors. To fend off his insolvency, he tries to persuade his daughter to marry a rich playboy. Among the hilarious events his circus presents "the world's smallest giant and the tallest midget." The film is loaded with very funny exchanges between Fields and his wooden menesis, Charlie McCarthy.

Tickets, $1, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman, and at the door. For reservations, tel. 656-3418.

The W.C. Fields Festival continues on Friday, Feb. 14, with the Dickens classic David Copperfield.

Earl Scruggs Plays More Than Just Bluegrass

For several years now, Earl Scruggs has been developing a no-cubbyhole, category-free, barrierless approach to music. He says about the transition, "I felt I had gone as far as I could go with the type of music I was playing a few years ago. I wanted to try some changes several years ago and expand the music, but under the circumstances that existed at the time, this was impossible. Until I formed the Earl Scruggs Revue, I was practically playing the same numbers night after night, that I had been playing for the past fifteen years or so. That in itself can get extremely monotonous, and I was stuck into a category and I could see no reason why the banjo couldn't be used in other forms of music. So, I added drums and the electric instruments to the group to give it a more contemporary sound. We still do some traditional numbers in our concerts and we have expanded it into other forms of music as well, such as blues, rock, jazz, modern country and pop."

The musical diversity of the Earl Scruggs Revue has won the band cheering audiences that number in the thousands. It's far from unusual for Earl and the Revue to set 25,000 people on their feet cheering for encores, as has been the case frequently at festivals and concerts across the United States. One of the most momentous of all these appearances and perhaps, the most significant for Earl and the group, was their now famous performance at the Washington Moratorium (for Peace) in 1969.

The Earl Scruggs Revue albums include the Live at Kansas State production; Dueling Banjos; Nashville's Rock; the soundtrack from the Public Broadcasting Service's Earl Scruggs: His Family and Friends featuring Earl's aforementioned friends who performed with him on the television special I Saw the Light, a production which featured another grouping of Scruggs' friends and fans like Linda Ronstadt and such stellar personalities as Stacey Belson and Arloff Bogusiavky; the album entitled The Earl Scruggs Revue and the recent Columbia release Rockin' Cross The Country.

Top music critics agree on the talent and the abilities of the performing talents of the Earl Scruggs Revue.

San Francisco Chronicle (John L. Wasserman): "I doubt there is another band in any form of American popular music that is better, man for man, than the Earl Scruggs Revue."

Los Angeles Times (Robert Hilburn): "The group is quite simply the best, most assured combination of traditional and contemporary music ideas that I've seen."

Cash Box (Arty Goodman): "An Earl Scruggs Revue performance is truly a joy to behold."

Featured on his new album are Charlie Daniels, Linda Ronstadt, Alvin Lee, Bonnie Bramlett, Roger McGuinn, The Marshall Tucker Band.

The concert will be held Sunday, February 9 at 8 p.m. Patrick Gym, set up so that bleachers face the stage. Tickets $3 with ID (available at the bookstore) and $4 General (available at the bookstore and Bailey's). The opening act will be John Cassel with a 10 piece band.

Guitarist Parkening To Serenade UVM

The classical guitarist Christopher Parkening – called by Andres Segovia "one of the most brilliant guitarists in the world" – will perform in the Lane Series on Thursday, February 13, 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

Parkening's Lane Series program will include numbers by such standard composers as Handel, Bach, Ravel, Debussey and Scarlatti, and also by the Spanish composers Tarraga, Turina, and Sor.

Now in his mid-twenties this American artist has firmly established himself as an "impeccable classic guitarist, perhaps the finest technician on this instrument this country has yet produced" (New York Times) in recitals and as orchestral soloist in many major cities of the U.S. and Canada, in London and other big cities of England, in Amsterdam, Tokyo, Paris, and Barcelona, he has consistently certified his sterling reputation.

During the current season, Christopher Parkening is performing an impressive series of prestigious engagements and re-engagements. These include the Los Angeles Philharmonic in the Hollywood Bowl, the Houston Symphony, the Pittsburgh Symphony, Chicago's Ravinia Festival and such colleges as UCLA, Dartmouth, Yale, Notre Dame, Stanford, Michigan State – and the University of Vermont.

In addition to playing over 60 concerts a year, both in recital and with orchestras, Parkening is a full-time instructor and head of the Guitar Department at the University of Southern California. He conducts a regular class and also a monthly master class.

In subsequent years, Christopher took up academic and musical studies at the University of Southern California and worked with Segovia in master classes at Berkeley and North Carolina.

Only a handful of tickets, $3 each and located in the transepts, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman.

The next Lane concert will be the world-famed Quartetto Italiano in a program of Bocherini, Beethoven and Bach. The concert will be held on Tuesday, February 18, at 8 p.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel.

CAINE MUTINY
FREE
Monday Night
Feb. 17
Cook B106
7:30 PM
Sponsored by the UVM Sailing Club

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6
SHOWBOAT (1936) – Paul Robeson
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7
LET IT BE (1970) – The Beatles
A HARD DAY'S NIGHT (1964) – The Beatles
101 Votey 7:30 & 11:00 – $1

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8
BRINGING UP BABY (1938) – Katherine Hepburn
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 10
FORBIDDEN GAMES (1952) – Directed by Rene Clement
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE - NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAK
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
1210 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Study in Guadalajara, Mexico

The QUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, a fully accredited UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA program, will offer June 30 to August 9, anthropology, art, education, folklore, geography, history, government, language and literature. Tuition and fees, $190, board and room with Mexican family $245. Write to GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, 413 New Psychology, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona 85721.

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Towering Inferno
II Night Porter

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Front Page
II Swiss Family Robinson

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
Bergman's 'Skammen'
Fellini's 'Roma'

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Phantom of the Paradise

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Blazing Saddles
II Serpico — Death Wish

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Murder on the Orient Express
II The Dragon Dies Hard

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

NOW THE KING OF KUNG-FU COMES BACK TO LIFE!
THE BRUCE LEE STORY
HOW HE LIVED!
HOW HE LOVED!
HOW HE FOUGHT!
HOW HE DIED!
ALL NEW!
SEE the truth explode in...
The DRAGON DIES HARD
Showings at 2:15 & 8:30
Bargain MAT Sat & Sun 2 AM
PG
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 863-8070 ANYTIME!

Von Stade Enc

by Bob DeNike

Her voice, like a long, winding river, takes you on a journey through beautiful surroundings. She can speed you along on a rushing current, propel you over huge boulders, hurl you violently down tumultuous rapids or throw you into space and suspend you in a free fall as you plunge uncontrollably down a precipitous waterfall. You may encounter bends in your course with her as still and wide as lakes, flowing at a near standstill pace. Relax and allow her to sing you on an adventure into a majestic, Edenic land and she will show you things never before imagined on the way.

These are impressions you might have felt had you heard Metropolitan Opera singer Frederica Von Stade enchant the turn-out which, although sparse, represented at least five generations of music listeners in Ira Allen Chapel Sunday night. Empty pews were interspersed throughout, a phenomenon that became more and more irrational as the night filled with the music and stories of Mozart, Mahler, Debussey, Poulenc and Rossini drew on. Frederica brought a holiday for the emotions to Burlington, singing of love-sick adolescents, homeless children and summer picnics and bringing images so colorful and vivid to the minds of those in the audience that few could help abandoning themselves to her voice and being wafted away into a fantastical,

She wore a colored gown wh
the delicacy of voice. It revealed chest which rose and then to fill h
great volumes o
she could expel scales before havi her oxygen mastering her be thus willfully com displayed an astc
to change abru
jiggling high melancholy whispered penetratingly lou vice versa.

All the while very much a audience. Acc only a single gran were many mor
silence during eac stirring moveme detected in those
as if the audien rooted by Eric feeling equally a as she. The hou left shinin throughout creating a intimate atmosp

Yet, F effectiveness lie her acting talent
quality. Althou were sung pred combination languages (Germ Italian), she cl the meaning of
through radia

Record Review: Tal

by Paul Prior

GENESIS: The Lamb Lies Down on Broadway

A major release by a major group: Genesis' latest L.p. is a synthesis of both their best and worst points. Conceptually, the album is their most ambitious undertaking. Though the group has existed for around 5 or 6 years, they have been noticed only recently by a large U.S. audience. Even then, they have yet to receive any measure of critical success in America. This lack of success can be attributed to a number of factors: As a whole, most of their records have been less than overwhelming. The lyrics are at best undecipherable, though any one who has ever attended a Genesis Concert can attest to the fact that one must see the songs performed to understand them. What Genesis excell at can be best described as "concert soundtracks." The combination of music, the use of several slide and movie projectors, and the highly visual antics of lead singer Peter Gabriel have made the group enormously popular in Europe.

With this background, we delve into the album. Comparisions to "Tommy" or "Arthur" could be drawn in the sense that the album deals with the transformation/maturation of the protagonist, (Rael) via music and lyrics. Any comparison ends here; the story line is lost in imagery and sly plays on words; writer Gabriel's specialties. For example: "They call me the trail blazer – Rael – electric razor," or "Found a girl I wanted to date, Thought I'd better get it straight. Went to buy a book bef

At times the
the term inspi
adjective banal appropriate.

It is clearly talent which pla
on my list of
They consist solid and inv
that I find flo mind for hours
The title tune an example; a went through and again. Vas achieve this listening' taste
consideration.
songs here haunting and baroque or
Other songs
rockers and ca
the best of th

The person has changed o
their period o
line-up is now
vocals, flute,
Michael Ru
string, bass,
Stephen Hac
guitar, nylo
Banks – key
Collins – dr and vocals.
observers may Banks former Flash, only form anot mainstay. Yes
Yes until it recording of group the difference in group's direc
departure.

Reviewing been a major is very diff

LITTLE PROPHET BOOK CEN Downtown Burl
&
East Junction

DAVE'S AUTOMOT
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 96 and 9
24.95 Inc. FET & mounting
VW BUG BRAKE JOB
$49.95

...ys More ...uegrass

...mply the best, most assured combination of traditional and contemporary music ideas that I've seen."

Cash Box (Arty Goodfriend): "An Earl Scruggs Revue performance is truly a joy to behold."

Featured on his new album are Charlie Daniels, Linda Ronstadt, Alvin Lee, Bonnie Bramlett, Roger McGuinn, The Marshall Tucker Band.

The concert will be held Sunday, February 9 at 8 p.m. Patrick Gym, set up so that bleachers face the stage. Tickets $3 with ID (available at the bookstore) and $4 General (available at the bookstore and Bailey's). The opening act will be John Cazzet with a 10 piece band.

Serenade UVM

In addition to playing over 60 concerts a year, both in recital and with orchestras, Parkening is a full-time instructor and head of the Guitar Department at the University of Southern California. He conducts a regular class and also a monthly master class.

In subsequent years, Christopher took up academic and musical studies at the University of Southern California and worked with Segovia in master classes at Berkeley and North Carolina.

Only a handful of tickets, $3 each and located in the transepts, are available in the Lane Office, 234 Waterman.

The next Lane concert will be the world-famed Quartetto Italiano in a program of Boccherini, Beethoven and Bach. The concert will be held on Tuesday, February 18, at 8 p.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel.

ALL NEW MENU
NEW ATMOSPHERE - NEW SALAD BAR
THE BEST STEAKS
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
SIZZLING STEAK
WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Study in Guadalajara, Mexico
The GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, a fully accredited UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA program with offer June 30 to August 9, anthropology, art education folklore geography, history government, language and literature. Tuition and fees $190, board and room with Mexican family $245. Write to GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL, 413 Bio Psychology, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona 85721.

Von Stade Enchants Audience

by Bob Duffus

Her voice, like a long, winding river, takes you on a journey through beautiful surroundings. She can speed you along on a rushing current, propel you over huge boulders, hurl you violently down tumultuous rapids or throw you into space and suspend you in a free fall as you plunge uncontrollably down a precipitous waterfall. You may encounter bends in your course with her as still and wide as lakes, flowing at a near standstill pace. Relax and allow her to sing you on an adventure into a majestic, Edenic land and she will show you things never before imagined on the way.

These are impressions you might have felt had you heard Metropolitan Opera singer Frederica Von Stade enchant the turn-out which, although sparse, represented at least five generations of music listeners in Ira Allen Chapel Sunday night. Empty pews were interspersed throughout, a phenomenon that became more and more irrational as the night filled with the music and stories of Mozart, Mahler, Debussey, Poulenc and Rossini drew on. Frederica brought a holiday for the emotions to Burlington, singing of love-sick adolescents, homeless children and summer picnics and bringing images so colorful and vivid to the minds of those in the audience that few could help abandoning themselves to her voice and being wafted away into a fantastical, fanciful dream.

She wore a long, softly colored gown which accented the delicacy of her face and voice. It revealed an intriguing chest which rose grandly now and then to fill her lungs with great volumes of air, though she could expel measures of scales before having to recharge her oxygen supply. By mastering her breath rate and thus willfully controlling it, she displayed an astounding ability to change abruptly from a giggling high register to low, melancholy notes, from whispered softness to penetratingly loud volumes and vice versa.

All the while she remained very much aware of her audience. Accompanied by only a single grand piano, there were many moments of total silence during each piece. Not a stirring movement could be detected in those rest intervals, as if the audience were either rooted by Erica's talent or feeling equally as self-conscious as she. The house lights were left shining brightly throughout the concert, creating a personal and intimate atmosphere.

Yet, Frederica's effectiveness lies as much in her acting talent as in her vocal quality. Although her lyrics were sung predominantly in a combination of foreign languages (German, French and Italian), she clearly conveyed the meaning of each storyline through radiantly expressive facial appearances. Like a professional actress, she became the role she was portraying; not only understanding the character but feeling that person's emotions. Knowledge of many foreign tongues was not necessary to feel the love, depression and painful suffering experienced by Erica's characters. The only skill needed was knowledge of human feelings and recognition of how they manifest themselves in facial expressions. At the end of one piece, she seemed unable to free herself from the trance of a role she had psyched herself into – instead of smiling broadly in appreciation of audience applause as she had characteristically done in the opening numbers, her eyes remained dazed and a frown stayed on her lips. The audience immediately recognized this failure to pass effortlessly from one mental state to another and stifled their clapping but resumed enthusiastically when the transition was made moments later. A rivulet could be seen running down her cheek, reflected in the light.

Like most female stars, Frederica proved very beautiful, very charming, very talented and very enchanting. Yet the most attractive and appealing feature of all about her, a quality not as readily found, was that she was very, very human.

Blind Pig Meat Plays Da Blues

Martin Grosswendt stumbled into Simpson Coffee House Thursday night, hung over from an all-nighter, and gave the good-sized crowd a show worth remembering. With a combination of old southern blues and snappy tunes which resembled acoustic Hot Tuna stuff, Martin kept his audience both intrigued and amused.

"The King of the Massachusetts Delta Blues" was once again his amazing self on slide which when combined with raspy-blues voice, brought back the best of the old-time black blues. Inbetween numbers the crowd was kept amused by numerous jokes and tall stories of Martin's antics while traveling across the country, occasionally in cahoots with Utah Phillips.

After Martin's first set we were entertained by another of Aardvark's troubadour buddies, Mike O'Duna. Accompanying himself with guitar and harmonica, Mike led us through a pleasing set of mellow, original tunes which among other things showed us Martin's superiority as both a musician and crowd pleaser.

When Martin came back, he was accompanied by another guitarist, Tom Mitchell. Tom, who will be appearing at the Coffee House on February 13, showed us a various assortment of tasty bands which blended well with "The King's" slide or rhythm depending on the song. In my opinion, Martin and guys like him are a lot more entertaining than most of the big moneymakers of rock. They are totally honest, surprisingly humorous, and most of all talented. There is nothing phony or showy about their performance – just good ol' down to earth blues and boogie.

If nothing else, everyone in the house left satisfied at having spent less than a dollar for entertainment this good.

International Art Exhibit

by Mark Serafinick

This semester at UVM's Robert Hull Fleming Museum will be a busy one. Everything from modern to ancient oriental pieces will be on exhibit, along with special gallery talks and a Washington's Birthday Grand Opening Celebration.

Now on view is "American Art Since 1945," drawn from the permanent collection in the Main Gallery. "Recent Gifts to the Museum" may be seen in the Front Gallery. Of special note are the Oriental vases from China and a beautiful piece of pottery by Pablo Picasso. "The Art of the Northwest Coast" features art by Eskimos in the Canadian provinces. This appears in the Lounge Gallery. All of the above are on view until February 28th.

On March 10, "Art and the Sacred" will feature religious works from area churches and private collections. In conjunction with this, UVM students in Religious Studies will present a history of religious perspectives. On March 14, Dr. S. F. Martin, from the Philosophy Dept. of Bucknell University will present a lecture, "What is a Christian Painting?"

On March 19 a number of films will be shown at the Arena Theater (downstairs beneath Museum): "Kaleidoscope Orissa," "Mirror of Gesture," "How a Hindu Worships at his Home Shrine" and "The Sword and the Flute."

Continuing along the Oriental theme, a lecture by Dr. John Brzosposky, Professor and Director of the Center for Oriental Studies, NYU, will be given entitled "Oriental Art as a Spiritual Path." On April 4, Dr. Lowell Bloss, of William Smith and Hobart College, will present a lecture, "Early Buddhist Art."

Professor William Lipke and Mr. Gregg Blasdel have organized an exhibit with the aid of a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. It is entitled "Clarence Schmidt: Reconstructed Shrines and Architectural Environment" and opens April 14 in conjunction with an exhibition of paintings and prints by John George Brown.

The semester will close with the annual UVM Senior Show featuring work by graduating art majors.

Of particular interest are the special gallery talks given by the museum staff. February 28 will bring "Travelling in Style" by Richard H. Jenson, Museum Director. On March 16, Professor Christie Fengler and the Rev. D. P. Dailey will discuss "Art and the Sacred." Finally, on April 24, the museum staff will present "Problems and Joys of Working in a Museum."

On Washington's Birthday, a grand opening of the new installations in the Ethnographic and American Galleries featuring artifacts and other objects of interest of American Plains Indian origin.

The spring schedule at the Fleming will be a busy and varied one. Art from areas all over the world is also always on view in the permanent collection galleries. If you're new at UVM and haven't seen the museum, stop in; it offers interesting pieces covering a variety of tastes.

Fiddle Festival Scheduled For Spring

Scores of fiddlers and thousands of fiddle fans are expected to converge on the city of Burlington for the First Annual Lake Sunset Fiddlers Contest.

Memorial Auditorium will be the site of the April 19 event, first of this kind and magnitude in the Queen City.

The competition will be divided into two basic segments... afternoon eliminations and evening finals... with some special guest performers inbetween.

Among the special guest entertainers will be Fiddlin' Carl from St. Albans, the Fiddlin' Farmer of World's Fair fame... singalong banjo man, Smokey Carey of Waterbury, known to banjo and dixieland music lovers from here to Florida... and Nickelodeon, a new barbershop quartet which is rapidly becoming well-known by those who frequent the Burlington night-spots.

This type of event has a reputation of drawing a large crowd as witnessed in Barre and such remote locations as Craftsbury Common and Chelsea, Vermont. But this is the first big fiddlers contest to come to the city of Burlington... promoted by the Lake Sunset Association of Hinesburg... through the cooperation of the Champlain Fiddlers Association in Middlebury.

The gala affair will be open to "old time" and "country" fiddlin' and divided into five classes: Junior, for those age 16 or under... Senior, for age 60 or older... Intermediate, for ages 17 to 59... Open, for anyone who has won from one to five trophies in previous competitions... and Champion, for anyone having won six or more trophies.

Contestants will begin registration for the competition Saturday, April 19 at 10 a.m. On stage eliminations start at 1:00 p.m. and run until about 5:30. A supper break will be taken from 5:30 to 7:00 p.m. At 7:30 the big battle begins, the evening finals. New England's finest fiddlers will be pitted against one another on into the evening until trophies are awarded to the champs.

This will truly be a Saturday to remember!

Tickets will be on sale at such prominent locations as Bailey's in Burlington, Gleasons in South Burlington, Vermont Book Shop in Middlebury, Vermont Music in Barre, Mix Music in Montpelier, Power's Pharmacy in St. Albans, and the Grand Isle Store in Grand Isle.

Ticket prices will be $2.50 for afternoon eliminations, $3.50 for evening finals, or only $5.00 for an all-day pass.

For further details or information, contact Lake Sunset Fiddlers, Hinesburg, Vermont.

Record Review: Tales From The Ozone

by Paul Prior

GENESIS: The Lamb Lies Down on Broadway

A major release by a major group: Genesis' latest l.p. is a synthesis of both their best and worst points. Conceptually, the album is their most ambitious undertaking. Though the group has existed for around 5 or 6 years, they have been noticed only recently by a large U.S. audience. Even then, they have yet to receive any measure of critical success in America. This lack of success can be attributed to a number of factors: As a whole, most of their records have been less than overwhelming. The lyrics are at best undecipherable, though any one who has ever attended a Genesis Concert can attest to the fact that one must see the songs performed to understand them. What Genesis excell at can be best described as "concert soundtracks." The combination of music, the use of several slide and movie projectors, and the highly visual antics of lead singer Peter Gabriel have made the group enormously popular in Europe.

With this background, we delve into the album. Comparisions to "Tommy" or "Arthur" could be drawn in the sense that the album deals with the transformation/maturation of the protagonist, (Rael) via music and lyrics. Any comparison ends here; the story line is lost in imagery and sly plays on words, writer Gabriel's specialties. For example: "They call me the trail blazer – Rael – electric razor." or "Found a girl I wanted to date, Thought I'd better get it straight. Went to buy a book before's too late." At times the lyrics approach the term insipid; at times the adjective banal would be more appropriate.

It is clearly their musical talent which place Genesis high on my list of musical forces. They consistently turn out solid and inventive melodies that I find floating around my mind for hours after listening. The title tune of the album is an example; after hearing it, it went through my mind again and again. Very few groups can achieve this feat. Of course, listening taste is also a major consideration. Many of the songs here are downright haunting and tinged with a baroque or classical feeling. Other songs are unabashed rockers and can do battle with the best of the British bands.

The personnel for Genesis has changed only minimally in their period of existence. The line-up is now Peter Gabriel – vocals, flute, and percussion; Michael Rutherford – 12 string, bass, electric sitar; Stephen Hackett – electric guitar, nylon guitar; Tony Banks – keyboards; and Phil Collins – drums, percussion, and vocals. Astute musical observers may note that Tony Banks formerly played with Flash, only after helping to form another musical mainstay, Yes. He played with Yes until it came time for the recording of Fragile; he and the group then suffered a difference in opinion of the group's direction, causing his departure.

Reviewing this album has been a major task. This group is very difficult to describe musically, mainly because they have to be seen in concert for a full appreciation of the song meanings. Just the same, they remain one of the best, and most continually interesting groups around. Their new album suffers only from the weakness of any double album. Unless there is a great diversity of material, no one can sustain a musical idea for over one disk without lapsing into a sameness of either lyric or melody. There is enough first rate material here that makes it worth listening to. If you don't have any idea of what Genesis sounds like, this would be a good album to check out. Other fine works include the two previous albums, Selling England by the Pound and Genesis – Live, both released last year in the U.S. They have several other U.S. and British releases, but they can be termed "uneven" at best. Genesis must be listened to carefully to be appreciated, much like the recent works by Yes. This isn't music to keep on in the background and only half-listen to.

Special Contest This Week Only Dept. Anyone who is able to provide a coherent analysis of this album's plot will win an all-expense paid vacation for two, to Scenic Winooski, Vermont.

Comedy Duo To Tickle UVM

No, Ionesco has not fun his amusing course at UVM and is off to bigger and better times. But so is UVM. The Kampmann and Smet comedy duo will perform "Please God, Can I Go Home Now?" tonight and tomorrow in the Billings Apse at 8 p.m. Their humorous work consists of a series of original skits satirizing such varied subjects as urban blackouts, psychiatric therapy, death, and bats. The production has been hailed as "versatile, memorable and gifted; genuinely entertaining and thoughtful."

Steve Kampmann received his M.A. Degree from St. Michael's College and his colleague earned a Masters from Goddard College. They have been appearing in New England theatres for the past year and a half, coming to UVM from recent performances in Boston and Stowe.

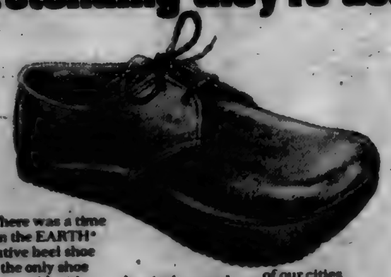
This comedy production is one that "won't make you want to go home."

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
MONDAY THRU THURSDAY
NO COVER
★ FEATURING ★
FEB. 3-8 DAVIS BROTHERS GARAGE
FEB. 10-15 BRIGHTON ROCK

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
Downtown Burlington
Essex Junction

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.
FOREIGN CAR REPAIR SPECIALISTS
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
560 X 15 Snow Tires
FITS MOST BUGS & SAAB 96 and 99's
24.95 inc. FET & mounting
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95

Why everybody's pretending they're us.



There was a time when the EARTH* negative heel shoe was the only shoe in the world with the heel lower than the toe. In those days the other people who made shoes just laughed at us.

But things have changed. And now that you love our Earth brand shoes so much, the shoe companies have stopped laughing and started copying.

But what they don't understand is this. Merely lowering the heel of a shoe isn't enough. And imitating the outside of our shoe isn't enough.

Just because a shoe looks like the Earth* shoe doesn't mean it works like the Earth shoe.

It took many years to perfect the Earth brand shoe. To get the arch just right. To make the toes wide, comfortable and functional. To balance the shoe. To mold the sole in a special way so that it will allow you to walk in a natural rolling motion. Gently and easily, even on the hard jarring concrete of our cities.

And the Earth shoe is patented. That means it can't be copied without being changed. And if it's changed it just isn't the Earth shoe.

So to be sure you're getting the Earth brand shoe, look on the sole for the Earth trademark and U.S. patent #3305947.

You'll be glad you did.

Shoes, sandals, sabots and boots for men and women. From $23.50 to $42.50.

*EARTH is a registered trademark of Kalso Systemet, Inc.

139 BANK STREET

Don't let the price of a college education stop you.

The price of a college education is skyrocketing. Fortunately the Air Force has done something to catch up with it. For the first time, the Air Force ROTC Scholarships include the 2-year program, for both men and women. If you can qualify, the Air Force will pay for the remainder of your college education. Not only do AFROTC 2-year college scholarships cover full tuition, but reimbursement for textbooks, lab and incidental fees, as well as a tax-free monthly allowance of $100.

To cash in on all this just apply, qualify, and enroll in the Air Force ROTC at Department of Aerospace Studies St. Michael's College Tel. 655-2000 Ext. 281. It's a great way to finish your college education in the money, and build a future where the sky's no limit...as an officer in the Air Force.

MAKE THE MOST OF IT

Put It All Together in Air Force ROTC

Wolfman Hops

by Earl Bodi

"Let's settle back. Man, this is just like high school!" yowled Wolfman Jack as he hopped onto center stage at the sock hop last Sunday night. Inside Patrick Gym, the time element was reverted from the sedate seventies to the frolicking fifties as pony-tailed bobby-soxers and honey-combed greasers became infected with Wolfman's enthusiasm.

Hiking boots, Addidas, top-siders, and sneakers all had the night off. They were deposited with attendants who jogged up and down the higher set of bleachers, tagging shoes and setting them in numerical order. From the shoe sanitarium, approximately 1,500 pairs of shoes looked on as the socks worked out to recordings such as "Let's Go to the Hop" and "Jailhouse Rock". Free popcorn and lemonade maintained the strength of the seemingly inexhaustible jitterbuggers.

Wolfman Jack was introduced with his theme song and expressed the excitement of appearing at Patrick Gym with, "I'm glad to be at the University of (long pause) Vermont." He had stated a desire earlier for some voluptuous girls to dance along with him on stage. Many did, along with some not-so-voluptuous guys.

The Wolfman's uniquely penetrating voice announced and sometimes accompanied tunes from 9:30 till 12:00 at which time he signed autographs with such sayings as "Be happy. Be high." For those who couldn't make it to the dance, WRUV-FM broadcasted the event. Everyone seemed to be having a good time working off their back-to-school frustrations, except for maybe the shoe attendants who are still suffering from athlete's hand.

Winter Week Continues

Tonight the Billings Center Governing Board presents Kampmann and Smet, an impromptu comedy team, 8 p.m., Billings Center Apw. The act will be repeated Friday at the same time and place.

IRA is sponsoring an ice rink near Cluttenden, Buckham and Wills halls for the weekend enjoyment of students, and at 7 p.m. Friday (Feb. 7) will host a cross country race starting in back of Gutterson Field House.

"Greek Talent Night" starts Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. All are welcome to come watch the skits. Greek alumni have been invited back for the weekend, which is highlighted by a dinner-dance Saturday (Feb. 8) evening at Marble Island.

Saturday's events include an afternoon of "winter games" on the green, starting at 12 noon and concluding at 5 p.m., hosted by the Greek Coordinating Council. At 1:30 p.m. on Redstone campus, IRA presents a "klondike race," and from 2 to 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday, Acacia and Phi fraternities are the sites of a broomball tournament. Teams may be entered by calling 656-2068.

IRA presents a dance at Maryh-Austin Tupper halls during roofit meeting at 9 p.m. Saturday. Music will be by "Tricks."

The Greek Coordinating Council wraps up its weekend by hosting Sunday brunches at the various houses, and "Winter Week '75" ends on a musical note Sunday night with an 8 p.m. concert at Patrick Gymnasium with the Earl Scruggs Revue and the John Cassel Band. Tickets are on sale at the University Store and in downtown Burlington at Bailey's Music Rooms for this S.A. Concert Bureau presentation.

Beatles Highlight SA Films

The schedule of SA Films for this week begins tonight with Showboat. This stars Kathryn Grayson, Ava Gardner, Howard Keel, Joe E. Brown and Agnes Moorehead and is based on the musical-drama by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein. This famous operetta has become a classic of the American theater. It tells the colorful story of a group of entertainers who travel the Mississippi River on a showboat at the turn of the century. The film presents a handsomely-mounted color production with beautiful period costumes and settings. The well-chosen cast does full justice to the score which includes such standards as "Bill," "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," and "Ole Man River." The film will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 tonight.

On Friday night the Beatles take over the campus in two of their best films, Let It Be and A Hard Day's Night. A Hard Day's Night was made in 1964 and directed by Richard Lester. Ostensibly a look at an average Beatle day, filled with such average things as packed press conferences, television appearances and hundreds of moaning female fans, the film manages to deflate TV, press agents, the police, all hucksters and Her Majesty's Government during the proceedings.

Included are about 15 classic Beatle songs and many zingy one liners ("What do you call that haircut?" "Arthur!") Let It Be was made in 1970 and directed by Michael Lindsay-Hogg. This is a documentary built along the same lines as A Hard Day's Night, but it stresses informality and quiet spontaneous ability in place of the wacky satire, and wild doings of the earlier film. One of the last appearances together of the group, this film finds them all looking older and a bit hairier. In the course of the film the Beatles get together for some jam sessions, play old favorites, work on new numbers, reminisce about their early days and finally have a big session on the roof of their recording studio, a session which attracts various and sundry people, including the cops. Lennon ends the film with "I want to thank you on behalf of the group, and I hope we passed the audition." Then they pass on. The films will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 11:00, with both films being shown each time. Admission is $1.

Saturday night Kathryn Hepburn returns in Bringing Up Baby, a 1938 film also starring Cary Grant, Charles Ruggles and May Robson. This was Katie's first comedy and is considered a classic of the lunatic comedies of the thirties. It was directed by Howard Hawks. The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey.

The French classic series continues on Monday with Rene Clement's anti-war masterpiece Forbidden Games. This is perhaps the greatest anti-war film since Grand Illusion, yet it does not deal with actual warfare. Two young French children become playmates during the German occupation in 1940 and they imitate the cruel adult life that surrounds them by collecting dead animals for their private cemetery. Winner of the Venice Grand Prize and the Academy Award for best foreign film, few films have matched Forbidden Games' poignant outcry against the waste of war. The New York Times called it "brilliant... devastating... extraordinary! It glows with the heat of the human heart." The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:15 in 101 Votey.

Z. Professor's Guide To Records Of The Rock Gender

This has been a very good week for the professor. Only good records have laid their delicate grooves upon my platter. But I did have the problem of facing a dylan record. A dylan record is like no other record this side of a beatles reunion album. Every album dylan puts out is a step in his evolution, a statement from a man who people look to for leadership. A man who said, "Don't follow leaders and watch your parking meters" is a man you never want to see change, and a man who changes every time he puts another record out. So "Blood on the Tracks" has to be dealt with as any other album. If it turns out to be the major musical statement of the 70's or just another excellent album, only time will tell.

There were five other albums noteworthy of being reviewed this week. To clarify my rating system: "A" means a great album and if you have an open mind everyone should appreciate it. "B" means a very good album of its type, not everyone will like it but if your taste runs that way go get it. "C" means not for everybody; actually you'd best leave it along unless you like the artist or group. "D" means play frisbee with it. The colors are recorded by a spectrograph beside my turntable.

Chris Parkening Classical Guitarist will appear Feb. 13 at Ira Allen Chapel.

BLOOD ON THE TRACKS/ bob dylan The production work is flawed and his voice doesn't shine very much on 2 songs ("Meet Me in the Morning" and "Lily, Rosemary and the Jack of Hearts.") After that it is just one of those masterpieces we always expect from Dylan. His singing voice is stronger than on the live album and a little more subdued. There's plenty of lyrics for all the neo-intellectuals to delve into. Most of the songs are lyrical love songs about homey women easing his way on the path that, if not his picking, seems to be destiny's. The burning prophetical visions of "Idiot Wind" are sung in the anger that was characteristic of his very early works. My complaint is in changing and redoing five of the songs after they were originally cut he has created a musical schizophrenia. I still think the Band works best as his backup group. My favorite song is "Shelter from the Rain." In "Idiot Wind" he says, "You never know the hurt I suffered or the pain I rise above." Maybe not Bob. Someday we'll have tea and talk about it. (A-, a poet's colors)

IN THE BEGINNING/ roy buchannan This man is the master of the Telecaster sound. A maestro and a talking block of wood. He induces it to scream, to coo, to cry and to laugh like the sustenance will never stop. This is his best album with a first class backup band (finally) and the Tower of Power horn section. Since Roy sings like he's at a church picnic he shies away from vocal duty. Bill Sheffield sings like this should be his album. My ladies, Vanetta Fields and Carlena Williams, fill the background amply. It's blues with feeling the way it should be. (B+, bent string colors)

TOTAL ECLIPSE/ billy cobham There's Billy, cookin' in the traps, a-sweatin' and a-smilin', flinging those arms and legs everywhere. You don't have to be a jazz buff to enjoy this one. Even the heaviest rock and roller will get off on this one. Billy lets the band out to roam and they go further than the rest of us ever go in daylight hours. Play it before you go to sleep; see what happens to your dreams. Or impress your friends with your taste in progressive jazz. (A, solar colors)

COUNTRY LIFE/ roxy music It takes a long time to like Roxy Music. I think it's American sensibilities. Bryan Ferry may be the matinee idol of Britain, but I have a hard time digesting his vocals. I can take Roxy in small dishes but not in platters. If you're a Roxy fan this album will more than please you. If you're not and you buy Country Life you might enjoy the air-brushed females on the cover more than the album. If you're weird, it may be the other way around.

Actually this is a humdinger of a band with a very sizable following. Roxy does know its way around the studio; the sound is crystal clear. (B, Anglophile colors)

SOUVENIRS/ dan fogelburg A pleasant voice from Jimmy Messinaland. Country rock shouldn't be confused with So. California rock which shouldn't be confused with pretty L.A. cowboys who sing beautiful songs about country homes in Illinois. And somewhere in between is Dan Fogelburg who has a crystal clear tenor and loves to hear himself doing four or five parts of harmonies while he sings lead on the same track. Really, it's a beautifully textured acoustic album produced by Joe Walsh, with Barnstorm (Walsh's group) doing musical backup. It's a very professional album by a man from Jimmy Messinaland. (B+, country colors from the city).

...Craig Discusses Merger

(continued from page one)

courses---agriculture, home economics, and career programs available at the University and not available at the state colleges. Efforts to make these land grant programs available to more Vermonters...would involve joint planning."

The trustees are now turning their attention to another key issue, involving centralization. At their February meeting, the Board members will concern themselves with a bylaws change proposed by Frances Carpenter.

Craig discussed the proposal in the context of centralization:

"It would make the Presidents responsible to the Board instead of to the Chancellor as they are at present."

The presidents of Vermont Tech and Lyndon have tendered their resignations, effective June 30. A current centralization proposal would combine on these two campuses the positions of President and Dean.

"One recommendation was that we call them acting President and Dean," stated Craig.

If the change proposed by Mrs Carpenter take place, the effect would be to remove the central authority figure by putting the Chancellor in the same position as the Presidents, all directly responsible to the Board. Presently the Presidents are responsible to the Chancellor, who is responsible to the Board.

When asked what the function of the Chancellor would be, Craig responded: "In my opinion there wouldn't be a need for a chancellor."

Craig outlined the VSC budget proposals, including cutbacks, tuition increases, and sale of property, which he hopes will minimize a shortfall of $900,000 in 1976. Governor Salmon has cut the request for appropriations for the colleges to an amount of $51,000 less than last year's funding.

Of first priority, plans to increase revenue are:

1) increase out-of-state tuition by $100 and cut back $60,000 from the Community College of Vermont;

2) increase fees: expected gain would be $90,000.

Plans to cut costs include:

1) sale of available property, including Burklyn Mansion and the president's houses, $175,000;

2) cuts in operations costs totaling $350,000. This includes a 10% cut in the operations budget, cuts of $7,500 in maintenance clerical costs; perhaps elimination of faculty @$15,750 and a freeze on hiring;

3) cuts in administrative overhead of $220,000, which include combining the positions of President and Dean at two colleges.

The total savings, if all these cuts are made, are expected to be $895,000. Craig said that the Board of Trustees had approved the cuts prior to the Govenor's actions.

Now, he added, there is a gap of $225,000 that must be made up somehow.

"We still have to go to the legislature," Craig continued. "There is a remote possibility that they will restore some of this."

Any increase will go into faculty and staff salaries, because of a contract provision for a 10% increase in salaries conditional on state appropriations.

"Now we are looking to see if there are other properties available instead of selling the Presidents' houses. Several of the Board members have some real concerns as to whether they are saleable," he explained.

What of the future of merger? Dr. Craig will be testifying before the House and Senate Education Committees when the Soule bill comes up for hearings, but, Craig cautioned, "I'm in the difficult position of making sure that any testimony I give is personal and doesn't represent the Board of Trustees."

Craig asked, "Are the VSC ready for merger? I think we are because of the fact that we have a central budget; we have our financial house in order. I think we're ready; I think it's imperative," he declared.

Ford Rebuts Congress

(continued from page one)

unite was in the form of a resolution sponsored by Senators Henry Jackson and Edward Kennedy. The resolution would postpone the enactment of Ford's proclamation which raised the tariff on imported crude oil $1 per barrel starting February 1 and increased to $3 per barrel by April Fools Day. The resolution evidently had majority backing in the Senate.

Congressional response to President Ford's economic program in many respects parallels the reaction President Andrew's proposed budget cuts received. In both cases the negative aspects of the plans were neatly defined and well argued. As the Northeastern state governors made a special bid to the President to reconsider his tariff, in the best interest of their constituents, Dr. Simon of the Experimental Program and Denis Lambert, Director of Athletics, made earnest appeals in their program's behalf. And in both cases angry criticism flourished, while 'comprehensive alternatives' were skimpy at best. The absence of any other reasonable offer to UVM's fiscal troubles could indicate either the sound quality of President Andrew's plan (with one exception) or the student body's overzealous enthusiasm in castigating the administration and inability to provide constructive criticism.

VERMONTENSIS UNIVERSITATIS · VIRIDIMONTANI · SIGILLUM · STUDIIS ET REBUS HONESTIS · 1791 ·

CONTEST to name
WRIGHT SNACK BAR!
WIN DINNER FOR TWO AT THE WHITE MOUSE
OR REDSTONE STATION
MON-THURS - 7:30-10 · SUN - 5:00-10

HOLY CROSS FATHERS
First American Mission 1842 University of Notre Dame
a community of men serving the community of man

"When we are really honest with ourselves we must admit that our lives are all that really belong to us. So it is how we use our lives that determines what kind of men we are. It is my deepest belief that only by giving our lives do we find life." Cesar Chavez

- Is God calling you to break free from the rock that holds you back?
- Is He calling you to give your life in order to find it?
- Is He calling you to the Holy Cross Community?

For information write:
Father Leo Polselli, C.S.C.

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m. - 7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.
The Head Shop
152 Church St. Burlington, Vt. 862-4045
You take care of the inside of your head...
...We'll take care of the outside.
For Men & Women
We'll Work It Out

Legacy Of A Suc

Behavior modification? Isn't that something faintly ominous that B.F. Skinner did with guinea pigs and babies in see-through isolation cribs? What's Behavior Modification doing at Living/Learning Center?

"No,no," laughs Ruth Gordon, student coordinator of the Behavior Modification Program. "It's much more a personal thing, a group of friends helping each other with their own growth and development."

The Behavior Modification group is one of the student designed programs at the Living/Learning Center that carries academic credit, three per semester.

How did their program come about, and how did they manage credit?

Ruth continues, and her enthusiasm and sparkle come through in her tale of the beginnings.

"We were all enrolled in the freshman chemistry program last year at the Center, and wanted to stay together. We decided to find something everybody could participate in, no matter their majors, and settled on something in psychology.

"We wanted it to be an academic program, because while we had ideas about what we wanted to do, we knew we couldn't accomplish it on our own.

"So I went to see Dr. Leitenberg in the Psych Department and asked if he'd help us. He thought it sounded REALLY interesting, and I just told him what we were thinking about said "SURE".

"He gave us we told him all put them togeth with a program, knew what happen.

"Dr. Leiten ball and talked (Director Living/Learning said these kids I'm interested and we want academic progr credits each sem

"And it w though any hav

"I don't kn have happened kids. We just enough and nee help us."

A very evolved from t and a few furth between the Center, Dr. Le Psychology D the Graduate C

The Department special section 100 Behavior which only participating Center coul third-year gr were hired to group on a basis.

The Living agreed to fund and supplies, and a large pa for the two gr

Professor Musty

by Mary Partridge

One of learning's greatest disillusionments is the discovery that one's drawing instructor does not draw, one's English teacher does not read for pleasure, or one's music professor plays no instrument. The idea that a professor can preach what he does not practice is intolerable. To the pedagogue, a degree represents academic achievement ample for a lifetime of reflection and dissertation. The concept that knowledge can become outdated, or at least superseded by further exploration and development in a given field, is meaningless to him.

A U.V.M. professor who is not only keeping abreast in his field but who is himself opening new channels of knowledge is Dr. Richard Musty, chairman of the psychology department. Dr. Musty is currently researching the effects of marijuana on the brain. He is concerned with what areas of the brain are affected by marijuana, which chemicals in the drug produce the observable results, and how learning ability and behaviour are influenced by the use of marijuana.

The devotion of one's scholarship to the study of grass very likely has a hazy, somewhat dreamy connotation to some. The erudition of psychology is by no means discarded by Dr. Musty in his study of contemporary youths' most subscribed to institution.

Resulting experimental discovered th to the limb brain, an are aspects of emotions behaviour. A experiments improves marijuana; quality of academic progr rat and all more rapidly

With influence w on emotion researched marijuana o situation suc or fatigue. grass incu defensive coupled w similar circus other drugs phenot amphet apomorphi unknown these thre chemical im rats under aggressive be

All mariju precise chem potency is per cent of grass has be and 1 per ce Brazil, when done some marijuana known .THC cent.

Common the user's perception.

Send the FTD LoveBundle™ for Valentine's Wee because she's in a class

Beautiful flowers... a heart and a vial of FTD Jolie de Fleur® perfu please her more? Yo can send your Love anywhere almost anywhere. Usually available for less than As an independen each FTD Member own prices.

"Call Your FTD Florist Flower"

Films

...course ...get ...com... ...on ...bout ...ually ...rood ...n. ...house ...doing ...film ...o on ...hope ...hen ...ll be ...7:30 ...films ...me ...thryn ...ging ...also ...ories ...This ...nd is ...the ...the ...by ...will ...30 in

101 Votey

The French classic series continues on Monday with Rene Clement's anti-war masterpiece Forbidden Games. This is perhaps the greatest anti-war film since Grand Illusion, yet it does not deal with actual warfare. Two young French children become playmates during the German occupation in 1940 and they imitate the cruel adult life that surrounds them by collecting dead animals for their private cemetary. Winner of the Venice Grand Prize and the Academy Award for best foreign film, few films have matched Forbidden Games' poignant outcry against the waste of war. The New York Times called it "brilliant... devastating... extraordinary! It gloves with the heat of the human heart." The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:15 in 101 Votey.

Merger

...state ...back ...unity ...pcted ...able ...klyn ...ent's ...costs ...This ...the ...of ...rical ...n of ...reere ...otive ...which ...the ...and ...if all ...are ...Craig ...ustees ...sor to ...a gap ...n be ...to the ...tinued. ...ibility than they will restore some of this."

Any increase will go into faculty and staff salaries, because of a contract provision for a 10% increase in salaries conditional on state appropriations.

"Now we are looking to see if there are other properties available instead of selling the Presidents' houses. Several of the Board members have some real concerns as to whether they are saleable," he explained.

What of the future of mergers? Dr. Craig will be testifying before the House and Senate Education Committees when the Soule bill comes up for hearings, but Craig cautioned, "I'm in the difficult position of making sure that any testimony I give is personal and doesn't represent the Board of Trustees."

Craig asked, "Are the VSC ready for merger? I think we are because of the fact that we have a central budget; we have our financial house in order I think we're ready. I think it's imperative," he declared.

Rebuts Congress

...r one) ...n of a ...d by ...n and ...The ...ns the ...ord's ...ed the ...r oil $1 ...uary 1 ...barrel ...The ...had ...limate ...se to ...nomic ...respects ...resident ...nt cuts ...es the ...r plans ...d well ...eastern state governors made a special bid to the President to reconsider his tariff, in the best interest of their constituents. Dr. Simon of the Experimental Program and Denis Lambert, Director of Athletics, made earnest appeals in their program's behalf. And in both cases angry criticism flourished, while 'comprehensive alternatives' were skimpy at best. The absence of any other reasonable offer to UVM's fiscal troubles could indicate either the sound quality of President Andrew's plan (with one exception or the student body's overzealous enthusiasm in castigating the administration and inability to provide constructive criticism

CUTTERS

152 Church St.
Burlington, Vt.
862-4045

Shop

...le of your head...
...f the outside.
We'll Work It Out

Legacy Of A Successful L/L Program

Behavior modification? Isn't that something faintly ominous that B.F. Skinner did with guinea pigs and babies in see-through isolation cribs? What's Behavior Modification doing at Living/Learning Center?

"No,no," laughs Ruth Gordon, student coordinator of the Behavior Modification Program. "It's much more a personal thing, a group of friends helping each other with their own growth and development."

The Behavior Modification group is one of the student designed programs at the Living/Learning Center that carries academic credit, three per semester.

How did their program come about, and how did they manage credit?

Ruth continues, and her enthusiasm and sparkle come through in her tale of the beginnings.

"We were all enrolled in the freshman chemistry program last year at the Center, and wanted to stay together. We decided to find something everybody could participate in, no matter their majors, and settled on something in psychology.

"We wanted it to be an academic program, because while we had ideas about what we wanted to do, we knew we couldn't accomplish it on our own.

"So I went to see Dr. Leitenberg in the Psych Department and asked if he'd help us. He thought it sounded REALLY interesting, and I just told him what we were thinking about doing and he said "SURE".

"He gave us a lot of ideas, we told him all of ours, and we put them together and came up with a program. Nobody really knew what was going to happen.

"Dr. Leitenberg took the ball and talked to Nick Muller (Director of the Living/Learning Center), and said these kids want to do this. I'm interested in helping them, and we want it to be an academic program with three credits each semester.

"And it was. I didn't go though any hassle at all."

"I don't know if it could have happened if it was just us kids. We just didn't know enough and needed someone to help us."

A very special program evolved from those first ideas, and a few further conversations between the Living/Learning Center, Dr. Leitenberg and the Psychology Department, and the Graduate College.

The Psychology Department established a special section of Psychology 100: Behavior Modification, in which only students in the participating suites of the Center could enroll. Two third-year graduate students were hired to work with the group on a regular weekly basis.

The Living/Learning Center agreed to fund basic equipment and supplies, costs of testing, and a large part of the stipend for the two graduate interns.

The goals of the first semester were to discern individual and interpersonal behavior patterns in relationships with families, friends, and other members of the group. People learned to identify aspects of their own behavior they wished to change or modify, increase or decrease.

Their object was to learn how behavioral techniques studied in their Psychology 100 course could be applied to daily problems in living - in relating better to one another, to dating behavior, personal habits, study behavior, and to the way they related with parents, professors supervisors, and themselves.

They helped each other in discovering personal ways of reinforcing changes they wanted to make - praise, a smile, personal and groups discussions and encouragement.

What about classes?

Ruth answers, "Classes are just like any other night course for three hours, but they're really good because it's such a close-knit group of people. When the graduate interns want a teaching kind of atmosphere we use the classrooms downstairs. When it's discussing things or working on a group project, we sit around in our suite living room and have tea and coffee and food, very informal and easy. But it certainly didn't turn out to be an easy A."

Plans for the second semester include helping experiences at clinical facilities where behavioral programs are being carried out, including the Vermont State Hospital, Burlington Youth Service Bureau, and the Behavior Therapy Center, with reading and practicum assignments appropriate to each persons' placement and level of competence.

Through formal attitudinal surveys and tests conducted on the Behavior Modification program people and other control groups, at the beginning of the year and again at the end, the success of the program will be evaluated in numerous ways:

How does the level of knowledge, practical ability, interest and effectiveness of this special section compare with students in the regular Psych 100 course?

Is there less personal conflict in the two Behavior Modification suites than in other suites in the Center?

Do these students show more change in social competence, behavior, and potential?

Ruth Gordon thinks the evaluations will show quite a difference.

"I think our program is the closest one in the whole Center. We're almost forced to communicate with each other, to work things out together, and to reinforce each other.

"We're all really good friends, we're all here to help each other do the things we want to do, an . . . it works."

Manufacturers Overcalculate Demand

(CPS) - In an era of spiralling inflation, this year students are getting at least one bargain - electronic calculators.

In 1972, when the little calculators first hit the market, a standard model cost about $150 and was produced by about 40 different companies. Now the average cost of a calculator is only $45, and some very simple models can be bought for as little as $13.

The reason for the price fall was that everyone realized a good thing when they saw it at the same time.

Electronics firms rushed to meet the rapidly escalating demand for calculators, and over the last two years, overproduction plus advances in technology caused a glut of calculators.

Texas Instruments, one of the largest firms, started the price deflation because it cornered a sizeable part of the electronic chip manufacturing, and found itself in the enviable position of providing its competitors with chips. Chips are semiconductors on which electronic circuits are imposed in large numbers to build integrated circuits - the most essential part of all calculators.

Since it made its own chips, Texas Instruments was able to lower its prices first, and other companies had to follow suit to stay in competition. Over the last two years, half of the firms producing calculators were driven out of the market or out of business. Now electronics firms are doing everything they can to unload their machines.

"Not since the introduction of mass-produced transistor radios has the consumer gotten a better deal," said Bruce Vogeli, a mathematics professor at Columbia University. Twelve million calculators were sold last year, up from only 2.5 million in 1972. Industrial estimates are that this year 25 million will be sold.

"There was a time when a calculator manufacturer or assembler couldn't do anything wrong," commented Edward White, chairman of Bowmar Instruments. "Everything he came out with sold. Now things have changed," he lamented.

Calculators will probably be a bargain through 1977, industry spokespeople have said. By then there will be 160 million units in use, and sales will decline to about 40 million per year in replacements, because calculators have a life expectancy of only four years.

L/L Rock Climbing Group Compiles Guidebook

Why do you climb?

"Well, says Joel Feldman, coordinator of the Rock Climbing Guidebook Program, "some guy like Edmund Hillary comes down from the Himalayas and says, 'Because it's THERE.' We all have different reasons for why we climb and I'm not really philosophical about it, but I just like to be dependent on myself, and it's freedom.

"You're out there relying on yourself, the noise of the cities is far behind, and you don't have a million skiiers and tourists on your back. You could see a snake and get scared and maybe fall and hurt yourself, but you don't when you know what you're doing.

"It's a good thing to learn your own capabilities, what you can do and what you can't."

Joel and five friends, Sam Johnson, Dave Mainer, Howard Burrows, Lou Haggerty and Jeff Green, already shared a particular enthusiasm for rock climbing and wanted to write a guidebook. Last year they decided to incorporate their project in a student designed program at the Living/Learning Center.

The manuscript for their rock climbing guidebook for the Bolton Notch area is due to go to a commercial publisher this April. It includes detailed maps made by the climbers themselves showing prescribed routes, technical descriptions of climbs and ratings according to difficulty, rocktypes and structure, and overall geology of the area for general interest.

Color and black and white photographs show routes and climbers in action, and members are writing anecdotal descriptions of their climbing experiences in the Bolton Notch area.

Talent for this considerable undertaking includes three geologists in the group, two photographers, one with specific writing and editing skills. All are experienced climbers.

They feel that sharing living space at the Center most importantly helps them work as a coordinated group rather than as individuals and considerably speeds the progress of the guidebook compilation.

"In addition, we know and better understand the thoughts and fears of each other when we climb - teamwork is very important, as well as self-reliance."

The Living/Learning Center helps fund expenses for photography, travel, publicity, and speakers' fees.

Besides compiling their guidebook, the rock climbers have brought speakers to the campus with slide illustrated lectures of various kinds of climbing - months-long Himalayan expeditions, one-day Alpine ice climbs in France, four-day wall climbs in the Western U.S. where you hang to the cliff and sleep overnight. More films and speakers are planned for this semester.

They've taken Living/Learning Center and UVM students climbing - "they

(continued on page ten)

Professor Musty Studies Marijuana

by Mary Partridge

One of learning's greatest disillusionments is the discovery that one's drawing instructor does not draw, one's English teacher does not read for pleasure, or one's music professor plays no instrument. The idea that a professor can preach what he does not practice is intolerable. To the pedagogue, a degree represents academic achievement ample for a lifetime of reflection and dissertation. The concept that knowledge can become outdated, or at least superseded by further exploration and development in a given field, is meaningless to him.

A U.V.M. professor who is not only keeping abreast in his field but who is himself opening new channels of knowledge is Dr. Richard Musty, chairman of the psychology department. Dr. Musty is currently researching the effects of marijuana on the brain. He is concerned with what areas of the brain are affected by marijuana, which chemicals in the drug produce the observable results; and how learning ability and behaviour are influenced by the use of marijuana.

The devotion of one's scholarship to the study of grass very likely has a hazy, somewhat dreamy connotation to some. The erudition of psychology is by no means discarded by Dr. Musty in his study of contemporary youths' most subscribed to institution.

Resulting from extensive experimentation on rats, he has discovered that marijuana goes to the limbic system of the brain, an area which controls aspects of learning ability, emotions and general behaviour. According to the rat experiments, learning ability improves with the use of marijuana; the tranquilizing quality of the drug calms the rat and allows him to learn more rapidly.

With regard to the influence which the drug has on emotions, Dr. Musty has researched the effect of marijuana on a rat in a stressful situation such as extreme cold or fatigue. He has found that grass incurs aggressively defensive behaviour when coupled with stress. Under similar circumstances, the only other drugs which result in this phenomenon are amphetamines and apomorphine. Due to an unknown common factor, these three drugs cause a chemical imbalance which, in rats under stress, produces aggressive behaviour.

All marijuana is different in precise chemical content. The potency is determined by the per cent of THC. Vermont's grass has between .5 per cent and 1 per cent THC, whereas in Brazil, where Dr. Musty has done some of his research, the marijuana has the highest known THC content, 8 per cent.

Common to all varieties is the user's inaccurate time perception. For some users, a minute is felt to have passed after only 45 or 50 seconds have elapsed. Others allow up to 65 to 70 seconds for a minute. Aside from this consistent miscalculation of time, sensory abilities are unaffected by a socially acceptable "dose" of grass.

Dr. Musty's plans for the upcoming year are to continue researching the influence of marijuana on complicated performance tasks. He also intends to study the differing effects of the drug on various personality types.

At some point during the semester, volunteers will probably be needed. For legal reasons, recruitment for this sort of experimentation must be done through newspaper ads. If interested, watch the Vermont Cynic. Volunteers must be previous marijuana users.

Comments Exchanged

The Exchange brought some interesting comments this week: One student wondered why there couldn't be a centrally located Bulletin Board where used books could be listed for swapping or for sale. Does this create interest among anyone?

Two door handles were taken off the outside of Marsh Hall, entailing a long walk around the complex to get into the building. This is being attended to!

An Evening Division student wondered why credit couldn't be granted for work experience?

What's on your mind? Share your thoughts for improving campus life by writing THE EXCHANGE (boxes are located in Billings, MAT main desk, Harris-Millis main desk, Simpson, Living-Learning lobby and Wright). Or call X2068.

VALUABLE COUPON

SAVE SAVE

SPECIAL TO STUDENTS
AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)

10% DISCOUNT

ON YOUR PURCHASES AT

CAMPUS PHARMACY

ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

SAVE SAVE

GIGANTIC SKI SALE

SKI BOOTS 20% to 50% off - ADULTS & JUNIORS
Nordica: Mercury, Pro Alpina, Mercury, Pro, Slalom, Metcor
Raichle: Racer, Sellina, Carrera, Comp.
Hanson: Simba, Bwana, Riva, Exhibition, Team
Trappeur: Comp, Elite, Equipe

SKIS 20% to 50% off ADULTS & JUNIORS
Rossignol: ST650, Roc 550, Strato 105, Exhibition, Olympia, Cobra, Jet 100 , Team, Jr. Strato 105, Jr. St. 650
K-2: Three, Winter Heat, Five Comp., Jr. Two, Jr. Five Atomic: Atomic-Atomic , Super Jet, Rider, Attraction, Jr. Atomic Volkl: Free Style, Jr. Tiger
Olin: Mark I, Mark III, Mark IV, Jr. Mark II

CROSSCOUNTRY Skis, Ski Boots & Poles 25% to 50% off

SKI POLES Barrecrafter, Scott, Kerma, Crosscountry 20% to 50% off

SKIRACKS Barrecrafter 25% off

SKATES Men's Ladies & Kids - Hockey & Figure Skates 20% to 30% off

SNOW SHOES 25% off

GOGGLES 20% off

CLOTHING

PARKAS Men's, Ladies & Kids 20% to 50% off

STRETCHPANTS Warmups & Knickers Men's, Ladies & Kids 25% to 50% off

GLOVES & MITTENS 20% off

HATS 20% off

TURTLENECKS 25% off

UNDERWEAR 25% off

CROSSCOUNTRY SUITS 25% off

SWEATERS 25% to 50% off

MASTER CHARGE
Bank Americard
next door to Restaurant Swiss Pot

OPEN 9-9
MONDAY - FRIDAY
9-5:30 on SATURDAY

Valuga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE, RD.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-1981

Send the FTD LoveBundle™ for Valentine's Week...

because she's in a class by herself.

Beautiful flowers... a red satin heart and a vial of FTD's exclusive Joie de Fleur® perfume. What could please her more? Your FTD Florist can send your LoveBundle Bouquet almost anywhere. Usually available for less than $15.00*
*As an independent business, each FTD Member Florist sets his own prices.

"Call Your FTD Florist Today"

©1975 Florists' Transworld Delivery

A Brother, is a BROTHER, is a BROTHER, is a BROTHER, is an EDMUNDITE BROTHER. P.S. We also have PRIESTS. For free information write:

Edmundite Admissions Office
Enders Island
Mystic, Connecticut 06355

How To Prepare For Exams Part 2

The first half of this article pointed out that successful preparation for an exam starts in the beginning of each term and continues throughout. It emphasized the importance of establishing a term study plan and using good review techniques.

DEVELOP A CONFIDENT ATTITUDE

Your attitude toward exams can make a difference. Tests do serve a good purpose. They give you an opportunity to check your progress. Students who have formed good study habits throughout the term should be confident. Exams will solidify your knowledge of important ideas, and give you an opportunity to know how well you are doing. Examination grades can also help pinpoint your weaknesses and give you a chance to correct them.

ORGANIZE—PRE-EXAM HOURS

1. The day before an important exam plan to review a maximum of 3 hours, interspersed with pace-changing breaks. Remember to question yourself as you review your notes. Recite the main points to yourself and reread text passages only when you are having difficulty remembering them.

2. Eat and sleep well so that you are refreshed the day of the exam.

3. Get up early to avoid rushing on the morning of the test.

4. Take a shower, have a good breakfast, do some exercises or take a walk, breathe deeply.

5. Stay calm. It may be helpful to take a last look at your summary notes but avoid them if it makes you nervous.

6. Be sure you have all the supplies you need before leaving your room.

7. Arrive in the examination room a few minutes ahead. Take a seat where you will have good light and not be distracted by friends or noise.

PACE THE EXAM CAREFULLY

When the exam begins, listen to the instructions and then start reading through the entire test. Organize your thoughts.

1. Budget time for each question. They might be equal in scoring, so answer the easy ones first. Remember to number the answers to match the questions.

2. Think carefully about one question at a time. Your first sentence should be clear and contain some, if not all, of the main points in your answer. The instructor wants a focus on the question and direct answers.

3. Jot down key words as guides for your writing. Indenting paragraphs, numbering points under them, or making a rough diagram or outline can be helpful to you and the person correcting.

4. Write legibly or else the instructor will not be able to read easily, and your mark will suffer.

5. Short-form or objective questions demonstrate your ability to recognize details and your judgment in choosing among alternatives. Attention must be given to key words like: all, none, never, might, or should. Fill in the easy ones first and mark the spaces clearly. Avoid leaving blanks, an "answer might be correct even though you are not sure. An omission will probably count against you. In multiple choice, cross out what you think is wrong and think about what is left. Be sure to completely erase if you change an answer.

6. Essay questions test your ability to express yourself, to interpret and to organize material. The instructor never expects one question (or even an entire exam) to be a demonstration of all you know. Important cue words will give you the key as to what or how much the instructor wants you to write. The ones most frequently used are: analyze, compare, contrast, criticize, define, describe, discuss, elaborate, enumerate, evaluate, explain, illustrate, interpret, justify, list, outline, prove, relate, review, state, summarize, trace. Each one of these terms calls for some specific type of material, so think about their meanings in advance.

7. Finish each question as best as you can and then go on to the next, leaving some room at the bottom for possible additions. When answering essay questions in exam books, some students find it helpful to use only the right hand pages, leaving the left page for additional remarks or highlights.

8. Make answers as concise and clear as possible. Do not waste time with long-winded or repetitious sentences.

9. Reread everything carefully after you have answered all the questions. You might have left out a key word or remember some other points.

REASSESS YOUR WORK

When you receive your grades and get back exam books, read over the answers. Compare them to your textbook and class notes in order to check mistakes and find out why or how you answered incorrectly. If you don't understand your instructor's marks, ask him where you went wrong. This re-evaluation will help you recognize your faults in your study skills. Learn by your mistakes and go on to the next phase of enjoyable and successful college work.

This article is part of a series recently initiated for college students by the Association of American Publishers to help students with their study skills. Copies of the complete "How To Prepare Successfully For Examinations" or "How To Get The Most Out Of Your Textbooks" can be obtained free by writing to AAP Student Service, One Park Avenue, New York 10016. Future topics will give suggestions on other proven techniques for using study time and learning materials.

Psi Upsilon Invited To UVM

Psi Upsilon has been invited to join the fraternity ranks at the University of Vermont, it was announced jointly by David W. Platke, President of the Fraternity Forum, and by William R. Root, Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center. The establishment of a new chapter has been endorsed by Psi Upsilon's Executive Council and by its twenty-six active chapters.

One of the oldest of the existing college fraternities, founded at Union College in 1833, Psi Upsilon was one of the early leaders in the Greek movement which was to sweep the country in later years. Among other areas in which it pioneered, Psi Upsilon was the first fraternity to initiate members from all classes and the first to publish a song book. There are over two hundred Psi Upsilon songs, enhancing its reputation as a real singing organization. Among the alumni have been many leaders in literary, academic, financial, and professional fields. Many of its members have been prominent in public service, including two Presidents of the United States, Chester A. Arthur and William Howard Taft, and the current Vice President, Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Founded by seven students on principles of true friendship, symbolized by clasped hands on its badge, the fraternity has always emphasized the benefits of friendship through mutual help, group activity, and the development of leaders. Its twenty-six active chapters range from coast to coast, with five in New England, nine in the Middle Atlantic states, seven in the Mid-West, two in the Far West, and three recent additions in the South. Those nearest to the University of Vermont include Bowdoin, Dartmouth, Union, Amherst, Trinity, and Wesleyan.

Loosely structured in organization, Psi Upsilon places great emphasis upon the autonomy of each chapter, in order to encourage maximum responsibility on the part of its active members. The policies determined at the annual conventions provide the binding force for the chapters and the seventeen thousand alumni. On being asked why Psi Upsilon is unique, a spokesman pointed to the local autonomy of its chapters, and the harmony and loyalty among its members, simply expressed as "All for one and one for all."

Any student wishing further information about Psi Upsilon may call Mr. Root at the Billings Center.

...Climbers Compile Guidebook

(continued from page ten)

just come to our suite and ask, and we say sure" - as well as a group of deaf children from the community. They showed slides of their climbs and demonstrated equipment to Windsor Prison inmates in a recently televised Interact Program. "How vertical a wall can you scale?" one guy asked.

"We just want to show people what climbing is all about, we like it a lot. We're not great climbers and all egocentric about it, but, we can climb and we'd like to share it with other people and hopefully get them interested too.

"If we can through the guidebook provide a safe and informative way for people to know where to climb, if we can take some photographs they might look at and say, 'Wow, that's a nice picture' - well, that's good, and we like it, and that's what we want to do."

So Joel Feldman casually and informally describes the rock climbers' personal impetus for their highly organized, well developed program which they have already shared with a lot of people.

For themselves, they are learning the skills of organizing a large project in a group living and working environment, of actively sharing their interest with their community, and promoting a project of considerable value to their educational pursuits as well as their personal goals.

Cheers. We're looking forward to the guidebook.

UFW Workers Alive And Well

It has become popular in recent months to write articles about the survival chances of Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers. On September 15, 1974, the prestigious New York Times Sunday Magazine Section ran a pessimistic and shoddily researched article entitled "Is Chavez Beaten?" by Winthrop Griffith. Jerry Cohen, United Farm Workers' legal counsel, has a simple analysis of the article: "Winthrop Griffith and a lot of observer-type folks like him are not writing about Cesar and the farm workers at all. They are writing about themselves; they are simply announcing that the 60's tired them out and they want a rest from the conscience-probing struggles laid on them by the farm workers and other poor people of the world."

Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers are not worn out even though they have more reason than most. They do not intend to stop their organizing efforts until they have built one democratic union for all farm workers in our nation. Their amazing persistence is related in part to the fact that they have experienced in their own lives the oppression of growers and labor contractors: while some sympathizers may casually observe that the Teamsters can "take care of" farm workers adequately, the farm workers themselves - including the leadership of UFW - know the practical, enslaving meaning of the Grower-Teamster decision to allow labor contractors (crew leaders) to control hiring and firing in the fields. Farm workers know firsthand the dangers of heavy machinery and pesticides - dangers which the Teamsters have effectively ignored in their contracts. Farm workers know the importance of a strong seniority and job security clause in their contracts; and farm workers are the daily victims of the ineffectual seniority and job security clauses in the Teamster contracts.

UFW persistence is also related to the powerful spirit of self-determination and self-affirmation that has developed among farm workers in the last decade. Out of the strike and boycott struggle farm workers who were afraid have lost their fear. Farm workers who felt hopeless now have hope. Farm workers who had no sense of their own power won collective bargaining, elected their own ranch committees, enforced their own contracts, chose their own leaders and wrote their own constitution. The UFW, by hard work and sacrifice, released among farm workers the spirit of liberation and there is no way - short of genocide - to snuff it out.

UFW persistence is also related to the realistic expectations which come from a ground level, poor peoples' view of life. Cesar and Helen Chavez made a lifelong commitment when, in 1962, they moved their family to Delano and began to organize a farm workers' union. The leaders of UFW are farm workers by trade; they know the growers from close-up. They know about their money, their power, their allies and their hard-nosed determination to destroy all indigenous farm worker organizing efforts by any means necessary. Cesar Chavez thought it would be ten years before UFW won any contracts. (The first one came in 1966) While some folks in our affluent society expect all triumphs to come in a semester or two, the UFW girded their loins for a lifetime struggle. What is happening to them in the way of progress mixed with serious set backs is what they expected. They have no intention of quitting. As Cesar has said again and again: "Time is our greatest ally; time is for the poor what money is for the rich."

Winthrop Griffith may be tired of social struggles but that does not give him license to write his own weariness into the farm workers movement. Knowing very little about farm workers and less about their struggle for a union of their own he has apparently concluded that farm workers who joined the UFW in the 60's are now willing to compromise their deepest aspirations by accepting the top-down paternalism of a large, alien Union (the Teamsters). Other writers see statistics like 50,000 Teamster members and 10,000 UFW members and conclude that farm workers have transferred their loyalties from UFW to the Teamsters. Farm workers have not transferred their loyalty. They never voted for the Teamsters. Their employers chose the Teamsters for their own selfish reasons and imposed that union on the workers. The huge grape strike of 1973 was the farm workers' angry protest against that Teamster- grower deal. As this article is being written 1,000 lemon pickers are on strike near Yuma, Arizona under the leadership of UFW. 100 Apple workers who are "protected" by a Teamster contract walked out of the fields near Watsonville, California on September 23, 1974 because their employer was deducting $15.00 per week for housing even though they were making their own cardboard shelters.

Gallo workers went on strike in June of 1973 to protest the Teamster- Gallo contract; the company fired the strikers, evicted them from their homes and went to Mexico to find hungry people to break the strike. This summer the Gallo strikebreakers walked out of the fields to protest Teamster non-enforcement of the contract. When Frank Fitzsimmons, General President of the Teamsters Union, came to Salinas on June 6,1974, "Teamster" lettuce workers walked out of the fields and picketed his luncheon meeting with Teamster "officials" and growers (there were no farm workers on the inside of the Hyatt House restaurant). When Cesar Chavez came to Salinas on July 31, 1974, 3,500 "Teamster" lettuce workers came to a UFW rally carrying the banners of the companies where they work. All across California and Arizona - in grapes, tomatoes, mushrooms, citrus, melons, vegetables - farm workers have gone on strike in the summer of 1974 to protest specific injustices and to demand a chance to vote for the union of their choice.

The UFW boycott is alive and well thanks to the determination of the farm workers themselves, the support of the churches and the AFL-CIO and the efforts of thousands of consumers. Gallo sales are down 7-10 per cent. Gallo says that the boycott is not effecting them; yet they have doubled their public relations' budget (from $6 million to $13 million) in order to combat the boycott. Gallo representatives are criss-crossing the nation to meet with church leaders and others to "explain" their position on the boycott. They are merchandising new wine products under names like "Madria, Madria Sangria" and "Joseph Steuben". As one observer asks: "If Gallo is so proud of their good name why don't they make it more visible?" (All wines produced in Modesto, California are Gallo products.) Head lettuce prices during the summer have been at $2.00 per carton and less - well below production cost. Table grape sales are down in most major cities in U.S. and Canada while California Arizona table grapes are piling up in the packing cold storage facilities (as of 9/30/74 there were over 4 million boxes of table grapes in cold storage in California - nearly double the amount in cold storage at that date during the non-boycott years of '70, '71, '72). When the growers feel the pressure of the boycott enough they will find a way to ease the Teamsters out and begin, again, to deal with the only union that has seriously organized farm workers and depends on farm worker loyalty for its strength – the UFW.

...Attending His First Gay Dance

(continued from page five)

Vietnam War, and the general insanity of the 20th century, Ernest welcomed a society where penises would not so readily be forged into missiles; where a more androgynous spirit would soften this unbearable paternalism, whose inflexibility was destroying this earth. The gay and feminist movements were somehow tied to that vision, it seemed to Ernest, as he explained it to a friend who wondered why he was so interested in homosexuals anyway.

At the top of the stairs a sign warned the people that no cameras, shoes, drinking, or smoking would be allowed in the gym. No cameras! That was what the Indians told their white conquerors. Some members of the Gay Student Union were taking tickets at the door.

On seeing him, one exclaimed, "Ernest... You? I suspected it all the time!" The man was grinning at the mirage he thought he saw before him, and Ernest felt slightly guilty, but he was not about to lose a good story. So smiling, he paid his dollar and walked into the gym.

(To be continued in next week's issue.)

CLASSIFIED

Correction: Earth shoe boots for sale. Women's size 7.25W (not 7.75); Men's size 5.75M. Excellent condition. Asking $30 ($45 new). Please call 985-8575.

For Sale: 12 string Gibson folk guitar – model B-25, excellent condition. Asking $150 – may negotiate. Call David or Roxanne at 864-5922 any evening.

BUY THE BEST: SAE Mk Pre-amplifier, Philips GA212 Electronic Turntable w/Stanton 681EE Cartridge. Each warranteed. Also, TEAC AN-60 Dolby unit. Make an offer. 862-0660 after 5.

For Sale: Head 360's 200 cm w/Looke Nevada boots Lange Pro's (11). Nordica (10½) Cheap. Scott, 655-1393.

Lost – Black leather wallet containing much cash and assorted identification cards. Last Friday night January 31 around SAE or Sigma Nu fraternities. Reward? Keep the $. No questions asked. Call Charlie at 863-9881.

For Sale: Lafayette LR-200A receiver. Brand new – never used. Call Danny, X 2516, Rm. 320.

Calculators: Bomar MX 100.20 functions $99.00. Now $129.00. Call Don after 5 at 862-0316.

GLADSTONE'S
UNBELIEVABLE
WOMEN'S • MEN'S • CHILDREN'S BOOT SALE
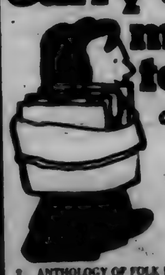
50% OFF
Your Choice of Stock in All Our Stores
LAST CALL! SALE ENDS SAT., FEB. 15
GLADSTONE'S

RECORD SALE!!!
Carry a pack of music back to campus!


Quality LP's and boxed sets
– up to 80% off
HUNDREDS OF LP'S TO CHOOSE FROM
Just A few examples
2. ANTHOLOGY OF FOLK MUSIC —including more than 50 pieces by Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, Red Mc-Kenn, Leadbelly, John Lee Hooker, Lightnin' Hopkins and others— 5 record set— NOW ONLY $9.98
3. THE BEST OF THE BLUES— A superb collection featuring the re-corded Brownie & Sonny, Ray Charles, Memphis Slim, Otis Spann, Big Bill Broonzy, Big Joe Williams and others —3 record set— NOW ONLY $6.98
4. MY FAVORITE CHOPIN—HIS MOST FAMOUS WORKS Piano Concerto No. 2, Op. 21, Piano Sonata No. 2, Op. 35, 5 Polonaises, Fantasie-Impromptu, 17 Waltzes, 6 Etudes, 3 Nocturnes and more—3 record set— featuring S. Richter, W. Kilius, P. Frankl, L. Hoelscher and other great pianists— NOW ONLY $5.98
5. THE BEST OF MOZART—HIS MOST FAMOUS ORCHESTRAL WORKS: Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, Serenata Notturna, Overture to Magic Flute and Marriage of Figaro, Symphonies No. 31, 36, 38, 40 in G Minor, No. 41 Jupiter, Europe's finest orchestras represented—4 record set— NOW ONLY $6.98
22. BEETHOVEN'S NINTH AND FIFTH SYMPHONIES-COMPLETE— An award winning set featuring Josef Krips conducting the Vienna Festival Orchestra—2 record set— NOW ONLY $4.98
32. GREAT RUSSIAN MASTERPIE-CES—The fabulous 1812 Overture by Tchaikovsky and many other works by Rimsky-Korsakov, Mussorgsky, Borodin, Prokofiev, Glinka and Khachaturian and others. An exciting collection of great music. 4 record set— NOW ONLY $6.98
SAVE! UP TO 80%
EVERYDAY BOOK SHOP
106 CHURCH ST.—862-5191—OPEN FRIDAY EVE.

MID- WINTER SALE at Pants Plus
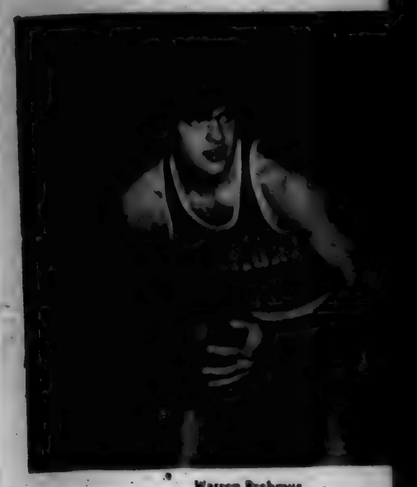
30% OFF
On a Selected Group of FAMOUS MAKER PANTS
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
864-0181

FEBRUARY 6, 1975

Hoopsters Split



Warren Prehmus

The University of Vermont basketball team played two games this past weekend and gained a split after they were over. On Friday night the Cats tangled with the Rams from Rhode Island and came out on top with a 77-68 win.

The win stopped a losing streak to the Rams that had gone to 30 games, the last Vermont victory being on January 3, 1959.

Rhode Island got the early lead as they played a 2-3 zone, forcing many turnovers by the Catamounts and keeping them outside as well.

Vermont went into a full court press at the outset and stayed that way for the entire game. The press was the key to Vermont's win, as the Rams couldn't handle the pressure down the stretch.

UVM got hot in the final minutes with Warren Prehmus hitting a pair of 18-foot jumpers. The Cats went into the four corner offense and ran the clock down to 1:20 before Terry Green was fooled. Green made one of his two-shots to give Vermont a 66-64 lead. A Joe Greco lay-up followed by another lay-up by Terry Green gave Vermont a 70-66 lead and the Cats went on to win going away.

High scorers for Vermont were Green Gottschalk with Prehmus 16, Bernie Barry Cohen also well for the Cats.

On Saturd Vermont's string was stopped at Joseph's defeate 84-70.

The Hawks sh throughout the opened a lead to late in the game. ball up from 15- Hawks were percentage shots b finding the basket

The Catam defeated St. Joseph year, but they re team Saturday beaten. Captain was sensational f with 30 point Rafferty was in breaking the pres

No one had for the Cats, w high scorer with Kevin Kelly colle

The Catam tough trip and w a hot team that in a row pr Vermont sa Vermont is th but they weren

...Nuclear Power

(continued from page one)

the state to limit federally authorized nuclear power plants.

To this idea Willard Ballard, a Zoologist from Norwich, remarked that it had been Vermont which had declared a state of war b Congress in Wo that again it Vermont shoul signal to th nuclear power.

Women's Gymna

In meets on Friday, Saturday, and Monday, the women's gymnastics team outdistanced four other teams to up their over-all record to seven wins and one loss.

Friday, in a dual meet at Vermont College, UVM defeated their hosts by a score of 48.20 to 58.20. In vaulting, Carole Shiber was first, Sue Tetrault took second. The uneven parallel bars competition was completely dominated by UVM gymnasts, who swept all five top spots. In order of finish, they were Kathy Zajchowski, Joanna Houbolt, Cillia Minott, Terry Brown, and Sue Tetrault. On Beam, Terry Brown took second place, Cilla Minott fourth, and Joanna Houbolt fifth. Floor ex Minott take fi Shiber and Terr points.

Saturday, hosted their home mee victorious o (Orono) and Vaulting was Hayes, with th score of 8.3. D fourth, and added poi Catamounts. J Karen Eskilsen second on bea Abrams and J the top two pl On floor a Blanchette pla Light third, a fifth. The fina 74.55. UMa Castleton Stat Monday's closest of the

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECT OF BEERS, ALES
AMERICAN & IMPOR
WINES
AT GREAT SAVIN

And Well

...ng ...962, ...to ...ve a ...the ...em ...ew ...ip ...ey, ...and ...ion ...arm ...by ...ear ...any ...ame ...is in ...t all ...ster ...their ...ngle ...n in ...with ...they ...no ...ear ...time ...e for ...the

...y be ...but ...sense ...unto ...ment ...farm ...their ...their ...ntly ...rkers ...the ...g to ...epest ...the ...of a ...(the ...n see ...mster ...UFW ...that ...farred ...W to ...rkers ...their ...d for ...loyers ...theu ...and ...in the ...strike ...rkers' ...that ...As this ...1,000 ...strike ...der the ...Apple ...ected" ...walked ...near ...nia on ...became ...ducting ...housing ...making ...shelters.

...trike in ...feat the ...act, the ...strikers ...t homes ...to find ...eak the ...e Gallo ...out of the fields to protest Teamster non-enforcement of the contract. When Frank Fitzsimmons, General President of the Teamsters Union, came to Salinas on June 6,1974, "Teamster" lettuce workers walked out of the fields and picketed his luncheon meeting with Teamster "officials" and growers (there were no farm workers on the inside of the Hyatt House restaurant). When Cesar Chavez came to Salinas on July 11, 1974, 3,500 "Teamster" lettuce workers came to a UFW rally carrying the banners of the companies where they work. All across California and Arizona - in grapes, tomatoes, mushrooms, citrus, melons, vegetables - farm workers have gone on strike in the summer of 1974 to protest specific injustices and to demand a chance to vote for the union of their choice.

The UFW boycott is alive and well thanks to the determination of the farm workers themselves, the support of the churches and the AFL-CIO and the efforts of thousands of consumers. Gallo sales are down 7-10 per cent. Gallo says that the boycott is not effecting them; yet they have doubled their public relations' budget (from $6 million to $13 million) in order to combat the boycott. Gallo representatives are criss-crossing the nation to meet with church leaders and others to "explain" their position on the boycott. They are merchandising new wine products under names like "Madria, Madria Sangria" and "Joseph Steuben". As one observer asks: "If Gallo is so proud of their good name why don't they make it more visible?" (All wines produced in Modesto, California are Gallo products.) Head lettuce prices during the summer have been at $2.00 per carton and less - well below production cost. Table grape sales are down in most major cities in the [illegible] while California Arizona table grapes are piling up in the growers' cold storage facilities (as of 9/30/74 there were over 4 million boxes of table grapes in cold storage in California - nearly double the amount in cold storage at that date during the non-boycott years of '70, '71, '72). When the growers feel the pressure of the boycott enough they will find a way to ease the Teamsters out and begin, again, to deal with the only union that has seriously organized farm workers and depends on farm worker loyalty for its strength - the UFW.

His First Gay Dance

(continued from page five)

...e general insanity of the 20th century. ...ciety where penises would not so readily ...les, where a more androgynous spirit ...bearable paternalism, whose inflexibility ...earth. The gay and feminist movements ...to that vision, it seemed to Ernest, as he ...friend who wondered why he was so ...mals anyway.

...e stairs a sign warned the people that no ...ing, or smoking would be allowed in the ...hat was what the Indians told their white ...embers of the Gay Student Union were ...oor.

...ne exclaimed. "Ernest... You? I suspected ...the man was grinning at the mirage he ...e him, and Ernest felt slightly guilty, but ...lose a good story. So smiling, he paid his ...o the gym.

(...in next week's issue.)

WINTER SALE
at
...nts Plus
...0% OFF
...elected Group of
...S MAKER PANTS
...ants Plus
...WINOOSKI AVE.
...864-0181

Hoopsters Split

Warren Prehmus

The University of Vermont basketball team played two games this past weekend and gained a split after they were over. On Friday night the Cats tangled with the Rams from Rhode Island and came out on top with a 77-68 win.

The win stopped a losing streak to the Rams that had gone to 30 games; the last Vermont victory being on January 3, 1959.

Rhode Island got the early lead as they played a 2-3 zone, forcing many turnovers by the Catamounts and keeping them outside as well.

Vermont went into a full court press at the outset and stayed that way for the entire game. The press was the key to Vermont's win, as the Rams couldn't handle the pressure down the stretch.

UVM got hot in the final minutes with Warren Prehmus hitting a pair of 18-foot jumpers. The Cats went into the four corner offense and ran the clock down to 1:20 before Terry Green was fooled. Green made one of his two-shots to give Vermont a 66-64 lead. A Joe Greco lay-up followed by another lay-up by Terry Green gave Vermont a 70-66 lead and the Cats went on to win going away.

High scorers for Vermont were Green with 21, Gottschalk with 18, and Prehmus 16. Bernie Palmer and Barry Cohen also played very well for the Cats.

On Saturday night, Vermont's string of victories was stopped at eight as St. Joseph's defeated the Cats 84-70.

The Hawks shot very well throughout the game and opened a lead to as much as 20 late in the game. Putting the ball up from 15-18 feet, the Hawks were taking poor percentage shots but they were finding the basket anyway.

The Catamounts had defeated St Joseph's earlier this year, but they ran into a hot team Saturday and were beaten. Captain Ron Righter was sensational for the Hawks with 30 points and Fran Rafferty was instrumental in breaking the press of Vermont.

No one had a great night for the Cats, with IPrehmus high scorer with 13 points and Kevin Kelly collecting 11.

The Catamounts had a tough trip and went up against a hot team that had won four in a row previous to the Vermont game. Perhaps Vermont is the better team, but they weren't on Saturday.

Swim Team Drowned

In a hard fought meet, the UVM aqua cats were subdued 70-44 by the UConn Huskies. The Huskies came from a win over the UMaine Bears and were showing strong times in every event. The Aqua Cats fought tooth and nail, but were unable to capture enough first places to win the meet.

Many records were set during the three hour meet. The outstanding performance of the day was from UConn's Rick Weaver. He swam to a new New England Record in the 200 yard Breaststroke, flashing to a time of 2:13.4. UVM's own Ron Kirkwood broke his own varsity record in the 200 yard freestyle with a time of 1:49.5 and he also tied the existing varsity record in the 100 yard freestyle in a time of 49.7. Ron, a freshman, has consistently bettered the 200 yard freestyle record in meet after meet this year, and big things are expected of him in the New England Conference Meet at the end of the year.

In the diving events UConn's flamboyant Bruce Sweet set 2 records. Off the one meter board he had an unbeatable day scoring 295.45. In the three meter diving event the story was a little different. There was a knock down, drag out battle between UConn's Sweet and Vermont's Piche, with Sweet just grabbing the gold by three points. Both divers surpassed the old pool record during the competition.

Another record to fall was the 100 yard freestyle varsity record. Junior co-captain Mike Kurt broke his old record set last year with a time of 10:50.3. Kurt led the race for the first 36 laps but in a weakened condition after suffering the flu, he was unable to keep up the grueling pace. The UConn swimmer touched him out for first place.

Other standouts in the meet were Big Mike Jacobs who anchored the first place 400 yard freestyle relay, came in third in the 100 yard freestyle and in a judges' decision was given third place in the 50 yard freestyle. In that judges' decision Mike had posted a time of 22.7 and the UConn swimmer had a time of 22.8. It was too bad the decision was not in Mike's behalf. In the next event Cliff Johnson avenged the call by stroking to decisive victory over the Husky competition. Cliff has been steadily improving his time this year and comes up with the win when the going gets rough. Mike Delaney was also there when the Aqua Cats needed him. He placed second in the 200 yard freestyle event. Mike has been plagued with ankle injuries this year, but he is now out to do a job. Mark Haun for the first time beat his teammate Buzz Jones in the 200 yard butterfly. The two flyers were within eight tenths of a second of each other as they placed 2 and 3 in the event. Dave Phalen, who is recovering from a back injury, placed third in the 200 yard backstroke. Dave's first year as a backstroker has really shown his versatility. Finally, the 400 yard free relay saw Dave, Phalen, Mike Delaney, Ron Kirkwood, and Mike Jacobs taking first place in a time of 3:20.6.

The Aqua Cats now have a 2 and 3 record. This Saturday they swim against the New Hampshire swim team. The Cats again see red and are out to even up their record.

Catamounts Crush N.E.

by Randy Briggs

Saturday night at the Gutterson Field House the UVM hockey Catamounts put it all together offensively and defensively to defeat the Huskies from Northeastern University, 7-1. The previous evening the Cats lost a tough 7-6 game to the Boston University Terriers.

Earlier in the game Vermont had trouble moving the puck out of their own zone. Fine checking by Northeastern kept the Cats bottled up in their own end for the first three or four minutes of the game. Then Vermont started putting extreme pressure on Northeastern. They had numerous scoring chances after about the first five minutes of the game, but Huskie goalie Jay Mason came up with a few excellent saves to thwart the Cats' efforts. Vermont continued to hustle and it finally paid off when Michel Lebeau lit the lamp at the 9:49 mark of the period with the assist coming from Tom Colby.

Each team had numerous scoring chances throughout the period, but the two goalies came up with some superb saves. Mason saved 10 shots in the period while Vermont's Tom McNamara turned away 14. Thus the score at the end of the first period stood at 1-0 in favor of the Cats.

Vermont blew the game open in the second period as they scored three goals in the first ten minutes of play. Pete Brady netted the second Vermont goal with 4:02 gone in the period with assists coming from Lebeau and Yeates. Approximately four minutes later Tom Colby scored with assists from Rickard and Hurley. Then, at the 9:31 mark, Pete Brady scored what had to be the craziest goal of the night. Mason had made the original save from a shot out in front of him, but the puck deflected high off his stick and he lost sight of it. It ended up landing in back of him where from there Brady poked it home. Tim O'Connell then scored on one of his patented slap shots at the 16:05 mark of the period to give Vermont a commanding 5-0 lead.

About a minute later, Northeastern broke up McNamara's bid for a shut-out when Charlie Huck scored.

Vermont played very good hockey in the second period. The defense helped McNamara tremendously and all the lines were hustling. Northeastern had numerous chances but again McNamara came up with some great saves.

Vermont tallied twice in the final period on goals by Andy Rickard and Tim O'Connell. Vermont was defensive-minded in the last period as they checked well and prevented the Huskies from getting any good scoring opportunities. It was an excellent all around team performance, but in this writer's opinion, Tom McNamara was the star of the game. He made several saves that were of tremendous variety. He stopped 35 shots in all. The win pushed the Cats overall mark to 13-9 while their Division I record improved to 9-3. The win kept the Cats in third place in that division.

Boston University Defeats Vermont 7-6

(continued from page twelve)

the shot mainly because Vermont was caught in a line change.

UVM would not give up however, as John Glynne fired one high past Durocher to make it 7-6. The Cats pulled McNamara soon after Glynne's goal at 18:45 and with continual pressure, the UVM squad kept it tied up in their own end and had several close chances but couldn't put the puck home.

The Terrier defense was suberb through most of the game but the Cats skated very well and played even with BU most of the time. Occasional lapses hurt the Catamounts but all in all it was a very well played game by both clubs.

Defensemen Vic Stanfield, the brother of Fred Stanfield, and Peter Brown were standouts for Boston.

The freshman line of Halford, Reber and Randy Koch was a key factor for Vermont scoring two goals and their forechecking and good defense were of great importance. Michael Lebeau had a good night as did Tim O'Connell and Roger Mallette.

Final statistics showed McNamara with 35 saves and Durocher with 22. Tim O'Connell added yet another two goals to his account and Roger Mallette and Bill McAlduff got two assists apiece for Vermont.

The answer to the game was the balance of Boston. They skate very well and stayed with and perhaps even outskated the Cats a bit. Vermont played well but Boston University played a little bit better.

Love Music

RECORD TO MAKE LOVE BY

(Earth News) – Syntonic Research, maker of environmental records, is about to release a new long-player which the company describes as the "perfect sound for lovemaking." The record is called "The Ultimate Heartbeat" and features the sound of a woman's pulsating heart for 20 minutes. The firm says a woman's heart was used because it "works best... it's slower than a man's."

PFG-Schedule

Patrick-Forbush-Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of February, 7, 8, 9
FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7
GYM – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15 years)
RINK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15 years)
TRACK – Faculty-Staff none.
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8
GYM – Students – none.
POOL – Students 7–10 p.m.
RINK – Students 7–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Students 7–10 p.m.
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 9
GYM – Students none
POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
RINK – Students 8:30–10 p.m.
TRACK – Students 1–5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.
MONDAY through FRIDAY
POOL – 8:30–10:30 p.m.
All other facilities – 7–8 p.m.

...Nuclear Power

(continued from page one)

the state to limit federally authorized nuclear power plants.

To this idea Willard Ballard, a Zoologist from Norwich, remarked that it had been Vermont which had declared a state of war before the U.S. Congress in World War II and that again it looked as if Vermont should "send up a signal to the nation" on nuclear power.

Women's Gymnastics Team Triumphs, Record 7-1

In meets on Friday, Saturday, and Monday, the women's gymnastics team outdistanced four other teams to up their over-all record to seven wins and one loss.

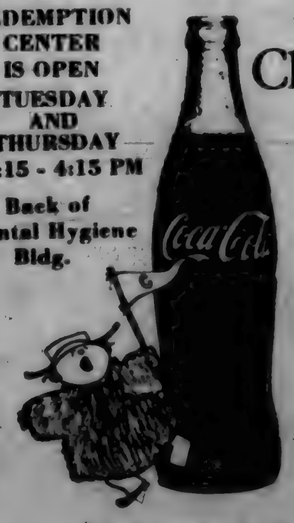
Friday, in a dual meet at Vermont College, UVM defeated their hosts by a score of 48.20 to 58.20. In vaulting, Carole Shiber was first, Sue Tetrault took second. The uneven parallel bars competition was completely dominated by UVM gymnasts, who swept all five top spots. In order of finish, they were Kathy Zajchowski, Joanne Houbolt, Cillia Minott, Terry Brown, and Sue Tetrault. On Beam, Terry Brown took second place, Cilla Minott fourth, and Joanna Houbolt fifth. Floor exercise saw Cilla Minott take first, with Carole Shiber and Terry Brown adding points.

Saturday, the gymnasts hosted their first optional home meet, emerging victorious over U. Maine (Orono) and Castleton State. Vaulting was won by Anne Hayes, with the meet's highest score of 8.3. Debbie Light was fourth, and Carole Chesley added points for the Catamounts. Janet Lynch and Karen Eskilsen placed first and second on beam, while Barbara Abrams and Janet Lynch took the top two places on unevens. On floor exercise, Donna Blanchette placed first, Debbie Light third, and Carol Chesley fifth. The final score was UVM 74.55, UMaine 48.90, and Castleton State 59.95.

Monday's meet was the closest of the weekend, with UVM defeating SUNY Cortland, 80.35 to 77.35. Cortland was ahead at the end of the first two events, but strong performances in Floor Exercise and Beam pulled UVM into the lead. In vaulting, Ann Hayes ended up in first place, with a score of 8.4 Only .05 point behind her was Janet Lynch. Debbie Light placed fourth. Bars were once again the low point of the meet for UVM, with Barbara Abrams placing third the only high finish for the team. Beam saw Janet Lynch in first place, Carole Chesley in second, Karen Eskilsen in fourth, and Terry Brown in fifth. Floor exercise was strong for UVM, with the team taking all five top places. In order of finish, they were Janet Lynch, Ann Hayes, Donna Blanchette, Carole Chesley, and Debbie Light.

This Saturday, Feb. 8, the gymnasts will host Springfield College at 1 p.m. Springfield was the number two college women's team in the United States last year, and it should be an afternoon of super gymnastics. It's free, so come on out and see the team in action.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

COKE REDEMPTION CENTER IS OPEN TUESDAY AND THURSDAY 12:15 - 4:15 PM
Back of Dental Hygiene Bldg.
Cheers!


It's the real thing. Coke.

GIGANTIC SKI SALE

Entire Stock On Sale!!
SKIS
BOOTS POLES MITTENS
GLOVES
SNOWSHOES
TURTLENECKS
AFTER-SKI BOOTS
20% to 50% OFF
SOCKS
SKI PANTS
PARKAS
SWEATERS
WARM-UP PANTS CAR RACKS
ICE SKATES
UNDERWEAR
ALPINE SHOP
WILLISTON ROAD, SO. BURLINGTON
OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.

UVM SPORTS

Terriers Trip Vermont

Bill Koch attempts to tee one up while Rogie Mallette looks on. SPS Photo: Don Green

by Norm Robinson

After handing UNH a loss two nights previous, the University of Vermont skating Catamounts went up against Boston University on Friday night. The Cats played even with the BU Terriers for two periods, with scores of 3-3 and 4-4 after each stanza, but the well balanced club from Boston proved to be a bit too much for Vermont as they nipped the Cats 7-6.

Vermont had been defeated by BU down in Boston on January 15 by a score of 6-3 and that game was much like Friday's In that game it was 2-2 after two periods before the Terriers overpowered UVM

Michael Lebeau got the Cats off to a quick start when he beat Brian Durocher, the BU goaltender with a low backhand shot from the left side.

Boston came back at the 12:53 mark when Mike Erurione got a drop pass from Rick Meagher at the right face off circle and fired a low slap shot past McNamara.

The Terriers took a 2-1 lead off a Bill Robbins flip shot out of a crowd and it looked as though BU was going to turn the Cats off the ice. Randy Koch gave Vermont some live moments later however when he and Bill McAlduff came in two on one and Koch hit a slap shot to the far side of Durocher.

Rick Meagher hit one for BU, before Tim O'Connell got a power play goal to make it 3-3. O'Connell found the puck loose in front of the net and flipped a wrist shot behind Durocher with only 52 seconds left in the period.

The first period was well played by both clubs, with end-to-end action throughout the period. Vermont forechecked very well, especially Andy Halford and Michael Lebeau.

The second period was not as wide open as the first had been and only two goals were scored. Peter Marzo got a power play goal at the 3:40 mark when he received a pass from Gary Fay at the left side of McNamara and the shot found the net over Tom's shoulder.

Tim O'Connell tied it up for the Catamounts with a minute and a half left when he fired a low slap shot on the near side past Durocher. John Glynne, at the right point, got a pass over to O'Connell, 20 feet in front of Durocher, and Tim lit the lamp.

The third period was a wild and wooly one. BU got two quick goals by Bill Robbins and Mike Fiddler to go ahead 6-4 and the Cats just couldn't catch up.

Bill Reber showed his speed when he got the puck at center ice, broke past a defender and tucked the puck into the short side to make it 6-5.

With 2:21 left, Bill Burlington got the eventually winning goal when he fired a perfectly placed slap shot past McNamara to the far side. Burlington was able to get off

(continued on page eleven)

Icecats Claw New Hampshire In 8-7 Win

by Richard Rottkov

For those fortunate spectators who witnessed Vermont's stunning 8-7 squeaker over New Hampshire Wednesday evening, it will certainly be a game they will never forget. The script satisfied all pre-game anticipation as the Cats came from behind, before a jam-packed Albert L. Gutterson Field House, to score five unanswered goals in the second period after trailing 2-0 at the conclusion of the first stanza.

Pre-game buildup stipulated that this year's initial show-down between Vermont and the Wildcats of New Hampshire would have more at stake than last year's "game of the year." Vermont, having advanced to Division I this year, is contending for a playoff spot with UNH and the all-important home ice advantage. Both UVM's Coach Jim Cross and UNH's Charlie Holt intimated that this and future Vermont-New Hampshire encounters are " the games" their respective players look forward to and it has already developed into an intense rivalry--New Hampshire having replaced Middlebury and Norwich as Vermont's number one foe.

The partisan Catamount fans were primed for the occasion as Gutterson rocked to the chant of "Go Cats Go." Whoever thought that home ice was little advantage? The crowd had to have been a plus factor as they took the ice. UVM dominated play during the early going as the Cats controlled the puck, inside their blue line. Despite the continuous pressure on the UNH defense and all-American goaltender Cap Raeder, the Cats failed to connect. The UNH defensemen were outmuscling UVM in front of the goal, preventing the Cats from finishing off their plays. Time after time UVM was just shy of jamming home the game's initial goal. But the momentum changed as New Hampshire's crashing defenses and aggressive forechecking forewards dominated the action. It appeared that whenever a UVM player tried to carry the puck over the blue line, he was either ridden into the boards or would lose control of the puck due to UNH's constant pressure. New Hampshire drew first blood as Wing Mike Burkhardt carried the puck into the Vermont zone to the left of UVM goalie, Tom McNamara. He flipped a centering pass to Dave Tumley whose shot was stopped by McNamara. Tumley gathered in the rebound and stuffed a wrist shot in the short side to give the Wildcats an early lead.

At 17:52 of the first period Tumley picked up a loose puck at center ice and fired a long slap shot from outside the blue line. The shot eluded McNamara waist high to his glove side and UNH had an intimidating lead of 2-0.

Finally, at 19:17 of period one the first penalty of the game was called--Glenn Hunter for tripping. Thirty five seconds later UNH's fine center Jamie Hislop was penalized. Period one ended with New Hampshire leading 2-0, though UVM had a two-man advantage to start play for the second period.

As anticipated, UVM's two-man advantage was the break the Cats needed to get into the scoring column. Vermont struck like lightning, playing what Coach Cross termed, "as good a period of hockey we have ever played. We played well in the first period, I don't care what the score was, I knew the goals would come." And they did. Tim O'Connell scoring at 1:37 on a rebound following Rogie Mallettes point blank wrist shot. The goal was O'Connell's 23rd of the year and 68th lifetime, to give him a career total of 153 points making UVM's all-time leading scorer.

Then the flood gates gave way on UNH's Raeder. Billy Reber, one of the many talented UVM freshmen, picked up a loose puck at center ice, out-skating two defensemen. On a breakaway he let fly a wrist shot beating Raeder to the short side, just 18 seconds after O'Connell's goal to knot the score at two. Two minutes later following another New Hampshire penalty, Rogie Mallette scored the go-ahead goal taking a beautiful shot from O'Connell right in front of the net. Following the game Rogie said, "During the first period the puck just wasn't bouncing our way. They were very strong and physical, especially in front of the net. We knew they couldn't continue to hold us off the net as they wouldn't keep up the pace and would eventually tire as the game went along."

Billy Reber lights the lamp in the game against New Hampshire. SPS Photo: Mark Walker

The rest of the second period was all Vermont. When UVM was not bombarding Raeder on offense, McNamara was excelling in the goal. The UVM defensemen , Glynne, Murphy, Yeats, McAldriff and Ross, were checking well and blocking shot after shot as they would not hesitate to go down on a slapshot. John Glynne, called by Cross "one of the finest defensemen in the country," said, "shotblocking isn't something we were taught. It is typical of our style When I feel I have good position, I know I can block the shot clearly without fear of a deflection toward the goal." This ability for the UVM defense was a key in lessening the onslaught on McNamara and the eventual final score.

At 11:00 of the second period Vermont struck again on what was perhaps the prettiest goal of the evening. Andy Halford picking up a loose puck at center ice, skated inside the blue line, one on one against Chip Norton of the Wildcats. Giving two shoulder and head fakes, he wound up and fired a shot in the short side, as Raeder was leaning the wrong way- giving Vermont a 4-2 lead, Shortly after, Halford controlling the puck at the UNH blue line starting up the ice, spotted Reber streaking up the right side. Halford laid a perfect pass on Reber's stick for a breakaway. Reber's shot from 5 feet went between Raeder's legs, Vermont scoring their fifth consecutive goal of the period to lead at 5-2.

There were a great many Vermont fans who remembered last year's game that were probably fully aware that the Wildcats would not lay dead despite trailing 5-2 after two periods. Last year Vermont led 4-2 after two and UNH came back to win 6-4. Reminiscent of last year, UNH came back to score two quick goals in the opening four minutes to cut the margin to just one goal. To many it seemed like last year all over again.

A goal by Billy Koch gave Vermont a lead of two goals, but the pendulum of momentum was just starting. In rapid succession, Bertello scored for UNH, and Randy Koch retaliated giving Vermont a seemingly secure 8-6 lead with 4:23 remaining in the game.

With 22 seconds to go, UNH removed Raeder and the extra attacker paid off as Cliff Cox scored on a beautiful centering pass from Hislop to cut the margin to 8-7. For Catamount fans the final 22 seconds probably seemed like forever. As the nervously jubilant crowd counted down the final seconds, New Hampshire just missed as McNamara made a kick save with four seconds left . The final buzzer sounded; the Catamounts just hanging on by their claws to win 8-7.

As Billy Koch astutely put it after the game, "We knew they had to come back and put a great deal of pressure on us. If we hadn't scored in the second, they wouldn't have pressured us like they did in the third period. We were not about to change out game by sitting on the lead. It would have been a mistake." O'Connell then added, "You think defensive only once you get down near the end. But if you attempt to change the tempo of the game, you're in trouble."

The one-goal Vermont victory on their home ice sets the stage for an exciting rematch in Durham, February 25

Rugby Team Prepares

The UVM Rugby Team will begin indoor practice Wednesday, February 12, at 6:30 p.m. at the Gutterson indoor track. A spring schedule will be undertaken with games scheduled against Norwich, St. Michael's, Dartmouth and several Canadian teams beginning late in March.

With the demise of football, Rugby remains as the only tackle/contact sport on campus. The club is continually seeking new members for the team; no previous experience is required. As UVM fields both an A and B squad, all members of the team are guaranteed to play this season. For those unable to make the initial practice and meeting, practice will be Tuesday and Thursday at 9:45 p.m. and Wednesday at 7:00 p.m.

Job Opening In Sports Info. Department

The Office of Sports Information, attached to the Public Relations Office at the University, is seeking student help for the 1975-76 academic year. Preference will be given to current freshmen and sophomores and to work-study applicants.

The position, approximately 15-20 hours a week, entails staffing all home athletic events (with some travel to away games), writing of hometown releases, statistical work in basketball and hockey and additional duties in the Office of Public Relations. Interested students should contact the Financial Aid Office or Dick Whittier, Director of Sports Information, Alumni House (x2005).

you'll JUMP at these Big Discounts!

Save up to $3.00!

Records

Top artists!

Major labels!

Hundreds of records! Classics included!

Many, many selections in this special purchase.

SALE starts Feb. 10 - Monday

UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

DON'T MISS THIS SALE!!

Come early for best selection!

AT THE BONE
43 KING ST.
(Corner S. Champlain & King)
Happy Hour
DAILY 4-9
ALL BEVERAGES DISCOUNTED
LOWEST PRICES AROUND
GOLD TEQUILA NITE
SUNDAY 7-11

SUNDANCE
ONCE A YEAR SALE
20% OFF ALL LADIES & MENS
Leather Jackets, Vests, Pants
Thursday, Friday, & Saturday
February 6,7,8 only
25% off SHEEPSKIN COATS,
VESTS, MITTENS and WINTER HATS
Plus other Unadvertised Items
SUNDANCE
In Traders Way
18 N. Winooski Ave.
Downtown Burlington

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 5
FEBRUARY 13, 1975

V

MacAuslan

In a Cynic interview Student Association President Peter MacAusland put forth his opinions concerning the SA Senate's dissolution and outlined the procedure to be implemented in deciding the future of UVM's student government.

MacAusland is the sole elected representative of the general student body at UVM.

MacAusland feels general student apathy and the Senate's self-identification as a powerless and token body were the major factors behind the Senate's dissolution.

He also asserts, however, that many Senators were "token representatives" and lacked the motivation to press for action on important issues. He contends that the Senate's major failing was lack of knowledge concerning the most effective techniques to utilize in voicing its opinions.

MacAusland insists that the Senate did have the power to influence University decisions, if it had employed the proper techniques of expression. He affirms that students must "work within the sytems and not against it" citing violent protest as "ineffective"

He contends that "if we show the administration the majority of students are really for something we can have constructive input in influencing decisions."

MacAusland feels the Senate must play the role of leader, motivator, and coordinator, contending that it is the individual senator's responsibility to bring major issues to their constituents and coordinate the articulation of student demands.

MacAusland contends also that "it is the Senate's duty to prepare the research when the administration asks why the students take a certain stand."

Citing the underpass issue, he notes that SA circulated petitions a

Vermont Reinstat

by Paul Cain

Vermont's new Attorney General, M. Jerome Diamond, talked Friday on what he would like to see included in the new Criminal Code being drawn up by Vermont legislature. His views were highlighted by his proposal to re-initiate capital punishment in cases of aggravated murder and a "no objection" stand on the decriminalization of marijuana -- with stipulations.

Jerome Diamond succeeded the incumbent Kimberly Cheney after a spiked campaign in which Diamond accused the former Attorney General of loose spending and inefficiency in Vermont's sludge suit with the International Paper Company. Diamond received a slim margin over Cheney in the

The Marshall Tucker Band brings S

FEBRUARY 6, 1975

8-7 Win

...w Hampshire. SPS Photo: Mark Walker

...ound up ...the short. ...ening the ...rmont a ...r. Halford ...k at the ...g up the ...eaking up ...rd laid a ...ber's stick ...ber's shot ...between ...st scoring ...e goal of ...3-2. ...eat many ...'a who ...r's game ...ully aware ...ld not lay ...5-2 after ...ast year ...r two and ...win 6-4 ...ear. UNH ...two quick ...ning four ...margin to ...many it ...e all over

...Koch gave ...two goals, ...ium of ...t starting ..., Bertello ...ed Randy ...g Vermont ...8-6 lead ...ng in the ...25

With 22 seconds to go, UNH removed Raeder and the extra attacker paid off as Cliff Cox scored on a beautiful centering pass from Hislop to cut the margin to 8-7. For Catamount fans the final 22 seconds probably seemed like forever. As the nervously jubilant crowd counted down the final seconds, New Hampshire just missed as McNamara made a kick save with four seconds left. The final buzzer sounded; the Catamounts just hanging on by their claws to w'n 8-7.

As Billy Koch astutely put it after the game, "We knew they had to come back and put a great deal of pressure on us. If we hadn't scored in the second, they wouldn't have pressured us like they did in the third period. We were not about to change our game by sitting on the lead. It would have been a mistake," O'Connell then added, "You think defensive only once you get down near the end. But if you attempt to change the tempo of the game, you're in trouble."

The one-goal Vermont victory on their home ice sets the state for an exciting rematch in Durham, February

...pening In Sports ...fo. Department

...f Sports ...ed to the ...Vice at the ...ng student ...n academic ...ll be given ...hmen and ...work-study

...proximately ...week, entails staffing all home athletic events (with some travel to away games), writing of hometown releases, statistical work in basketball and hockey and additional duties in the Office of Public Relations. Interested students should contact the Financial Aid Office or Dick Whittier, Director of Sports Information, Alumni House (x2005).

...DANCE
...EAR SALE
...DIES & MENS
...ets, Vests, Pants
...urday
February 6,7,8 only
...EPSKIN COATS,
...nd WINTER HATS
...vertised Items
...CE
In Traders Way,
18 N. Winooski Ave.
Downtown Burlington

VOLUME XCIII
NUMBER 5
FEBRUARY 13, 1975

VERMONT CYNIC

University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

"Tis a privilege to live in Vermont"

MacAusland Airs Views On S.A.

In a Cynic interview Student Association President Peter MacAusland put forth his opinions concerning the SA Senate's dissolution and outlined the procedure to be implemented in deciding the future of UVM's student government.

MacAusland is the sole elected representative of the general student body at UVM.

MacAusland feels general student apathy and the Senate's self-identification as a powerless and token body were the major factors behind the Senate's dissolution.

He also asserts, however, that many Senators were "token representatives" and lacked the motivation to press for action on important issues. He contends that the Senate's major failing was lack of knowledge concerning the most effective techniques to utilize in voicing its opinions.

MacAusland insists that the Senate did have the power to influence University decisions if it had employed the proper techniques of expression. He affirms that students must "work within the sytems and not against it" citing violent protest as "ineffective".

He contends that "if we show the administration the majority of students are really for something we can have constructive input in influencing decisions."

MacAusland feels the Senate must play the role of leader, motivator, and coordinator, contending that it is the individual senator's responsibility to bring major issues to their constituents and coordinate the articulation of student demands.

MacAusland contends also that "it is the Senate's duty to rally support for an issue and prepare the research when the administration asks why the students take a certain stand."

Citing the underpass issue, he notes that SA circulated petitions against the underpass' construction to present to the legislature and is prepared to back its demands with pertinent facts.

Concerning the bill currently in the House that would cut off funds for the underpass' construction, MacAusland asserts that SA will hire a lawyer and bring the issue to court if he is not satisfied with the legislature's justification if it kills the bill.

The SA's coordination of student demands on this issue and its willingness to employ all resources at its disposal illustrates what MacAusland considers effective techniques in presenting student demands.

He also offers the example of a massive letter writing or telephone campaign as effective demand articulation. Student protest could be a technique of last resort.

MacAusland feels students can have a real voice in the university's decision-making process if they push for it. He notes that many universities have committees comprised of administrators, faculty and students that decide important issues. He contends that UVM's faculty, through its Senate committees, has signigicant input in university decisions because of effective communication with the administration.

MacAusland promises to fight for a student seat on the board of trustees as his next major campaign after the resolution of the underpass.

MacAusland identifies the key to a more effective student government as "motivatated senators willing to work for things and response from students."

He hopes to eliminate the percentage-based form of representation and institute a one-man one-vote system. He would accomplish this objective by separating the campus into three units: on-campus, off-campus, and fraternities, and having the students in these areas elect one representative per specified number of students.

MacAusland feels the Inter-Residence Association and Greek Coordinating Council can handle issues arising within these smaller units.

Outlining the procedures to be employed in determining the form of a new government, MacAusland said he plans to incorporate the student proposals presented Tuesday night into a referendum to be voted on by the entire student body.

Peter MacAusland SPS Photo: Wynn Gold

The decision on which proposals are included in the referendum will be made either by himself or through a general meeting of students on Tuesday, February 18.

MacAusland notes that the results of an S.A. telephone poll querying students on their general feelings about S.A. will also help determine the specific proposals to be put on the referendum.

MacAusland concludes that "any changes in the operation of S.A. will be for the better," and said he will be "disappointed" if no changes are made.

Trustee Committee Considers Ways To Increase Revenue

by Margo Howard

A subcommittee of the UVM Board of Trustees met Thursday in an all-day session to discuss university expenses and ways of increasing revenue. The committee will recommend to the Board that the UVM College of Medicine tuition (now the same as undergraduate tuition) be raised $500 and that the UVM undergraduate student admissions application fee be raised $5. (It is now $15.)

Trustees questioned the University's practice of overmatching funds to the Extension Service. Federal funds are being matched, but the University is putting in more funds than required. Dean Dow and Extension Service Director Robert Davison will report back next week on what their priorities would be if some of this extra money were cut out.

Richard Barwin, Office of the Registrar, reported on the tuition structure. The possibility of charging tuition by credit-hour instead of a flat rate was another of the numerous items under discussion.

Up to last year, students were charged a flat rate for 12 credit hours or more. Often this led to credit overloads and overcrowded classrooms. Presently, students are charged extra if they take more than 18 hours (and less if they take fewer than 12 hours.)

Dr. Patterson told the Cynic that charging by credit-hour would discourage overloads, students would take fewer courses and the quality would also be less objectionable than a flat increase of, say, $100 in the tuition rate.

There is also a possibility that more students could be

(continued on page three)

Closing Of UVM Day Care Center Arouses Opposition

by Stephen W. Tanner

In a memorandum sent Jan. 30 by Alfred B. Rollins, Vice President for Academic Affairs, the UVM Day Care Center was informed that it would have to stop operation June 30th "because of financial exigencies in the operation of the Center."

Opened in 1971, the Center serves 90 children ages 2-6 years old. Fifty percent of the nursery school children are UVM faculty or staff children and 60 percent are of low income families. One third of the Center's staff are UVM students training with the Office of Volunteer Programs (OVP) at the University of Vermont. The school is also used by UVM for research in psychology, speech therapy, nutrition, and early childhood education.

"Upon recommendation of the Day Care Center Board of Directors, as well as that of Dr. R. B. Musty, Chairman, Dept. of Psychology, Dr. J. G. Weigner, Dean, College of Arts and Sciences, and myself," Rollins said the Center would have to close.

"One of the financial problems stems from the fact that many children who are in the Center are supported by State Day Care funds which pay only 60 to 70 percent of the actual cost per student. The University has concluded that it simply cannot pay the remaining balance of cost which are not supplied by the State.

Dan Albert, UVM Day Care Center's Director, stated flatly that the recommendation of the Day Care Center Board of Directors "never occurred." And that State day care funds pay "actually 88%" of the cost per student.

Parents and staff have unanimously opposed the University's decision. Responding to the financial argument for closing the school, Albert declared that "when the Center's community service, instructional and research use, and grant income are taken into account, it is clear that the Center more than pays for itself."

Albert said the University's only cost is the building at Fort Ethan Allen and less than $20,000 yearly to fund the deficit. He added that last semester over 150 UVM students used the Center for training.

The Center was transferred from the aegis of the President's office six weeks ago to Professor Musty's office. Musty has indicated that the building provided for the Center is expensive and that "University space is very short these days and expensive". If the Center plans to move to an on-campus location.

Musty said UVM can't fund the children attending the Center because the State does not pay 100% of the cost of State subsidized youngsters.

Peggy Luhrs, a parent, appealed to the public for support: "Concerned citizens aware of the need for quality child care services in Chittenden County must move to help keep the UVM Day Care Center intact. Contact your legislators, your friends and neighbors, and Dr. Alfred Rollins, UVM Academic Vice President, to guarantee that quality child care services do not get lost in the shuffle of financial crisis."

UVM Day Care Center

Vermont Attorney General Suggests Reinstatement Of Death Penalty

by Paul Cain

Vermont's new Attorney General, M. Jerome Diamond, talked Friday on what he would like to see included in the new Criminal Code being drawn up by Vermont legislature. His views were highlighted by his proposal to re-initiate capital punishment in cases of aggravated murder and a "no objection" stand on the decriminalization of marijuana – with stipulations.

Jerome Diamond succeeded the incumbent Kimberly Cheney after a spiked campaign in which Diamond accused the former Attorney General of loose spending and inefficiency in Vermont's sludge suit with the International Paper Company. Diamond received a slim margin over Cheney in the popular vote but failed to win an overall majority throwing the election into the Vermont House of Representatives. The House elected Diamond Attorney General early this session.

The Democrat Diamond shows himself to have conservative tendencies backed by a strict legal sense. These characteristics could very well influence the drawing up of Vermont's new criminal code.

In that Criminal Code, which will consolidate and define all Vermont criminal laws, Diamond would like to see the death penalty reinstated for aggravated murder. This category would include murders of five types:

1) Murder committed while incustody for a previous murder.

2) Murder committed within five years of a previous murder.

3) The murder of two or more people.

4) The murder of a law enforcement official attempting to make an arrest or prevent an escape.

5) Contract murders.

Diamond said he believes the death penalty should be applied to crimes of this sort because it would act as a deterent and would be "appropriate and legitimate." He backed his deterent claim by saying that in states where recent legislation has forestalled the death sentence statistics show serious and violent crime increasing up to 50–60%. Although one can prove people do commit murder despite the death penalty, he says, "one cannot prove how many do not".

(continued on page eight)

The Marshall Tucker Band brings Southern rock to northern Vermont Sunday, February 23 in UVM's Patrick Gym.

Burlington Shooting Case In Review

by Peter Duquette

Editors note: This is the first in a series of investigative reports by Peter Duquette on the Burlington shooting of Luis Ponce Marin Rodriguez.

At 4:15 a.m. on Saturday September 21, 1974, a 25 year old Rhode Island man, Luis Ponce Marin Rodriguez, was shot and killed by police during a burglary attempt at the Red Lion Restaurant on King St. In first releases to the press, then Chittenden County State's Attorney Patrick Leahy declined to immediately release the name of the officer responsible and most of the facts relating to the case. It was, however, made public that the establishment was staked out after police received information that the place would be burglarized by "an armed person." Death was caused by a gunshot wound in the head.

During a press conference on the Tuesday following the shooting, Leahy released the details surrounding the shooting. Ponce, a Puerto Rican national, was shot by Burlington detective Harold Miles in an alley adjacent to the restaurant. According to the report, police observed Ponce leaving the restaurant with a cash box in his right hand, and his left hand was concealed, wrapped in a cloth. Ignoring orders to drop these articles and surrender, Ponce went to another part of the alley. At this point the officers approached, and came into physical contact by placing a hand on each of the man's shoulders. Disregarding an order to go against the wall, the police with guns drawn, placed the man against the wall. At this time, it was reported, Ponce still had the articles in his hands. He was then ordered to raise his hands over his head, at this point he quickly backed away from the wall and toward the officers. It was at this moment that Miles shot the man in the back of the head with his service revolver.

At the press conference, Leahy also reported that the information that the burglar would be armed, came from a relative of the dead man. Another fact which came to light, was that the man was unarmed at the time of the shooting, but, as Leahy stated, "...the police were justified in thinking that he was." If the information proved correct (that is, had Ponce been armed) two police officers would have been in mortal danger. Therefore the officers did not require absolute evidence according to the State's Attorney.

In other information released at the time by Deputy State's Attorney Francis X. Murray, Ponce had a criminal record in Rhode Island (two burglaries) and in Connecticut. He was also linked to a burglary on August 17 on South Union in which $200 in cash and jewels were taken.

Four police officers observed Ponce for over an hour as he first attempted to gain entrance through a hatchway, then finally broke a window in the rear door to enter.

The cash box in the man's right hand contained $90. in cash.

Leahy concluded that the case was one of justifiable homicide. The shooting would not have happened if Ponce had followed orders, according to the State's Attorney. He also stated that no legal action would be initiated by his office against Miles. Miles was "acting well within his duties" during the shooting.

On Thursday, September 25, 1974, Governor Thomas Salmon refused to name a special prosecutor into the case unless shown "a compelling need." The Governor did, however, request a report on the incident from Edward Corcoran, Public Safety Commissioner and head of the Vermont State Police.

At the same time, David Harrison, the executive director of the Vermont chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union questioned the judgments of those involved in the case. He said, "It strains credulity that four detectives who were in constant surveillance for at least one hour" couldn't apprehend the man without killing him. He also questioned the impartiality of the State's Attorney's office in the case since they work closely with the Burlington Police and therefore cannot antagonize them. Harrison concluded that the case should have been given to a grand jury for further examination.

Deputy State's Attorney Francis X. Murray defended his office by stating that Harrison was "ignoring the facts." Murray then repeated the facts which led to the untimely death of Luis Ponce.

– The police received reports that the suspect was armed.

– The alley in which the shooting took place was dark.

– The suspect did not follow police orders.

– The suspect was concealing something in the cloth which he held in his left hand. (An object which was later discovered to be a pair of pliers.)

– The suspect lurched from the wall. Miles fired without aiming. Murray concluded by saying that the State's Attorney's office has nothing to hide.

On Tuesday October 1, 1974, the report from the Public Safety Commissioner was released to the public. It concluded, as did Leahy, that the shooting of Luis Ponce Marin Rodriguez by Detective Harold Miles was justifiable homicide.

(Next week the series will continue with the response from Vermonters For Justice, the A.C.L.U. and other agencies.)

Featured This Week

The Exchange... pg.3

World Look At Abortion...pg.5

Tucker/ Bramlett Preview...pg.6

This paper is recyclable. Call Robinson Hall for more information. 656-3084.

- CALENDAR and ANNOUNCEMENTS -

Cynic Goes To Town

Starting with this issue, the Vermont Cynic will be distributed in downtown Burlington. It is our hope that more people in the community will be able to have access to its reading and in turn more opportunity to react to this university's only newspaper publication.

The paper can be picked up (at no charge) at the Fresh Ground Coffee House, the Corner Bookstore, The Little Professor Bookstore, Hargraves Market, and the State Liquor Store. We encourage public reaction as to where further distribution might be desirable or more convenient.

GRE Workshop

This is to advise you that the GRE Workshop has been scheduled for Tuesday, February 18th.

Time – 7:00 p.m. through 9:00 p.m.

Place – Waterman Building (Reading Center), Room 411.

Materials: GRE workbooks will be made available for workshop participants as an aid to study. These may be picked up at the Counseling and Testing Center. In order to obtain a workbook, the student must leave either a $5.00 deposit or his/her student ID. Both will be returned when the workbook is returned.

Number of students is unlimited.

Women In China

Jane Uptegrove from U.S.–China People's Friendship Association, Boston Chapter is speaking and showing slides about Women in China. Jane was a member of a 3–month trip to China in the fall of 1971 during which she lived and worked on an agricultural commune and in a cotton textile factory in Shanghai.

Date: Feb.12

Time: 7:30–9:30 p.m.

Place: B101 Living/Learning

For further information call 878-2987 after 6 p.m.

UVM Ice Show

UVM gold and silver medal skaters will present a salute to the "years of the silver screen" Fri. and Sat., Feb. 14 and 15 in Gutterson Field House.

UVM seniors who have won awards in national competition are featured in this interpretation of excerpts from America's favorite musicals, "Mame", "Cabaret", "West Side Story", and the current major films "Papillion" and "The Sting".

Kathleen Ryan, 1970 gold and silver medalist in U.S. dance and figure skating competition respectively, will train, choreograph and direct this musical adaptation. Ruth Ledcramer is conversely the winner of a silver medal in U.S. dance competition and a gold medal in figure skating finals. Also appearing are skaters Rudd Young of St. Lawrence University, a specialist in free dance and comic skating; and Mike Masionis, the champion of the 1974 New England freestyle meets. Fifty students in all will participate in the production.

By supporting this event, you may well be surprised at the hidden talent revealed in our fellow UVM students.

Tickets are priced at $1.00 for students, $1.50 per adult and .50 for children under 12 (UVM students under 12, free) and are available at the UVM Bookstore, Bailey's, Mills and Greer, and Valuga Sports.

Self-Expression Through Gymnastics

What is the "sport" that requires the use of the most "muscle" groups?... AND requires that you... know... how to use all of these together (in an integrated fashion)... AND allows you the freedom of Self-Expression... WHERE you determine, (free will... choice), where your body is in space... artistic gymnastics.

Saturday, February 15, 1975, Patrick Gymnasium, 1:00 in the afternoon, the men from the University of Vermont and the men from the University at Plymouth, New Hampshire will perform in an Artistic Gymnastics meeting.

VPIRG Volunteers Wanted

Energy Conservation volunteers are needed to help conduct an energy waste hunt to determine where unnecessary energy is being wasted. Contact Nathlie Worthington, 863-3435.

Also volunteers are badly needed to help maintain the VPIRG office at 49 No. Prospect in Burlington. Anyone interested in any of the above projects or in VPIRG in general is urged to contact VPIRG at 863-3435. Also every Monday at 5 there is a local board meeting that is open to anyone interested. If you have time stop by Billings Center Conference Room C at 5 p.m. Monday night.

Employment Interviews

EMPLOYMENT INTERVIEWS – Period No. 5 – Week of February 24 – 28

February 25, 26, 27 – ACTION (Peace Corps & Vista): information booths in Billings; personal interviews in the Placement Office, Mansfield House.

February 26 – Grand Union Co.; Management Trainee Positions.

February 27 – Northwestern Mutual Life Ins.; Sales and Service of Personal & Business Life Insurance. Leading to field and/or Home Office positions.

February 28 – Hannaford Bros. Co. (Martin's Food Chain): Positions in Retail Management, Accounting, Marketing.

Signup for these interviews February 17, 18, 19 in the Career Planning and Placement Office, Mansfield House.

Newswriters Wanted For Cynic

The Vermont Cynic desperately needs newswriters to cover the innumerable news events happening on campus. The University of Vermont is in a very dynamic transitional period and many important decisions are being made that directly affect students. As a writer for the Cynic, you can meet the people that are making these decisions and analyze their impact. Writing is also a valuable experience in organizing and communicating your ideas in a concise manner.

Escape the confines of Bailey Library and the dormitories and make your college experience worthwhile. Call the Cynic office at 658-4911 and leave your name or drop in the office on ground floor Billings anytime.

Omicron Nu Presents Dr. McCrorey

The Phi Chapter of Omicron Nu, a national home economics honor society, will sponsor a symposium based on a speech given by Dr. H. Lawrence McCrorey. A video-taped presentation of Dr. McCrorey's speech, "Roots and Ramifications of Individuality," will be shown in the Vermont Room, Terrill Hall, Wednesday, Feb. 19 from 7:30 – 9:30 p.m. The University and general public are invited to attend. A discussion led by faculty and students will follow the film.

Dr. McCrorey is professor of Physiology and Biophysics and Associate Vice president of Academic Affairs at UVM.

Extension Service Jobs Available

The University of Vermont Extension Service in Chittenden County is now taking applications for summer employment. University of Vermont students who are receiving financial aid or who are on the work-study program are eligible. Jobs available include working in pre-school programs, gardening, soils mapping and urban youth programs. Dates of employment are May 27- Aug. 29, 1975. Beginning salary is $2.25 per hour and up depending on experience.

As most of the programs involve working directly with children, creativity and innovative approaches are welcome. Initiative and enthusiasm as well as specific skills in camping, biking, nutrition education and physical fitness are needed. We are also looking for people with interests in crafts, music and drama. For an application or more information call 878-8381. Sue Nichols, County Extension Agent Youth, is the program supervisor.

At the Fleming Museum through Feb. 28 "American Art Since 1945" is on view in the Main Gallery. Also, "Recent Gifts to the Museum" can be seen in the Front Gallery during this period. In the Lounge Gallery, also through next week, "Art of the Northwest Coast" is exhibited. Hours are: Mon.–Fri., 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.; Sun., 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.; Closed Saturdays and most holidays. This week new exhibits are being opened: a Washington's Birthday celebration will be held Monday at 8:00 p.m.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13

2:00 p.m., Mathematical Sciences Seminar "A Mean Value Theorem for Complex Function Theory," by Dr. E. W. Chamberlain in 225 Votey. A directional variant of the Generalized Mean Value Theorum will be given. It will be used to provide an easy proof of the Wolff-Noshiro-Warschawski Theorem, and some applications to familiar functions will be demonstrated.

4 p.m., The first of a series of five workshops sponsored by the Counseling and Testing Center will deal with the subject of women and change at the C & T Center. Call 656-3340 to sign up.

4:15, A memorial service for Prof. Harry Lightball, Jr. will be conducted in Carpenter Auditorium, Given Medical Building.

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization sponsors instruction in African Dance. To register, arrive by 7:15 with $2 at Southwick Ballroom.

7:30 p.m., Prof. Kenneth Rothwell will lead a faculty symposium and slide-lecture on research in progress, titled "Shakespeare and London" in A-180 of Living-Learning.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents the musical "Top Hat" in 101 Votey, and admission is free.

7:30 p.m., Mr. Beardsley of Green Mountain Power will discuss his revolutionary conception of implementing wood-burning power plants in Vermont. Come to Billings' North Lounge for this VPIRG-sponsored lecture.

7:30 p.m., Living Learning Interdisciplinary Science Major's Program presents Jim Wanner on "Life in the Universe" in B-101 L/L Center.

7:30 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is having a fellowship meeting in L/L B-162. Come make a joyful noise unto the Lord!

8 p.m., The brilliant classical guitarist Christopher Parkening will perform in Memorial Auditorium as part of the Lane Series. Phone 656-3418 to add your name to the waiting list for tickets.

8:00 p.m., Lee Friedlander, photographer from New York City, N.Y., will present a slide show on his work and also the history of photography. All are welcome.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14

Happy Valentine's Day!

Today is the deadline for undergraduates to apply for positions as student admissions representatives. Call 656-3370 for more information. Application forms are at Billings Center and the Admissions Office. Set up interviews by calling Linn Murdoch at 862-6002.

The trustees have a long day ahead of them at 8:30 when the Buildings and Grounds Committee meets. At 10:00 a.m., the Investment Committee meets, also in Memorial Lounge. 12:30 brings the session of the Alumni, Development and External Affairs Committee to order, again in Memorial Lounge. The Audit Committee meets in the President's Dining Room at 1 p.m. And at 1:30, the Educational Policy Committee assembles in Memorial Lounge. At 3:00, 3:30 and 4:30 p.m., the Executive, Finance and Budget Committees convene in Waterman's Memorial Lounge.

7:30 p.m., The Foreign Students Club presents Asian Students who will speak in Billings Marsh Lounge about their native lands.

7:30 and 10 p.m., The Lane Series presents "David Copperfield" starring W. C. Fields in Marsh Life Sciences Building, and it will cost you a buck.

7:30 and 10 p.m., SA Films presents the return of the big films "Coconuts" and "Chump at Oxford" in 101 Votey. And it's a buck to see this show too.

7:30 p.m., 71 S. Williams St., Baha'i Fireside.

8 p.m., Folk Dancing at Southwick Ballroom.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15

8:30 a.m., Executive session of the trustees in Memorial Lounge, followed by an open board meeting at 9:30 a.m.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents Katherine Hepburn in "Philadelphia Story", 101 Votey, Free.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 16

6 p.m., Meeting of the Church Street Center's Legislative Study Group.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17

2 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Psi Upsilon representatives available for informal discussion in Marsh Lounge at Billings Center with any interested in becoming charter members of new chapter at University of Vermont. Participating in plans are undergraduate members from Amherst, Bowdoin, Dartmouth, Trinity, Union, and Wesleyan; alumni in Burlington; and officer from Executive Office. Further information can be obtained from Bill Root, Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center (656-2060) or Frank W. Sanford '77 (656-2034).

4:10 p.m., a biology seminar with Mr. Winston Way will deal with the subject of "Vermont Agriculture – Past, Present, and Future." Held in Rm. 105 Marsh Life Sciences, coffee will be served in Rm. 107 at 3:55 p.m.

7 p.m., The Living/Learning Nutrition Program an exercise class and nutrition counseling, will meet in 115 Commons, L/L; all are welcomed. A second weekly meeting is held on Wednesday.

7 p.m., The Center for Counseling and Testing is holding another workshop at the center. This one deals with psychosynthesis and will be led by Jean Guenther.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "The Confession," a French classic shown in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.

8 p.m., The Fleming Museum celebrates Washington's Birthday with a grand opening of their new installations in the Ethnographic and American Galleries: "American Plains Indians" and "Twentieth Century American Art: the First Four Decades" can now be seen in the Ethnographic and American Galleries respectively. Both exhibits will remain on view through mid-summer, 1975.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 18

12 noon, Alice D. Outwater leads a study habit workshop at the Counseling and Testing Center.

7 p.m., The Intervarsity Christian Fellowship is holding a series of Bible studies on the book of Colossians every Tuesday evening. All are welcome to attend at 205 So. Prospect St., Apt. 2.

7:15 p.m., "Henry V," a 1944 film version of Shakespeare's history. Admission is $1 in 101 Votey.

7:30 p.m., Mr. Malcolm Miller, veteran guide at Chartres Cathedral, will give a slide-lecture on the Cathedral as part of the Medieval/Renaissance Program in A-180 Living/Learning.

8 p.m., The Lane Series presents Quartetto Italiano in Ira Allen Chapel. Call 656-3418 for reservations.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19

12 noon, The Counseling and Testing Center will hold an hour of relaxation and meditation at the Counseling Center.

12:15 p.m., The Lunch Bunch Film Series presents "Kaliedoscope Orissa," a study of the art and culture of this Indian state, at the Church St. Center, 135 Church St. Admission is free and public.

7 p.m., Meeting of the Living/Learning Nutrition Program in 115 Commons. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., A videotape presentation of Dr. H. Lawrence McCrorey's speech on "Roots and Ramifications of Individuality" will be sponsored by Omicron Nu, Phi Chapter. Dr. McCrorey is Professor of Physiology and Biophysics and Associate Vice-President of UVM's Academic Affairs. Come to the Vermont Room of Terrill Hall for this showing and a following discussion with faculty and students.

7:30 p.m., An informational meeting for all people in the College of Education and Social Services concerning the American Primary Experimental Program will be held in Bldg. C, Rm. 140, L/L.

7:30 p.m., The study group sponsored by the Church St. Center to investigate the school board issue and omnibus report meets at 135 Church St.

7:30 p.m., Meeting of the Outing Club in 305 Votey Bldg.

8:00 p.m., Carpenter Auditorium in the Given Medical Building, Senator Aiken will be speaking on agriculture, sponsored by Plant and Soil Society. There is no charge and refreshments will be served.

8 p.m., Introductory Lecture on Transcendental Meditation given by Susan Seifert. Marsh Lounge, Billings.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20

12 noon, the Non-Academic Employees' Council meets in Waterman's Memorial Lounge.

12 noon, The UVM Women's Caucus meets at the Women's Center, Blundell House, Redstone Campus. Open to all.

Boutilier's ART CENTER
112 Church Street BURLINGTON, VERMONT
CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING
VT.'S LARGEST ART STORE

ROCKWELL 61R
Full Scientific Slide Rule Calculator
• Performs all classical slide rule functions — simple arithmetic, reciprocals, factorials, expotentiation, roots, trigonometric and logarithmic functions, all in free floating decimal point
• Most functions process displayed data only — allows separate processing of data before entry in a complex calculation.
• Calculates answers to 13 significant digits; uses all 13 digits in subsequent calculations for maximum accuracy.
• Converts automatically to scientific notation when calculated answer is greater than 10^{10} or less than 10^{-10}
Complete with batteries!
Full Scientific Slide Rule
1 YR WARRANTY
Regular 99.95
Save $20.00
NOW 79.95
LAFAYETTE
157 Pearl Street Essex Jct.

$200
$800
$600
Simplicity
In a solitaire is a quality that has always been treasured. We have a fine selection of traditionally styled solitaires from which to choose. We cordially invite your inspection!
PRICES START UNDER $100.00
Illustrations slightly enlarged
YOU ARE INVITED TO OPEN A PRESTON'S CHARGE ACCOUNT
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

CONSUMER VITAMIN VALUES
NATURAL SOYA LECITHIN GRANULES $6.95 per lb.
NATURAL LECITHIN CAPSULES
NATURAL ROSE HIPS C
VITAMIN C ASCORBIC ACID 500 mg 100 Tablets $1.75 250 Tablets $4.25
100% NATURAL VITAMIN E (D'Alpha Tocopheryl)
200 I.U. 2.75
400 I.U. 4.50
1000 I.U. 8.35
Sale Prices effective until April 15, 1975
To order by mail send check or M.O. to — Vitamin House
P.O. Box 2065
S. Burlington, Vt. 05401
Add 75¢ for postage and handling
3% Vermont Sales Tax
Send for FREE VITAMIN CATALOG

An Ounce C

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) last week released a report proposing a comprehensive child health screening program similar to the "Tooth Fairy" program passed two years ago. Entitled "An Ounce of Prevention," the report calls for legislation that would mesh with federal health screening legislation and would "result in a far more efficient and economic use of scarce health resources."

"We believe that this program makes economic sense for Vermont," said VPIRG Director Scott Skinner. "Vermonters are paying out thousands of dollars for health care which could be avoided through early detection of disease."

The program would simply provide state assistance to enable children to receive periodic screening for disease and disabilities at clinics which are already providing services for medicaid eligible families. According to VPIRG, these facilities are under used at present

St. Anselm's C

SERVICES:

Sunday – Holy Eucharist, 9:00 a.m.; Tuesday night Holy Eucharist, 10:00 p.m.; Monday–Friday – Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m.; Sunday–Friday – Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

PROGRAMS:

Enquirer's Class – Monday nights, 7:15 p.m.; Oral Interpretation within the services, see Tim Marshall (862-8309); Folk Mass planning, see David Newcombe (864-4607).

Enquirer's Classes can evolve into many different situations. Historically, Lent has become the season (40 days preceding Easter) when Christians are called to take a hard and honest look at their lives. An elderly man who called himself a beginner, said:

"The te
'how we but 'how the new my ba Classes
the how faith. T

for us another and in open.
movem
us mean

This Class is central Church interest
Chapel for on start p

Cunninghar

ASH WEDNESDAY: Although early this year, Ash Wednesday has arrived and once again brings with it the Lenten Season, a season of peace, penance and reconciliation in preparation for that great day of Joy and Rejoicing – Easter Sunday. May we all make special efforts this Lenten Season to be concerned with Peace and Reconciliation and be willing to take action in our daily lives to bring about peaceful Reconciliation in any way we can. We hope you will be aware of the Lenten activities at the Center and will feel free to take part in them.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Each day at 4:15 p.m. Also: Tuesday 10 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. This Weekend – Three Maryknoll Priests will be with us to Preach on the Third World as well as using Audio-visual materials. They will also give a Workshop on the Global Village on Sunday afternoon, February 16, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

MORNING PRAYER: Each Morning at 7:30 a.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m. What made the early Christians so fond of Jeremiah? Does a 6th century B.C. (not Boston College) eunuch have a message for uncommitted 20th century catamounts? Could be!

SPAGHET
30 North St., Burlingto
EVERY WED
All You Can Eat!
SPAGHETTI
$2.65
EVERY THU
W.I.N. NITE - 10% (Beverages from 7:00
HAPPY HOUR DAIL
OPEN TILL 4:00 A.M.
College Studen

...ce, Finance and Budget Committees ...
...dmaral Lounge
...oreign Students Club presents Asian ...
... in Billings Marsh Lounge about their ...

... The Lane Series presents "David ... C. Fields" in Marsh Life Sciences ...
... you a buck.
...SA Films presents the return of the big ...
..."Champ at Oxford" in 101 Votey. And ...
...too."
...rama $1 . Boba's Fireside.
...g at Southwick Ballroom.
...DAY, FEBRUARY 15
...e session of the Trustees in Memorial ...
... open board meeting at 9:30 a.m.
... SA Films presents Katherine Hepburn ...
..., 101 Votey. Free.
...NDAY, FEBRUARY 16
...f the Church Street Center's Legislative ...
...AY, FEBRUARY 17
... 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Psi Upsilon ...
...le for informal discussion in Marsh ...
...ister with any interested in becoming ...
...ew chapter at University of Vermont. ...
... are undergraduate members from ...
...rtmouth, Trinity, Union, and Wesleyan; ...
... and officer from Executive Office. ...
...n be obtained from Bill Root, Director ...
... and the Billings Center (656-2060) or ...
...(656-2034).
...gy seminar with Mr. Winston Way will ...
...f "Vermont Agriculture – Past, Present, ...
...m. 105 Marsh Life Sciences, coffee will ...
...at 3:55 p.m.
.../Learning Nutrition Program an exercise ...
...ounseling, will meet in 115 Commons, ...
...d. A second weekly meeting is held on ...
...e for Counseling and Testing is holding ...
...at the center. This one deals with ...
...will be led by Joan Guenther.
..., SA Films presents "The Confession," ...
...n 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free. ...
...ming Museum celebrates Washington's ...
... opening of their new installations in the ...
...American Galleries. "American Plains ...
...ieth Century American Art: the First ...
...now be seen in the Ethnographic and ...
...spectively. Both exhibits will remain on ...
...mer, 1975.
...SDAY, FEBRUARY 18
... Outwater leads a study habit workshop ...
... Testing Center.
...versity Christian Fellowship is holding a ...
...on the book of Colossians every Tuesday ...
...ome to attend at 205 So. Prospect St., ...
...ARY 5, 1944 film version of ...
... Admission is $1 in 101 Votey
...Malcolm Miller, veteran guide at Chartres ...
... slide-lecture on the Cathedral as part of ...
...ance Program in A-180 Living/Learning. ...
...e Series presents Quartetto Italiano in Ira ...
...6-8418 for reservations.
...NESDAY, FEBRUARY 19
...unseling and Testing Center will hold an ...
...d meditation at the Counseling Center. ...
...he Lunch Bunch Film Series presents ...
..." a study of the art and culture of this ...
... Church St. Center, 135 Church St. ...
...d public.
... of the Living/Learning Nutrition Program ...
...ll are welcome.
...dscape presentation of Dr. H. Lawrence ...
...ch on "Roots and Ramifications of ...
...e sponsored by Omicron Nu, Phi Chapter. ...
...fessor of Physiology and Biophysics and ...
...dent of UVM's Academic Affairs. Come to ...
... of Terrill Hall for this showing and a ...
... with faculty and students.
...informational meeting for all people in the ...
...tion and Social Services concerning the ...
... Experimental Program will be held in Bldg. ...
... study group sponsored by the Church St. ...
...ate the school board issue and omnibus ...
... Church St.
...ing of the Outing Club in 305 Votey Bldg. ...
...pcenter Auditorium in the Given Medical ...
... Aiken will be speaking on agriculture, ...
... and Soil Society. There is no charge and ...
...e served.
...oductory Lecture on Transcendental ...
... Susan Seifert, Marsh Lounge, Billings.
...URSDAY, FEBRUARY 20
...on-Academic Employees' Council meets in ...
...al Lounge.
...UVM Women's Caucus meets at the Women's ...
...ouse, Redstone Campus. Open to all.

VITAMIN VALUES
NATURAL ROSE HIPS C
VITAMIN C ASCORBIC ACID 100 Tablets $1.75 250 Tablets $4.25
100% NATURAL VITAMIN E

An Ounce Of Prevention

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) last week released a report proposing a comprehensive child health screening program similar to the "Tooth Fairy" program passed two years ago. Entitled "An Ounce of Prevention," the report calls for legislation that would mesh with federal health screening legislation and would "result in a far more efficient and economic use of scarce health resources."

"We believe that this program makes economic sense for Vermont," said VPIRG Director Scott Skinner. "Vermonters are paying out thousands of dollars for health care which could be avoided through early detection of disease."

The program would simply provide state assistance to enable children to receive periodic screening for disease and disabilities at clinics which are already providing services for medicaid eligible families. According to VPIRG, these facilities are under used at present and increased use would make them far more economical. Eligibility for the program would be the same as for the "Tooth Fairy" program, and families would pay either 25% or 50% of the $20 screening cost.

The report uses federal statistics to estimate that a sizable number of Vermont's 186,000 children are afflicted with one or more undetected diseases or disabilities. The report estimates that:

1,000 children have cerebral palsy
1,000 children have epilepsy
9,300 children have speech disorders
5,200 children have impaired hearing
43,000 children have eye problems.

"Sooner or later most of these problems will be detected," Skinner said. "But detection and treatment at the earliest possible time could bring tremendous benefits and save many thousands of dollars. There can be no question that many of these disabilities will seriously hamper a child's performance in school," he added, "leading to a waste of valuable human and education resources."

The cost of the program would be less than $200,000 per year. Asked what the reaction would be to any program proposed increased expenditures in a fiscally tight year, Skinner replied, "this program has real economic benefits and provides a badly needed service without increasing bureaucracy. Money can be found in the budget if there is a will to find it. It is simply a question of where the priorities lie."

Skinner pointed out that last year over $3 million was spent for travel expenses for state employees alone. The Highway Department by itself spent almost $500,000 for travel. "There are plenty of sacred cows that could be cut to fund this program," Skinner concluded.

Country And Funk Tonight

Northern Vermont and UVM have an opportunity to check out one of the newest trends in contemporary music tonight when Tom Mitchell comes to town with his "Country-Funk Thunder Boogie!!" Rolling Stone music critic, "Veritable Benache" Cloen, describes Tom's music as "a unique and compelling blend of the best in country, folk, pop, western, traditional and old timey music."

A fine guitarist who has done studio work on Utah Phillips' new album and who travelled as a road musician with the old "Monkees" star Michael Nesmith, Tom just turned down an attractive offer from RCA to do his first album with Philo Records in North Ferrisburg, Vermont. When asked by "Who died?" Al Coulter, (Coolidge Hall connoisseur of fine music) as to why he turned down the RCA offer, Tom replied with a statement that says a lot about both Tom and the people behind Philo Records:

"Philo offered me an opportunity to have final say on the engineering, production and cover design – something unheard of on the established labels for someone recording their first album!! Besides, Philo Records is developing an excellent reputation as a company that is not only acquiring fine talent but as an outfit that doesn't exploit the artist."

Anyone who missed the last Simpson Hall Coffee House will be pleased to hear that the "King of the Massachusetts Delta Blues Men", Martin Grosswendt, will be accompanying Tom on slide guitar and may be talked into a short guest set. (Martin is in the area doing studio work on Tom's album.)

Showtime is 8:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday, February 13th) and admission for over two hours of quality music in an intimate setting is a real bargain by today's rip-off prices (i.e. R&R productions): only .75!!

The Exchange

Keeps Those Calls Coming

We were delighted with your responses this week! They came in number and reflected some thoughtful comments on your part. You mentioned specific improvements around campus and how they might be accomplished. If you want a personal response be sure to put down your name and extension; otherwise have faith we are reading them and forwarding the comments to appropriate people, trying to get action where feasible.

Billings was in the foreground. Three students wrote the pinball machines were an annoyance – "beeping-ringing-grating noises. They cherish the quieter coffee-house atmosphere of Billings and felt the machines an intrusion. How do the rest of you consumers feel? Bill Root, Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center says great thought was put into their placement. They are in the basement, tucked under the overhang that supports the fireplace – a section unusable for seating, and between the cash registers, a normally noisy spot. Sitting next to them you do hear beeping, but not in the other two rooms. The revenue is split 50% to the company, 50% goes for student recreation needs – for new volleyball courts, to buy tennis nets. Items that otherwise couldn't be afforded. On some days, 1,000 people play the machines.

Another person felt the heat was too high in Billings. "If the thermostat is broken it should be fixed." Apparently, because of the high ceilings, the rooms (except for North Lounge) do not hold heat and if the thermostat is turned down, the rest of the building will be too chilly. Interesting! Remember when Billings was used as a library – up until 1962, by then quite old-fashioned and out of date. It was built by Henry Hobson Richardson a noted architect of the time and proudly opened its doors as a library in 1880. All the woodcarving inside was done by hand. Then it was closed in 1962, replaced by bright, up-to-date Bailey Library. Sitting empty, it had a sad, lost cavern-look about it – a reminder of less rushed, uncomplicated days. Remodeling took place and it opened as the Student Center when there were only 3500 students on campus. Then as the campus grew and with it the need for more eating facilities, the downstairs was spruced up with enlarged snack bar facilities. Now it sees 3-4,000 people passing through its doors daily. It has taken on a bubbling new character, a delicious sort of second life. Many feel a fondness and 'home quality' about it.

Wright Dining Hall breakfast hours were a concern to many. Could they be extended from the usual 8:45 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. so those with later classes could get breakfast? This cannot be changed unless more students express their opinions. A petition is being circulated by Jan Sinsheimer, Simpson Hall X3306. See Jan if you want action. Someone wants Root Beer in the soda machines (I'm with you – that's my favorite drink!) He debonairly suggests Diet drinks in the girl's dorms. Bill Ballard at the office of Residential Life negotiates with the Coca Cola Co.—see him.

Keep filling out the Exchange forms or call in your concerns (x2068) We await your thoughts!

Andrea Lethonen '75, Alice D. Outwater Counseling and Testing

Split Wood , Not Atoms

The VPIRG office has released the announcement of an upcoming speaker. Mr. William Beardsley, a power plant consultant, who is working with Green Mountain Power Corp. on a wood burning, electricity generating plant planned for Milton, will speak at the University of Vermont on wood as an alternative source of energy.

Vermont, a state that is roughly 70 percent wooded, has wood readily available and unlike fossil fuels such as oil, uranium, or coal is a renewable resource.

The kind of forest management needed to make better use of state's woodlands would "weed out" trees that aren't very marketable and greatly improve Vermont forests.

Mr Beardsley will tell why he chose wood as a source of energy instead of coal, solar or wind.

Wood isn't a great polluter, because a lot of the things that come out of the stack come out in the forest naturally anyway.

Mr Beardsley will be speaking in Billings North lounge at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 13.

... Trustee Committee

(continued from page one)

admitted because of the classroom spaces created by more students taking fewer courses.

The trustees decided against making this recommendation until a breakdown of a cost-study for each college and department can be made. Instead, it has been suggested that the tuition rate apply to 12-17 credit-hours this year and 12-16 credit-hours next year. Specific recommendations are expected to be forthcoming.

The trustees expressed an interest in knowing more about the funding of the Fleming Museum, aid to graduate students, the operations of the bookstore, and the circulation of books at the Bailey Library. Operations reports on these matters will be coming in.

Other suggestions and items brought up at the meeting included expansion of the UVM summer session, greater utilization of the Shakespeare Festival, raising summer session room rates and devoting some attention to the workings of the Blue Cross fringe benefits for faculty and staff.

Dean C. Corrigan of the College of Education summed up the meeting with the comment, "The trustees are getting the opportunity to see how the financial operations of the University link."

St. Anselm's Chapel

SERVICES:

Sunday – Holy Eucharist, 9:00 a.m.; Tuesday night – Holy Eucharist, 10:00 p.m.; Monday-Friday – Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m.; Sunday-Friday – Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

PROGRAMS:

Enquirer's Class – Monday nights, 7:15 p.m.; Oral Interpretation within the services, see Tim Marshall (862-8309); Folk Mass planning, see David Newcombe (864-4607).

Enquirer's Classes can evolve into many different situations. Historically, Lent has become the season (40 days preceding Easter) when Christians are called to take a hard and honest look at their lives. An elderly man who called himself a beginner, said, "The test of a good Lent is not 'how well did I keep my rule?' but 'how better can I now live the new life which began with my baptism?'" Enquirer's Classes form to struggle with the how's and why's of our faith. They provide a chance for us to challenge one another, to discuss, to redefine and in the process of all, to open ourselves to God's movement toward us, offering us meaning and life.

This year one Enquirer's Class is dealing with "What is central to the faith of the Church?" If you're at all interested, please come by the Chapel at 7:15 p.m. We meet for only an hour and so we start promptly.

S.A. Films Presents

The famous dancing team of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers begin the schedule of SA Films for this week. They will appear tonight in the Irving Berlin musical, Top Hat. This film, made in 1935 and directed by Mark Sandrich, was one of the fastest-moving and most popular of the Astaire-Rogers series of musical comedies. The story, which is set in Venice, Italy, centers around the effort of an American dancer to gain the attentions of a pretty society girl. Irvin Berlin's top hits, "Cheek to Cheek" and "The Piccolino" are included in the score. The film will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 (one showing only).

The Marx Brothers return on Friday night in their 1929 film Coconuts, directed by Joseph Santley. This early film brings more madcap madness as only the Marx' Brothers can deliver. The premise for all the antics this time is Groucho's attempt to sell some dubious Florida real-estate to a crowd which includes a pair of diamond swindlers, a couple of lovebirds, a detective and of course, Chico and Harpo, who are determined to foil Groucho's efforts to unload the property. Along with this film will be a Laurel and Hardy short, A Chump at Oxford, a 1930's film that finds Laurel and Hardy going to college. This is a funny film rarely seen today. These two films, together with the next sequence in the Flash Gordon series, will be presented at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

The Monday night French film series this week presents The Confession, a 1970 color film directed by Constantin Costa-Gavras, also the director of Z. This well-known film stars Yves Montand, Simone Signoret, Gabriele Ferzette and Michel Vitold. Costa-Gavras created the film as a rigorous warning against excesses of any ideological dedication while up-holding an ideal of personal truth and expression. Artur London (who wrote the film's original story) is a dedicated Communist who, upon returning to his homeland after World War II, is imprisoned, subjected to torture and an extended purge trial which almost breaks his spirit. Yet he survives and lives to see justice done, and his accusers receive his former fate.

The film will be shown twice (at 7:30 and 10:00) on Monday in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

Cunningham Newman Center

ASH WEDNESDAY: Although early this year, Ash Wednesday has arrived and once again brings with it the Lenten Season, a season of peace, penance and reconciliation in preparation for that great day of Joy and Rejoicing – Easter Sunday. May we all make special efforts this Lenten Season to be concerned with Peace and Reconciliation and be willing to take action in our daily lives to bring about peaceful Reconciliation in any way we can. We hope you will be aware of the Lenten activities at the Center and will feel free to take part in them.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Each day at 4:15 p.m. Also: Tuesday 10 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. This Weekend – Three Maryknoll Priests will be with us to Preach on the Third World as well as using Audio-visual materials. They will also give a Workshop on the Global Village on Sunday afternoon, February 16, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

MORNING PRAYER: Each Morning at 7:30 a.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m. What made the early Christians so fond of Jeremiah? Does a 6th century B.C. (not Boston College) eunuch have a message for uncommitted 20th century estamounts? Could be!

"A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE" SERIES: Monday evenings at 8:30 p.m. with Fr. Crowley. BASICS: All you ever wanted to know about the Catholic Church but were afraid to ask.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Next meeting, Wednesday, February 26th at 7:00 p.m. Opportunity to pray, discuss, socialize and become active in some apostolic work with young men and women just out of college or in graduate work. For more information, please contact Sr. Jeannine or Fr. Holland.

SOCIAL ACTION MINDED? Many of us at the Center are concerned with such issues as: Farmworkers and boycotts, Amnesty, and the Third World. Would you like to join us in Action? Please see Fr. Crowley or Sr. Lindora for more information or call 862-8403.

FASHION SHOW: A fashion show for both men and women will be held on March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel for the Benefit of the Newman Center. Fashions will be by Magrane and many of our UVM students will be modeling the Fashions. Hope you will save that night and be with us. Tickets are on sale at the Center for $1.50. Just stop by or call 862-8403.

LEAP PROGRAM: There are two Leaps this semester. One is February 21-23 and the other is April 11-13. The Leap is a Weekend Experience in building Christian Community for young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25. If you would like to know more about the Weekend, please contact Marykate Foley at M.A.T. or Sr. Lindora at the Newman Center.

Hillel

Sunday, Feb. 16, there will be a Fireside Brunch starting at 11 a.m. Immediately following there will be a discussion lead by Avi Gilam, an Israeli graduate student, concerning Israel in the 19th century, before 1880

Friday evening, Feb. 21, there will be a traditional Friday evening supper. We are asking a $2.00 donation to cover the cost of the food. Send reservations to Prof. H. Kahn, c/o Hillel Foundation, Waterman Building.

New Galleries Open At Fleming Museum

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum announces the opening of new installations in the American and Ethnographic Galleries. On February 17, the Galleries will officially open and the exhibitions will remain on view through mid-summer, 1975.

"Twentieth Century American Art: The First Four Decades" will be displayed in the American Gallery. Reginald Marsh, John Sloan, Isabel Bishop, Alfred Stieglitz, William Glackens, Thomas Hart Benton, and Vermonter, Francis Colburn, are represented, as well as W.P.A. work and several World War One posters. Although this period in American art is one of the strongest areas of the Fleming's collection, until now the works have never been shown together as a group.

The Ethnographic Gallery will house "American Plains Indians", an exhibition of clothing, tools, weapons, photographs, prints, maps, artifacts, saddles, headdresses, and Indian attire with intricate beadwork.

Ogden Benedict Reed, a Vermonter and former UVM student who was stationed in the Montana Territory while in the Army, collected many of the artifacts, including a mounted buffalo head, in 1881. Reed is the great uncle of Burlington artist and former UVM Art Department Chairman, Francis Colburn. Colburn, who has a painting exhibited in the American Gallery, therefore, has a twin connection with the new installations.

Because the Indian artifacts are of special interest to children, the installation is at a convenient height for young visitors to the Museum.

The public, as well as Fleming Museum Members, is invited to the opening at 8:00 p.m. on Monday, February 17, when they will be able to meet with those who worked on the exhibitions.

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
EVERY WEDNESDAY!
All You Can Eat! SPAGHETTI $2.65
All You Can Eat! PIZZA $1.75
EVERY THURSDAY!
W.I.N. NITE - 10% off ENTIRE MENU
(Beverages Excluded)
from 7:00 P.M. until Closing
HAPPY HOUR DAILY 5:00 'til 7:00 P.M.
OPEN TILL 4:00 A.M. on FRI. & SAT.
College Students Welcome!

"My foreman sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"Sure, I'd heard about waterbeds but mostly in jokes and on talk shows until my foreman set me and some of the other guys straight on a few things. He was getting razzed pretty bad about things like seasickness, the bed going through the floor, leaks, and a few things we better not talk about on account of ladies might read this ad. But he'd say things like 'My Nimbus Waterbed has triple-protection against leaks which makes a leak about as likely as one of you guys having a bright idea.' He said that stuff about getting seasick and the bed going through the floor was a bunch of bull too. And about the other things, well, he'd just smile. It wasn't long before the razzing stopped and I bet some of the other guys might be thinking about a Nimbus Waterbed. What about me? Well, like my foreman, I've been smiling a lot lately."
The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298
Because of Nimbus... America will sleep a little easier tonight.

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m.-7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m.-1 p.m.
152 Church St. Burlington, Vt. 862-4045
The Head Shop
You take care of the inside of your head... ...We'll take care of the outside.
For Men & Women
We'll Work It Out

...ce, Finance and Budget Committees
...Memorial Lounge.
...oreign Students Club presents Asian
...in Billings Marsh Lounge about their

... The Lane Series presents "David
...W. C. Fields in Marsh Life Sciences
... you a buck.
...SA Films presents the return of the big
..."Chump at Oxford" in 101 Votey. And
...Williams St., Bobo's Fireside
...ng at Southwick Ballroom.
...DAY, FEBRUARY 15
...ne session of the trustees in Memorial
...o open board meeting at 9:30 a.m.
..., SA Films presents Katherine Hepburn
..., 101 Votey. Free.
...NDAY, FEBRUARY 16
...f the Church Street Center's Legislative
...AY, FEBRUARY 17
...6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Psi Upsilon
...le for informal discussion in Marsh
...enter with any interested in becoming
...new chapter at University of Vermont.
...n are undergraduates members from
...tmouth, Trinity, Union, and Wesleyan;
..., and officer from Executive Office.
...n be obtained from Bill Root, Director
...and the Billings Center (656-2060) or
...(656-2034).
...y seminar with Mr. Winston Way will
...f "Vermont Agriculture – Past, Present,
...Rm. 105 Marsh Life Sciences, coffee will
...t 3:55 p.m.
.../Learning Nutrition Program's exercise
...unseling, will meet in 115 Commons,
...A second weekly meeting is held on
...er for Counseling and Testing is holding
...at the center. This one deals with
...will be led by Jean Guenther.
...SA Films presents "The Confession,"
...r in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.
...ming Museum celebrates Washington's
...d opening of their new installations in the
...American Galleries: "American Plains
...ieth Century American Art: the First
...now be seen in the Ethnographic and
...spectively. Both exhibits will remain on
...mer, 1975.
...SDAY, FEBRUARY 18
... Outwater leads a study habit workshop
... Testing Center.
...versity Christian Fellowship is holding a
...on the book of Colossians every Tuesday
...ome to attend at 205 So. Prospect St.,
...very V," a 1944 film version of
..., Admission is $1 in 101 Votey.
...Malcolm Miller, veteran guide at Chartres
...a slide-lecture on the Cathedral as part of
...nce Program in A-180 Living/Learning
...Series presents Quartetto Italiano in Ira
...6-3418 for reservations.
...NESDAY, FEBRUARY 19
...nseling and Testing Center will hold an
...d meditation at the Counseling Center.
...he Lunch Bunch Film Series presents
..." a study of the art and culture of this
...e Church St. Center, 135 Church St.
...d public.
...of the Living/Learning Nutrition Program
...l are welcome.
...dcotape presentation of Dr. H. Lawrence
...ch on "Roots and Ramifications of
...e sponsored by Omicron Nu, Phi Chapter.
...fessor of Physiology and Biophysics and
...dent of UVM's Academic Affairs. Come to
...m of Terrill Hall for this showing and a
... with faculty and students.
...nformational meeting for all people in the
...tion and Social Services concerning the
...Experimental Program will be held in Bldg.
... study group sponsored by the Church St.
...te the school board issue and omnibus
... Church St.
...ing of the Outing Club in 305 Votey Bldg.
...penter Auditorium in the Given Medical
... Aiken will be speaking on agriculture,
...and Soil Society. There is no charge and
...served.
...oductory Lecture on Transcendental
... Susan Seifert. Marsh Lounge, Billings.
...URSDAY, FEBRUARY 20
...Non-Academic Employees' Council meets in
...al Lounge.
...UVM Women's Caucus meets at the Women's
...ouse, Redstone Campus. Open to all.

...TAMIN VALUES
NATURAL ROSE HIPS C
VITAMIN C ASCORBIC ACID 500 mg 100 Tablets $1.75 250 Tablets $4.25
100% NATURAL VITAMIN E
200 I.U. 2.75
400 I.U. 4.90
1000 I.U. 8.35

An Ounce Of Prevention

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) last week released a report propoding a comprehensive child health screening program similar to the "Tooth Fairy" program passed two years ago. Entitled "An Ounce of Prevention," the report calls for legislation that would mesh with federal health screening legislation and would "result in a far more efficient and economic use of scarce health resources."

"We believe that this program makes economic sense for Vermont," said VPIRG Director Scott Skinner. "Vermonters are paying out thousands of dollars for health care which could be avoided through early detection of disease."

The program would simply provide state assistance to enable children to receive periodic screening for disease and disabilities at clinics which are already providing services for medicaid eligible families. According to VPIRG, these facilities are under-used, and at present and increased use would make them far more economical. Eligibility for the program would be the same as for the "Tooth Fairy" program, and families would pay either 25% or 50% of the $20 screening cost.

The report uses federal statistics to estimate that a sizable number of Vermont's 186,000 children are afflicted with one or more undetected diseases or disabilities. The report estimates that:

1,000 children have cerebral palsy

1,000 children have epilepsy

9,300 children have speech disorders

5,200 children have impaired hearing

43,000 children have eye problems.

"Sooner or later most of these problems will be detected," Skinner said. "But detection and treatment at the earliest possible time could bring tremendous benefits and save many thousands of dollars. There can be no question that many of these disabilities will seriously hamper a child's performance in school," he added, "leading to a waste of valuable human and education resources."

The cost of the program would be less than $200,000 per year. Asked what the reaction would be to any program proposed increased expenditures in a fiscally tight year, Skinner replied, "this program has real economic benefits and provides a badly needed service without increasing bureaucracy. Money can be found in the budget if there is a will to find it. It is simply a question of where the priorities lie."

Skinner pointed out that last year over $3 million was spent for travel expenses for state employees alone. The Highway Department by itself spent almost $500,000 for travel. "There are plenty of sacred cows that could be cut to fund this program," Skinner concluded.

Country And Funk Tonight

Northern Vermont and UVM have an opportunity to check out one of the newest trends in contemporary music tonight when Tom Mitchell comes to town with his "Country–Funk Thunder Boogie!!" Rolling Stone music critic, "Veritable Benache" Clom, describes Tom's music as "a unique and compelling blend of the best in country, folk, pop, western, traditional and old timey music."

A fine guitarist who has done studio work on Utah Phillips' new album and who travelled as a road musician with the old "Monkees" star Michael Nesmith, Tom just turned down an attractive offer from RCA to do his first album with Philo Records in North Ferrisburg, Vermont. When asked by "Who died?" Al Coulter, (Coolidge Hall connoisseur of fine music) as to why he turned down the RCA offer, Tom replied with a statement that says a lot about both Tom and the people behind Philo Records:

"Philo offered me an opportunity to have final say on the engineering, production and cover design– something unheard of on the established labels for someone recording their first album!! Besides, Philo Records is developing an excellent reputation as a company that is not only acquiring fine talent but as an outfit that doesn't exploit the artist."

Anyone who missed the last Simpson Hall Coffee House will be pleased to hear that the "King of the Massachusetts Delta Blues Men", Martin Grosswendt, will be accompanying Tom on slide guitar and may be talked into a short guest set. (Martin is in the area doing studio work on Tom's album.)

Showtime is 8:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday, February 13th) and admission for over two hours of quality music in an intimate setting is a real bargain by today's rip–off prices (i.e. R&R productions): only .75!!

The Exchange

Keeps Those Calls Coming

We were delighted with your responses this week! They came in number and reflected some thoughtful comments on your part. You mentioned specific improvements around campus and how they might be accomplished. If you want a personal response be sure to put down your name and extension; otherwise have faith we are reading them and forwarding the comments to appropriate people, trying to get action where feasible.

Billings was in the foreground. Three students wrote the pinball machines were an annoyance – 'beeping–ringing–grating noises.' They cherish the quieter coffee–house atmosphere of Billings and felt the machines an intrusion. How do the rest of you consumers feel? Bill Root, Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center says great thought was put into their placement. They are in the basement, tucked under the overhang that supports the fireplace– a section unusable for seating, and between the cash registers, a normally noisy spot. Sitting next to them you do hear beeping, but not in the other two rooms. The revenue is split 50% to the company, 50% goes for student recreation needs – for new volleyball courts, to buy tennis nets, items that otherwise couldn't be afforded. On some days, 1,000 people play the machines.

Another person felt the heat was too high in Billings. 'If the thermostat is broken it should be fixed.' Apparently, because of the high ceilings, the rooms (except for North Lounge) do not hold heat and if the thermostat is turned down, the rest of the building will be too chilly. Interesting! Remember when Billings was used as a library– up until 1962, by then quite old–fashioned and out of date. It was built by Henry Hobson Richardson a noted architect of the time and proudly opened its doors as a library in 1885. All the woodcarving inside was done by hand. Then it was closed in 1962, replaced by bright, up–to–date Bailey Library. Sitting empty, it had a sad, lost cavern–look about it– a reminder of less rushed, uncomplicated days. Remodeling took place and it opened as the Student Center when there were only 3500 students on campus. Then as the campus grew and with it the need for more eating facilities, the downstairs was spruced up with enlarged snack bar facilities. Now it sees 3–4,000 people passing through its doors daily. It has taken on a bubbling new character, a delicious sort of second life. Many feel a fondness and 'home quality' about it.

Wright Dining Hall breakfast hours were a concern to many. Could they be extended from the usual 8:45 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. so those with later classes could get breakfast? This cannot be changed unless more students express their opinions. A petition is being circulated by Jan Smsheimer, Simpson Hall X3306. See Jan if you want action. Someone wants Root Beer in the soda machines (I'm with you– that's my favorite drink!) He debonairly suggests Diet drinks in the girl's dorms. Bill Ballard at the office of Residential Life negotiates with the Coca Cola Co.–see him.

Keep filling out the Exchange forms or call in your concerns (x2068) We await your thoughts!

Andrea Lethonen '75, Alice D. Outwater Counseling and Testing

St. Anselm's Chapel

SERVICES:

Sunday – Holy Eucharist, 9:00 a.m.; Tuesday night – Holy Eucharist, 10:00 p.m.; Monday–Friday – Morning Prayer, 7:15 a.m.; Sunday–Friday – Evening Prayer, 5:00 p.m.

PROGRAMS:

Enquirer's Class – Monday nights, 7:15 p.m.; Oral Interpretation within the services, see Jim Marshall (862-8309); Folk Mass planning, see David Newcombe (864-4607).

Enquirer's Classes can evolve into many different situations. Historically, Lent has become the season (40 days preceding Easter) when Christians are called to take a hard and honest look at their lives. An elderly man who called himself a beginner, said, "The test of a good Lent is not 'how well did I keep my rule?' but 'how better can I now live the new life which began with my baptism?'" Enquirer's Classes form to struggle with the how's and why's of our faith. They provide a chance for us to challenge one another, to discuss, to redefine and in the process of all, to open ourselves to God's movement toward us, offering us meaning and life.

This year one Enquirer's Class is dealing with "What is central to the faith of the Church?" If you're at all interested, please come by the Chapel at 7:15 p.m. We meet for only an hour and so we start promptly.

S.A. Films Presents

The famous dancing team of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers begin the schedule of SA Films for this week. They will appear tonight in the Irving Berlin musical, Top Hat. This film, made in 1935 and directed by Mark Sandrich, was one of the fastest–moving and most popular of the Astaire–Rogers series of musical comedies. The story, which is set in Venice, Italy, centers around the effort of an American dancer to gain the attentions of a pretty society girl. Irvin Berlin's top hits, "Cheek to Cheek" and "The Piccolino" are included in the score. The film will be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 (one showing only).

The Marx Brothers return on Friday night in their 1929 film Coconuts, directed by Joseph Santley. This early film brings more madcap madness as only the Marx' Brothers can deliver. The premise for all the antics this time is Groucho's attempt to sell some dubious Florida real–estate to a crowd which includes a pair of diamond swindlers, a couple of lovebirds, a detective and of course, Chico and Harpo, who are determined to foil Groucho's efforts to unload the property. Along with this film will be a Laurel and Hardy short, A Chump at Oxford, a 1930's film that finds Laurel and Hardy going to college. This is a funny film rarely seen today. These two films, together with the next sequence in the Flash Gordon series, will be presented at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

The Monday night French film series this week presents The Confession, a 1970 color film directed by Constantin Costa-Gavras, also the director of Z. This well–known film stars Yves Montand, Simone Signoret, Gabriele Ferzette and Michel Vitold. Costa-Gavras created the film as a rigorous warning against excesses of any ideological dedication while up–holding an ideal of personal truth and expression. Artur London (who wrote the film's original story) is a dedicated Communist who, upon returning to his homeland after World War II, is imprisoned, subjected to torture and an extended purge trial which almost breaks his spirit. Yet he survives and lives to see justice done, and his accusers receive his former fate.

The film will be shown twice (at 7:30 and 10:00) on Monday in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

Split Wood , Not Atoms

The VPIRG office has released the announcement of an upcoming speaker. Mr. William Beardsley, a power plant consultant, who is working with Green Mountain Power Corp. on a wood burning, electricity generating plant planned for Milton, will speak at the University of Vermont on wood as an alternative source of energy.

Vermont, a state that is roughly 70 percent wooded, has wood readily available and unlike fossil fuels such as oil, uranium, or coal is a renewable resource.

The kind of forest management needed to make better use of state's woodlands would "weed out" trees that aren't very marketable and greatly improve Vermont forests.

Mr Beardsley will tell why he chose wood as a source of energy instead of coal, solar or wind.

Wood isn't a great polluter, because a lot of the things that come out of the stack come out in the forest naturally anyway.

Mr Beardsley will be speaking in Billings North lounge at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 13.

... Trustee Committee

(continued from page one)

admitted because of the classroom spaces created by more students taking fewer courses.

The trustees decided against making this recommendation until a breakdown of a cost-study for each college and department can be made. Instead, it has been suggested that the tuition rate apply to 12-17 credit-hours this year and 12-16 credit-hours next year. Specific recommendations are expected to be forthcoming.

The trustees expressed an interest in knowing more about the funding of the Fleming Museum, aid to graduate students, the operations of the bookstore, and the circulation of books at the Bailey Library. Operations reports on these matters will be coming in.

Other suggestions and items brought up at the meeting included expansion of the UVM summer session, greater utilization of the Shakespeare Festival, raising summer session room rates and devoting some attention to the workings of the Blue Cross fringe benefits for faculty and staff.

Dean C. Corrigan of the College of Education summed up the meeting with the comment, "The trustees are getting the opportunity to see how the financial operations of the University link."

Cunningham Newman Center

ASH WEDNESDAY: Although early this year, Ash Wednesday has arrived and once again brings with it the Lenten Season, a season of peace, penance and reconciliation in preparation for that great day of Joy and Rejoicing – Easter Sunday. May we all make special efforts this Lenten Season to be concerned with Peace and Reconciliation and be willing to take action in our daily lives to bring about peaceful Reconciliation in any way we can. We hope you will be aware of the Lenten activities at the Center and will feel free to take part in them.

WEEKDAY LITURGIES: Each day at 4:15 p.m. Also: Tuesday 10 p.m.

WEEKEND LITURGIES: Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m. This Weekend – Three Maryknoll Priests will be with us to Preach on the Third World as well as using Audio-visual materials. They will also give a Workshop on the Global Village on Sunday afternoon, February 16, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

MORNING PRAYER: Each Morning at 7:30 a.m.

SCRIPTURE SERIES: Monday evenings at 7:00 p.m. What made the early Christians so fond of Jeremiah? Does a 6th century B.C. (not Boston College) eunuch have a message for uncommitted 20th century catamounts? Could be!

"A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE" SERIES: Monday evenings at 8:30 p.m. with Fr. Crowley. BASICS: All you ever wanted to know about the Catholic Church but were afraid to ask.

FAITH COMMUNITY: Next meeting, Wednesday, February 26th at 7:00 p.m. Opportunity to pray, discuss, socialize and become active in some apostolic work with young men and women just out of college or in graduate work. For more information, please contact Sr. Jeannine or Fr. Holland.

SOCIAL ACTION MINDED? Many of us at the Center are concerned with such issues as: Farmworkers and boycotts, Amnesty, and the Third World. Would you like to join us in Action? Please see Fr. Crowley or Sr. Lindora for more information or call 862-8403.

FASHION SHOW: A fashion show for both men and women will be held on March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel for the Benefit of the Newman Center. Fashions will be by Magrams and many of our UVM students will be modeling the Fashions. Hope you will save that night and be with us. Tickets are on sale at the Center for $1.50. Just stop by or call 862-8403.

LEAP PROGRAM: There are two Leaps this semester. One is February 21-23 and the other is April 11-13. The Leap is a Weekend Experience in building Christian Community for young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25. If you would like to know more about the Weekend, please contact Marykate Foley at M.A.T. or Sr. Lindora at the Newman Center.

Hillel

Sunday, Feb. 16, there will be a Fireside Brunch starting at 11 a.m. Immediately following there will be a discussion lead by Avi Gilam, an Israeli graduate student, concerning Israel in the 19th century, before 1880

Friday evening, Feb. 21, there will be a traditional Friday evening supper. We are asking a $2.00 donation to cover the cost of the food. Send reservations to Prof. H. Kahn, c/o Hillel Foundation, Waterman Building.

New Galleries Open At Fleming Museum

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum, announces the opening of new installations in the American and Ethnographic Galleries. On February 17, the Galleries will officially open and the exhibitions will remain on view through mid-summer, 1975.

"Twentieth Century American Art: The First Four Decades" will be displayed in the American Gallery. Reginald Marsh, John Sloan, Isabel Bishop, Alfred Stieglitz, William Glackens, Thomas Hart Benton, and Vermonter, Francis Colburn, are represented, as well as W.P.A. work and several World War One posters. Although this period in American art is one of the strongest areas of the Fleming's collection, until now the works have never been shown together as a group.

The Ethnographic Gallery will house "American Plains Indians", an exhibition of clothing, tools, weapons, photographs, prints, maps, artifacts, saddles, headdresses, and Indian attire with intricate beadwork.

Ogden Benedict Reed, a Vermonter and former UVM student who was stationed in the Montana Territory while in the Army, collected many of the artifacts, including a mounted buffalo head, in 1881. Reed is the great uncle of Burlington artist and former UVM Art Department Chairman, Francis Colburn. Colburn, who has a painting exhibited in the American Gallery, therefore, has a twin connection with the new installations.

Because the Indian artifacts are of special interest to children, the installation is at a convenient height for young visitors to the Museum.

The public, as well as Fleming Museum Members, is invited to the opening at 8:00 p.m. on Monday, February 17, when they will be able to meet with those who worked on the exhibitions.

VALUABLE COUPON
SAVE
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT
CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM The Medical Center

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
EVERY WEDNESDAY!
All You Can Eat! SPAGHETTI $2.65
All You Can Eat! PIZZA $1.75
EVERY THURSDAY!
W.I.N. NITE - 10% off ENTIRE MENU
(Beverages Excluded)
from 7:00 P.M. until Closing
HAPPY HOUR DAILY 5:00 'til 7:00 P.M.
OPEN TILL 4:00 A.M. on FRI & SAT.
College Students Welcome!

"My foreman sold me my Nimbus waterbed"

"Sure, I'd heard about waterbeds but mostly in jokes and on talk shows until my foreman set me and some of the other guys straight on a few things. He was getting razzed pretty bad about things like seasickness, the bed going through the floor, leaks, and a few things we better not talk about on account of ladies might read this ad. But he'd say things like 'My Nimbus Waterbed has triple-protection against leaks which makes a leak about as likely as one of you guys having a bright idea.' He said that stuff about getting seasick and the bed going through the floor was a bunch of bull too. And about the other things, well, he'd just smile. It wasn't long before the razzing stopped and I bet some of the other guys might be thinking about a Nimbus Waterbed. What about me? Well, like my foreman, I've been smiling a lot lately."

The Emerald City of Oz Ltd.
71 St. Paul St.
Burlington Vermont
862-4298

Because of Nimbus... America will sleep a little easier tonight.

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m. - 7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.
The Head Shop
152 Church St. Burlington, Vt. 862-4045
You take care of the inside of your head... ...We'll take care of the outside.
For Men & Women
We'll Work It Out

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen '77
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash '77
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Valle '76
News Editor . . . . . Kathy Shatney '77
Assistant News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer '77
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Tanner '76
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMike '77
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson '77
Copy Editor . . . . . Siri Bull '77
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell '76

Editorial

Viewpoint

There was a meeting last week of "interested" students at Coolidge Hall to discuss the future of UVM's student government. Some of the people at this meeting were the very people who supported and voted for the dissolution of the SA Senate. One begins to wonder what was their purpose in this action. However, it is becoming a little clearer as shown by their actions. In the letter to the editor, Bob Macgregor explained the policy and goals of the "group". It seems this group has certain ideas on how the university should be run. By eliminating the SA Senate this group eliminated competition which was either against or non-supportive of their motives.

What the "Coolidge crowd" wants, it seems, is control of the student body so they can implement their views. Two important questions come to mind. What makes them think their ideas are any more original or thought out than other students? Also, who has given them the right to speak out on the behalf of UVM students.

Some of the "Coolidge crowd" came to the meeting of other interested students who were also concerned with student government. The represented part of the "Coolidge crowd" voiced opposition to about every idea contrary to their own. They provided a negative aspect to what otherwise was a very positive meeting.

Students should be aware and be cautious of a small group of other students who are supposedly working on student's behalf. The "Coolidge crowd" main theme is that the bulk of students at UVM are apathetic about student government. Obviously, other students besides this group are interested in student government and unless the "Coolidge crowd" is willing to co-operate, both groups will lose their effectiveness and diversity of views. What is necessary for both of these groups is to combine their resources and compromise their views so a positive position can be made.

R.J.

Letters To The Editor

Poppycock

To the Editor:

Larry Seiden's January 16 column successfully distorted Dr. Steven Cahn's essay that appeared in the New York Times on December 29. Seiden perceives the essay describing college students as: "lazy unenterprising crybabies who will only use initiative to maneuver our way out of graded courses; use craft to soften up teachers so they will raise our grades; and constantly opt for courses from lenient instructors who "indiscriminantly award A's to virtually everyone".

He defends their expending most of their energies in debate over grades with profesmors with: "We're learning how to get ahead... life is tough and we're preparing to meet it with our heads on." Finally, our opinionated writer challenges the validity of a professor giving low grades as part of the 'learning experience.'

Larry Seiden's comments display a wide range of ignorance, arrogance and absurdity. He completely misrepresents Dr. Cahn's article, which can be summed up in: "Never have so many spent so long learning so little... The present crisis stems from the increasingly widespread acceptance among faculty and administration of the fatal educational principle that a student should not be required to do any academic work that displeases him..."

Dr. Cahn deals primarily with the administrations basic blunder in allowing students this freedom, and describes its deficiencies. Only in passing does he point out the numerous options now open to the student. Also, Seiden's argument justifying student's bartering for grades as a source of preparation for the 'jungle' is poppycock. There have to be necessary skills required for the 'jungle' other than selling your soul at bargain prices. Its value would certainly quickly depreciate.

But, on the other hand, perhaps we should all follow Larry's advice and major in boosting our major. After all, as Dr. Cahn points out, "becoming an educated person is a difficult, demanding enterprise" and consumes a great deal of time. We could ignore Dr. Cahn's silly notion that we get out of something as much as we put into it! as old fashioned and only upheld by the people who support George Wallace. We could spend all our time persuading professors of their moral obligation to give us an A and then go to FADC seven days a week.

Sincerely yours,
Knut Rostad

Some Ideas

To the Editor:

We thought we'd let you know that a bunch of people got together in Coolidge Hall on Wednesday, February 5, to talk about government at UVM. The meeting was very informal, and morale was high from the start, or shortly thereafter. We even decided something right away, which is that we don't want to be confused with the committee which was formed at the open meeting on February 3.

We tried to pick out some of the important issues facing the UVM community, in hopes that goals for a new government and also possible structures for it would follow. We came up with the following list of issues and things to look into

1) getting student and faculty voting representation on the Board of Trustees. This involves changing a Vermont state law, which is a possibility, at least.

2) stopping the construction of the pedestrian tunnel. We thought that some of the alternatives should be more carefully reconsidered.

3) getting a pub/restaurant for the campus, to be owned and operated by students and not by Saga. Apparently this issue is in the works in the state legislature.

4) starting a cooperative bookstore, also to be owned and operated by students. We thought that the bookstore could be run more efficiently by business administration and faculty, if they were interested. Yale and Harvard Universities have successful co-ops.

5) getting equal representation for students on the Presidential Selection Committee. The present committee will have four trustees, four faculty, and two students.

6) getting effective student input to faculty hiring, firing and tenure decisions, beyond the mere advisory role. We are checking with the Arts and Sciences College Dean's Student Advisory Committee on this issue.

7) changing VPIRG's charter, so that it can deal with student affairs. We haven't checked into this issue very carefully, yet.

8) improving relations with the greater Burlington community, including the other colleges here. Students make up a large part of the local population, but there seems to be little communication between the students here and those at other schools.

9) revising the Concert Bureau. We thought that something could be done to bring more concerts to UVM like allocating more money for the Bureau, at least.

10) investigating curriculum changes and the possibility of changing to a "pass/fail with written evaluation" grading system.

This list is by no means complete. There is much to be done, especially to encourage student interest and participation in the governing of their own lives at UVM. We considered the possibilities of issue-oriented rallies to get students interested. We also planned another meeting for Monday the 17th at 8 p.m. in Main Lounge of Harris-Millis. Anyone interested in talking about these and other issues (faculty and staff included) can call 862-7595 for information or for future meeting times. These meetings aren't the usual smoke-filled room type, and we'd like to get some more ideas, if you have any.

For the bunch of interested students
Rob Roy Macgregor

A Word From The Folks At The E. & J. Gallo Winery

To the Editor:

A recent article by Tracy Apple appeared in your newspaper which contained a number of misstatements and innuendos directed at the Gallo Winery. Knowing that your newspaper supports a free and unbiased presentation of all the facts, I present to you the Gallo position in this jurisdictional dispute that has been highly publicized between the Teamsters and the United Farm Workers unions in the past several months.

Our Company made every attempt to renew its contract with the United Farm Workers of America on Beginning February 1, 1973, we repeatedly requested meetings with the United Farm Workers in order to negotiate their contract which was due to expire April 18, 1973. The United Farm Workers, for reasons known only to itself, refused to hold a negotiating meeting with us until April 25, 1973. Subsequently, we held 12 negotiating meetings with the United Farm Workers, the last one on June 20, 1973. The negotiations were paralyzed by the United Farm Workers' implacable stand on union discipline and hiring hall practices which are outlawed by the National Labor Relations Act. The clauses which the United Farm Workers wanted in their contract on these two items would not be legal under the National Labor Relations Act and are an example of a number of other protections farm workers would have under the National Labor Relations Act.

The United Farm Workers philosophy is one of complete power over the worker, and the clauses in question would have benefited and strengthened the union (in their view), but would have weakened the rights of the workers. We attempted to rectify the contract in the interest of the workers, whose objections included: Favoritism and cronyism by the United Farm Workers officials. Having to pay three months' to one year's dues in advance before being dispatched to a job. United Farm Workers hiring hall refusing to let a family work together at the same ranch. United Farm Workers not paying them medical insurance they were entitled to. Being forced to picket in major metropolitan areas and to attend United Farm Workers rallies, sometimes one hundred miles away, at a loss of a day's pay. (If workers did not wish to participate in such activities, we were told by United Farm Workers that they were in "bad standing" and to dock these workers several days' pay.) Depriving workers of ranch seniority, which under United Farm Workers was superseded by union seniority. (A five-year Gallo worker with five years' membership in the United Farm Workers might lose a higher-paying promotion or even his job to a new employee from another grower, assigned to it by the United Farm Workers on the basis of six years' membership in the union.)

We agreed with our employees that the contract clauses at issue were offensive morally and ethically. While we were engaged in protracted negotiations with the United Farm Workers on these clauses, we received a claim for recognition from the Teamsters Union.

On June 25, 1973, we received our first communication from the Teamsters claiming to represent the majority of Gallo farm workers. Note that this contract expired on April 18, 1973 - that we had requested negotiations to start on February 1, 1973 - that negotiations continued beyond the termination of the contract and were still continuing when we received word from the Teamsters on June 25, 1973, that they represented the majority of Gallo farm workers.

There was no secret ballot election held because there was then, as there is now, no machinery for such an election. In the absence of laws governing farm union election procedures, the employer is vulnerable to lawsuits and boycotts by the losing union. In the one election of record, conducted by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service on April 1,1973, the vote was 43 against United Farm Workers and 27 for United Farm Workers, with one void ballot. United Farm Workers then threatened a boycott. Instead of meeting with us to dispute the Teamsters' claim on June 25, Chavez simply called a strike. He could have presented us with workers' signature cards, if he actually had them at this time. He obviously did not have them and could not do so.

Since there are no laws governing free elections for farm workers, we recognized the Teamsters as their bargaining agent in 1973 - in the same manner we recognized the United Farm Workers in 1967 - by determining, on the basis of their verified signatures, that a majority of our farm workers wanted to be represented by the Teamsters. We acted democratically and fairly in abiding by our farm workers' choice of unions. The United Farm Workers boycott of Gallo wines will not persuade us to put our farm workers into a union that is not of their own choosing.

We had no basic difficulty in administering the contract with the United Farm Workers in the six years we had contracts with them. Misunderstandings did arise from time to time, probably more often than would have been the case if the United Farm Workers had had any experience in contract administration. What did bother us very much were the complaints we kept getting from our farm workers covered by the United Farm Workers. We took these workers' complaints up with the United Farm Workers leaders but they never seemed very interested in doing anything about them. We attempted to negotiate the changes desired by our employees into the 1973 United Farm Workers' contract.

There was no economic advantages to us in signing with the Teamsters, since the economic provisions of the new contract far exceed those contained in contracts previously negotiated with the United Farm Workers.

We think the principal advantage we have through signing with the Teamsters is that our work force seems happier, not only because of their higher wages, but also because of the other things they're getting under the Teamster contract. For instance, our farm workers now have unemployment compensation and a pension plan, benefits they never had with the United Farm Workers, and the medical program covering them now is much better, and better administered, than the one the United Farm Workers had. The Teamsters are more professional and experienced in administering contracts in their workers' behalf. They have their own social service workers who come to our ranches regularly to assist the farm workers with their personal problems. All told, I think we are seeing two advantages under Teamster contract: first, happier workers and therefore, second, a more stable and productive work force.

It is regrettable that in the last 18 months since this dispute started, no further organization of farm workers has taken place, although there are over two million unorganized farm workers in the United States who receive substandard income, and little or no fringe benefits. It is regrettable that the United Farm Workers has spent so much time, money and effort fighting over 200 permanent farm workers and 300 seasonal workers who are among the best paid in the United States with the best package of fringe benefits: paid pension plan, paid vacation, paid holidays, premium paid overtime, paid health insurance, paid life insurance, and paid unemployment insurance. It is regrettable that the same time, effort, and expense were not directed toward the unionization of the over two million unorganized farm workers. The United Farm Workers has had an open field and free hand to organize so that the many farm workers throughout the United States could now be enjoying substantially higher standards of living.

The legislation we favor the most is including farm workers under the National Labor Relations Act. We fully support the bill introduced by Senator Tunney (S285) which would achieve this purpose. The advantages of including the farm workers under the National Labor Relations Act are obvious. That act has covered the vast majority of other American workers for about 40 years now, and it has worked very well. Amending that act to include farm workers will mean that their labor problems will be handled by an agency with vast experience in the field. You might say the National Labor Relations Board made its mistakes in administration years ago and now could easily give farm labor maximum protection.

The solution is not new, unproven legislation. By including farm labor under the National Labor Relations Act, the jurisdictional dispute between the Teamsters and the United Farm Workers, which has brought the organization of farm labor to a halt, would be resolved.

We understand that the United Farm Workers opposes the National Labor Relations Act because it would specifically deprive them of the secondary boycott - a tool they value highly. This puzzles us. If the United Farm Workers is genuinely interested in organizing those workers who believe in the United Farm Workers," the National Labor Relations Act is an excellent vehicle to achieve this purpose. It requires a petition by only 30 per cent of any group of workers to secure a free, secret, legally supervised election, binding on all parties. If the United Farm Workers, nevertheless, continues to oppose National Labor Relations Act, their position can only be viewed as unreasonable to an irresponsible degree, perpetuating the injustice and misery the absence of National Labor Relations Act and the resulting stalemate have caused, and will continue to cause, the over two million non-unionized American farm workers.

We urge you to help influence others to bring to the American farm workers first class citizenship status and to to offer them the opportunity of federally supervised free and secret ballot elections approved under the National Labor Relations Act. This act will insure that America's farm workers are represented by the union of their choice.

Much remains to be done for the farm workers throughout the country. Let's get on with it!

E. & J. GALLO WINERY
Modesto, California
Joshua Christopher Simoes
Director, Education Communications

The Rhombus And The Asymptote

To the Editor:

I have a question.

Recently while pursuing some less than esoteric fields of knowledge here at UVM, I stumbled over a discovery which seemed to make everything clear. Unfortunately my own knowledge of mathematics has placed a severe limitation upon further pursuit of my endeavor. It occurred to me that whereas hitherto my investigation the logic of algebra and the patterned madness of love have always been considered at opposite poles, the converse might be true.

Math and love have always been related in at least one way: the geometrical metaphor of the "triangle". In the basic love triangle Angle X is madly in love with Angle Y, who is off skiing, and could care less about X. In turn, Z is drooling all over X, who is too busy mooning over Y to notice. However when the schema of this is illustrated we find that Z and X are connected by one of the sides of the triangle. Something obviously is amiss. Needless to say, the figure of the triangle does not cover all spheres of human emotion - I myself have become involved in an amour which is actually a menage a rhombus. But that is another equation all together.

Getting back to the subject, suppose we let X=Y indicate that rarist of occurences, a happy couple. Then let X be greater than Y indicate the fact that Y loves X more than X loves Y. Thus Y is greater than X is greater than Z would be your basic "triangle" situation. A series of math statements can tell a story:

X equals Y
X is greater than A
A does not equal B
but
B equals A (only in B's febile mind)
Y plus A equals T (for trouble)

Obviously, the solution is for A to get him/her self squared away. Which leads me to my question: what is an asymptotes? I was talking to some young thing in the math department about this breakthrough of mine and she called me one.

Yours,
Garry Owen

Correspondance Please

To the Editor:

I am writing in hopes that you may be able to help me. I am presently incarcerated at the Marion Correctional Institute in Ohio, and am in dire need of some correspondence from the outside.

Since I have no family or friends with whom to communicate, the days go by unbearably slow, and I have lost touch with all that is happening in the free world.

I'm a 25 year old, white male, and am fairly well versed in most subjects, and I'd like to correspond with anyone, regardless of age, race, or sex.

I ask that if possible you run my letter in your school's paper in hopes that I will be able to acquire some correspondence.

In any event I'd like to thank you for your time, and any consideration you can give me in this matter.

Sincerely,

Bud Wilkinson
138-134
P.O. Box 57
Marion, Ohio 43302

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

© COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-Box 6411-BERKELEY, CA 94706

The Denial Of Veterinary Education

To the Editor:

As a pre-vet student here at UVM I'm naturally very concerned about the admissions situation to veterinary colleges for New England applicants. With only nineteen vet schools in the United States and none in New England, we can't hold our hopes too high. The nearest veterinary college is at Cornell University where there are 1,400 applications for their 70 spaces this year. Being a land grant college, however, most of those spaces will go to New York residents. The other vet schools have contracts with neighboring states so New Englanders are virtually denied a veterinary education today.

It is a crying shame that so many qualified students will once again not be accepted at veterinary colleges while the New England states suffer a severe shortage of veterinarians. However, there is a proposal before the state legislatures this year supporting a regional veterinary college for New England. Members of a board of trustees to be elected by the states will attempt to get federal funds for the much-needed school. I'm sure all the pre-vets here at UVM support their efforts and I urge the support of all concerned New England residents.

Carol Schrecher
D-363 L/L Center

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Vincent Arlen, George Georgaklis, Andy Morse, Andrey Rothstein, Mary Gilbertson.
FEATURE STAFF: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Amy Fisher, Barbara Freedman, Joe Kaufman, Adelaide Murphy, Paul Prior, Marsha Woletz.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov.
PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rick Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Barney, Barbara Brown, John Lande.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone: 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $2.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

The Blac

by Matt Coleman

When I think of Black History I th beginnings, black roots. I think of Egypt whe eternally in a land over-shadowed by the Gi Giza. I think of Ethiopia. "Land of the Bl African empires of Songhay, Mali, and Gh scholarship and riches. I picture the famed G Jenne, and Timbuctu, and the trans-Saharan the great world markets meet in the crossro smile at the Sphinx's broad nose and lips, and feared Zulu warriors led by Chief Shaka English dominance for over one hundred Africa.

Then through the mist of time, slave ship of blood and rusted chains, bringing sardin cargo to the American continent. More blood sweat that made it possible for white colo foreigners to experience North America a Opportunity." The "three-quarters man" unparalleled oppression. Africa's children contribute to the white dominated society, the first profits of a developing commercial e muscle, freeing the whites to participate expansion, and jobs in the growing northern every stage of development in this cou exploitation has been a decisive factor in the to advance rapidly in the economic aren mobility up the social and economic ladder.

From the halls of Montezuma to the black warriors have fought and died for t honor and distinction, thinking their blood for full citizenship. Today there are black walking around jobless, with dishonorable and memories they'd sooner forget.

The black experience in America, until viewed in white terms, through a white pe you people didn't know it, we are a cultur It's supposed to be because we've been personalities, cultural heritage, family str leaving us with a barren, corpse of a ra somewhat stripped, but in that stripping we our African roots and transformed them in the Black Experience in America. Our herit our strength, our blues and spirituals. innovated, explored, created, procreated, invented more than Carver's peanuts and Ch plasma, but this is obscured because of the white history textbooks.

We educated leaders like DuBois, Ga Martin Luther King, Rap Brown, Barba Clayton Powell, Shirley Chisholm, and St Our people in literature and the arts, Simone, Ralph Ellison, Paul Lawrence Hughes, Nikki Giovanni reached an u expression and communication. Our Bl America is an endless train of leaders bottomless well of heritage.

We blacks excel in any field we enter. been open to blacks have a great propor Those fields are music (entertainment) and O.J. Simpson danced all over the 1973 foo all-time record of yards gained. Meanwhi Babe Ruth's record in mourning, and M George Foreman plug it out in the ring fo sach. A tide of black athletes are floodi for some reason whites think all blacks pl track.

If we blacks are so culturally deprived our day tell us, how come so many whi get as deprived as we are? Historically (a the slaves sung the master to sleep. Th yesterday jumped to the throbs of the b of Satchmo, the "Duke," Count Basi Fitzgerald, and made love to Nat King C vibes. The "Now Generation" adopted black slang to denote their temporary d status quo. B.B. King and other blue relevant young generation blues. Jimi Davis, Roberta Flack, Marvin Gaye, Ar Wonder, and Les McCann are a few of th that white youth "grooves" on. If Di Williams, and Richard Pryor knew they w maybe they wouldn't have done their nitt Sings the Blues." (It's strange that a ne UVM – it's called the "Bump.")

While I think of Black History, I thin black race, the African heritage, and th

All Things Considered

by Larry Seiden

I was trembling as I walked the ice night. The games of love were twisting delivered in chilling sheaves, was spinn used to steady myself. I've been through can-I-put-the-make-on-you scene enough angles very professionally but tonight w arms of sleep back in my bed, I walked on the hill.

I tried to put order to my thought like brushing your teeth, right. I've before. We met in the dark, semi-mo familiar story of romantic escapades moved the question, as always, time confronting last round (my treat). Bein purely innocent, I realized the moth lingering souls scopping their way throu the bar. She said she was wondering w long. "I must be sensitive to rejection, blatant immediate intimacy.

We finished our drinks and scurri my car. How convenient, her friends h school night is a school night," she add cursed the freezing vinyl of the seats. days a week," I ventured compounding statement. To cover for the silence thinking. "I was just wondering what y said. At least we were meeting at a com

Not being in control of myself, I wore no wristwatch. "I wonder how question as I've ever asked. "Why, morning," she mused. "No, no, just b cover for the slip of humanness. "Well tu forego the usual apology for the di my domain; we were not here to neurotic disrespect of cleanliness. We room to catch a few notes of the bl upstairs, the obvious was getting more beckoned. "It's funny how we s searching for company for our sleepin dose so unaware of another's presenc mean," she said and yawned. "I'm tir out cheating you of what you came for ters

e Editor

ome Ideas

...ter you ... people ...ge Hall ...ry 5, to ...ment at ...ot very ...was high ...shortly ...decided ...which to ... to be ...mmittee ...he open ...d some ...n facing ...n hopes ... new ...possible ...following ...to look ...ral and ...ntation ...ees. This ...Vermont ...ssibility.

...g the ...ddition ...hat some ...should be ...derrd ...staurant ...e owned ...ents and ...ntly this ...n in the ...operative ...e owned ...ents. We ...bookstore ...fficiently ...tion and ...terested ...nventies ...equal ...dents on ...election ...present ...ave four ...and two ...student

...ident here ...rally very ...out the ...ation to ...for New ...With only ...ols in the ...ced in New ...hold our ...The nearest ...at Cornell ...there are ...or their 70 ...ring a land ...ver, most of ...go to New ...other vet ...racts with ...s so New ...ally denied ...tion today

...ecomes and encourages articles, columns, and ...terested students, faculty, and members of ...All material must be submitted no later than ...fore the Thursday of publication. Material ...names will be withheld upon request. If you ...writing or perhaps curious about how things ... we are downstairs at Billings Center — or

...MONT CYNIC

...Arlen, George ...dy Morse, ...tein, Mary ...AFF: Paul ...Cain, Carol ...Henry, Pam ...Hunt, Sue ...ber, Barbara ...Kauffman, ...y, Paul Prior, ...Penn Cobb, ...mon, Ken Markowitz, Scott McKay, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry ...nides, Scott Skinner. SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Gary Brooks, Rick Katz, Don Rood, Richard Sullivan. PRODUCTION: Eileen Driscoll, Rick Steinberg, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Rick Barney, Barbara Brown, John Lundo. ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Graney, Debbie Powell. BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenk.

...ons expressed in editorials, cartoons, or ...in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ...of the University administration, faculty, or ...the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...ists do not necessarily reflect the opinion ...majority of the members of the CYNIC ...Board.

...shed yearly during the college year by the ...of the University of Vermont and State ...ral College. Editorial and Business offices in ...ge Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone ... Deadline for entries is one week prior to ...publication.

...shed in 1883. Subscription rate $3.00 per ...ple copy ten cents.

Of Veterinary Education

It is a crying shame that so many qualified students will once again not be accepted at veterinary colleges while the New England states suffer a severe shortage of veterinarians. However, there is a proposal before the state legislatures this year supporting a regional veterinary college for New England. Members of a board of trustees to be elected by the states will attempt to get federal funds for the much-needed school. I'm sure all the pre-vets here at UVM support their efforts and I urge the support of all concerned New England residents.

Carol Schrecher
D-363 L/L Center

The Black Experience In America

by Matt Coleman

When I think of Black History I think of ancient beginnings, black roots. I think of Egypt where the Nile oozes eternally in a land over-shadowed by the Great Pyramids of Giza. I think of Ethiopia, "Land of the Blacks," the great African empires of Songhay, Mali, and Ghana, centers of scholarship and riches. I picture the famed cities of Carthage, Jenne, and Timbuctu, and the trans-Saharan caravans where the great world markets meet in the crossroads of Africa. I smile at the Sphinx's broad nose and lips, and daydream of the feared Zulu warriors led by Chief Shaka who fought off English dominance for over one hundred years in South Africa.

Then through the mist of time; slave ships roll in, in a sea of blood and rusted chains, bringing sardine-packed human cargo to the American continent. More blood mingled with the sweat that made it possible for white colonists and other foreigners to experience North America as the "Land of Opportunity." The "three-quarters man" experienced an unparalleled oppression. Africa's children were forced to contribute to the white dominated society, first by becoming the first profits of a developing commercial capitalism, then by muscle, freeing the whites to participate in the western expansion, and jobs in the growing northern industries. "At every stage of development in this country our supes exploitation has been a decisive factor in the country's ability to advance rapidly in the economic arena and in white mobility up the social and economic ladder." — James Boggs

From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, black warriors have fought and died for this country with honor and distinction, thinking their blood could be cashed in for full citizenship. Today there are black Vietnam veterans walking around jobless, with dishonorable discharges, scars, and memories they'd sooner forget.

The black experience in America, until recently, has been viewed in white terms, through a white perspective. In case you people didn't know it, we are a culturally deprived race. It's supposed to be because we've been stripped of our personalities, cultural heritage, family structure destroyed, leaving us with a barren, corpse of a race. Yes, we been somewhat stripped, but in that stripping we took the scraps of our African roots and transformed them into a new heritage, the Black Experience in America. Our heritage is our struggle, our strength, our blues and spirituals. We educated, we innovated, explored, created, procreated, and fought. We invented more than Carver's peanuts and Charles Drew's blood plasma, but this is obscured because of the lack of mention in white history textbooks.

We educated leaders like DuBois, Garvey, Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, Rap Brown, Barbara Jordan, Adam Clayton Powell, Shirley Chisholm, and Stokely Carmichael, Our people in literature and the arts, Ossie Davis, Nina Simone, Ralph Ellison, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Langston Hughes, Nikki Giovanni reached an unequalled skill in expression and communication. Our Black Experience in America is an endless train of leadership, genius, and a bottomless well of heritage.

We blacks excel in any field we enter. Two fields that have been open to blacks have a great proportion of black faces. Those fields are music (entertainment) and sports (what else?). O.J. Simpson danced all over the 1973 football fields to set an all-time record of yards gained. Meanwhile Hank Aaron put Babe Ruth's record in mourning, and Muhammed Ali and George Forman plug it out in the ring for a couple of million each. A tide of black athletes are flooding the Olympics and for some reason whites think all blacks play basketball and run track.

If we blacks are so culturally deprived as white intellects of our day tell us, how come so many white folks are trying to get as deprived as we are? Historically (at least in the movies) the slaves sung the master to sleep. The old white folks of yesterday jumped to the throbs of the black musical abilities of Satchmo, the "Duke," Count Basie, Ray Charles, Ella Fitzgerald, and made love to Nat King Cole's syrupy, mellow vibes. The "Now Generation" adopted a clenched fist and black slang to denote their temporary dissatisfaction with the status quo. B.B. King and other blues musicians inspired relevant young generation blues. Jimi Hendrix, War, Miles Davis, Roberta Flack, Marvin Gaye, Aretha Franklin, Stevie Wonder, and Les McCann are a few of the culturally deprived that white youth "grooves" on. If Diana Ross, Billy Dee Williams, and Richard Pryor knew they were culturally deprived maybe they wouldn't have done their nitty gritty to the "Lady Sings the Blues." (It's strange that a new dance has invaded UVM — it's called the "Bump.")

While I think of Black History, I think of the origins of the black race, the African heritage, and the new heritage in the Black Experience. Black history is the studying of the past to deal with the present and future. It is the honoring of our culture, our symbols, our leaders, our uniqueness. Throughout the Black Experience in America, different leaders of different methods and solutions to a common problem. The integrationist shakes his head at the dreams of the black separatists to build a black, self-sufficient nation in the midst of a white continent. The black separatist calls the integrationist a fool for believing in the American Dream and acceptance of the assumption that racism is the exception and not the rule. Both are scorned by the active black revolutionary who purports that there is no hope for blacks in the United States and advocates a violent overthrow of the status quo as opposed to genocide. Both pity and are frightened by the black revolutionists, believing that the wrath of white retaliation would crush them all or lose their hard fought for "rights."

History is a study of solutions from which a black framework and black ideology can be built. A framework would include (1) definition of the problem and inadequacy of the present system to solve it; (2) forming a solution after studying the weaknesses and strengths of all alternatives, and (3) organizing steps that would pool all black resources into reaching that solution.

Black folks made a progressive step which refocused the entire direction of the liberation movement when we admitted to ourselves that the problem is a white problem, not a black problem. Both the common black laborer on the street, and the black Ph.D. realize the problem. One says "it's the white man," and the other says "it's individual and institutional racism which created and perpetuates blacks servile citizenship."

A multitude of studies have been done on black folks, black crime, black family structure, black sexuality, black intellect, black unemployment. All of these previous studies have cast the blacks as the problem, the virus, the self-perpetuator of his own condition due to inherent racial characteristics and cultural deprivation. White sociology and psychology are based on preconceived assumptions that the problem is black. Their studies center on the victims, instead of their institutions as victimizers.

The Black Experience has been a continued attempt by the white majority to destroy our culture, negating our past, therefore negating our existence. It's been an attempt to make blacks totally dependent on the white structure for his culture, identity, and being by process of assimilation. What is needed is a recastment of white standards into black standards that meet the needs of Black Americans. Our leaders and intellects should focus on relevant studies such as assessing the solutions, or lack of them, of other oppressed minorities. We can accept white analysis, assumptions, and technology that can be applied to black people. In these ways we can work constructively towards a liberation, and appreciation of what it is to be black.

Abortion: How It Stands Around The World

by Sue Perkins

An estimated thirty-five million abortions are performed annually in the world, not all of which are performed in the twenty-six countries where it is legal. In Italy, where an abortionist can earn two to five years imprisonment, one and a half million women have abortions each year. Because of the strong Catholic influence on Italy, contraceptives are illegal. When Italian women become pregnant, religious adherence becomes a less preferable alternative to the risks involved in procuring an abortion.

Unlike Italy, other nations have not held strong to their age-old abortion laws. The world has experienced extensive abortion mandate revision; some laws becoming more harsh, others more lax. Following these changes, some anti-abortionists have claimed another justification for their stand. They maintain abortion is the means through which the communists intend to overtake the world: that abortion is a plot to propagate communism and annihilate non-communists. It is clear how this idea would be formed. The trend seems to be toward communist countries tightening their laws, while the non-communist world is becoming more lenient.

For example, in 1966, in Romania, abortions became illegal except under unusual circumstances. Previously, abortion was obtainable on demand. The birth rate shot up to a record high.

As recently as Jan. 1, 1974, the communist Hungarian government reversed its 1958 abortion on demand policy. The new law states that Hungarian women seeking abortions must first meet restrictive health, age, and social requirements.

Czechoslavakians are also bound to rigid requirements. Abortion is legal when a commission finds sufficient social and medical criteria, such as a certified investigative report of rape, or age over forty. Social reasons are not sufficient grounds in Bulgaria where abortions are legal in a medical sense only.

In the Soviet Union where there is extensive campaigning to increase the population, it's surprising to find that the USSR is one of the more lenient communist countries. The Soviet Union has allowed abortions up to a certain number of weeks since 1920. The only exceptions were restrictions imposed during Stalin's rule from 1937-1955.

East Germany enacted a law in 1972, allowing women the sole right to decide to terminate pregnancy until the thirteenth week. Additionally, East Germany provides free oral contraceptives and pre and post operative care. This is a reversal of the policies which began to relax in the late Sixties. East Germany, contrary to most communist countries, should be commended for recognizing the freedom of people, as foremost. Faced with a declining population, East Germany opted to legalize abortion and birth control, and spur the birth rate by offering government subsidies and rewards for pregnancies carried to a full term. They were successful in their endeavors.

